NEW YORK, Feb. 13.—At. Palzer, of New York, the heavyweight, who recently knocked out Al Kaufman, was far too strong for Sailor White, knocking out his man with a heavy right hook to the jaw in the fifth round of a scheduled ten-round bout at the Royal A. C. tonight. Palzer's heavy body punches weakened White.

THE INDIAN
By Alec Jones

Within twelve miles of Calgary, a city of 50,000 people, and with telephone communication with that city, the Sarcee Indians pursue their lives and observe exactly as their forefathers the ancient habits and customs of their tribe.

Two years ago there was a great festival at which seven of the oldest chiefs related the stories of their exploits, which the painter of the tribe preserved at the office of the agent of the Sarcee reserve.

While the history of the palefaces has been in the daily newspaper, the magazine and the Government archives, the Indians have no such means of collecting, preserving and disseminating information of their great men. The Indian lad, writes Ethel Heydon, in a magazine, relies on campfire stories and a well tanned steer hide covered with queer characters painted crudely with a sort of ink made of the juices of plants.

These records are not haphazard, but they are not altogether regular. When several chiefs and medicine men of the tribe are growing old an assembly is arranged where a famous Indian interpreter and painter meets the aged men. One by one the old men stand forth before the people and recount the stories of their lives.

They tell thrilling tales of the battles in which they have fought, of the scalps they have taken and the horses they have stolen. These three achievements are regarded as the three most honorable, and various exploits of the great men. Compared with these the white man's election to Parliament, his appointment to high office and his great commercial achievements are as nothing.

Sometimes their meetings last several days. The old men are enthusiastic in their descriptions of by-gone days; they recite rapidly and gesticulate much. The members of the tribe, sitting about them, listen eagerly, storing the details to be told over and over again to their sons and their sons' sons, until they are tribal traditions of the long past. As they talk the painter sits upon the ground with his steer hide spread before him and paints with his dyes rude pictures to illustrate the incidents.

A circle represents a barricade or encampment; awkwardly drawn pictures of animals stand for the horses he has stolen; a galloping horse with a man on its back suggests the story of wild flight across the prairie before pursuing enemies; a flag may mean a bloody battle won; a tadpole-like mark a scalped Indian. The figures are very crude, the drawings no better than those a four-year-old child makes on its slate. But some ingenuity is exercised in the grouping and each sketch is, in a way, a key to the thrilling tales which in time become history.

Bull Head, the last great chief of the Sarcees, died on the reserve last spring. He was acknowledged to be the most cautious and farseeing of the tribe, and always represent them in any dealings with the whites. The Indians are still in fear of him, and think that his spirit haunts the reserve. His record is pictured on the skins. The interpretation is necessarily brief.

Circle and figures in the upper part of the column tell the story of one of the bloodiest and most disastrous battles in Sarcee history, when the Sarcees were ambushed by the Crees and lost over fifty warriors. Looking closely one may discern a Cree who has been shot by Bull Head; Bull Head's squaw crawled out and carried him in and the chief scalped him. This battle occurred at the Vermilion Creek, near Battleford in 1866.

Another group illustrates a subsequent battle with the Crees, when Bull Head pulled a Cree warrior off his horse and scalped him. Two horizontal figures near the solitary horse in the second group depict this thrilling deed. The splotch of tents below stands for the scene of another battle with the Crees. Bull Head and his followers are in desperate retreat — Bull Head's squaw falls from her horse; the chief stops and helps her onto his own horse.

To the left and a little below the circle which represents a barricade Bull Head is seen shaking hands with a Cree whose life he saved; Cree and Sarcee were friends in peace but foes in war. Immediately after this demonstration the Cree returned to his barricade and the Sarcee chief to his tribe to resume the fight. Bull Head's record, which follows, shows four men killed and scalped, five tomahawks, two spears, five bows and two war clubs captured.

All the thrilling elaborations of these details are told to the children of the subdued redskins even now as they assemble around their campfires within sight of automobiles passing from Calgary along the new government road through the reserve.

FARMER NALLEY HAS CURE FOR TONSORIALITIS.

Nalley came to town for the live stock show and dropped in on Charlie Berryman, a barber, for a shave. A shave is 5 cents in Clarence, Iowa, but Nalley was in a spending mood so he placed a dime on the counter and climbed into the chair. When he came out from under Berryman's spell, he was handed the following bill:

Head massage..

Hair cut	$ .2
Shave	.1
Shampoo	.1
Hair singe	.2
Head massage	.3
Face massage	.3
Shoes shined	.1
Hair tonic	1.0

Nalley paid the $3.20, went out and got a policeman and Berryman was fined $10 in the Municipal court.

Woman's views on woman's worth take on varied and far-reaching turns.

Most men have a sense of satisfaction in being able to attract the notice of big persons.

Women generally regard their women associates with a feeling akin to suspicion.

Good Plan to Follow.

Bakers in France are subjected to certain unusual rules and regulations. In large fortified towns, for instance they must always have a certain stock in hand, in case of war. Not only this, but everywhere they have to deposit a sum of money in the hands of the municipal authorities as a security of good conduct; and the law, not content with merely looking after their weights and measures, actually decides the price at which bread is sold.

Airing the Furniture

When a gentleman with decided tendencies towards looking after everybody's business but his own saw a furniture van being loaded near his house he sallied forth into the street on investigation bent.

"I say, carter," he began, bumptiously, "are the people here moving?"

The vanman looked at him scornfully, then he wiped the perspiration from his brow.

"No, sir," he retorted, tirely; "we're just taking the furniture for a drive."

What the Hero Wished

The bugle sounded, into the barrack square marched the regiment; then formed a hollow square, and waited. For it was an important occasion. Patrick Dolan, a scarred and sunburnt warrior, was to receive some little token of his country's gratitude. A notable act of bravery had brought Patrick, into the limelight.

"Men," said the officer commanding, "I am proud to pin this medal on the breast of Patrick Dolan — a Briton and a hero! And, under a special order, I shall place five pounds to his credit in the bank, as some little reward for his gallant conduct."

Patrick stepped forward and, as heroes do, looked uncomfortable. Still, there was one request he wanted to make.

"If—if it's all the same to you, sorr," he blurted out, "I'd rather ye'd pin the five-pound note on me chist, and place the medal to me cridit at the bank, sorr!"

"What started the riot at the performance of 'Hamlet' last night?"

"Why, Hamlet held the skull and said: 'Alas! poor Yorick. You are not the only deadhead in the house.'"

SLIGHTLY MISTAKEN

Although an editor is expected to know everything, and although his store of miscellaneous information is usually large, yet there are some things of which he — if he is an average editor — has never heard. Such, evidently, was the case with James Payn, the well-known novelist, when he was editor of 'Cornhill.'

One day an unannounced caller who had managed to evade the porter downstairs opened Payn's door. His hair was long and his clothes were shabby and untidy. He had a roll of papers in his hand. Payn, surmising a poet and an epic several thousand lines long, looked up.

"Well, sir?"

"I've brought you something about sarcoma and carcinoma."

"We are overcrowded with poetry — couldn't accept another line, not if it were by Milton."

"Poetry!" the caller flashed. "Do you know anything about sarcoma and carcinoma?"

"Italian lovers, aren't they?" said Payn, imperturbably.

The caller retreated, with a withering glance at the editor. Under the same roof as the 'Cornhill' was the office of a medical and surgical journal, and it was there that the caller sought for the disposal of a treatise on those cancerous growths with the euphonious names which, with a layman's ignorance, Payn ascribed to poetry.

French Language Used in England.

Though we are in the twentieth century the Norman French of Edward the Confessor is still, in a way, the legal voice of Parliament. Whenever a bill has passed the British Commons, the Clerk, before he forwards it to the House of Lords, writes upon it according to ancient usage: "Soit baillé aux Seigneurs" (Let it be sent to the Lords). If it is sent from the Peers to the Commons, it bears the like endorsement: "Soit baille aux Communes" (Let it be sent to the Commons).

One Way.

"How did you get your husband out to that musicale last night?"

"Told him there was going to be a lunch afterward."

STEWART VICTIM OF TREACHERY

Belgian Criminal Spy Admits Being in Pay of Both Governments—Betrayed Stewart for German Gold; He Says—Uncorroborated Evidence of This Individual Accepted by German Judges

LONDON, Feb. 14.—English feeling over the Stewart case is increased by this morning's disclosure in the German paper, the "Hamburger Nachrichten," which has interviewed Rue, alias Arsene Verrue, the Belgian criminal spy upon whose uncorroborated evidence Mr. Stewart was sentenced to there and a half years' imprisonment in a German fortress.

He came over to the War Office, he alleges, and saw a Major and a Lieut-Colonel, and the latter engaged him as a spy at the yearly salary of $1,250 He spent the next three years travelling in Germany, and sent several reports to the War Office, dealing mostly with general politics.

At the end of 1909, his War Office salary was diminished by half, and in April 1910, the brewery dismissed him for unexplained reasons. A fortnight later the War Office stopped his salary saying that in future he would be paid by results.

Thereupon he entered into relationship with an agent in Brussels, who engaged him to do counter-espionage work in Germany's interests at the same time. He continued, during 1910 and 1911 sending reports to the British War Office, but was, he says, miserably paid.

On July 30th, last, when Anglo-German relations were so strained that war seemed imminent, a man called Martin came to him as the reputed envoy of the British Intelligence Department, and paid him $65. After Mr. Stewart was arrested, Verrue declaerd that he and Martin were one and the same person, though he admitted tiat Martin had a different appearance.

All this Mr. Stewart stoutly denied at the trial, demanding corroborative evidence.

This identification by an admitted criminal, who, on his own confession, was secretly in the pay of both governments, was the cardinal point in Mr. Stewart's trial.

Verrue says:—

"I am no Englishman. I was treated much better by Germany. Therefore my duty was to save Germany from the efforts of English espionage."

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

ASSEMBLY AT ARMOURIES.

Under the auspices of the Daughters of the Empire an assembly will be held in the Armouries this evening The interior of the building is being appropriately decorated for the occasion.

SENT TO LINDSAY.

The remains of J. J. Spencely, the victim of yesterday's collision on the Midland railway here, were last evening shipped to Lindsay for interment. They were accompanied by some members of the crew of the ill-fated train.

BURIED IN ST. JAMES'.

Many citizens from the city and vicinity were this morning in attendance at the obsequies of the late Mr. Michael Buckley. The remains were taken to St. Michael's Church, where Rev. Father Meehan conducted services, also at St. James' cemetery, where interment took place. The bearers were Messrs. P. J. Wims, F. Dolan, F. P. Carney, W. Williamson, J. M. and T. Hurley.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

As the result of the overflowing last night of a basin in the upper storey of the Robertson Block east side of Front Street, considerable damage was done to Mr. H. A. Morgan's tailoring establishment, which is situated below. A large portion of the ceiling gave way and a quantity of manufactured clothing was saturated with water.

LADIES "AT HOME"

The girls' branch of the W. A. in connection with Christ Church last evening were at home socially at the Parish Hall. It was termed a social evening in every respect. A large number were present and all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagiave, was chairman, filling the position most acceptably. A programme was rendered, consisting of solos by Messrs. A. Henthorn and F. G. Burke, and readings and recitations by Mr. MacLachlan. There were two guessing contests participated in and prize awarded for same. At the close refreshments in abundance were served.

LIQUOR GALORE.

Three days ago a party called at a down-town grocery store and asked permission to leave a valise in the store, intimating that he call for the same in a short time. As the party in question did not call for the valise it was decided to investigate what it contained, and the proprietor of the store did so yesterday. He was rather surprised to find in the valise three sealed bottles of whiskey, a bottle of brandy and wine and two boxes of imported cigars. It appears that the liquor and cigars were taken from a certain hotel in the city and were not missed by the proprietor. It is possible that some one will be involved in trouble over the affair.

PIANO RECITAL.

A highly pleasing function was the piano recital which was given in St. Agnes Hall last night by the pupils of Miss Emberson, assisted by Mrs. Wilmot. A lengthy programme was capably interpreted by the following young ladies, whose performances evidenced careful and capable tuition: Misses Gene Caldwell (pupil of Mrs. Wilmot), Frances Leslie, Kathleen Diamond, Alice Lazier, Hilda Ackerill, Mary Wilkins, Beatrice Coles (pupil of Miss H. MacCunig), Ruth Howard, Marion Wright, Thelma Vermilyea, May Evans, Miriam Mabbett, Bessie Benjamin, Marjorie Cochrane, Helen MacCunig, Jean Clinton and Phyllis Bogart. During the evening Mrs. C. Wilmot rendered two selections in her usual finished and pleasing manner. The concert closed with the National Anthem.

KNIGHTS "AT HOME"

Belleville Council Knights of Columbus were "at home" last evening to their members and their ladies, many visiting Knights being present from Toronto, Brockville, Deseronto Campbellford and Trenton. The academy adjoining the council chamber was used for dancing, the entire suite of rooms were elegantly decorated and curing the course of the evening presented a scene of splendor. The refreshments were served in the ante-chamber, which was particularly attractive in Valentine decorations, words being inadequate to express the charming effect this room presented. The patronesses were Mrs. Frank Dolan, Mrs. L. P. Hughes and Mrs. Jas. St. Charles. The committee in charge was composed of Messrs. Dr. Dolan, Mr. L. P. Hughes and C. C. St. Charles. The music for the dancing was furnished by the Belleville Orchestral Society, the stewards being, Messrs. W. K. Wims, John E. Lally, Jas. Lee, Frank Fitzpatrick, Wm. J. Doyle, Wm. J. Connolly, Wm. Meagher, A. E. Byrne, Chas. Bawden, T. Dolan.

JUNIOR MINISTERS FOR DEPARTMENTS

British System of Under-Secretaries May be Adopted in Canada

OTTAWA, Feb. 12.—With a view to determining the advantages to be obtained from the adoption of the system of under-secretaries, the Government has communicated with the Imperial authorities, and is in possession of a memorandum which will be taken up immediately by the Cabinet. The enormous accumulation of routine work in some of the big departments has created a need for some sort of quasi-Ministerial body which, without having a place in the Cabinet, will be in a position to lift a great deal of work from the shoulders of the Ministers. The rearrangement of departmental branches will bring about a more equal division of work, but will still leave a few of the Ministers heavily burdened. This will require the appointment of a full dozen junior Ministers for Parliamentary work, the Ministers of Labor Inland Revenue and Customs being pretty well able to look after themselves.

Under the scheme as proposed the chief Minister will be responsible for the general policy and administration of his department, lesser matters being left to the junior Minister, such as the exposition of less important details, the defence of estimates, answering of questions, dealing with some of the private bills. The junior Ministers, or under-secretaries, would necessarily have to reside in Ottawa, and would be paid something more than the salary of a Deputy Minister. It is possible that the scheme may be extended to allow Ministers to speak in the Senate on questions of policy, while voting in the Lower House only.

JUDGE WHIPS A LAWYER.

Texas Jurist Leaves Bench, Fights, and Then Fines Himself.

MIDLAND, Texas, Feb. 13.—"Judge you are a liar."

Bang! went the gavel.

"This court stands adjourned until I whip the man who just called me a liar," exclaimed the Judge.

Immediately proceedings halted and Judge J. H. Knowles, presiding in Commissioners' Court, withdrew with Commissioner Jules Driver.

"This is undignified, (smash) but entirely (biff) manly, according to my (bing) view," declared Judge Knowles as he soundly beat his accuser.

The object lesson completed, Judge Knowles reconvened court, fined himself for fighting, and then the interrupted proceedings were resumed.

In the old days of "oatmeal" the miller was thinking of his goods not of the housekeeper. He made his product in his own way leaving her to find a way to cook it. The only way she could find was the troublesome all-night way. A tedious performance.

Instead of asking the housekeeper to find a way to cook Tillson's Rolled Oats we have found a way of preparing them to suit her cooking convenience.

15 minutes is all we ask of her time, because 15 minutes cooking turns Tillson's Oats into the most delicious, digestible porridge ever put before a hungry man or child.

THEY INJURE CHILDREN

CATHARTICS AND PILLS AND HARSH PHYSICS MAY CAUSE DISTRESSING COMPLAINTS.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given. Ordinary pills, cathartics, and purgatives are too apt to do more harm than good. They sometimes cause griping, nausea, and distressing after-effects, and may actually injure the health, thus establishing a life-lasting annoyance.

We personally recommend and guarantee Rexall Orderlies as a safe and dependable remedy for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have such faith in the virtues of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance where it fails to give satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies not only relieve constipation, but help to remove the cause of this ailment. They also frequently overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition.

There is really in our opinion, no similar medicine so good as Rexall Orderlies for the purpose to which it is directed, especially for children, aged and delicate persons. They are prepared in tablet form and in three sizes of packages; 12 tablets, 10c.; 36 tblets, 25c.; 80 tablets, 50c. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

DEATH ROLL.

MRS. CHAS. HODGES.

A message was received in the city this morning by Mr. Thomas Soale, announcing the sad event that his daughter, Mrs. Charles Hodges, had died at Ottawa at an early hour this morning. Deceased, who was 38 years of age, was born in Belleville and resided here until her marriage a few years ago. She was the eldest daughter of Mr. Soale. In addition to the husband, three children survive. The remains will be brought here for interment.

MISS MABEL BRYCE.

The many friends of Miss Mabel Bryce will be shocked to learn of her death, which occurred Wednesday evening of this week, the 14th inst. She will be remembered for her sweet, amiable disposition by a host of friends. Deceased, who was about 19 years of age, was employed as a clerk in the McIntosh Bros'. store for the past two years, and was a consistent member of St. Michael's Church.

J. P. C. PHILLIPS.

Mr. John Philpott Curran Phillips, manager of the Union Bank of Canada here, died at the hospital yesterday evening. Mr. Phillips was seriously injured at the fire in the bank premises a few weeks ago, and, after a brave fight, gradually grew worse, and had been unconscious for some days before his death. Mr. Phillips was born at London, his father, Dr. Thomas Phillips, and his mother being of old Dublin families, kith and kin, as his name suggests, with one of the great figures in Irish history. To the management of the Hastings Loan & Investment Society, whose affairs he successfully administered for many years, Mr. Phillips brought an already ripe experience as a banker, and upon the merger of that company with the Sun & Hastings, he was immediately appointed manager of the United Empire Bank, of whose branch here—now the Union Bank—he was the pioneer and founder. Straight out-spoken, of sterling worth, and unswerving honesty, Belleville loses in him a good citizen; and as a courteous gentleman of the old school, hospitable in his home, faithful to his friends, he will be mourned by many who, with all citizens of Belleville, extend sincerest sympathy to his family in their bereavement.

MRS. J. L. SPRUNG.

Mrs. John L. Sprung, a lady who was well known and highly esteemed died last evening at the family's residence, Ameliasburg. Deceased, who was in her 71st year, was born in Ameliasburg and had resided there all her life. Mrs. Sprung had been for many years an active member of the Methodist Church. Her husband preceded her to the tomb some 19 years ago. Surviving are two sons, J. W. and M. C., of Ameliasburg and one daughter, Mrs. Charles McTaggart, of Saskatchewan.

MICHAEL O'MEARA.

Mr. Michael O'Meara, formerly of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Belleville, died at Kankakee, Ill. Tuesday, Feb. 13, where he had been visiting his granddaughter, Mrs. Langan, wife of Thos. N. Langan, a popular real estate man of Illinois State Since Mr. O'Meara was superannuated he has been residing with his son, Mr. Martin J. O'Meara, London, Ont. from whose residence his funeral took place on Thursday morning to St. Peter's Cathedral, where a solemn requiem mass was celebrated for his soul after which the remains were laid to rest in the family plot in St. Peter's cemetery. Mr. O'Meara was supervisor farmer at the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb from 1879 to 1899 and previously held the same position at London Asylum for some years. He was an admirable character and had not an enemy. Fidelity to duty, honesty, truthfulness and witty good humor were a few of his many enviable characteristics. He was born in Tipperary, Ireland. He leaves to mourn him two sons, Martin J. O'Meara, of London, Ont., and James F. O'Meara, Northumberland, Pa.; and two daughters, Mrs. David Roche, Watford, Ont. and Sister Mary Aurelia, St. Joseph's Community, Toronto. His brothers, Messrs. Martin and T. J. O'Meara, of the P. O. department, London, and his sister, Mrs. Andrew McDonnell, Watford, Ont.

Why Salves Can't Cure Eczema

Since the old-fashioned theory of curing eczema through the blood has been given up by scientists, many different salves have been tried for skin diseases. But it has been found that these salves only clog the pores and cannot penetrate to the inner skin below the epidermis where the eczema germs are lodged.

This—the quality of penetrating—probably explans the tremendous success of the well known liquid eczema remedy, oil of wintergreen, thymol, glycerine, etc., as compounded in D. D.D. Prescription.

We have sold other remedies for skin troubles but none that we can recommend as highly as this for we know that D.D.D. stops the itch at once.

Of course other druggists have D. D.D. Prescription—go to them if you can't come to us—but don't accept some big profit substitute.

But if you come to our store we can tell you all about D.D.D. Prescription and how it cures eczema, because we have had the agency for so long.

Or you can get a free trial bottle by writing the D.D.D Laboratories, 49 Colborne St., Toronto.—J. S. McKeown, Druggist.

CHAPTER I.

Sowing the Wind

The quaint little town of Vilvorde lay still and parched beneath the July sun. Its fierce rays bleached the uneven granite blocks and scorched the grass-grown pavements in the Rue St. Lucien. It shone full upon a white-faced house fronting the narrow street. It burnished the brass plate fixed to the gateway, dazzling, and effectually preventing the occasional pedestrian from deciphering the otherwise usually plain inscription—Pensionnat des Dames Squillier.

At an upstairs window, the lower half of the sash thrown up, and totally unprotected from the afternoon sun, two girls were sitting. They were conversing in low eager tones, when suddenly they ceased, and leaned forward to watch a small procession of priests and acolytes carrying Extreme Unction to some poor soul at the point of death.

The silence, the solemnity of the scene, the reverence of the peasants kneeling among black-peaked shadows striping the sunlit thoroughfare, saddened and sobered them for awhile. But they were young and healthy, standing, as it were, upon the threshold of life, and life appeared exceedingly desirable to them at that moment, seeing that the unknown future loomed big with the realization of youth's golden dreams—and the day, too, was very fair.

"There goes Le Chat Botte," exclaimed the elder girl, tossing a gaudy picture-book to the worm-eaten boards, "a legacy of the long line of aspiring pupils who follow me."

"And may they also master the language in three months," Agnes Fleming rejoined, looking at her companion with eyes full of affectionate admiration. Pauline Jervois smiled.

"I believe that fact still astonishes you, Agnes," she said.

"It did, and to a certain extent it does now, but I shall never be surprised again at anything you may do."

"Why, what do you mean, cherie?"

"I mean—it seems a strange thing to say just as we are going to part, when we've been such good friends and comrades in spite of your—your braininess; but, honestly, I don't quite understand you, Pauline. I can't understand that uncanny, intuitive mental grasp you have of abstruse subjects, quite through down to every-day, common-place matters; it gives me a horrid, creepy feeling."

Pauline Jervoise turned a pair of wonderful dark eyes upon the lovely English face opposite to her, and laid a large, thin, white hand upon her friend's knee.

"I am not going to disparage my mental gifts even to my sweet Agnes," she said, smiling, "because I am openly and confessedly proud of my brain power. Long ago I became fully alive to the extent of my intellectual capacity, and I glory in the knowledge, but at the same time, Agnes, my whole training and trend of education enables me to arrive at a quick, apposite conclusion in regard to most problems. Concerning the French language, I must have been a dullard indeed had I not spoken it in a few months. When you consider I am as conversant with the dead languages, as intimate with their authors as I am with the works of both English and American novelists, that I speak fluent German, and a while ago I gained more than a smattering of Italian—when you take into consideration these accessories, these favorable circumstances, does it stand to reason that I could very well help myself?"

"No—yes—well, there, I don't know, Pauline, dearest. In the whole three months we've been together you have never said so much about yourself as you have during these last five minutes. Please don't stop, tell me about your people, where you live, where you went to school, anything, so that you tell me something."

Pauline clasped her large, capable looking hands behind her shapely shorn head, raised her eyes to the blue sky, and let the sunlight dance and sparkle in their dark depths.

"There is little to tell," she said, a smile curving her upper lip, until the gleam of small even teeth became visible. "It was lessons, Agnes, lessons, school, classes, study, short rests, and again study—nothing more."

"But your parents, dear, your home."

"I have no parents. I don't even remember them; still I know that my father was a celebrated violinist, and the only thing of value that I possess is his Stradivarius. I was born in New York, and until recently I have always lived there with my only relative, Aunt Barbara Jervois."

"Only one relation in the world! How you must love your Aunt Barbara!"

Again the slow smile caught the upper lip.

"I am afraid I do not love her. Sitting here beside you a sense of duty and thankfulness for my scholarly attainments makes me feel I ought and I believe I do, respect her. Nevertheless, looking back to my childhood, I—oh, Agnes, picture to yourself a little precocious child, all brain and nerve and timidity. Picture her in the hands of a clever, capable woman bent upon moulding a prodigy out of that delicate intelligence, regardless of the mental and physical cost. Think of that little child through the livelong summer gazing across her Latin grammar at the birds singing their hearts out with joy in the large cool branches of the elms, listening to the murmur of the bees in the core of the great yellow blossoms, striving bravely, ever so bravely, to crush a pernicious desire to lie down and rest, to sleep in yonder lush grass and sweet-scented clover. Think of her through the monotony of a rigorous winter. The short dreary days of study, the long evenings by the reading lamp, analyzing Milton's poems in preference to the darkness and solitude of her bedchamber. I could shed an ocean of tears when I think of that clever, white-faced dark-eyed child plodding steadily and faithfully through that travesty of childhood, and—Agnes, what a foolish girl you are!"

Agnes Flemming had slipped to the floor, and lay with her head in Pauline's lap, tenderly kissing first one white hand and then the other.

"Oh, never mind me, why didn't you tell me all this before? I would have petted you, I would have loved you ever so much more. Go on, tell me—afterwards, when you grew older—did you go to school?"

"I went to school, to classes, to lectures, and then to College, and matriculated. This last nine months I have allowed myself as a sort of recreation in which to acquire fluent French and German. I was twenty-four yesterday, to-morrow I leave Vilvorde, and at Harwich I part with the only friend I ever made—all very prosaic, simple and uninteresting, eh, cherie?"

"Very pitiful," she said, a tender sadness in her voice. "Tell me," she added, suddenly twining her arms round her friend's waist, "tell me about to-morrow, what will you do, where will you go to-morrow?"

Pauline Jervis unwound the loving arms and walked to the end of the room. Agnes watched her expectantly, as she came back and knelt at the window, clasping her hands upon the dusty sill.

"To-morrow?" she asked softly, when the silence, broken only by the buzzing of the flies on the window-pane, had become well night intolerable, "let me see, to-morrow will be different from the stagnant realm of those innumerable yesterdays. To-morrow I shall be free, free to court success, free to give rein to all my ambitious yearnings, free to take my intellect into the world and win name and fame among the savants of the day. The thought, Agnes, is like the sweet rich flavor of a frost-bitten apple, such as one finds under the tree in December."

"And you will, Dear, I know you will," Agnes exclaimed enthusiastically, "you will become the talk of London, the world will rave about you, you will be feted at every capital in Europe, and people will go mad to know you Poor me in the little village of Weyberne will sometimes manage to get a London paper, and read about the celebrated Pauline Jervois, how her last essay influenced the House of Lords in passing—"

Pauline laid a nervous hand over her friend's mouth.

"Such wild extravagance proves you don't take me seriously."

"Oh, but I do. I take everything you say and do most seriously."

"And being assured also that you love me, that you wish me well, I will take this opportunity of sharing a secret with you."

"Oh, you dear, sweet Pauline!"

"Come close, put your head on my shoulder, and listen quietly. First you must promise that however shocked and displeased you may be, you will treat my confidence as a sacred trust. Will you be faithful and true to me in this one instance so long as I need your help? By your help I mean your silence."

Agnes Fleming drew a deep breath.

"Yes," she said slowly, "I—I promise."

"Well, now listen. You remember the night of my arrival, the night of the Easter tableaux? Mademoiselle Duval was taken ill a few hours before I came, and Miss Fleming was stranded, she was minus her cavalier. No one in the school was sufficiently tall to attempt the part, and naturally the new arrival, being five feet nine, was hailed with vehement delight."

"Oh, yes; how those silly girls crowded round you, and—"

"Never mind the girls. I was going to say you remember Miss Jervois going away to unpack, and half an hour later a tall, slight young man walked into the refectoire and took his place beside Miss Fleming? After the curtain dropped I believe that youth put his arm round Miss Fleming's waist and kissed her, and if I remember rightly Miss Fleming actually blushed. Why, I verily believe she is blushing again at the recollection. Did you fall in love with me that night, Miss Fleming?"

Agnes threw back her head—and displayed a crimson face.

"You know I did—oh, Pauline, the whole hateful farce was so bewildering, the impersonation was so horribly realistic, I don't like to recall that evening."

Pauline Jervois let her head fall back till it rested against an old oak bureau, a little smile curving her lips, with more than a suspicion of amusement lurking in her dark eyes. She remembered Agnes' embarrassment, the anxiety of the other girls to obtain a word, or even a look from her, Madame's deference while exchanging pleasantries in the vestibule, and afterwards the severe catechising in Madame's sanctum. She had created a remarkable sensation, produced an extraordinary impression throughout the establishment. It seemed clear enough to Pauline that the two most important factors on this plane of existence were the accident of sex, and a puissant poise of brain.

"You thought the impersonation good, strong, true, reliable?" she asked abruptly, sitting upright and looking straight into Agnes's eyes.

"Much too good—it was simply devilish."

"You naughty girl, Agnes!"

The man who hesitates is lost, so far as the leap year girl is concerned.

UNDER THE N. P.

Part IV. of the annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce, which has just been issued, contains some figures that are of very great importance, as showing the progress of Canada under the National Policy, which a large sect on of the Grit party are endeavoring to destroy. These figures are tabulated herewith, comparison being made between 1879, being the last year under the tariff, which was revised by the Conservative party in that year, and the fiscal year 1911. The official statement is as follows:

†No return previous to 1886.

The foregoing figures carry their own comment with them. They speak more eloquently than any words from the pen of the most gifted writer of the extraordinary progress which Canada under the policy which was given effect to by the Conservative party a few months after their triumphant return to power on the 17th of September, 1878.

MEN FOR HOUSEWORK.

A wealthy father in Chicago has caused considearble discussion in and out of the newspapers by declaring his intention to have his college educated son trained as a cook. The father's position, remarks a contemporary, is that the professions are over-crowded, so much so that many of those following them are unable to make an independent or even a comfortable living. This, he asserts is true to practically all of the vocations that are open to educated young men are without technical and special training. On the other hand the field for young men who have acquired expert knowledge in any particular line is wide open and offering handsome inducements. Take for example the vocation of cook. A first class cook, or a master cook, is called a chef, and a chef may command, according to his ability and opportunity, anywhere from $150 to $750 a month. Many chefs in private houses, it is said, are paid salaries running up to $10,000 a year.

Now, why is it not every whit as "respectable" and as honorable to be a first-class chef as to be a first-class anything else? What distinction, as a matter of fact, can be drawn between the accomplished cook and the accomplished man in any other line of work? Why should the Chicago father be criticised because he would rather have his son become a first-class cook than, for instance, a third-class lawyer?

This leads naturally to consideration of the question. Why not train boys as well as girls in domestic economy, in household work? There is almost no field of activity so little crowded as the field of domestic science. What essential difference is there between much of the labor now cheerfully and properly performed by men and boys and that which they would be obliged to perform in the household?

Custom decrees that women shall do certain things and the men shall do certain things, but custom is not at all binding. It has been disregarded in many ways during recent years. Customs that were formerly honored in the observance are now abhorred. It is, among other things, no longer customary to sneer at any kind of honest labor. Household work being honorable for women must necessarily be honorabe for men. To open it up to men would have the first effect of relieving congestion in other quarters and thereby widening the field of labor in general. If men should go into household work largely this might prove an incentive to women to do likewise, with the happy result eventually that the foolish belief that domestic service in any more degrading than any other form of service would be forever destroyed.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Germany tries and convicts an English spy in secret. England tries and convicts a German spy in public. And that indicates the difference between the two countries; that suggests also why it would be well for civilization if England shall continue mistress of the seas.—Kingston Standard.

Armand Lavergne, the Nationalist leader, is going into South Renfrew to help Mr. Graham. In view of this fact, and of Mr. Bourassa's daily attacks on the Borden Government, it must be hard for the Liberal newspaper writers to summon up enough nerve to declare as they do that the Nationalists are running the Government.—Hamilton Herald.

Shortly before his departure for India King George was visiting at a country house near the scene of one of Oliver Cromwell's battles. Strolling out one morning alone he met the village blacksmith. "I say, my good fellow," said His Majesty genially, "I understand there was a big battle fought here." "Well—er," stammered the blacksmith, recognising and saluting the King, "I did 'ave a round or two with Bill the postman, but I didn't know your Majesty 'ad 'eard of it."—Boston Transcript.

When Canada wants freer importation of American products it will proceed to lower the Canadian imposts against American products. Similarly, when the United States seek more of Canada's products they will promptly proceed to scale down the American duties. That is the reciprocity which involves no surrender of fiscal sovereignty. It is the only kind which Canada will agree to.

"I don't like my new gown very well," said the young lady. "The material is awfully pretty, and the style is all right but it needs something to improve the shape of it."

"Why," suggested her dearest friend, "don't you let some other girl wear it?"

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and some of the men near him in the House have declared their resolve to continue their endeavors for reciprocity with the United States. Do they apprehend that the labors of a Tariff Commission would bring out a body of facts to further fortify Canada against the schemes of the domestic Continentalists? Of one thing the people may be assured, and are assured, namely, that the reasons for the Laurier opposition to the Tariff Commission idea are purely party reasons, and are not based on a consideration of the public advantage.—Mail and Empire.

The saving habit is one which grows with practice. It soon becomes almost as easy to save money as it is to spend it, if the depositor takes a pride in his account and regards it as something to be guarded against extravagance and passing whim. Money at interest is an anchor in the time of storm. It is a safeguard against disaster.—So says the Nashville Tennessean. It was to inculcate such a habit in the youth of the land that the school savings bank system was devised, and it has been highly successful wherever introduced. The Board of Education of Belleville ought to deal with the matter at their next session.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

AFTER DOCTORS FAILED

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Her.

Midgie Station, N. B.—One can hardly believe this as it is not natural, but it was my case. For ten months I suffered from suppression. I had different doctors, tried different medicines, but none helped me. My friends told me I would go into a decline. One day a lady friend told me what your medicine had done for her, so I wrote you for advice and received your reply with pleasure.

I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and at the second bottle showed improvement. Now I am regular and never was so well in my life, thanks to Mrs. Pinkham's medicine.

Please publish my letter for the benefit of others.—MRS. JOSIAH W. HICKS, Midgie Station, N. B.

Indian Head, Sask.—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is indeed a boon to women who suffer from female ills. My health is better now than it has been in my five years of married life and I thank you for the good your advice and medicine have done me. I had spent hundreds of dollars on doctors without receiving any benefit.—MRS. FRANK COOPER, Box 448, Indian Head, Saskatchewan.

The most successful remedy in this country for the cure of all forms of female complaints is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

TAX REFORM BILL.

Mr. Ellis of West Ottawa Introduces One In Legislature.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—A bill for tax reform was introduced in the Legislature yesterday by Mr. Ellis (West Ottawa). It follows on the line of the Saskatchewan Act, and is no identical with the Fripp bill. The latter bill provided that taxes on buildings and improvements should be wiped out at one stroke. The Ellis bill provided that assessment on buildings and improvements may be reduced in the first year 40 per cent., and by 15 per cent. each year thereafter until eliminated. It provides also that the bill shall only come into force in any municipality on a vote of the property owners.

After the House had adjourned, N. W. Rowell stated that the Government had evidently managed to get their bill in ahead of his. But he had arranged that his bill should come up on the same day as Mr. Ellis'.

Sam Clark (West Northumberland) thought that the bill to prevent minors from frequently billiard rooms should be modified. He thought it was something of a hardship for boys 16 or 17 years not to be allowed to go into a pool room to play a game of billiards.

Mr. Ellis (Ottawa West) has also given notice that he will introduce a bread bill in the Legislature. He says the present bread law pleases neither the public nor the bakers.

It is understood that the new bill will virtually be a repeal of the Nickle Bread Act, and substituting therefor the provisions of the McNaught Act, which was previously in force.

Hon. Mr. Hanna in reply to a question from Mr. McQueen, said that the Government, in compliance with requests, had spent $180,511.65 within the last ten years to assist local sanitoria in caring for tubercular patients and to provide facilities for their treatment. In addition, the Government, in 1907, appropriated $1,000 for a tuberculosis exhibit. The last official figure of the annual deaths from tuberculosis showed that out of eight countries of the world, Ontario stood lowest with a record of 102 deaths out of 100,000 population. The past year had been one of the best in the province.

T. Herb Lennox (North York) will be chairman of the standing orders committee of the Legislature, and Hon. J. S. Hendrie will be chairman of the railway committee.

Fewer people would jump at conclusions if they could see their finish.

LABOR MEN ARRESTED

Nearly All the Indicted Are Captured in Dynamite Cases.

Almost the Entire Official Staff of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers Now In Custody—Frank Ryan, President of the Union, Is Held—All Will Be Let Out on Bail.

Indianapolis, Feb. 15.—The U. S. Government yesterday arrested almost all of the 54 men indicted in the dynamite conspiracy cases.

It took into custody within a few hours practically the entire official staff of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, including the chief officers, members of the executive board and about twenty business agents and former business agents. Those included Frank M. Ryan, the president; J. T. Butler of Buffalo, N.Y., the first vice-president, and Herbert S. Hockin, the second vice-president and successor of John J. McNamara as secretary-treasurer, and each of these men are required to give $10,000 bond for his appearance for arraignment here, with all the other defendants, on March 12.

More than forty of the men, chiefly labor union officials, who are charged with conspiring to destroy by dynamite or nitro-glycerine, the property of employers of non-union labor, were under arrest by last night, and it was declared the apprehension of all the others would follow within 48 hours.

The most prominent of those taken into custody is Frank Ryan, president of the International Ironworkers, this city; Vice-Presidents Butler and Hockin—the latter also acting as secretary-treasurer since the arrest of John McNamara; Spurgeon Meadows, business agent of the district council of the International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; and C. E. Dowd, representing the International Machinists Union. These three unions are alleged to have been involved in the conspiracy.

McManigal has charged that Hockin was "the man that put him in the dynamiting business."

Mr. Ryan said: "I desire to say in the public and for the satisfaction of my friends, both in the union and outside of labor union circles, that I am innocent of knowingly having violated any law of the United States, or of any law of any state in the Union. Therefore I have no fear of a trial and I am absolutely confident and know that I will be able to prove myself innocent of any crime charged whatsoever before any fair-minded court and jury in the country."

By its action the Government revealed the identities of the men whom it charges with being the accomplices of the McNamaras and Ortie E. McManigal in the dynamite plots, embracing almost one hundred explosions which were begun in Massachusetts in 1905, which were scattered over the country for six years, and which resulted in the wrecking of The Los Angeles Times' building, and an attempt to blow up President Taft's special train at Santa Barbara, Cal., last October.

Fourteen of those indicted are each required to furnish $10,000 bond, and forty are each required to furnish $5,000 bond, making an aggregate bond required of $340,000. Some of those whom the Government was unable to find yesterday, were reported to have disappeared through fear of inability to get bonds. It was intimated that the Iron Workers' Association would be unable to furnish security for its indicted members.

The indictment on which all the men were arrested was made public yesterday. It charges all the fifty-four men with conspiracy to violate the statutes forbidding the carrying of explosives on passenger trains and details forty-seven transportations charged as overt acts and names Ortie E. McManigal, the McNamaras, or Herbert S. Hockin in each act, but does not specify the part taken by the other defendants.

Altogether the indictments contain 128 counts against each of the defendants and the penalty for any one of the offences varies from 18 months to two years.

The following have been indicted, and all but one or two arrested: William K. Benson, Detroit; John J. McCray, former member executive; F. K. Painter, Omaha, Neb., business agent; J. W. Irwin, Peoria, Ill.; Patrick Ryan, Chicago; Milton H. Davis, Philadelphia, former member of executive; William Bernhardt, Cincinnati; Frank N. Ryan, president of International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers Union, Indianapolis; Sturgeon P. Meadows, Indianapolis; J. T. Butler, of Buffalo; Herbert S. Hockin, Detroit; Fred. Sherman, Indianapolis; Charles N. Beum, Minneapolis; Frank J. Higgins, Hartford, Conn.; Hiram Cline, Muncie, Ind.; Richard H. Houlihan, Chicago; William Schoupe, Chicago; James Cooney, Chicago; James Coughlin, Chicago; Charles W. Wachmeistein, Detroit; Frank J. Murphy, Detroit; John Barry, St. Louis; Paul Morrin, St. Louis; Michael J. Cuname, Philadelphia; Frank C. Webb, former member of Ironworkers' executive, New York; Patrick F. Farrell, New York; Daniel Brophy, Brooklyn; Clarence Dowd, Mansfield, Ohio; E. E. Phillips, Syracuse; John Carroll, Syracuse; M. J. Hannon, Scranton; Peter J. Smith, Cleveland; George (Nipper) Anderson, Cleveland; Ernest G. W. Basey, Indianapolis; Edward Clark, Cincinnati; A. J. Cavanaugh, Springfield, Ill.; M. L. Fennell, Springfield, Ill.; Ed. Smythe, Peoria, Ill.; James E. Ray, Peoria, Ill.; W. J. McCain, Kansas City; W. Bert Brown, Kansas City; Henry W. Legleitner, Pittsburg; W. E. Redden, Milwaukee; Herman G. Sieffort, Milwaukee; Daniel Buckley, Davenport, Iowa; Frank Mooney, Duluth, Minn.; M. J. Young, Boston, member Ironworkers' executive and president Boston local; Phillip A. Cooley, New Orleans, member executive board; Olav A. Tvietmoe, San Francisco; secretary-treasurer state and local building trades council (already indicted in California); Eugene A. Clancey, San Francisco, former member of executive board (already indicted in California).

Gompers Is Mum.

Washington, D.C., Feb. 15.—The contempt of court proceedings against Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison of the American Federation of Labor, was resumed before Justice Wright yesterday.

Mr. Gompers was in court when news of the wholesale arrests was brought to him. There was no intimation that the president would make a statement. He already has declared that he knows absolutely nothing of any dynamiting.

No evidence, it was declared here last night, has been secured against officials of the American Federation.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

C. H. Ross, a pioneer business man of Barrie, is dead.

A conference of Dominion fruit growers is in progress at Ottawa.

Clydesdale and Shire horses, valued at $50,000, were shipped from Britain to Canada yesterday.

The merger of the Inland and the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Companies has been completed.

J. J. Spenceley, Grand Trunk brakeman, was thrown under the engine in a collision at Belleville and scalded to death.

With almost two feet of ice in the River Thames from Chatham to the mouth of the river, there is grave danger of destructive floods.

A. W. Atwater, K.C., consulting attorney of the City of Montreal, has been asked to run for the English House of Commons in the Unionist interests.

Medical reciprocity between the different provinces of Canada was approved yesterday by the legislation committee of the Quebec Legislative Assembly.

Toronto is to have the finest grain elevator between Montreal and Fort William. It will be of re-inforced concrete and the cost will reach about $1,000,000.

Sheriff Mowat of Toronto yesterday received an official communication from Ottawa saying that the death sentence of Joseph Jessimane had been changed to one of life imprisonment.

Rev. W. A. Ball, who is to work under Rev. W. G. Boyd at Edmonton, and Rev. Maurice Beardshaw, under Rev. Douglas Ellison at Regina, received the official dismissal at Lambeth Palace yesterday.

Earl Grey, speaking at the Central Poor Law Conference in London, eulogized the extension of child emigration, and said the selection and protection exercised by the Canadian authorities was highly creditable.

Hon. Frank Cochrane yesterday presented an estimate of the cost of the National Transcontinental Railway to the House of Commons. The grand total, including interest charges, is placed at two hundred and fifty-eight millions.

Mariners Make Requests.

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—A representative delegation of the Dominion Marine Association waited on the Ministers of Marine and Railways and Canals yesterday. Their most important request was that the canals be open on Sunday. The Soo canal already is operated on Sunday. Another request was for the opening of the canals earlier this season than usual, owing to the congestion in the west. The association renewed its demand that navigation be paramount, and that on the St. Lawrence and other rivers it should not be subordinated to power schemes. Some slight amendments to the Shipping Act were also suggested, among them one that tugs or wrecking vessels be allowed without license to carry men in cases of emergency.

Took the Lid Off All Right.

Windsor, Feb. 15.—J. Fee, foreman of a repair gang of Bell Telephone Co., and A. H. Gilmore, lineman, narrowly escaped death Tuesday night when natural gas in a manhole exploded. Both were thrown about thirty feet.

The cold weather had hampered work by freezing the covers on the manholes. A colored man announced that he could lift a lid, which he proceeded to do by piling straw on top of the manhole and then igniting it. The cover was blown about sixty feet.

Children Fell Into Sea.

San Remo, Italy, Feb. 15.—While 45 school children were promenading the San Remo roadway a large part of it collapsed, and all of the children were carried down.

The accident was due to subterranean sea erosion, which had undermined a considerable part of the district.

A large number of the children were killed. All were swallowed up in the underground sea when the road sunk.

Woman Shot by Burglars.

New York, Feb. 15.—While holding the door of her 43rd street apartment against three would-be burglars, who were trying to force their way into her home at one o'clock yesterday morning, Mrs. John Burns, aged 23, was shot twice, both bullets narrowly missing her heart. The shots were fired through the keyhole.

Mayor of Windsor Dead.

Windsor, Feb. 15.—Mayor J. W. Hanna, who suffered nervous collapse following his re-election for a third term by the largest mayoralty majority ever recorded here, died yesterday morning. He was born in the county of Leeds, and was 52 years of age. A public funeral will be held.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Rapidly decreasing supplies, with predictions that within a month the total store at Liverpool would be the smallest since the year of the Leiter corner, gave strength to-day to the market for wheat. Closing prices were 5-8c to 7-8c higher than last night. Corn made a net gain of 1-4c to 1-2c, and oats 1-4c to 1-2c. In provisions the outcome varied from 2 1-2c decline to an advance of a dime.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ½d lower to ½d higher than yesterday, and corn ½d lower. Buenos Ayres wheat was ⅛c to ⅜c higher. Paris wheat closed ⅜c lower to ⅛c higher, Antwerp ⅜c lower, Berlin ½c higher, and Budapest ⅛c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—Cables on Manitoba spring wheat came weaker this morning at a further decline in prices of 1½d per quarter, but later in the day there was an improved demand from foreign buyers, and bids were advanced 1½d, but, as they were still out of line, no new business was done. A feature of the local market was the good demand for American corn, and sales of 23 cars of No. 3 yellow to arrive were made at 74½c, ex-track.

There was an increased demand for oats and bids of 51½c for extra No. 1 feed in round lots were made freely, which sellers would not accept. The export trade in flour was quiet, but the demand from local and country buyers continues fairly good. Bran and shorts are scarce and in good demand.

The first importation of New Zealand butter for the season has arrived, and it is being offered to the trade at the same prices as Canadian creamery. Eggs firm and in fair demand. Dressed hogs advanced 25c per 100 pounds.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 10 were 800 cattle, 200 sheep and lambs, 1151 hogs and 400 calves. To-day's offerings were 400 cattle, 300 sheep and lambs, 1100 hogs and 600 calves.

Owing to the smaller offerings of cattle and the improved quality, a firm feeling prevailed in the market, and the advance in prices noted on Monday was well maintained. There was a good demand for the best grades of steers, heifers and cows, and a fairly active trade was done, top quality steers selling as high as $7, but there was no demand for the common and inferior stock, as the market is still over-supplied with this class of beef, for which there is only a limited demand.

The market for calves was weaker, on account of the increased receipts and the fact that the bulk of the stock is of poor quality, it being too young and not fit for killing; but, in spite of this fact, the demand was good, and fairly good prices were realized. Sheep and lambs were rather scarce and in good demand at firm prices.

There was no change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being firmly maintained under a good demand from packers, and sales of selected lots were made at $7.25 to $7.35 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.50 to $7; do., medium, $4.50 to $5.50; do., common, $3 to $4; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; do., medium, $3.50 to $4.50; do., bulls, $4.50 to $6; feeding bulls, $3 to $4; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $30 to $45.

Sheep, ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4.25; lambs, $6.50 to $7.

Hogs, f.o.b., $7.25 to $7.35.

Calves, $2.50 to $8.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 14.—Cattle—Receipts, 150 head; market slow, steady; prime steers, $7 to $8; butcher grades, $3 to $6.75.

Calves—Receipts, 50 head; market active, steady; cull to choice, $6 to $10.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5000; market slow, steady; choice lambs, $6.75 to $6.90; cull to fair, $5.25 to $6.50; yearlings, $5 to $5.75; sheep, $2 to $4.60.

Hogs—Receipts, 2550; market active and steady; yorkers, $6.40 to $6.60; pigs, $6.25; mixed, $6.55 to $6.60; heavy, $6.50 to $6.60; roughs, $5.50 to $5.85.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Cattle—Receipts, 15,000; market, steady; beeves, $4.70 to $8.60; Texas steers, $4.60 to $5.75; western steers, $4.85 to $7; stockers and feeders, $3.90 to $6; cows and heifers, $2.10 to $6.50; calves, $5.75 to $8.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 29,000; market, 5c lower; light, $5.75 to $6.15; mixed, $5.85 to $6.20; heavy, $5.85 to $6.20; rough, $5.85 to $6; pigs, $4.25 to $5.90; bulk of sales, $6 to $6.15.

Sheep—Receipts, 23,000; market, strong; native, $3.15 to $4.70; western, $3.40 to $4.75; yearlings, $4.75 to $5.75; lambs, native, $4.25 to $6.60; western, $4.50 to $6.65.

Canada's Best Corsets

From $1.00 to $3.00

We would direct the attention of every woman to the superior workmanship and sterling qualities of the Crompton Corsets, manufacturers of the celebrated C. C. a la Grace Corsets.

Last year we sold over eighteen hundred dollars' worth of these best known Canadian made Corsets, which amount we believe is largely in excess of any other Corset ever sold in Belleville by one store.

There must be a reason for our ever increaisng sale of these Corsets and we believe it is to be found in the fact that at the price paid the Crompton Corset is superior to any other Canadian made Corset and C. C. a la Grace Corsets have come to be a household term, every woman realizing that for beauty of design, giving graceful ease and comfort to the wearer, Crompton Corsets have no equals.

We are now showing all the new Spring Models in these Corsets, with a style designed for every figure, in every size from 18 to 36 waist measures, at prices from.................... $1.00 to $3.00 a pair

"Lion" Too Powerful.

London, Feb. 15.—It transpires that the trouble with the new dreadnought Lion, necessitating extensive alterations in the engine and boiler rooms is the development of abnormal heat by her powerful engines. In other words she develops too much power.

Many naval constructors, according to The Morning Post, believe that these developments confirm Sir William White's opinion that the size limit of vessels has been nearly reached.

Roosevelt Getting Ready.

New York, Feb. 15.—The platform upon which Col. Theodore Roosevelt will run for the Presidency if he accepts the nomination, has been discussed by Roosevelt and progressive Republican leaders from nearly every section of the country during the past few days. It was reported, and was the subject of a conference yesterday among Roosevelt and Republican leaders of five states.

Missionaries Not Abused.

Tokio, Feb. 15.—The Japanese Government yesterday authorized the press to contradict recent reports as to the maltreatment of Korean converts to Christianity by the Japanese authorities. Lieut.-Gen. Count Terauchi, the Japanese resident-general of Korea, is very sympathic toward evangelization.

You May Have Catarrh And Not Know It

HEAD AND THROAT BECOME DISEASED WITH CATARRH FROM NEGLECTING COLDS AND COUGHS.

CATARRH IS TREACHEROUS—WHEN FULLY DEVELOPED IS A HORROR—NOTE ITS SYMPTOMS.

"Is your breath bad?"
"Is your throat sore?"
"Do you cough at night?"
"Is your voice raspy?"
"Does your nose stop up?"
"Have you nasal discharge?"
"Do you spit up phlegm?"
"Has your nose an itchy feeling?"
"Have you pain across the eyes?"
"Is your throat irritable, weak?"
"Do you sleep with mouth open?"
"Are you subject to sneezing fits?"
"Do your ears buzz and roar?"
"Are you hard of hearing?"

If you have any of these indications of Catarrh, cure the trouble now—stop it before it gets into the lungs or broichial tubes—then it may be too late. The remedy is "Catrrhozone" a direct breathable cure that places antiseptic balsams and healing medication on every spot that's tainted by catarrhal germs.

There can be no failure with Catarrhozone—for years it has successfully cured cases that resisted other remedies. "No once can know better than I the enormous benefit one gets from the very first day's use of Catarrhozone," writes T. T. Hopkins, of Westvale, P. Q. "I had for years a

The Toronto Star, no doubt unintentionally pays the following tribute to the N. P.: "During the last fifteen years the progress of Canada has been so rapid that some people feared it could not last. They said that there were always fat and lean years, cycles of prosperity and depression, hard times alternating with good times. Still the good times continued, the lean years did not come, the depression did not arrive. Each year was better than the last."

INQUEST WAS OPENED IN THE RAILWAY FATALITY

Conductor Nugent of the Double-Header Testified—His Train Was on Main Line for Freight Service—Had no Notice that the Line was Blocked by Cars—There was no Light on Cars and Did not See them Before Collision

The coroner's inquest to inquire into the circumstances whereby the unfortunate brakeman, J. J. Spencely, of Lindsay, met his untimely death here yesterday was opened yesterday afternoon before Coroner Farley at Tickell & Sons' undertaking establishment. The jury is composed of the following citizens: Messrs. L. R. Terwilligar, foreman; J. Fenn, P. Harrison, F. Dolan, E. T. Cherry, R. W. Adams, C. H. Bonisteel, W. S. Clarke and Ald. Canning

After the Coroner had briefly outlined the circumstances of the accident, as he had been informed, the jury viewed body. Some evidence was submitted, when the enquiry was adjourned until Monday afternoon next at 3 o'clock.

Sergt. Naphin, being sworn, said he summoned the jury by order of the Coroner and all were qualified to act. Personally he knew nothing of the accident. Saw the body of Spencely, and acting under orders of the Coroner, had the body removed to Tickell's undertaking establishment.

Percy Nugent, being sworn, said he resided at Lindsay. He was conductor on the train which came from Lindsay to Belleville. It was a double-header freight train and left Lindsay at 6.50 Tuesday night; arrived at Belleville at 4.15 Wednesday morning. Witness knew the deceased and recognized the body as that of J. J. Spencely, of Lindsay, who was brakeman on the train. The cause of death was on account of a collision which occurred on the east leg of the 'Y'. The crew of the train had no instruction that there were cars on the line. There was no light on the cars the double-header struck. In this case the line was blocked by cars. He had seen this line blocked here before, but they had received word of such. At Peterborough orders were given for the train to go on through to Belleville. Spencely was a single man, residing at Lindsay, and had been working for the road a year or so. The deceased set a switch which let the train on the leg of the 'Y' where the cars were standing. The cars were not seen until the engines hit them. When the collision occurred the train was moving slowly. Witness got off the train to turn the switch and was about to get into the caboose when the collision occurred. He should have had an order that the 'Y' was blocked with cars. The Lindsay office where witness received his orders should have been notified from Belleville that the 'Y' was not clear. The freight trains coming into Belleville always took the east line where the collision occurred. It was the main line for the freight service. Having had no notice, the crew did not expect that there were cars standing on the line.

This was all the evidence available at the time and the enquiry was adjourned.

COGITATIONS OF AN OLD FRIEND

Prof. Denys Gives the Readers of the Intelligencer Some of His Musings

TO the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Mr. Editor,—It indeed seems an age since we last chatted together, and as the frosted pane, no less than the wailing wind, proclaims the intense cold out and we snugly sit by the heated hearth, we are tempted to moralize, not, perhaps, after the fashion of certain disquieting theorizers whose words challenge our very conception of things, but rather in the restful, hopeful manner soothing alike to soul and senses. There are, to be sure, trials and thorns enough in the path of each and every one of us; and to burden to-day's duty with yesterday's troubles is to make tomorrow's task more trying. Prior experience, obviously, should serve in shaping ulterior endeavors, yet discrimination as to what should and what should not be recalled will enhance comfort.

I am, Mr. Editor, fast acquiring a reputation for vast verities and it's not any too soon if I am to impress mankind before I become a guest of the grave. As the snows of time fall upon your head and your brow bends under their weight, you rightly grow pensive. Especially is it when the day's din has ceased and night spreads her mantle over mortals, enveloping all in tranquility, that the mind, instinct with reflection, will stray away and wonder at much that fascinates or frets the flesh. Then you may meet who, day in and day out, laze and lounge with a placidness and assurance surpassing comprehension. They are the drones of the hive. Others are money-making mad, they thirst after the tempting coin and must have it. It were in vain that you, in your innocence, would, before them, dilate on the sweetness, sacredness of art, music, rhetoric, painting and other ennobling aspirations of the human genius. No, rise in stocks and real estate is the only rational concern! There are, too, the little morose men who never learned to smile. Life to them holds naught but regret and faces intended to be fair have faded and fallen beneath the constant cloud. How different is the earnest toiler and pursuer of the ideal. Hours are all too swift for his activity. Silent as a star beam, he is as bright again and benignant. His trained reason waves an acceptable sceptre and his worth wins lasting friendships.

This missive I would deem incomplete without at least a passing reference to the Grand Prelate Belleville has sent us. Some have the head, others the heart; but when the two are so harmoniously combined, you pause and inwardly praise Providence for the gift of such men. And as the best I have kept for the last, I now conclude, Mr. Editor, with kindliest wishes to you and the friends whose memory I cherish beyond all I can say.

Votre ami,
PAUL DENYS.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agent for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within 9 miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him, by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

THE PRINCE EDWARD & HASTINGS RAILWAY COMPANY.

NOTICE is hereby given that an application will be made to the Parliament of Canada at its present Session for an Act to incorporate a railway company under the name of "The Prince Edward & Hastings Railway Company," with power to lay out, construct and operate a line of railway:

(a) From a point at or near Trenton in the County of Hastings, by the most feasible route to Gardenville, in the County of Prince Edward, thence in an easterly direction through or near Albury, Rednerville and Rossmore, in the County of Prince Edward, to the City of Belleville, in the County of Hastings; thence northwesterly to Frankford and thence to Trenton, in the said County.

(b) From some point on the above described line between Albury and Rednerville to Wellington, in the County of Prince Edward, and thence in an easterly direction through or near Bloomfield, to a point at or near Picton, in the said County.

(c) From a point at or near Picton, in a northerly direction to Demorestville, thence in an easterly direction through or near Northport and Solmesville, to Ferry Point, all in the said County of Prince Edward

(d) From Bloomfield, in the County of Prince Edward, in a southwesterly direction to West Point, in the said County.

(e) From Picton in a southwesterly direction to West Point.

(f) From Picton in a southwesterly direction to Black River.

(g) From Picton in an easterly direction through or near Waupoos to Indian Point; to construct and operate telegraph and telephone lines, and to charge tolls for the use thereof; to receive, transform, transmit, distribute and supply electric or other power and energy, and to dispose of the surplus thereof, and collect rents and charges therefor; to construct, acquire, charter and operate and dispose of steam or other vessels of every kind and description; and to construct, acquire and lease terminal stations, facilities, wharves, docks, elevators, warehouses, etc.; and to carry on the business of forwarding agents, wharfingers and warehousemen; to enter into agreements with other companies; together with all the usual and customary powers. The railway undertaking and works to be declared a work for the general advantage of Canada.

Good Looks and Good Temper

A CHAT WITH OUR LADY READERS.

Have you ever noticed how miserable and unhappy the little pains and aches make one? A stinging cut, badly chapped hands, a nasty burn, a sore foot, a poisoned finger—none of them wounds or ailments ever likely to cause serious trouble, but bad enough to put an edge on one's temper and give one a "grouch."

Take this advice. When in pain from any of these everyday evils, just use Zam-Buk. As soon as you put it on to a sore, a cut, a burn, or any skin injury, it stops the pain and the smarting and starts up healing. Don't think that because Zam-Buk is so widely used by medical men, by nurses, and for serious skin diseases and accidents it is ONLY for serious cases. Keep it handy in the kitchen, the workroom, and use it immediately you get some injury or sore.

Mrs. Chas. H. Barrett, Harmony Road, Truro, N.S., says: "I had an ingrowing toe nail, which caused me acute agony. Sometimes the pain was so severe I could not sleep. It became so bad that I feared blood-poisoning had set in. I was advised to try Zam-Buk and bound up the sore toe with it. In a few days it was much easier and I continued the treatment. The result is that to-day the toe is sound and I have no more trouble with it. I strongly recommend Zam-Buk to every housewife."

Zam-Buk is just the thing, too, for the children. Pure in its composition and herbal in its nature, it is suitable for the most delicate skin. It cures piles, eczema, varicose ulcers, cold sores, abscesses, blood-poisoning, ring-worm, and all similar skin diseases. Sold everywhere at 50c. a box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

HOCKEY NOTES.

Preston got a six-goal lead on Paris last night, winning at home by 9 to 3.

At Madoc last night Stirling beat Madoc 7 to 1.

At Peterborough last night the local Intermediates were put out by Midland, who won the game by 4 to 1, and the round by 14 to 3.

Toronto hockey fans will have an opportunity of seeing the best intermediate teams in the O.H.A. running on Friday night, when the Mount Forest team plays Midland, the winners of the Midland-Peterborough series, a sudden-death game. The winner will meet the winner of Preston-Paris for the championship.

In Cleveland artificial ice rink they start to freeze the ice at 7.45, and as it only takes fifteen minutes to become frozen, it is ready at 8 o'clock, then a gong rings and teams take the ice for practice. At 8.10 the second gong rings for the referee and officials to appear on the scene, and at 8.15 the third gong announces the start of the game. The game is played in twenty-minute halves, under the eastern offside rule.

AMERICAN LEAGUE IN CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—With the magnates of the American League most of whom are accompanied by their managers, all present, the annual schedule meeting was held at the Congress Hotel to-day Ban Johnson presiding.

The adoption of the schedule is purely a formal matter as the playing programme of two years ago was practically agreed upon as the one to be followed this year. Lively discussion as to the changes in the rules, providing for the disposition of recruits who have been drafted and are about to be returned to the minors, was expected. The magnates will also exchange opinions upon the proposal that waivers be secured from all clubs in the two major leagues before a player may be sent to the minors.

The keenest interest, however, seemed to be over the matter of players and the ing to reach agreements for trades to strengthen their respective teams.

CURLING.

BELLEVILLE vs. KINGSTON—SENIORS WON, JUNIORS LOST.

The local curlers last night won and lost in their Senior and Junior matches with Kingston, which took place here. It was one of the series in connection with the Central Canada Curling Association for trophies. The result was a win for the senior rinks by 9 shots, while the juniors lost the game by the narrow margin of one shot. For the latter rinks, when the last end came to be played, Belleville was leading by two shots. The Kingston rink, skipped by H. Turcotte, secured a 4 end, while on the other rink the local players were not able to secure more than one shot. A large number of interested spectators were present during the match, including many ladies. Owing to the senior players from Kingston not arriving until after 9 o'clock, that game was late in starting and was not concluded until after 1 o'clock this morning. In both games 18 ends were played. The players and scores were as follows:—

HOCKEY.

THE "NEVER-SWEATS" WON.

One of the most strenuous and exciting games of hockey that has been witnessed at the Arena this season took place last night between the "Never-Sweats" and the "Can't-Swims," and the former team, in "Can't-Swims" and the former team proved to be the winners by a score of 6 to 2.

The members of The Intelligencer's literary staff being otherwise engaged, a volunteer contributor has furnished the following points on the game:—

Bert McCoy was the star of the game. He made a sensational end to end rush and scored. This happened twice. Bert made a tremendous hit, and is the best "point" man that has been seen on Belleville ice in some time.

We are very glad to say there is no truth in the report that Herbert Chown and Harry A. Elvins have accepted a position with the National Hockey Association, although they would be quite capable.

The Wallaces were very much in evidence. "Chuck" Wallace was the most strenuous man on the ice; "Beecher" was easily the star of the Can't-Swims, but played a very rough game. "That" scored one goal; "Irsty" made an end to end rush. "Rock" Huffman was as good as his name; he never made a move throughout the whole game, only an occasional "slash." Ted Clarke was a little shaky on his feet, but a very wicked shot. The rest played in such a style as to evidence their ability in fast company.

SUREST TONIC IN THE WORLD

IS "FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE GREAT FRUIT MEDICINE

Like fruit juice, "Fruit-a-tives" acts on the great blood purifying organs of the body—namely the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin, and stimulates all these parts to increased activity. The splendid nerve tonics and intestinal antiseptics, combined with the intensified fruit juices, make "Fruit-a-tives" the finest of nerve tonics.

On the stomach, "Fruit-a-tives" acts as a soothing tonic and allays all irritation.

By purifying the blood—strengthening the nervous system and regulating kidneys, bowels and skin—"Fruit-a-tives" builds up the whole system as nothing else will

"Fruit-a-tives" is a really wonderful medicine—being made directly from fresh fruit—and is the intensified juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit. It is mild in action—pleasant to take—and is a tonic of inestimable value.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE RING.

FITZ TO PRESENT HIS SON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Bob Fitzsimmons is preparing to surprise the boxing fans. He has no intention of coming back in person, reports to the contrary notwithstanding, but he is coming back as the backer of his husky son, Bob Fitzsimmons, jr., whom he has been secretly training as a white hope at his place at Dunellen, N.J. Bob, junior, is only 16 years old, but is 6 feet tall, weighs 160 pounds, and is backed by all the ring craft and generalship that his father has been able to impart in long and careful training.

He is too young as yet to begin climbing, but will be ready when his father says the word.

OUTLAW LEAGUE ORGANIZED.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Feb. 15.—The Columbian Baseball League was organized here last night. Franchises were awarded to eight cities, and John T. Powers, of Chicago, was elected president for one year. The league will begin playing the latter part of April, and will continue until the latter part of September or the early part of October.

The cities in the league, owners of the franchises and the playing grounds follow:

Kansas City—J. C. Masker, Gordon and Koeph Athletic Park.

Chicago—William Niesen, Gunther's Park.

St. Louis—Otto Stieffel and former Governor Lon Stevens; no grounds decided on.

Louisville—Garnett Zorn, Walter H Pearce and George B. Coder, Butchertown grounds.

Indianapolis—W. A. Matthews, Riverside Beach.

Detroit—John Roesink, Mack Park.

Cleveland—Mat Hinkel, Luna Park.

Milwaukee—Judge William Melville; grounds purchased but location unknown.

The one umpire system will be used, and contract jumping will not be encouraged, according to President Powers, but the reserve clause will not be recognized. Letters from 65 players, forty of them on the reserve lists, were exhibited by President Powers, and in each the writer asked for a contract with the new league. Powers also said that the magnates at the meeting had deposited the money for the preliminary organization.

Danny Shay or Warren Gillis elected to be manager of the Kansas City team; Ed. McKean, of the Cleveland team; Thomas Hackett, catcher of the Spokane team, of the St. Louis team; and either German Schaeffer, Artie Hofman or Chick Fraser will be manager of the Louisville team.

FOUR HANGED AT CHICAGO

They Murdered a Market Gardener Whom They Had Waylaid

(Intelligencer Special.)

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—Ewald and Frank Shiblawski, Philip Somerling, and Thomas Schulcs, four men who waylaid and murdered Fred Guelzow, a market gardener, were hanged this morning in the county jail.

The lawyers for Thomas Jennings, also under sentence to die, argued before Judge Landis that in convicting him by fingerprints he was forced to give evidence against himself in violation of his constitutional rights. Unless Judge Landis stays the execution Jennings will be hanged this afternoon.

Judge Landis refused to grant a respite and Jennings was hanged this afternoon.

ESCAPED FROM CUSTODY

(Intelligencer Special.)

GANANOQUE, Feb. 16.—Alexander Pelow, accused of stealing valuable fox skins, escaped from a constable while being taken to court, crossed a frozen bay and is believed to be hiding on island.

NO MORE "OBEY"

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 16.—The word "obey" will be stricken from the Church of England marriage service. The matter came up at a meeting of the lower house of Convocation of the province of Canterbury yesterday and a resolution was adopted recommending that the "scriptural form of the last exhortation in the marriage ceremony be revised." The house also agreed to revise the collect following in the marriage asking for children for the couple.

GRAIN CONGESTION AT PORT ARTHUR

Railways' Inability to Handle Western Trade Shown in a Striking Manner

One of the results of the railways' inability to cope with shipping of grain from the West, and the absence of granary space to store it when it is shipped, is illustrated in a striking manner by the fact that at the present moment twenty-six big Great Lake steamers lie in Port Arthur with no less than five and one-half million tons of grain in their holds. They are the steamers Agnew, Thompson, Osler, Zimmerman, Wolvin, Wallace, Ashley, Meacham, Hutchinson, Midland Queen, Dundee, Pollock, Peavy, Barlum, Adams, Shaughnessy, Beaverton, Gordon, Canadian, Renvoyle, Plumber, Saskatoon, Turret Court, Pellatt, Jasques and Ames.

"The owners of the grain haven't been able to get it shipped farther than Port Arthur," said one of the company's officials, "and the granaries are already filled there now. So when it comes down that far by train, the only thing to do is to rent storage space in the big boats that are docked there for the winter. This it had been necessary to do other years, but never to the extent it is being done this year. What they'll do with the surplus when all the available boats are filled, I don't know. The elevators are full, and the railway cars are full in the yard."

The work of getting the boats from the drydocks and wharves up to the granaries—a distance of five miles—to be loaded, has been most difficult. In some places the ice is five feet thick, and the tug Whalen has been busy ever since the ice formed breaking the ice and escorting the big boats from their winter moorings up to be loaded, and away again to make way for the next one. The storage rights are selling at a premium, too.

"The Whalen is the only tug on fresh water that could break the ice," said the steamboat man.

The grain will be kept in the boats till about April 15, or when the ice breaks up, and will then be carried to Montreal for export.

DESPERATE WOMAN TRIES SUICIDE

Florence Munville Takes a Quantity of Muriatic Acid—She was to Have Answered a Charge in Court This Morning—Arrested on a Warrant Charging Attempted Suicide

A week ago Mrs. Florence Munville, who resides on Wharf Street, was placed under arrest on a charge of keeping a disorderly house. She was subsequently allowed out on bail to appear in Police Court this morning. Evidently she had no desire to do so, but instead made an attempt to end her existence. She procured a bottle which contained hydrochloric or muriatic acid and drank a quantity of it. She was immediately taken deathly sick and as speedily as possible a physician was summoned and administered an antidote, which had the effect of counteracting the poison.

The acid burned the womans throat to some extent. He rcondition was, however, such that she was unable to appear in court to answer to the charge preferred against her.

In consequence the case was preemptorily enlarged until to-morrow, and a warrant was issued by the Magistrate for the arrest of the woman, on a charge of attempting to commit suicide, which warrant was executed later in the day.

Mrs. Munville is well known in this city, where she has resided all her life. It is stated that she was under the impression that she was partaking of carbolic acid. Had she drank as freely of that as she did of the muriatic acid which she took, in all probability her life would have been forfeited.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

ASSAULT AND ABUSE

A young man amed Losee was arrested to-day on a warrant charging him with assaulting and using abusive language towards D. A. Moon. The accused was subsequently released on bail and the case will be ventilated in police court some day next week.

LIVELY RUNAWAY.

A lively runaway occurred on Front Street this afternoon, but fortunately no person was injured. A horse belonging to Mr. R. Elvins and attached to a delivery sleigh ran away. At the corner of Front and Campbell Streets the animal became loosed from the vehicle and ran up the hill. The harness and sleigh were damaged.

QUINTE QUEEN SOLD.

The steamer Quinte Queen, the well-known bay and river boat, has been sold to Ottawa interests. The boat will be used by the directors of the new "Belle Isle" park, to be started on Ottawa's Coney Island next summer. She will be employed in passenger service between Ottawa City and the new park, as soon as navigation opens. The Quinte Queen, although a small boat, can accommodate about 400 passengers. She was employed last year in passenger and excursion traffic on the bay.

ANOTHER BANK COMING.

We are informed that the Farmers Bank building on the corner of Front and McAnnany Streets has been secured by the Molson's Bank and a branch of that banking institution will be opened up here in the near future.

LAST SAD RITES

The funeral of the late Mr. J. P. C. Phillips was held this afternoon and was private. At the family residence, Bridge Street, services were conducted by the Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' Church. Although there was a request for no flowers many beautiful floral designs were contributed by friends of the deceased. The bearers were Messrs. R. Tannahill, J. W. Murray, H. Sneyd, C. M. Stork, H. Saunders and Col. Stewart.

MASONIC PRESENTATION

A large number of the members of King Baldwin Preceptory and visiting members from Preceptories in Kingston, Peterborough, Port Hope, and Picton, were present last night at a union festival held here. During the evening Knight A. McGinnis was presented with a silver tea service in recognition of his 30 years' of eminent service in all matters pertaining to Masonry. A detailed report of the proceedings will appear to-morrow.

WRECK ON THE PENNSYLVANIA RY.

4 Killed, 25 Hurt—Locomotive Truck Broke and Nine Cars Were Derailed

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 15.—The Pennsylvania railroad office here reports that four persons were killed and twenty-five others were injured when nine cars of the east bound Pennsylvania limited express from Chicago was derailed at Warrior's Ridge, Pa., four miles west of Huntingdon.

The accident was caused by the truck of the second locomotive breaking.

Another Version.

HUNTINGDON, Pa., Feb. 15.—Information here of the wreck of the Pennsylvania limited, four miles west of here, is that the train ran into a freight and that three of the overturned cars went into the Juniata River.

The cars crashed into the telegraph poles and the wires are all down.

FIREMAN INTOXICATED.

EAST ORANGE, N.J., Feb. 15.—Two firemen became intoxicated early this morning while fighting a fire in the storeroom of Charles M. Decker & Bros.' liquor store. A number of bottles were broken by the heat, and the fumes of the liquor were strong in the air. Assistant Chief Flynn and Foreman Menzel inhaled some of the vapor, and took on all the symptoms of real drunkenness. Their intoxication passed off quickly, however, and they were soon back at work, none the worse of the experience.

The fire started about midnight and lasted for six hours, causing a loss of $50,000. The entire loss is covered by

Highwaymen take Possession of Taxi in Which Messengers were Carrying Currency

NEW YORK, Feb. 15.—Twenty-five thousand dollars in currency was stolen from a taxicab in the heart of the financial district this morning by three highwaymen, who overpowered W. S. Smith, aged 61, and Frank Wardell, messengers of the East River National Bank at 680 Broadway.

Both messengers were badly injured, and the robbers escaped with the money—$15,000 in five-dollar bills and $10,000 in one hundred dollar bills. The currency was being transported from the Produce Exchange Bank.

The taxicab had proceeded up Broadway when, for some unexplained reason, the chauffeur turned west into Church street and began to pass the rear of Trinity church yard. About midway of the old cemetery the men sprang from the curb.

One jumped on the chauffeur's seat and pressed a revolver through his overcoat pocket against the chauffeur, Gine Martini, commanding him to drive swiftly on without making any outcry.

Inside the vehicle the other two robbers were belaboring the bank messengers over the head. At Park Place the highwaymen jumped out, bearing the tin box, which contained the currency, and sprang into a big black automobile, which seemed to be awaiting their coming.

The taxicab chauffeur continued to run his machine until he reached a policeman.

CANADIANS DINED AT CHICAGO

Stratford Old Boys who Live in Chicago Held Social Gathering

Inspired, no doubt, by the great success of the banquet held by their friends of the Belleville Club of Chicago in the Windy City in January, the Stratford Old Boys of that city held a banquet in the Great Northern Hotel at that place, on Tuesday evening, the 13th inst. A very pleasant evening was spent, a good dinner, good fellowship and good speeches were enjoyed. The speakers were John Brown, Mayor of Stratford; W. Preston, chairman Old Boys Reunion Committee; J. J. Arnold, manager foreign exchange department, First National Bank, Chicago; C. D. MacPherson, London Old Boys; John I. Foerster, Chicago; Thos. F. Lynch, Belleville Old Boys; also Mr. Robertson and M. D. Lynch, Belleville Club; Dr. J. Allan Graham, Kingston Club; Chas. O'Donnell, J. P. Stewart and Wm. Schwan, the latter three all of Stratford.

VERY STRANGE CASE; READS LIKE FICTION

This is a strange story if true, of Foulke E. Brandt, former valet for Mortimer L. Schiff, a New York millionaire, who has been five years a prisoner in Dannemora, and has now been taken out on writ of habeas corpus, on the plea that he has been falsely imprisoned. The story is that after being discharged from his position, he was found in the home of his employer, committing a burglary, to which he pleaded guilty, and was sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment. His statement is that for some reason he was employed by Schiff to commit the burglary, walked into the house through unlocked back doors and was arrested by arrangement as he came out of the front door. That he pleaded guilty under an understanding that he was to have a light six months' sentence, for which he was to be amply remunerated. He was sentenced to thirty years, all communication with him cut off, and every effort to release him defeated and application for his pardon denied. He seems to have finally reached somebody who would interest themselves in his case and he has been taken to New York for a re-hearing and investigation into the circumstances of his alleged crime, sentence, and incarceration. The mystery surrounding it all makes it a most interesting and important case. It implies some family secret desired buried in oblivion; a plot, aided by the lawyers of Schiff, the subordination of officers of the law and prison wardens and keepers and the power of wealth to keep an undesirable secluded within prison walls by the trick of an arranged for crime, the inducement of a light sentence, and financial reward. If such a thing can be done, as is implied, and which seems to have made such an impression of truth on the attorney-general of the state and on the governor himself, who has recently denied a pardon, it not only makes a plot for a novel, but shows a most serious power of wealth and a condition that needs instant remedy. If through the power of wealth a man can be removed to a living death, then there is something at fault with legal machinery, and the execution of the law, designed to protect men in their lives, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, it savors of Russian methods. The untangling of this skein in the life of Brandt will be watched for with great interest. It may be all pure fiction, but it shows a possibility that ought not to be possible.

Doctors Condemn Oily Liniments

PUBLIC ARE WARNED AGAINST STRONG-SMELLING, OILY LINIMENTS CONTAINING HARMFUL ACIDS AND AMMONIA.

Many people have clung to the old-fashioned idea that a thick, greasy liniment is the best kind. Doctors say not—and they know.

Recently a number of these white, oily liniments were analyzed, and they were found to contain an enormously high percentage of harmful acids, and such irritating chemicals as ammonia, etc. For the moment they may cause a warm sensation when applied, but their continued use never cures rheumatism, and only deteriorates the skin, sets up inflammation, and causes endless trouble.

When a doctor warns you to quit using a white, oily liniment—do so. He knows that a thick liniment can't penetrate, can't sink through the pores and reach the seat of the pain.

When asked his opinion a few days ago, an important physician stated that he considered a strong, penetrating, pain-subduing liniment, such as "Nerviline" to be superior to any of the white ammonia liniments. In his twenty-five years of practice, he had witnessed cases of rheumtism, sciatica, lumbago that simply would not respond to ordinary treatment—but Nerviline cured them. The same physician also spoke of the great advantages of keeping a preparation like Nerviline in the house, because of cramps, diarrhoea, stomach disorders, earache, toothache, headache, and such minor ailments. Nerviline is a first-class cure. There is scarcely an ache or a pain, internal or external that Nerviline won't cure. In thousands of homes no other pain-relieving medicine is used. Fifty years' continued success and the endorsement of the profession are proof that Nerviline is the liniment for the home.

DEATH ROLL.

PETER S. McLEAN.

Few were aware that Peter S. McLean, editor of The Picton Times, was ill until the word was passed around Wednesday night about 9.30 that he had passed away. Friday morning, 9th inst., he was at his desk as usual. Feeling uncomfortable he decided to go home about ten o'clock. Pneumonia developed and early this week his case took a serious turn. In the prime of life and highly esteemed, his passing is greatly regretted. In 1885 John W. McLean and his two sons, John and Peter S., took charge of The Picton Times. In 1896, the elder son, John, was called in much the same manner as his brother Peter. In 1900 John W. McLean, the father, died. Since that time Peter S. McLean has had full control of The Times. Mr. S. McLean married Annie M. Patterson daughter of Mr. W. E. Patterson. Five children, one girl and four boys, are deprived of the parental care of a parent who dearly loved his family. Besides his wife and family, his mother and two sisters are bereaved.—Picton Times.

MARIA CALLERY.

Miss Maria Callery, a maiden lady who resided on North Front Street, died yesterday at the age of 64 years. She had been ill for some time. Miss Callery was born in Tyendinaga township, but had lived here for a considerable period. Deceased was a member of St. Michael's Church. Two brothers and three sisters survive.

BALANCE THE WRONG WAY

United States Exports of Manufactures.

An examination of the trade statistics of the United States throws an interesting side light upon the country's present overtures for Reciprocity with us. For the nine months ending September, 1910, their exports of domestic merchandise of every kind were $1,193,321,512, of which $210,490,966 were manufactures for further use in manufacturing, and $401,684,694 were manufactures ready for consumption. The sum of these two, $612,625,660, accounts for 51 per cent. of all of their exports put together. But this is not crediting the exports of manufactures with a class known as "foodstuffs, partly manufactured," which are valued at $180,159,193. If we regard this also as legitimately forming a part of the exports of manufactured goods, it means that of every thing the United States exported for the nine months ending September last, manufactured goods amounted to over 66 per cent.

A GREAT DISCOVERY

Certain Ingredients That Really Promote Hair Growth when Properly Combined

Resorcin is one of the most effective germ destroyers ever discovered by science, and in connection with Beta Nathol, which is both germicidal and antiseptic, a combination is formed which destroys the germs which rob the hair of its natural nourishment and also create a clean, healthy condition of the scalp, which prevents the development of new germs.

Pilocarpin, although not a coloring matter or dye, is a well known ingredient for restoring the hair to its natural color, when the loss of hair has been caused by a disease of the scalp.

These ingredients in proper combination, with alcohol added as a stimulant and for its well-defined nourishing properties, perfect the most effective remedy that is known for scalp and hair troubles.

We have a remedy which is chiefly composed of these ingredients, in combination with other extremely invaluable medicinal agents. We guarantee it to positively cure dandruff and to grow hair, even though the scalp in spots is bare of hair. If there is any vitality left in the roots, it will positively cure baldness, or we will refund your money. If the scalp has a glazed, shiny appearance, it's an indication that baldness is permanent but in other instances we believe baldness is curable.

We want every one troubled with scalp disease or loss of hair to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic. If it does not cure dandruff and grow hair to the satisfaction of the user, we will without question or quibble return every cent paid us for it. We print this guarantee on every bottle. It has effected a positive cure in 93 per cent. of cases where put to a practical test.

Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is entirely unlike, and we think, in every particular better than anything else we know of for the purpose for which it is prescribed. We urge you to try this preparation at our entire risk. Certainly we know of no better guarantee to give you. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Belleville only at our store—The Rexall Store, J. S. McKeown.

TWO NEW YORK CHINATOWN GANGS IN A PISTOL FIGHT

"Big Jack" Sirocco's Friends Ambush "Jimmey Kelley" and "Louie the Lump"—Twice Tried to Kill Them—On Second Attempt a Passing Laborer is Mortally Hurt and Two Gangsters are Jailed

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—Lieut. Becker and his strong-arm men from Police Headquarters were grimly waiting for an outburst of hostilities between two gangs whose hunting-grounds overlap in the Chinatown section when, early yesterday morning, their feud twice flared up into pistol practice that landed two men in the Tombs, and sent a third, an innocent bystander, to the Hudson Street Hospital, where it was said last night his condition was most critical.

This, the police say, is just another chapter in the ancient bitterness between the followers of "Big Jack" Sirocco and "Jimmy Kelly," an Italian, whose real name is De Silva. Kelly it is who gathered together the broken fragments of Monk Eastman's gang and gradually built up his own, with a Fourteenth Street saloon as a base of operations. Later he moved down into lucrative Chinatown, and there, as proprietor of Mandarin Gardens, at the top of Doyer Street, he has been a power to be reckoned with and a thorn in the flesh of Big Jack.

Early last week the whisper reached Headquarters that Sirocco's friends were going down to Doyer Street at their earliest convenience and shoot up the place. If possible, the whisper had it, Kelly would be put out of business in more senses than one, and guns for the affair were to be had at a saloon on Broome Street.

First, Becker and his men visited the saloon and found the whisper verified to the extent of three ugly revolvers. Then they mingled with the crowd in the prosperous Mandarin Gardens and waited. They waited all that evening, Friday, and the next evening, but everything was serenely quiet. The nervous Kelly's fears began to subside a little, and yesterday morning, before dawn, he ventured to put his nose out of doors, taking with him as he went, however, a bodyguard in the person of "Louie the Lump," the same ready fearless fighter who, the police believe, abruptly ended the famous Kid Twist's dark life.

These two were making their way up the Bowery at 5 o'clock and were passing No. 16, where once the Hip Songs lived, when a revolver was fired from the doorway of that historic structure. The first shot was followed by a swift second and third, and Patrolman Williams rounded the corner just in time to see two young men crossing the street on the dead run and two 38 calibre revolvers lying on the sidewalk in front of No. 16.

Williams collared the two who were running and had them before Magistrate McQuade later in the morning in the Tombs Court, where they were discharged.

It was about 9 o'clock that Kelly and his bodyguard, whose real name is Louis Poggi, were marching along Baxter Street, near where it crosses Franklyn when the neighborhood was startled by a regular fusilade of shots and the detectives from the Elizabeth Street station swooped down to find people running in every direction, and they pounced upon him. Another they fished out of a pharmacy. His name was Charles Isola, and though he vowed he had just stepped into his cousin's place to ask after a sick relative in Italy, the detectives assured him that he was one of those who pulled a gun and used it.

Kelly, meanwhile, unscathed in all this excitement, fled in absolute terror to the Elizabeth Street station where he had all but climbed in to the lap of the Lieutenant in his anxiety to be shielded from the power of the police.

But one who had nothing to do with the fracas was found lying on the street with a bullet wound in his chest. This was Patrick McKenna, a laborer out of work. The detectives took their two prisoners before him but the wounded man didn't know who they were or who had shot him. His chances looked very slim, and in the ambulance on the way to the Hudson Street Hospital a priest administered the extreme unction.

Poggi and Isola, who earnestly disavowed any knowledge of the gun fight, were put in the Tombs to await the hospital report on McKenna's condition.

SERVANT PROBLEM.

It Has Been Solved in Berlin—Work For $8 a Month.

The eternal domestic servant problem seems to be nearing a solution in Berlin, and it is a very simple one—namely, the substitution of men for women.

Of recent years a vast increase in the immigration from the country to the city has taken place, with the result that a capable man servant can now be hired for from between $8 and $10 a month with board.

The Berlin hausfrau testifies that the new servant is infinitely superior to the old, besides leanding a social glory to the household, as hitherto men servants have been employed almost solely by the noble and aristocratic or very wealthy families. Experience shows that they can do and do as well or better all that the woman servant does—dusting, cleaning, brushing, attending at table, even cooking; in short, everything except washing and ironing, against which the manly soul revolts.

They are far more easily satisfied, far more obliging and far less capricious, and their sense of duty is illustrated by the fact that they will actually clean and put away the silver and china before they go to bed. They are a source of economy, too, for when in their charge china cups and saucers do not acquire the habit of automatically sliding off the salvor to the ground, or valuable vases and ornaments that of suddenly jumping from their places in the dead watches of the night and being smashed.

Nor does this exhaust the list of their superior qualities, for they rarely give notice in a fit of temper and more readily become attached to their employers. Still, no man is perfect, and the master where a man servant is employed must be prepared for a mysterious fading away of color in his whisky and a high rate of mortality among his cigars.

DIDN'T WANT TO EAT

HAD SEVERE STOMACH TROUBLE—IS ALL RIGHT NOW.

Experts declare that much of the dyspepsia and loss of appetite so common in this country is due to the use of preservatives in foods. But much more likely it is on account of hasty and careless habits of eating.

Our delicious cod-liver and iron preparation without oil, Vinol, has restored appetite and digestion to thousands of people who had despaired of ever being able to enjoy a meal again.

Fred Oberlander of Schenectady, N. Y., says "I had stomach trouble for two years and they were years of terrible suffering. I did not want to eat, and what I did eat gave me pain. My health ran down too. Since I have used Vinol my stomach trouble has vanished, I eat heartily, and never felt better in my life."

If you are run-down and weak, cannot eat or digest your food, you need Vinol. It will do you great good You can have your money back if Vinol does not do all we claim.—Red Cross Drug Store, J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

CHAPTER I.

Sowing the Wind

The quaint little town of Vilvorde lay still and parched beneath the July sun. Its fierce rays bleached the uneven granite blocks and scorched the grass-grown pavements in the Rue St. Lucien. It shone full upon a white-faced house fronting the narrow street. It burnished the brass plate fixed to the gateway, dazzling, and effectually preventing the occasional pedestrian from deciphering the otherwise usually plain inscription—Pensionnat des Dames Squillier.

At an upstairs window, the lower half of the sash thrown up, and totally unprotected from the afternoon sun, two girls were sitting. They were conversing in low eager tones, when suddenly they ceased, and leaned forward to watch a small procession of priests and acolytes carrying Extreme Unction to some poor soul at the point of death.

The silence, the solemnity of the scene, the reverence of the peasants kneeling among black-peaked shadows striping the sunlit thoroughfare, saddened and sobered them for awhile. But they were young and healthy, standing, as it were, upon the threshold of life, and life appeared exceedingly desirable to them at that moment, seeing that the unknown future loomed big with the realization of youth's golden dreams—and the day, too, was very fair.

"There goes Le Chat Botte," exclaimed the elder girl, tossing a gaudy picture-book to the worm-eaten boards, "a legacy of the long line of aspiring pupils who follow me."

"And may they also master the language in three months," Agnes Fleming rejoined, looking at her companion with eyes full of affectionate admiration. Pauline Jervois smiled.

"I believe that fact still astonishes you, Agnes," she said.

"It did, and to a certain extent it does now, but I shall never be surprised again at anything you may do."

"Why, what do you mean, cherie?"

"I mean—it seems a strange thing to say just as we are going to part, when we've been such good friends and comrades in spite of your—your braininess; but, honestly, I don't quite understand you, Pauline. I can't understand that uncanny, intuitive mental grasp you have of abstruse subjects, quite through down to every-day, common-place matters; it gives me a horrid, creepy feeling."

Pauline Jervoise turned a pair of wonderful dark eyes upon the lovely English face opposite to her, and laid a large, thin, white hand upon her friend's knee.

"I am not going to disparage my mental gifts even to my sweet Agnes," she said, smiling, "because I am openly and confessedly proud of my brain power. Long ago I became fully alive to the extent of my intellectual capacity, and I glory in the knowledge, but at the same time, Agnes, my whole training and trend of education enables me to arrive at a quick, apposite conclusion in regard to most problems. Concerning the French language, I must have been a dullard indeed had I not spoken it in a few months. When you consider I am as conversant with the dead languages, as intimate with their authors as I am with the works of both English and American novelists, that I speak fluent German, and a while ago I gained more than a smattering of Italian—when you take into consideration these accessories, these favorable circumstances, does it stand to reason that I could very well help myself?"

"No—yes—well, there, I don't know, Pauline, dearest. In the whole three months we've been together you have never said so much about yourself as you have during these last five minutes. Please don't stop, tell me about your people, where you live, where you went to school, anything, so that you tell me something."

Pauline clasped her large, capable looking hands behind her shapely shorn head, raised her eyes to the blue sky, and let the sunlight dance and sparkle in their dark depths.

"There is little to tell," she said, a smile curving her upper lip, until the gleam of small even teeth became visible. "It was lessons, Agnes, lessons, school, classes, study, short rests, and again study—nothing more."

"But your parents, dear, your home."

"I have no parents. I don't even remember them; still I know that my father was a celebrated violinist, and the only thing of value that I possess is his Stradivarius. I was born in New York, and until recently I have always lived there with my only relative, Aunt Barbara Jervois."

"Only one relation in the world! How you must love your Aunt Barbara!"

Again the slow smile caught the upper lip.

"I am afraid I do not love her. Sitting here beside you a sense of duty and thankfulness for my scholarly attainments makes me feel I ought and I believe I do, respect her. Nevertheless, looking back to my childhood, I—oh, Agnes, picture to yourself a little precocious child, all brain and nerve and timidity. Picture her in the hands of a clever, capable woman bent upon moulding a prodigy out of that delicate intelligence, regardless of the mental and physical cost. Think of that little child through the livelong summer gazing across her Latin grammar at the birds singing their hearts out with joy in the large cool branches of the elms, listening to the murmur of the bees in the core of the great yellow blossoms, striving bravely, ever so bravely, to crush a pernicious desire to lie down and rest, to sleep in yonder lush grass and sweet-scented clover. Think of her through the monotony of a rigorous winter. The short dreary days of study, the long evenings by the reading lamp, analyzing Milton's poems in preference to the darkness and solitude of her bedchamber. I could shed an ocean of tears when I think of that clever, white-faced dark-eyed child plodding steadily and faithfully through that travesty of childhood, and—Agnes, what a foolish girl you are!"

Agnes Flemming had slipped to the floor, and lay with her head in Pauline's lap, tenderly kissing first one white hand and then the other.

"Oh never mind me, why didn't you tell me all this before? I would have petted you, I would have loved you ever so much more. Go on, tell me—afterwards, when you grew older—did you go to school?"

"I went to school, to classes, to lectures, and then to College, and matriculated. This last nine months I have allowed myself as a sort of recreation in which to acquire fluent French and German. I was twenty-four yesterday, to-morrow I leave Vilvorde, and at Harwich I part with the only friend I ever made—all very prosaic, simple and uninteresting, eh, cherie?"

"Very pitiful," she said, a tender sadness in her voice. "Tell me," she added, suddenly twining her arms round her friend's waist, "tell me about to-morrow, what will you do, where will you go to-morrow?"

Pauline Jervis unwound the loving arms and walked to the end of the room. Agnes watched her expectantly, as she came back and knelt at the window, clasping her hands upon the dusty sill.

"To-morrow?" she asked softly, when the silence, broken only by the buzzing of the flies on the window-pane, had become well night intolerable, "let me see, to-morrow will be different from the stagnant realm of those innumerable yesterdays. To-morrow I shall be free, free to court success, free to give rein to all my ambitious yearnings, free to take my intellect into the world and win name and fame among the savants of the day. The thought, Agnes, is like the sweet rich flavor of a frost-bitten apple, such as one finds under the tree in December."

"And you will, Dear, I know you will," Agnes exclaimed enthusiastically, "you will become the talk of London, the world will rave about you, you will be feted at every capital in Europe, and people will go mad to know you Poor me in the little village of Weyberne will sometimes manage to get a London paper, and read about the celebrated Pauline Jervois, how her last essay influenced the House of Lords in passing—"

Pauline laid a nervous hand over her friend's mouth.

"Such wild extravagance proves you don't take me seriously."

"Oh, but I do. I take everything you say and do most seriously."

"And being assured also that you love me, that you wish me well, I will take this opportunity of sharing a secret with you."

"Oh, you dear, sweet Pauline!"

"Come close, put your head on my shoulder, and listen quietly. First you must promise that however shocked and displeased you may be, you will treat my confidence as a sacred trust. Will you be faithful and true to me in this one instance so long as I need your help? By your help I mean your silence."

Agnes Fleming drew a deep breath.

"Yes," she said slowly, "I—I promise."

"Well, now listen. You remember the night of my arrival, the night of the Easter tableaux? Mademoiselle Duval was taken ill a few hours before I came, and Miss Fleming was stranded, she was minus her cavalier. No one in the school was sufficiently tall to attempt the part, and naturally the new arrival, being five feet nine, was hailed with vehement delight."

"Oh, yes; how those silly girls crowded round you, and—"

"Never mind the girls. I was going to say you remember Miss Jervois going away to unpack, and half an hour later a tall, slight young man walked into the refectoire and took his place beside Miss Fleming? After the curtain dropped I believe that youth put his arm round Miss Fleming's waist and kissed her, and if I remember rightly Miss Fleming actually blushed. Why, I verily believe she is blushing again at the recollection. Did you fall in love with me that night, Miss Fleming?"

Agnes threw back her head—and displayed a crimson face.

"You know I did—oh, Pauline, the whole hateful farce was so bewildering, the impersonation was so horribly realistic. I don't like to recall that evening."

Pauline Jervois let her head fall back till it rested against an old oak bureau, a little smile curving her lips, with more than a suspicion of amusement lurking in her dark eyes. She remembered Agnes' embarrassment; the anxiety of the other girls to obtain a word, or even a look from her, Madame's deference while exchanging pleasantries in the vestibule, and afterwards the severe catechising in Madame's sanctum. She had created a remarkable sensation, produced an extraordinary impression throughout the establishment. It seemed clear enough to Pauline that the two most important factors on this plane of existence were the accident of sex, and a puissant poise of brain.

"You thought the impersonation good, strong, true, reliable?" she asked abruptly, sitting upright and looking straight into Agnes's eyes.

"Much too good—it was simply devilish."

"You naughty girl, Agnes!"

"Pauline, I am dying to hear the secret."

"That is the secret—as I appeared in the tableaux on the night of my arrival, so shall I appear to-morrow in—London."

All the pretty color left Agnes's fair face, she sprang to her feet, and held out her hands imploringly.

"Oh, don't," she exclaimed, "don't do such a mad, repulsive thing as that; I am so fond of you, I couldn't bear to think of you doing such a vile, wicked thing. You can't do it, you'll never do it, you have too nice, too clean a mind, you are so sweet, so gentle, so dear, so loveable, so tender-hearted, so everything that is poss—e, darling, you are joking!"

"Do I look it?" she asked gravely.

No, indeed, the dark face, the glorious eyes bending over Agnes were full of purpose, full of strong patient determination. Agnes gave one questioning glance at the thin, clever face, and knew instinctively that persuasion and argument were alike futile. Some strange, undreamed-of force had bubbled up above the surface of Pauline's calm, sweet nature, and froze there, forming a hard incrustation between her responsive heart and Agnes's imploring eyes, and instinctively feeling this she put out a hand somewhat blindly to find her chair.

"Yes, sit down," Pauline said tenderly; "I startled you, dear; I have looked forward so long to this crisis in my life that I scarcely realized how ugly and even appalling the scheme might seem to you. I must tell you about it, get you used to the idea; I can't afford to part with the only love I have ever known. Listen, Aggie, try to follow me, try to see the thing with my eyes, in my light. With my brain, my ability, my tact, my purity of purpose there is nothing wrong, nothing repulsive, nothing to which the most prudish could take exception, or need mind."

Agnes looked at her with surprised inquiry.

"It came about like this, sweet: Three years ago the college gave a series of amateur theatricals, interspersed with Greek plays, the parents of the undergraduates and the elite of the townspeople being invited. I was cast for the part of a dandy in a modern society piece, and Aunt Barbara, who always liked to do things well, took me to a first-class tailor, and I was measured for the suit you saw me in at the tableaux. The play was a huge success, and my rendering, my interpretation of the dandy, brought down the house. Later in the evening I felt a touch upon my arm, and turned to find Mr. Jerome, the mathematical master, at my elbow.

"'What an all-round clever fellow you are, Jervois,' he said, laughingly.

"'Not at all,' I returned in the same strain. 'I can't help myself, it's simply second nature.'

"'If you had changed your sex with your clothes now, to-morrow I could have placed you on the first rung of the ladder of fame.'

"'And can't you in spite of my being a woman?' I asked earnestly.

"'No, I can't,' he said gravely, 'a woman is so hedged round by social customs and domestic traditions that it is next to impossible to emancipate her. With her inherited conservatism, her conventionalities, her vaporings, her straining at gnats, and swallowing camels, and also with Mrs. Grundy's watchful and malicious eye continually upon her, she is handicapped at life's starting post, and therefore best left to run to seed in her own hackneyed fashion. To take your own peculiar ecas, Miss Jervois; Dame Nature played you a scurvy trick when she dropped that nicely arranged grey substance into the cavity of your skull. What a woman is going to do with your intellect and achievements I can't conceive. There is no occasion to minimize palpable facts; you are by far the cleverest woman I have met. Were I in your shoes, Miss Jervois, I would never resume—pardon me—the petticoat; and you, I know for a fact, would not be the first Americaine to step over the conventional traces in order to give her head fair play.' The suggestion sounded detestable, and not altogether free from vulgarity, Agnes, but I believe he meant it kindly."

Agnes looked up piteously.

"But you have decided to carry out his advice?"

"Yes, the seed was sown, and when each day brought fresh evidences of the truth of his assertion, it grew, nourished and spread itself like a green bay tree."

"I don't see that I can do much to help you."

"I think I said it was your silence I wanted."

"Then why did you tell me, Pauline? whatever possessed you to tell me! Why, oh, why did you?"

"Because I was under the impression you cared for me, Agnes. I never had much time for sentiment; I never had the time nor the inclination to give a fellow-creature a second thought. But I have been idling here, and you have occupied a very prominent place in my thoughts while I have been growing over-weeningly proud of the—what shall I call it?—tender consideration you have shown me. My heart has been getting very sore at the prospect of parting with the only soul who has ever shown me one jot of—tender consideration. Still, I have lived without love, and I can do without it; my career, my aspirations, my ambition, suffice me, though somehow lately I fancied it would be a pleasant thing to feel there was something in the world a human being who knew this—weakness, this failing of mine,—and, knowing, would sympathize, not condemn it."

"I do care for you," she said passionately, her eyes full of tears. "I must love you, and you know it, Pauline. You compel it. I don't understand it; all I know is that you are intrinsically different from most people. You are naturally good, genuinely conscientious, and unnecessarily considerate of others; you look at life from such a correct standpoint—save in this one terrible instance—that any feeling of friendship from you is very precious to me. All the same, I think you are acting wrongly. I am certain there will be no luck, no success, no reward. Paul, dear, consider; no good can possibly come out of evil."

"Is it an evil? Dear Agnes, it can't be. I feel so earnest about it; I feel the responsibility, the gravity of the undertaking, and I mean to be so steadfast, so purposeful. I mean to be kind and careful of others, to do nothing but what is right, honest and just. I intend to fight and win my way to the top of the tree alone and unaided; but I shall not push or trample on others; I shall swing myself from branch to branch, gently; I shall hurt no one—unless, God help me, I fall."

"I can't bear to think of it, Pauline. What about love and marriage? Suppose you fell in—"

Hitherto Pauline had always smiled, a quiet, slow, dreamy smile; now the first real uncontrollable ripple of laughter echoed through the hot, sunlit garret.

"Dear Agnes! Susceptibility was never my strong point. I don't anticipate much difficulty in keeping my heart under my heel. Agnes, exactly as a nun takes the veil which shuts her irrevocably away from the world, so do I take this step; it raises an irremovable barrier between me and all human love. I have trodden the winepress alone, and I can go on alone to the end. I have never been sought after, never petted, nor loved; I have never been used to sympathy, to care, or attention. I have simply worked. I have plodded, toiled, striven for one aim, one object, one end; still I have been idling here in some thick-blooded heart warmth, and, undoubtedly, I shall feel a bit lonely and chilly to-morrow."

Agnes went to her, put her arms around her neck and held her close.

"What will you do in London to-morrow?" she asked after a throbbing silence.

"Remain at an hotel until I find employment.

"What kind of employment, dear?"

"I don't know. I shall take whatever offers itself. I can fill almost any post, nothing much will come amiss to me."

"Have you money? Do please tell me if you haven't enough."

"Plenty, cherie, my violin will fetch a long price."

"You will write to me? You must write, Paul. I don't approve of this venture, but I can't bear to lose touch with you."

"I will write at intervals unless you forget to give me your address," Pauline said, smiling through wet eyelashes. "I will write to tell you where I am, and how the world is treating me. I shall have nothing to look forward to or to love but your letters, so don't quite forget me, Agnes."

"Will you kiss me, Pauline, and say you forgive me?"

"A thousand times! Hist! There is the tea-bell and the last of the tartines."

TRAMPED 60 MILES TO SAVE HIS CHUM

Prospector at Larder Lake Got Back with GIN PILLS Just in Time.

LARDER LAKE, ONT., MARCH 26th, 1911.

"I am writing to tell you the good GIN PILLS did me. I had been suffering for some time with my Kidneys and Urine. I was constantly passing water which was very scanty, sometimes as many as thirty times a day. Each time, the pain was something awful and no rest at night. I began to feel worn out. I heard of your GIN PILLS and decided to give them a trial at once. I sent my chum out to get them (about 60 miles)—and I am pleased to inform you that in less than six hours, I felt relief. In two days, the pain had left me altogether. I took about half a box and to-day I feel as well as ever and my kidneys are acting quite natural again. Thanking you for the pills which I always intend to keep by me.— Yours respectfully,
SID CASTLEMAN.

WELCOME RELIEF.

We have never received a letter that pleased us more than this one. When we realize what Gin Pills meant to this sick man, lying on a bed of pain miles away from a doctor in the frozen north, and how they helped him, we feel that our efforts to prepare a standard preparation for Kidney and Bladder Troubles have been crowned with success.

GIN PILLS is a wonderful solvent for uric acid. It instantly neutralizes the hot, scalding urine, allays the burning pain, soothes the irritated bladder and heals the kidneys. THE BEEHIVE — CHARLES N. SULMAN

Reichstag Not Enthusiastic Over Britain's Advances.

Berlin, Feb. 16.—The bitterness against Great Britain evoked by last summer's events has not yet passed away. The references in the Reichstag yesterday to the British Secretary of War's mission were unmistakably cool, except on the part of the Socialists, who warmly favor better relations between Germany and Great Britain.

Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg, in a statement respecting the conversations which took place between the German Ministers and Viscount Haldane, said that they would be continued. The spokesmen for the Conservative Centre and the National Liberals, while declaring that they would welcome a rapprochement, recommended very reserved action.

The Chancellor said: "Viscount Haldane, although without binding the British Government, still at the instance of the British Cabinet, discussed with us the point at which the interests of both countries come into contact.

"The object of the British Secretary of War and of the German Government was to find a basis on which the mutual relations of the two countries were heartily welcomed by us, have been exhaustive and frank, and will be continued."

The Imperial Chancellor hoped that the House would not ask for further announcements at the present moment. His speech was heartily and generally applauded.

The National Liberal speakers said: "We all will support the peace efforts as heretofore, but the chief assistance must come from the English."

School Boys' Murdered Master.

New York, Feb. 16.—A cable from Dublin say: Eight school boys were arrested yesterday charged with the murder of John Kelly, assistant master of an industrial school in County Meath.

The boys, it is alleged, waylaid Kelly while he was making his rounds Monday night and beat him to death with sticks.

CHILDREN'S SAVINGS

Several years have elapsed since the Penny Savings Banks were established in the Public Schools of Guelph, and, that the result has been highly satisfactory is evidenced by the Herald of that city, which remarks that although some are indifferent to the scheme of Penny Banks in the schools, that fact that last year the sum of $81,000 was as a result of the children's savings deposited in the chartered banks is a wholesome evidence of the good that is being done.

This is the age of extravagance and the absence of a regular system of laying up in store for the "rainy day" which comes inevitably may truly be termed the curse of the average household. That being so parents everywhere ought to hold up both hands in support of a system which lays the foundation for remedying this evil of the day. It is all nonsense to say that this system of hoarding will make misers and misanthropes of the youngsters, developing into worse traits as they grow older.

But lay the foundation for economy, living within one's income, and systematic saving when young, and there is always a possibility of these instincts surviving the almost irresistible maelstrom of extravagant living and running into debt for which this age is becoming notorious.

Therefore, let us hail the Penny Bank as one of the blessings of this life, and if the system is not altogether an ideal one, eventually it can be taken over by the country and run as a children's national bank. If the children last year accumulated $81,000 by the saving of their pennies the prospects ahead are incalculable and the good done so enormous as to be beyond cavil.

In Guelph alone over $2,000 was stored in the penny banks. Think of it! Over Two Thousand Dollars! Yet even that only represented a dollar per head for each school child attending the Public Schools. If the idea spreads to the Collegiate Institute and is taken up by the Separate Schools, as there is a probability of, the sum would be largely augmented. But even here we have $2,000 ready for the day when some unforeseen adversity strikes the child or the home, and there is a few dollars in the bank (which no one ever missed in storing it up) to fall back upon.

What is more, there is no more inspiring sight in the world that to see the little customers of the banks march down with proud demeanor to hand their savings to their teacher. And even more striking is the important, yet rather perturbed, expression on their faces when they have to face the teller at the bank and ask him for a dollar or two from the amount they have on deposit. No man who makes the last payment on a long standing note ever feels half as good as the children do when they enter the financial institution in search of their own and unknowingly lay the foundation for traits of saving and business-like methods, which, let us hope, will endure forever.

So encourage the Penny Banks, we say, encourage the little ones to save, and so encourage a habit which will lead to no evil, but out of which great good must inevitably arise, both to the individual and to the nation.

CIVIC LEAGUE.

The Detroit Federation of Women's Clubs proposes to form a Junior Civic League, and the pledge to be taken by its members is about as good a one as could be devised for the making of the city beautiful. This is it:

I promise:

1. Not to destroy any tree, shrub or flower.
2. Not to deface any fence or public building.
3. Not to spit upon the city walks or on the floor of any street car or building.
4. Not to throw waste paper or any other rubbish on the ground.
5. Not to kill or injure any bird, bird's nest, the eggs or the young.
6. Not to use profane language or other bad language or do anything unbecoming a good citizen.
7. To keep back yards as clean as the front lawn.
8. Always to respect the property of others as my own.
9. I, therefore, as a member of the Junior Civic League of the —— school, do pledge myself to cheerfully submit to the laws and ordinances of my city; to do nothing that will render it offense or spread disease and to assist in making it a cleaner, better and more beautiful city in which to live.

If this pledge were carried out by every citizen in Belleville, big and little, it is certain that there would be a tremendous change in the spirit and the appearance of the city. It is possible that the idea might appeal to the Horticultural Society and that it might be adapted to Belleville. If a Civic League were formed among members of the schools, pledges signed and buttons distributed to members, it is very probable that the movement would be a popular one.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater,
Had a wife and tried to beat her;
But she was a suffragette—
And Peter's in the hospital yet.

Knicker—What sort of a reformer is he?

Bocker—He wants other fellows to abstain from food to make the price go down while he eats it.

Of the making of fairy tales there is no end on the part of the Ottawa representatives of the Grit press. The latest is that the Government's object in the appointment of a Tariff Commission is to disguise a movement for higher protection.

Judge Riddell tells the public that Judge Jeffries, the infamous instrument of bigotry during the reign of Queen Mary, was a wise judge, and cites Jeffries' decision in a civil action as proof. This but adds to the infamy of Jeffries, who, being able, set law at defiance in his treatment of those whom he condemned to the headsman's block or the gallows.

Whenever the subject of investigation of the departments at Ottawa comes up in Parliament, members of the late Liberal Government show a weakness for getting angry and saying harsh things about their successors in office. The public will hardly fail to take note of the circumstance and to ascribe a reason for it. Where everything is clear and straight no one needs to dread the inspectors' examination.—Montreal Gazette.

Toronto is now in receipt yearly of something like $800,000 as its per centage of the gross receipts of the street railway company, and it is expected tht in another two years' time the figures will reach a round million dollars, all of which is used by the city for a general reduction of taxes. That is to say, in other words, that the people who patronize the street cars are helping to lower the taxes of their wealthier neighbors who do not patronize the cars. How would it do to equalize matters by reducing street car rates?—Kingston Standard.

The courageous act for which Admiral Sir Nowell Salmon of the British Navy, who died on the 14th inst., was awarded the Victoria Cross, was done during the second relief of Lucknow in 1857. He was attached as lieutenant to the Naval Brigade, and while the sailors were attacking a strongly occupied fort they suffered from the extraordinary marksmanship of one of the rebels. Salmon volunteered to climb a tree, which exposed him to almost certain death, in order to pick off the Indian marksman. His field glass was shattered in his hand by the sharpshooter, but Salmon took aim and shot the Sepoy dead.

As to the "yellow peril" that a militant China may let loose upon the world, much nonsense has been talked. The constant tendency of geographers for a century has been to reduce the extravagant estimates of Chinese population based by early visitors upon the congested deltas of the great rivers. The common guess of 400,000,000 souls has no statistical basis whatever. No faulty Government numbering of households ever justified an estimate of half that number. Former United States Minister Rockhill, a high authortiy, sets 270,000,000 as a liberal estimate. So far as concerns mere pressure of numbers upon the soil's resources, there is more danger of a brown peril from British India, than of a yellow peril from China; and neither by ideal or by design are the Chinese a military race.—New York World.

One of the nuisances which ought at once to be suppressed is that of late comers to theatrical performances entering during an act. Several persons who attended the performance at Griffin's last night complain loudly that their enjoyment of the first act was greatly interfered with from that cause. The remedy is in the hands of the management, namely to refuse to seat anyone who enters late until after the act which is in progress has been completed.

Two discoveries made possible the triumphs of modern surgery—the discovery of anaesthesia and the discovery of how to prevent septic conditions in surgical wounds. Because of the latter achievement, Lord Lister, who has just died, is probably regarded as one of the greatest benefactors of the human race. Lister adopted the germ theory as it had been worked out by Pasteur and applied it to surgery. His plans were to kill the germs that were, theoretically, present everywhere—in the air, on the surgeon's instruments and clothes, on the skin of the patient—and thus prevent their entering the wound. He himself recognized the advantages of the adaptation of his system by others for he had the openess of mind that is characteristic of great scientists. His long career was fittingly crowned with the highest honors both professional and public, for he was one of humanity's most useful servants.—New York Tribune.

PENNSYLANIA'S GIANT DEAD.

Ambrose Moose, Who Weighed 525 Pounds, Was Active Physicially.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Feb. 15.—Ambrose Moose, the biggest man in Pennsylvania, died to-day at his home at Mount Carlion. He weighed 626 lbs., was 5 feet 10 inches in height, measured 3 feet across the shoulders, and was more than 5 feet in girth. Moose had strength in proportion to his size. He was employed at the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's oil house, and could lift a barrel of oil weighing 400 pounds without any great effort.

His death came at the zenith ofhis physical powers, for he was only 40 years old. Kidney disease, rapidly followed by dropsy, ended his career. Moose always attracted considerable attention at the sessions of the Order of Moose, of which he was an official.

Fewer people would jump at conclusions if they could see their finish.

CATTLE AND SHEEP ARE DECLINING

Live Stock Convention Discuss the Present Situation in Canada

OTTAWA, Feb. 15.—That the beef cattle industry in all parts of the country, particularly in Eastern Canada, was on the down grade, and that cattle-raisers were not producing enough beef to supply the demands of the country alone, were statements made to-day at the meeting of the National Live Stock Convention by Mr. John Gardhouse, Highfield, Ont.

The prevailing opinion seemed to be that there was room for considerable improvement in both the dairy and beef cattle industries, and that both could be made more remunerative.

The passing of a number of resolutions and the election of officers was the principal business transacted at to-night's concluding session of the National Live Stock convention. The resolutions were as follows.—

That legislation for stallion registration, already existing in four provinces, be extended to other provinces.

That the Dominion Government adopt a policy for the control and eradication of bovine tuberculosis along the line recommended by the International Commssion on the control of bovine tuberculosis.

That the Department of Agriculture be divided and that a Bureau of Live Stock be appointed to foster the live stock industry.

That some permanent arrangement be made by the Minister of Agriculture by which the National Live Stock Association shall be enabled to meet in convention once every three years.

A vote of thanks for the good work done by Dr. J. G. Rutherford.

Recommending that a certain clause in the present act be amended in the wording as it now stands, "That privileges in lower rates of duty be extended to British subjects" be made to read, "The British subjects residing in Canada."

The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, Andrew Graham, Pomeroy, Man.; Vice-President, John Bright, Myrtle, Ont.; Executive Committee, Hon. Mr. Gatneau, P. M. Bredt, Regina, and Captain T. M. Robson, London, Ont.; Secretary-Treasurer, A. P. Westervelt, Toronto; Directors—British Columbia—A. D. Paterson, Ladner, B.C.; Alberta—John A. Turner, Calgary; Saskatchewan—Robert Linton, Regina; Manitoba—A. McPhail, Brandon; Ontario—W. W. Ballantyne, Stratford; Quebec—Victor Sylvester, Clairvaux; New Apohaqui; Nova Scotia—M. Cumming Truro; Prince Edward Island—Hon. W. McKinnon, Charlottetown.

SHEEP INDUSTRY DECLINING.

Ottawa, Feb. 13.—Col. McCrea, of Guelph, president of the Dominion Sheep Breeders' Association; Col. Robert McEwen, Byron, Ont., president of the Ontario Breeders' Association; and Mr. Snell, of Huron County, and Peter Elson, M.P., waited on Hon. Martin Burrell this afternoon and asked him to assist in the encouragement of the sheep industry. They pointed out that the sheep industry had in recent years been seriously declining. They showed the advantages from an agricultural point of view in encouraging the industry, and asked that the Minister give substantial aid. They also drew to the attention of the Minister the report of Messrs. Dryden and Rich on the question of sheep raising in Canada, and asked that steps be taken to carry out their recommendations. The Minister promised every consideration to the request.

ON CRUISE OF TWENTY MILES BENEATH ICE.

Twenty American Submarines Started To-day on Remarkable Voyage By Chart and Compass.

NORFOLK, Va., Feb. 15.—Led by the Moccasin and the Viper, twenty cigar-shaped navy submarines to-day slipped beneath the surface of Chesapeake Bay, beginning the most remarkable cruise ever undertaken by tiny craft—twenty miles under the ice. This test was arranged to enable navy officials to determine how accurately the submarines could cruise by chart and compass when overhead conditions did not allow the use of the conning towers.

The cruise, lasting between two and three hours, will be free from danger to the "subs," say the officers of the fleet, because the ice on the bay is only about two inches thick and the boats can easily break through to the surface if necessary.

NORSE EXPLORER SEES ESQUIMEAUX

Secured Records of their Language and Songs on a Gramaphone—Are Original Canadians—Believed They Have Inhabited Frozen North Nearly 2,000 Years—Immigrating From Asia

Mr. Christian Leden, the Norwegian polar explorer, who is subsidized by the King and Queen as well as the Government of Norway, lately told of his recent visits to the Arthabaska Lake country and his interviews with the various Canadian Indian tribes, as well as his contemplated three years' research beginning in June next amongst the Esquimeaux around the Arctic circle and North West passage. Speaking of his mission and his European associates in similar researches, Mr. Leden stated that although many visits had been paid to Mexico and the southern Indians, few knew anything about the North American Indians, and especially the Canadian Esquimeaux, consequently little is known about their possible or probable origin. From his intercourse with both peoples he is convinced that they were originally one race, and that they are Asiatics, either coming into North America from Mexico or by the Behring Straits.

During the past year Mr. Leden studied very closely the customs of several groups of Esquimeaux and obtained a good many gramophone records of their language, songs, and their appeals to departed souls, all of which will be studied in order, if possible, to establish the correctness or error of the theories which he and others have formed as to the origin of these people.

Mr. Leden said he had had many interviews with Captain Ammundsen, who went through the Northwest pass was too busily engaged upon his voyage in 1906, and although the latter had seen many Esquimeaux groups he age of discovery to pay much attention to the habits and lore of the tribes along these frozen wastes. However, Mr. Leden obtained consderable data from Ammundsen which will be very useful to him during the next three years.

As to the possible length of time which the Esquimeaux have inhabited northern Canada, Mr. Leden said that the Greenlanders had no doubt come over from the Canadian side, and they had been in North Greenland probably 1,500 years, while they had been in South Greenland 1,000 years. When the Vikings first visited the country they brought back no records of living beings, said Mr. Leden, and it was only when South Greenland was visited 700 years later that they brought back the story of men being seen there

The Esquimeaux met with by Mr. Leden during the past year were a very kindly disposed people, when once they found that he was friendly towards them. They believed in a better state hereafter, and had no conception of hell or an evil spirit. Whether they looked forward to plenty of oil and profitable hunting expeditions as a future state being on a par with the happy hunting ground of the North American Indian, Mr. Leden was not sufficiently advanced in the study to say, but his great hope was to visit the Esquimeaux of the Arctic circle and study their languages and customs and make comparisons wth the Indians to the south. He intends to take a geologist along as well as a couple of southern Esquimeaux as interpreters and thinks that it will take at least three years before they will return to civilization.

"Did you find the Esquimeaux a moral people?" was asked.

"I found that wherever the Esquimeaux were kept remote from the whites they were a moral people, but I regret to say that contact with whites did not by any means conduce to bettering their moral status."

Asked what he thought of the Cook-Peary controversy, Mr. Leden said that he had been with Cook three weeks at a time, and he seemed to be all right. In fact he went as far as to say that Cook was sincere, and thought he got to the pole all right, but the fact that only Esquimeaux accompanied him was against the pretention. These ignorant people, he added, knew that they had went ahead so many nights and so many days and that was all that they could say. As for Peary, Mr. Leden also believed he had reached the North Pole.

Mr. Leden is also connected with the Ethnographic museum in Berlin, Germany, which country, he states, tkes a great interest in the studies and researches he is about to make amongst the North American Indians and Esquimeaux.

When "Work" Becomes "Labor"

There's Something Wrong.
Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills Will Right It.

Thousands of Women feel just like this.

When it seems as if you simply could not bear up any longer it is high time to look for the cause of the trouble—and the remedy. In an astonishingly large number of cases the real cause of woman's misery is found to be constipation, and the remedy that always cures is Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

Neglect of the daily movement of the bowels, so necessary to health, soon poisons the whole system from the impurities retained in the body. Headaches, indigestion, biliousness and lassitude follow, and often more serious female disorders are brought on or aggravated.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills not only regulate the bowels, but they stimulate kidneys and skin as well to throw off waste matter and purify the blood. The result is quickly apparent in the disappearance of the headaches and biliousness, and the return of health and vigor. Thousands of women all over the world owe their present good health to Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills.

AGAINST FORGERY

How Rich Men Protect Themselves from the Forger by Complicated Systems in Watermarks and Numbers.

An elaborate, but at the same time very ingenious, method has been adopted by some of the world's richest men, in order to protect their cheque signatures against fraud. Not only is a different kind of signature used for each day in the week, but the signatures vary according to the amount of the cheque. Suppose, for instance, the millionaire's name is John Peter Smith. On Monday he will sign cheques for $50 or under "J. P. Smith"; from $50 to $250, "J. Peter Smith"; for over $500, "John Peter Smith"; for over $5,000, "John Smith," and so on. On Tuesday there is a re-shuffling of the signatures; $50 cheques will be signed "J. Peter Smith"; $50 to $250, "John Peter Smith"; over $500, "John P. Smith"; over $5,000, "P. Smith," and so on.

Thus the forger who would alter a cheque for $250 into one for $25,000 has many difficulties to face. He may succeed in adding the extra "0"; he may succeed in altering the word "hundred" to "thousand" — which is not so hard as it looks. But when he presents the cheque, the cashier, from the date and the amount, sees that it ought, say, to bear the signature "John P. Smith," when actually the name reads "John Smith." Thus the fraud is discovered. It is not every bank, of course, that would undertake the working of a complicated cipher like this, but a millionaire's account is usually worth taking a good deal of trouble over.

Certain firms in London devote the whole of their attention to the manufacture and printing of cheques, circular notes, letters of credit, and other securities for bankers. One of these firms, after considerable pressure from a certain millionaire, has devised a form of cheque which is watermarked like a Bank of England note, and which is declared to be absolutely safe.

Not only is the maximum amount water-marked in the body of the blank cheque — "under $250" or "under $500" — but the place where the drawee usually signs his name is prepared by a secret process, so that it can be written on only by a special kind of ink, the manufacture of which again, is a secret.

This species of cheque is used by a select body of City men dealing habitually with big sums of money, and up to the present has been found to afford almost absolute security.

German Promise Suits

Breach of promise suits are unknown to German law, but the courts at Gottingen have recently had to adjudicate on the nearest approach to such a case as the German code permits. A young professional man of Berlin had a visit from his 'fiancée,' who stayed over the week-end with his mother. On Monday he took her to the station and, as he thought, started her for home. But she got out at the next station, came back and the next thing the young man heard was that she had been seen walking unescorted in the Friedrich Strasse.

He wrote her an angry letter, demanding an explanation. She replied breaking off the engagement. He then requested the return of all his presents and of the money he had spent during their betrothal. As she took no notice of this letter, he brought suit.

But again the mere man had no chance. The courts decided that she was justified in breaking off her engagement by the angry tone of her fiancé's letter, and that her escapade in no way reflected on her character

"Well, Janet," said the minister, "let's hear ye." "Come awa' wi' a text, then," quoth she. He repeated with emphasis: "It is better to dwell in the corner of the housetop than with a brawling woman and in a wide house." Janet fired up instantly. "What's that ye say, sir? Dae ye intend onything personal?" "Stop, stop!" broke in the pastor. "You wud never dae for a meenister." "An' what for no'?" asked she sharply. "Because, Janet, you came ower soon tae the application."

A CLUE TO PARASITE AS CAUSE OF CANCER

Dr. Rious Finds Evidence That Disease is Not Organic, as Has Been Believed—Has Eluded the Microscope—Parasite's Trial Now Found in Experiments on Fowls at the Rockefeller Institute

Prof. A. von Wassermann, Prof. Ehrlich, and their associates who are evolving a specific remedy for cancer may have to change their belief that it is a disease of organic origin. They declared definitely in their preliminary report that it is not parasitic.

Experiments on fowls, which have been conducted during the past two years by Dr. Peyton Rous in the laboratories of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research, tend to show that the malignant tumors are caused by a minute parasite not observable by the most powerful microscope. Prof. Rous found in a chicken a transmissible sarcoma, extremely malignant, and with a tendency to multiply throughout the body. He prepared an emulsion of the tumor, suspended in Ringer's salt solution and passed it through a Berkefeld filter, which kept back the tumor cells and the bacillus prodigiosis, which is distinguished by its scarlet or crimson red coloring.

The filtered fluid, containing neither cells nor parasites that could be detected by the microscope, was then injected into young, well-grown fowls of the variety in which the sarcoma originally occurred, namely, barred Plymouth Rocks. Nine pure-bred fowls were injected in each breast with the filtrate; one slowly developed a sarcoma in each breast, and microscopic growths were later found in its lungs. The tumor thus developed was successfully transplanted to another fowl. Another experiment on twenty chickens failed. Dr. Rous persisted. In his next experiment the filtered solution was kept warm from the moment of its preparation. In four of ten fowls inculated into the muscle of each breast with the filtrate there developed a sarcoma at one of the points of injection.

The growths, which required several weeks to appear, then enlarged with the avirage rapidity. Two of the fowls died and their bodies were found completely filled with the cancerous tissue. Ten more young and vigorous hens were inoculated, and eleven days later a tumor nodule could be detected in two of them; within twenty-eight days eight of the ten fowls showed tumor nodules. In every case the tumor resulting from injection of the cell-free filtrate itself furnished material capable of producing more tumors after injection.

With rapid transmissions from the original tumor, the rate of growth as well as percentage of successful transplantations is increased, as well as their spread throughout the bodily tissue. The tumors from the fowls inoculated with the filtrate have shown the same characteristics. In his report in the Journal of Experimental Medicine, Dr. Rous says that the young fowls are the most favorable subjects for inoculation, and "healthy well-nourished ones prove more susceptible than the thin and ill. Intercurrent illness of the host may cause the sarcoma transiently to disappear." He adds:

"The above traits have figured largely in current discussions of cancer etiolguarded, has not finally concluded garded as evidence against a specific cause for the disease extrinsic of the cells. Such evidence is void, now that a growth has been found possessing the traits mentioned, yet transmissible independently of its cells.

In his recent Ether Day address, Dr. Simon Flexner, director of the Rockefeller Institute, said that several contagious or infectious diseases, like infantile paralysis, scarlet fever, etc., were caused by germs of ultra-microscopic dimensions. He added that evidence is accumulating to support the belief that many of the so-called organic diseases began, originally, in an infection. Dr. Rous, whose report is conservative and guarded, hys not finalla concluded that the self-perpetuating agent active in the cancerous tissue of fowls is a minute parasitic organism. He says merely:

"Analogy with severa infectious diseases of man and the lowe ranimals, caused by ultra-microscopic organisms gives support to this view of the findings, and at present work is being directed to its experimental verification."

The germ theory of cancer is not new, though not generally accepted. Dr. Eugana Doyan announced to the Academy of Medicine of Paris in 1901 that he had isolated by culture a micro-organism which he regarded as the specific cause of cancer.

THOUGH IT'S "ONLY A COLD"—STOP IT BEFORE IT STOPS YOU

Have you ever heard of a case of catarrh, bronchitis, inflammation of the lungs, or pleurisy that did not start with a common cold?

Every cold you catch has in it the makings of one or other of these diseases, if it can break down your defences. And even if it does not develop into something more dangerous, it will keep you thoroughly miserable for a week or two at least.

The wise course, as soon as you feel the cold coming on, is to start taking Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, and keep it up till the cold is knocked out completely. This splendid cough syrup will do the trick quickly and thoroughly.

You can feel perfectly safe in taking Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, or in giving it to your children. We'll gladly give your physician a list of its ingredients if you like. Your Druggist can supply either 25c. or 50c. bottles. The National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited. 117

The flavor of tea is contained in an essential oil. With age the oil decays and the agreeable aroma and flavor of fine tea is destroyed. Tea keeps better in sealed lead packets than it does in open chests or cannisters, but it deteriorates more or less under any circumstances. Fresh tea is as necessary to a successful tea trade as fresh butter is to a successful butter trade. No wholesaler or retailer should keep a pound of tea in his stock for more than four months, yet with some, the fashion is to keep it for years. In Ceylon—that land of eternal summer—every bush in a tea garden is picked over every week in the year, and you always get it fresh and fragrant in the "SALADA" packages. "SALADA" does not show the dealer as large a profit as others teas but it gives him, through his customers, more satisfaction.

THE CONGO DWARFS

Pygmies Whose Mischievousness and Good Nature Seem to Have Inspired Legends of Goblins In Story Books.

In certain respects the great Congo forest of western Central Africa is the most wonderful region in the world. There are ape-like negroes and curious little Congo dwarfs. These dwarfs are less than five feet high, and their behavior is strangely like that of the brownies and goblins found in fairy stories. Their remarkable power of becoming invisible by adroit hiding behind herbage and rocks; their habit of making a home in holes and caverns; their mischievousness and good nature, all seem to suggest that it was some such race as this which inspired legendary stories of a little race having supernatural attributes.

These dwarfs are good or bad neighbors to the ordinary natives, according to the treatment they receive. If their depredations on the banana groves, or their occasional thefts of tobacco or maize are ignored, or even if small gifts of food are left where they may easily find them, they will leave, in their nightly visitations, return gifts of meat or skins, and ivory.

These pygmies live entirely by hunting, although they eat wild honey as well as meat. They live separately, in tiny huts four feet high.

Although they are in some respects quite near the apes in their physical characteristics, they are more clever than the larger negroes.

"CONSECRATED GROUND"

Moliere died while performing a part in one of his own plays. The Archbishop of Paris would not allow his body to be inhumed in consecrated ground. Therefore the king sent for the archbishop and expostulated with him, but he was obstinate and would not willingly comply with his majesty's request. The king desired to know how many feet deep the holy ground reached. The bishop replied, "About eight." "Well," replied the king, "I find there is no getting over your scruples; let his grave be dug twelve feet; that is four feet below your consecrated ground."

SPEAK UP AND SHUT UP

Grenville Kleiser says to public speakers: "stand up, so that you will be seen; speak up, so that you will be heard; shut up, so that you will be liked." For this last injunction Mr. Kleiser shall be numbered among the gods.

"If non-Christian races do not respond to the official efforts of missionary organizations the cause is to be sought, not in the superiority of other religions to Christianity, but in the inferiority of the adventurers, the colonists and the officials of Christian European powers, who have, for generations, exploited the weaker races of mankind."

Yeast: "He's spent a fortune, you know, on irrigation."

Elbowlifter: "Is that so? Land or throat?"

Mr. Charles W. Morse, of Boston, Massachusetts who is convinced that the earth is flat, offers a reward of $1500 — which he has deposited in a Boston bank — to the person who can prove to his satisfaction that the earth is round.

A WOMAN'S GOOD LOOKS

Depend on her general health and freedom from pain. Many a woman looks old before her time because of those irregularities which are essentially feminine. Starting from early womanhood, she suffers from frequently recurring derangements that upset her womanly health. If she be beautiful she grows into that mellow age without wrinkles and crowfeet about the eyes or the blue circles underneath. It is invariably the rule that such women suffer little, or not at all, from womanly derangements which sap the health and leave in the face the tell-tale story of pain and suffering. Dr. R. V. Pierce, the famous specialist in the diseases of women, found a prescription in his early practice that soothed the organism peculiar to womanhood—oiled the machinery, as it were, of the human system—and helped the woman to pass those painful periods that scar-lined and aged her face. This remedy became the well-known Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, that has benefited thousands of women and saved them from misery and suffering at different periods in life.

Mrs. [illegible] E. Pierce, of 244 Bright Street, Sarnia, Ont., writes: "I am now a well woman after suffering for three years and doctoring with several different doctors, each one saying it was something different, and the last one, after putting me through a thorough examination, said I was suffering from a growth, which, in time, would result in cancer, and said I would not live more than two years if not operated upon right away. I became hopelessly discouraged but would not consent to the operation as I was too weak and too much afraid, but at last, through the advice of a friend, I tried Dr. Pierce's medicines, and after using two bottles of the 'Favorite Prescription' I immediately felt a change. I also used two boxes of 'Healing Suppositories' and eight boxes of 'Lotion Tablets,' and can safely praise the name of Dr. Pierce's medicines to all who suffer from any female disease, for these medicines are all they are claimed to be, and I hope will help others as they have [illegible]."

WILL EXPEND $7,500,000 IN THE HARBOR OF ST. JOHN

Contract for the Developments at Courtenay Bay Awarded to Norton Griffith & Co.

OTTAWA, Feb. 13.—Formal assent was given to-day to the order-in-Council awarding the contract for developments at Courtenay Bay, in the harbor of St. John, to Norton Griffiths and Co. The contract price of the contemplated facilities is $7,500,000, and the work is to be completed in four years. In addition the agreement with the contractors calls for the construction of a dry-dock under the Dry Dock Subsidy Act, on which a capital sum of $4,000,000 is to be expended. W. Burton Stewart, managing director for Norton Griffiths & Co., who is here, states that work in Courtenay Bay will be started immediately. The full development of the facilities in Courtenay Bay, towards which the present contract is a start, will, when completed, in the opinion of experts here, constitute one of the most modern and up-to-date harbors in the world. The complete scheme as laid out encloses an area of about 400 acres by means of a breakwater 4,370 feet in length, the construction of which is included in the contaret now awarded. This enclosed area of the harbor will be dredged to a depth of 32 feet below low water, to be increased later to 36 feet. On the city side of the bay, adjoining the tracks of the I.C.R., a large area will be reclaimed for railway terminals and wharves. According to the complete plan, some 22 berths will eventually be provided for vessels from 500 to 800 feet in length. About 4,734 feet of wharves are included in the present contract. On the eastern side of the bay, in the rock, the dry-dock will be built. It will be 900 feet in length and will be construtced with a reclamation sufficient for a shipyard and repairing works. The acceptance of the present contract carries with it the obligations of the contractors to construct the dry-dock under the Subsidy Act, by which the Government guarantees 3 1-2 per cent. a year on $4,000,000 for a terminable period of 35 years. The contractors must finance the undertaking and provide the equipment. The main entarnce to the harbor of Courtenay Bay, between the reclamation ground on the city side and the breakwater will be about 1,600 feet.

LETTERS SEIZED.

Huge Quantity of Mail Is State's Proof In Dynamite Cases.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 16.—Sensational and specific charges that the dynamite conspiracy was conducted with the full knowledge of the members of the executive committee of the ironworkers, including President F. M. Ryan, that the whole conspiracy extending over years, was recorded on paper, and that Ortie E. McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, was shifted shuttle-like over the country on missions of destruction were made public last night by District Attorney Charles W. Miller.

Mr. Miller announced the contents of an indictment known as that covering "unconsummated acts" of the conspiracy, and it is to be the basis on which the Government intends to conduct its prosecution.

The indictment charges Ryan, Herbest S. Hockin of Detroit, Mich., M. J. Young of Boston, John T. Butler of Buffalo, Frank C. Webb of New York with conducting the conspiracy through the mail, and names all of the fifty-four defendants as abettors.

It declares that a regular system of pointing out non-union steel and iron construction jobs was carried on and that the executive members not only contributed money to buy explosives, but assisted in the work which McManigal was to do.

The basis of all the charges lies chiefly in 40,000 letters and telegrams taken from the Ironworkers' international headquarters. These letters purport to be between Ryan, Hockin, Webb and various other officials and business agents.

This is part of an alleged letter from McNamara to Ryan: "I am writing Butler and Hockin about the work of the McClintic-Marshall Co. I have already written Cooley about the work of the other concern at Chalmette."

It is alleged that F. K. Painter wrote to McNamara from Omaha on May 1, 1910, in regard to a job of the Wisconsin Bridge Co., which was damaged by an explosion as follows:

"They have no police protection within ten blocks of the job. There is a power house for the street car company. Hope if there is any way you could give us help to straighten un[illegible] job you will do it, as this is only the second big non-union job in this city."

Hundreds of other letters refer, in more or less guarded terms to various dynamiting exploits. In a letter to Murray L. Pennell, at Springfield, Ohio, in March, 1911, McNamara wrote:

"I am surprised at your letters. That is all I care to say through the mails, for the Lord only knows who reads all the letters that come into this office, as well as those that leave it."

PREPARING TO FIGHT.

Temperance Men Lay Plans For the Next Campaign.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—Big issues were up at the Temperance Convention in Toronto yesterday, and a large percentage of the delegates had their say. The question of a prohibition party was one of the big issues, and "public ownership of the liquor traffic by the province" was another. After spending half the afternoon discussing it and making declarations that the temperance people should get to work and cease talking, the following resolution, consisting of four clauses, was adopted, the last of which was proposed by Controller J. O. McCarthy, with a view "to putting teeth into the foregoing clauses":

"That this convention renew its demand for legislation abolishing the barroom and the treating system and drinking in clubs, and the imposition upon the liquor traffic of such other restriction as will most effectively curtail its operations and remedy its evils.

"That no candidate or party that does not support the foregoing policy can be accepted as entitled to the support of electors who realize that the abolition of the barroom is the greatest political issue in this province to-day.

"That the Alliance executive immediately take steps to effect a thorough organization of voters to secure the nomination and election of representatives who can be relied upon to support the policy herein set out.

"That the executive committee be directed to appoint a sub-committee to carry into political action the policy of the Alliance herein and above outlined."

RENFREW NOMINATIONS

Rival Factions Narrowly Avoid Having a Row.

Liberals Get the Hall and Conservatives Are Forced to Meet in the Open Air—Feeling Runs High and Intimidation Is Alleged—Dr. Maloney Denies Making Agreement—Says Signers Were Not Authorized.

Renfrew, Feb. 16.—The last week before the election to decide who shall represent South Renfrew in the Dominion House of Commons has begun, and Dr. M. J. Maloney of Eganville and Hon. G. P. Graham of Brockville are the candidates.

Nominated here yesterday, they both addressed large audiences yesterday afternoon with the difference that, while the Conservative candidate spoke in the open air, the late Minister of Railways in the Liberal Government, said what he had to say in the O'Brien Opera House. Dr. Maloney was helped out by W. H. Bennett, M.P. for East Simcoe; John Webster, M.P. for Brockville, and C. J. Thornton, M.P. for West Durham, while T. A. Low, ex-M.P., and Dr. Neilly, M.P. of Humbolt, Sask., spoke for Mr. Graham.

The nominations proper were without feature, but a hitch between the two parties developed when it came to speaking afterwards, and for a period it looked as though trouble might result. It originated in the fact that the Liberals some weeks ago secured the O'Brien theatre for nomination day, of the date of which they were at the time ignorant. A few days before its announcement, Dr. Maloney's supporters rented the theatre for Feb. 15.

About two o'clock a crowd of perhaps 1,000 persons, mostly Maloneyites, marched down the street behind the Renfrew brass band and took up their position in the main thoroughfare in front of the theatre. There they remained for upwards of an hour. Finally, however, Dr. Maloney drove up, and through Peter White, K.C., of Pembroke, invited the crowd down to the market place, where they followed him. The opera house was then opened to the Graham men. At the conclusion, T. A. Low hurried down to the market place with Dr. Neilly.

Dr. Neilly said a few words, but by this time the majority of the crowd had left. Taking the day as a whole, the honors were with the Maloney faction. The Conservative candidate's action in addressing on open air meeting have turned out to be the best tactics.

The agreement by which the Conservatives of South Renfrew were alleged to have bound themselves, was the main topic of conversation at the Maloney meeting.

Dr. Maloney was greeted with loud cheers. South Renfrew had elected Mr. Low, but apparently he wasn't good enough for the Liberal leaders at Ottawa. Mr. Low could not very well be denied the privilege of retiring, but it was not for him to say who should be his successor. The twenty-seven Conservatives who had agreed to elect Hon. Mr. Graham had done simply as individuals and when Hon. G. P. Graham had gone about the constituency saying that Dr. Maloney himself had supported the agreement, he had said that which he knew was untrue. He insulted every elector when he stated the Conservative party had broken faith with him.

A large crowd had assembled in the opera house for the Liberal meeting. Dr. B. G. Connolly of Renfrew was chairman and the speakers were Hon. Mr. Graham himself, T. A. Low, ex-M.P., and Nr. Neely, M.P.

Mr. Low stated he had made up his mind that, while outsiders were trying to run the Conservative party, they would not run the Liberal party.

Referring to the Conservative convention which had nominated Dr. Maloney, Mr. Low stated that at 1.30 Dr. Maloney had supported carrying out the agreement made and at two o'clock he was nominated. The campaign throughout had been one of mud-slinging on the part of the Conservatives. Mr. Graham, he considered, should be allowed to go back to the House to answer the charges which had been made against him.

Hon. Mr. Graham told the audience that he had endeavored before to arrange a joint meeting with his opponents, but the latter had always backed out. Where was Dr. Reid, the man responsible for the holding of this election? Mr. Graham had hoped he would have come up to the present meeting "to say to my face what he said behind my back."

He had obtained an actual written pledge that he would be elected, said the speaker, a pledge that in business would hold good in a court of law.

Mr. Graham took up the Georgian Bay Canal matter, affirming that he approved of the deepening both of the Welland Canal and the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal.

Accepts Asquith's Challenge.

London, Feb. 16.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Unionists, led by Bonar Law, have decided to accept the challenge thrown out by Premier Asquith to prove that the Government was guilty of corruption in the matter of the appointment of officials. Bonar Law will move a vote of censure and a debate will take place after the proceedings following the King's speech have been concluded.

Meanwhile, Premier Asquith has been asked to issue a return showing the appointments during the Liberal term of office.

Priceless Books Stolen.

London, Feb. 16.—No fewer than 47 historic books and manuscripts, some of which are of almost priceless value, have been stolen from the library of Peterboro Cathedral. The thefts are believed to have extended from January, 1904, to June, 1909, and were only discovered Wednesday, when a middle-aged man was accused of stealing books nominally valued at $500.

WANTS UNIFORM RATES

J. G. Turriff Protests Against Freight Tolls.

Member for Assiniboia Sharply Criticizes the Discrimination Against the West in the Matter of Freight Charges, But Resolution Is Voted Down Because It Duplicates a Move Already Made.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—"Why should there be this discrimination against the west?" asked J. G. Turriff (Assiniboia) last evening in moving a resolution for the equalization of western and eastern freight rates in amendment to the motion to go into supply. "Is there any reason for it? Is there any common sense in it?"

Figures quoted by Mr. Turriff showed 20 to 190 per cent. higher rates in the west than those in Ontario. They were 43 to 140 per cent. higher than in the adjoining western States. The C.P.R. was even charging $12 to $102 a carload more than four or five years ago.

Hon. Robert Rogers declared that, as the Government had brought these grievances to the attention of the railway commission, the passage of this resolution would be virtually a vote of want of confidence in that body.

Mr. Turriff's amendment was defeated.

Mr. Turriff defended himself of the charge that he had never raised his voice on the question while the Liberals were in power.

Would anyone say, said Mr. Turriff, that it was just that the people of the west should pay 50 to 100, and in some cases, 150 per cent. higher freight rates than in the east, though the C.P.R. on its own sworn statement had showed that it cost less to operate roads in the west than in the east? Not only did they pay more in the west than in the east, but they paid higher rates than in the contiguous western states. The time had come when this discrimination should be put a stop to.

The railway commission should be enlarged in number or given more help. Mr. Turiff advocated the division of the commission into two sections, not one east and one west, but that one section should deal exclusively with all freight matters.

In conclusion, Mr. Turriff moved, in amendment, seconded by W. M. Martin (Regina), the following resolution: "That in the opinion of this House the time has arrived when the Government should lay down the principle that the rates to be charged for the carriages of freight in the western provinces should not exceed those charged in Ontario and Quebec for a similar service to a greater extent than is actually necessary to cover any differences in the cost of hauling and operating that may be shown."

Hon. Robert Rogers, in reply, held that the cost of construction, as well as the cost of operation, had to be taken into consideration in determining freight rates.

The late Minister of Railways, he stated, had declared that the railway commission had full and complete control.

"We accept and recognize the board of railway commissioners as the only legitimate child of the late Government. Accepting this, we are not going to sit here and vote for a resolution which is in reality a vote of want of confidence in the railway commission."

The deplorable conditions in Western Canada were due to the negligence of the late Government. The present Government had take the only legitimate course of securing full and complete justice for these grievances in asking the railway commission to take up the matter and employing three of the ablest lawyers in Canada to present the case to the people. It would serve no good purpose and not be treating the railway commission fairly to pass this resolution.

Hon. Frank Oliver declared it did not matter what were the theoretical rights of the railway board, the actual rights rested with Parliament, and if the railway board had not taken up and settled these grievances, the responsibility for their rectification was on Parliament and the Government.

H. H. Stevens (Vancouver), pointed out that British Columbia had been fighting for relief from a similar grievance. On Monday last the railway commission had taken the formal initial steps for the settlement of the question. Was it just to condemn the commission before they tried the case?

Big Convention Expected.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—The meetings of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade, to be held in Toronto, Feb. 22 and 23, promise to be extremely interesting. The delegates are to be welcomed by the Lieutenant-Governor, Sir James Whitney, Mayor Geary, and Ald. Maguire. Matters of the utmost interest to the province will be discussed.

Invitations have been issued by President Gage for a banquet at the National Club on Thursday night, the 22nd instant. The following speakers will be present: Hon. G. E. Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce; Hon. W. H. Hearst, Minister of Lands, Mines and Forests; N. W. Rowell, K.C., leader of the provincial Opposition; also others to be announced later. Luncheons will be tendered by the City of Toronto, and the Toronto Board of Trade.

To Succeed Dr. Rutherford.

Ottawa, Feb. 16.—An order-in-council has been passed dividing the position of veterinary director-general and live stock commissioner, hitherto held by Dr. J. G. Rutherford, into two separate branches. The man most prominently mentioned for veterinary director-general is Dr. A. H. Hall., of Grimsby, Ont., formerly of Quebec.

Burlesquer Shot and Killed.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 16.—Max Abbott of New York, a member of a burlesque company playing here, who was shot Wednesday night by George Stone, after a quarrel in a theatre, died last night. Stone is a brother of Fred. Stone of Montgomery & Stone.

DEBATE DRAGS ALONG

Provincial Opposition Indulges in Oratorical Display.

School System of the Province Comes In For an Attack at the Hands of Dr. J. McQueen—Small Contribution to Public Health Is Also Criticized—New Bills Introduced—Queries Regarding One Brownley.

Toronto, Feb. 16.—An attack on the educational system of the province under the administration of Hon. Dr. Pyne, and an attack on the Government for the small amount devoted to the public health department of the province; these and the replies thereto by the Government supporters as well as an amusing address by R. J. McCormick of East Lambton, were the principal matters before the Legislature at yesterday afternoon's session. A few new bills were introduced, and then the debate on the address in reply to the speech from the throne was resumed.

Dr. J. McQueen of North Wentworth was the chief objector to the present policy of the Government on several matters. Chief among these were the rigorous regulations enforced by the Department of Education with regard to pupils who only fail by a few marks to get the requisite number for a pass.

"I want to make two charges against the school system," said he. "There is too much concentration in Toronto of the public school system of the province. One pupil passed in every subject except geography, where she was two marks behind, and when application was made at Toronto to have this pupil granted a pass, the answer was 'No.' The laws of the Education Department in Toronto are like the laws of the Medes and Persians—unalterable.

"The laws regarding the public school system in this province are in many cases ambiguous.

"The public school system is too cumbersome. The boys and girls between 6 and 14 years in the public schools of the province are being taught entirely too much."

Dr. McQueen deplored the small amount that was spent by the province for the public health. Vast sums devoted to the Hydro-electric and only the miserable sum of $40,000 in the interests of the public health.

While admitting that the Provincial Board of Health had done excellent work, he said it should be empowered to do much more.

"I suggest that the Provincial Secretary cease his prison reform work for a short time and do some Government reform. If he did he would have a reform Government in a few years."

Dr. McQueen practically endorsed a proposal that the Government has under consideration at the present time, viz., the abolition of the municipal medical health officers throughout the province, who are now paid a paltry remuneration for their services, and the appointment of county medical health officers at a salary sufficient to make them independent of private practice. A thoroughly equipped laboratory, he said, should be established by the province in connection with the appointment of the county M.H.O.'s, so that examinations of diphtheria swabs and tubercular sputum could be made locally without having to go to Toronto and other large centres of population.

The whole House was put in good humor by the inimicable address of R. J. McCormick of East Lambton. His logic is excellent, and he belabored the Government of Sir James Whitney without the slightest tinge of ill-feeling or bitterness in his remarks. He was applauded by both sides of the House.

J. Thompson said the Opposition had accused the Government of being the seven sleepers, but the Liberals in reality were the sleepers themselves, for they are just beginning where the Ross Government left off, apparently unaware of all the progressive legislation that had been accomplished during the past seven years."

J. W. Johnston, West Hastings, said that the leader of the Opposition and the other new members of the House could well afford to be reprimanded by Sir James Whitney as to the proper course of procedure in the House.

"Sir James," he stated, "is one of the best exponents of the constitutional form of Government within the British Empire."

"The hon. leader of the Opposition talks about temperance and moral reform. But where does he stand on temperance and moral reform? Why didn't he do something when the Ross Government was in power? Why, he was then on the side of the Egyptians. At that time he could have been of some use on these matters of legislation, but now he is not."

J. G. Anderson of South Bruce gives notice that he will, on Monday next, enquire of the Ministry as to how many demonstration orchards the Government has instituted up to the present time.

J. C. Elliott of West Middlesex will enquire as to when License Inspector Brownley of North Renfrew and Harvery Moss of the same riding ceased to be in the employ of the Government.

Gives Job to Yuan.

Nanking, China, Feb. 16.—Dr. Sun Yat Sen's resignation of the Presidency of the Chinese Republic has been accepted by the National Assembly. His letter said: "Yuan Shi Kai has declared that he adheres unconditionally to the national cause. He would surely prove a loyal servant of the state. Besides this, Yuan Shi Kai is a man of constructive ability upon whom our united nation looks with the hope that he will bring about the consolidation of its interests. The happiness of our country depends upon your choice. Farewell."

The Assembly passed a resolution saying: "Such an example of purity of purpose, of self-sacrifice is unparalleled in history. It was solely due to his magnanimity and modesty that northern China was won over."

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 15.—Reports that the Argentine strike had been settled in fact as well as in theory, tumbled prices today in the market for wheat. The close was 3-8c to 3-4c down as compared with twenty-four hours before. All other leading staples, too, suffered a decline, corn 1-4c to 3-8c, oats 1-4c to 1-2c and provisions 2 1-2c to 7 1-2c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ¼d higher than yesterday, and corn ½d higher. Antwerp wheat closed ⅛c lower, Berlin unchanged, Buda Pest ⅛c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 15.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for all grades of Manitoba spring wheat for nearby shipment, and the prices bid for such were fully 2s to 3s per quarter higher than for May-June, but owing to the scarcity of ocean grain room exporters could not accept any of the orders, and the demand for May-June is very limited.

The local market for all lines of coarse grains is firm owing to the small offerings on spot. The demand for oats in car lots is good. There was a good enquiry for American corn, but no further sales were made. The export trade in flour is quiet, but the demand from city and country buyers is fairly good. Demand for bran and shorts is good, of which supplies are scarce.

A firm feeling prevails in the butter market, under a steady demand and small stocks. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady.

Canada's Best Corsets

From $1.00 to $3.00

We would direct the attention of every woman to the superior workmanship and sterling qualities of the Crompton Corsets, manufacturers of the celebrated C. C. a la Grace Corsets.

Last year we sold over eighteen hundred dollars' worth of these best known Canadian made Corsets, which amount we believe is largely in excess of any other Corset ever sold in Belleville by one store.

There must be a reason for our ever increaing sale of these Corsets and we believe it is to be found in the fact that at the price paid the Crompton Corset is superior to any other Canadian made Corset and C. C. a la Grace Corsets have come to be a household term, every woman realizing that for beauty of design, giving graceful ease and comfort to the wearer, Crompton Corsets have no equals.

We are now showing all the new Spring Models in these Corsets, with a style designed for every figure, in every size from 18 to 36 waist measures, at prices from .... $1.00 to $3.00 a pair

DUNLOP Traction Tread

Another Opinion:

"In my twelve years' experience in automobiling, I have never had a tire that has given me anything like the satisfaction these have. They eliminate entirely the necessity for using chains on muddy roads or slippery pavements, which is a big item in itself when you consider the inconvenience of putting chains on and taking them off, to say nothing of the expense. Further, I have not had a puncture in my Dunlop Traction Treads."

ARMOURIES A BOWER OF ENCHANTMENT

A Brilliant Scene at Daughters of Empire's Ball Last Night—Profuse and Artistic Decorations Charmed the Eye—Dancing to Excellent Music was Greatly Enjoyed—"And All Went Merry as a Marriage Bell"—Full List of the Guests

Under the auspices of the Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire an assembly was held last night in the Armouries which proved to be one of the events of the season. Dancing was indulged in in the lecture room, which was most artistically and invitingly decorated for the occasion. The walls were profusely decoarted with flags and tissue paper hearts, while the spacious room was brilliantly lighted with red, white and blue electric lights. While dancing was being indulged in the scene was one of enchantment, the costumes being varied and exquisite in design. Excellent music was furnished by the Regimental Orchestra. The tea-room, which was in charge of Mrs. Geo. Wallbridge, was most inviting. The decorations consisted of yellow daffodils in profusion, and brass candlesticks with wax candles burning therein.

Mrs. Col. Marsh and Mrs. S. W. Vermilyea, as First Regents, were the reception committee. Mrs. Dr. MacColl, had charge of the refreshments and Mrs. A. P. Allen was at the head of the floor committee. The following constituted the programme of dances: lancers, two-step, waltz, two-step, waltz, two-step, rye waltz, two-step, waltz, two-step, waltz, two-step, waltz, two-step, waltz, lancers.

HELD HIS JOB TILL DEATH

HELD HIS JOB TILL DEATH.

Negro Capitol Laborer Refused to Be Discharged.

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 15.—Thomas Brown, a negro laborer in the Capitol, who twelve years ago refused to be discharged, died to-day of old age.

Brown entered the service of the Government in 1865, but more than a decade ago Col. Richard Bright, then Sergeant at Arms of the Senate, sought to discharge him.

"Go 'way from here with all that foolish talk," retorted Brown. "I haven't got time to talk to you. I've got my work to do."

Several Senators interceded for Brown and the order of dismissal was withdrawn. The old negro was one of the characters of the Capitol.

EMOTIONAL WORSHIP BY HORNERITES

Holiness Movement Covention Opened by Bishop Horner

MONTREAL, Feb. 14.—The Holiness churches of the Montreal district of the Ottawa conference are meeting in their annual convention in the Holiness Church, at the corner of Mayor and Bleury Streets. The gathering will last for ten days, although few of the delegates who are attending will remain for the whole time. Many come in from the churches of the district for a few days only. So far the representatives from the country missions is not large, but Bishop Horner explained to a 'Witness' reporter last night that the weather had been very unfavorable for the attendance of country people.

The convention differs much from the ordinary gathering of that name that comes to the city. It is, in fact, a plain revival meeting, with none of the regular convention programme. There are three sessions daily at 10.30 a. m., 3 and 8 p. m. The meetings are in charge of the two pastors of the entertaining church, the Rev. George Oldford and the Rev. Wilson McCracken.

The Holiness Church is composed of plain people, and the interior of the church indicates that fact clearly. There is no organ to assist in the service—an omission that often resulted last night in the lack of melody, although the volume of praise was enormous. No pulpit stood on the little platform, a small stand served the speaker. About 260 chairs were in readiness to seat the 150 people who composed the congregation. Four gas jets and a coal oil lamp attempted to drive away all the shadows and darkness, but their efforts were not a very startling success. A few mottoes upon the wall and a big stove that worked so well that it nearly roasted the congregation last evening complete the furnishings of the church.

While the holiness people are plain and simple in their religion, they are very far from being Quakers. A cardinal principle in their creed is joy, and that happiness expressed itself in rather unusual ways for a church service. In the prayers last evening nearly everyone joined at the same time, and that, too, in their loudest voices. One man was weeping bitterly and wailing in a most mournful tone. Another made a tour of the church on his knees while crying at the top of his voice. A third locked arms with the pastor who was leading the service and swayed back and forth upon his knees upon the platform. Another worshipper, while in a state of religious glory and while crossing the church upon his knees was unfortunate enough to fall down the stairs leading to the basement. The accident, however, did not divert him from his tour for long or disturb the devotions of other members of the communion, although it occasioned considerable excitement among those not used to such things in church.

The Rev. R. C. Horner, founder of the movement, called by his followers the Bishop of Ottawa who delivered the address, is an excellent speaker, and from the text, "Seek ye the Lord," made a forceful appeal to the audience to abandon evil living and live righteously. There was tremendous inspiration in Jesus, who was anxious to enter every heart. He was searching for man while the angelic hosts were lining the battlements of heaven as they watched for the tears of repentance. But the theatres, the race track, the pool-room and the social dance, 'those dens of iniquity' must be renounced to win Him. At the close of the appeal several announced their intention of living Christian lives.

Real Men Wanted

To "make good" requires a man's unhampered ability.

Frequently, headaches and other anoying ills, brought on by the habitual use of coffee and tea make it quite impossible for a man to think clearly and do his best work.

POSTUM

—made of clean, hard wheat—is really a food-drink, and used regularly in place of coffee or tea which contain the drug, CAFFEINE, has helped thousands of people in every walk of life, by removing the handicap to natural ability.

The change to Postum for, say, 10 days, may point the way for you.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE SERVANT IN THE HOUSE.

The troupe consisted of but seven characters, each of whom was an actor of the highest standard. There was no change of scenery—a simple room in an English country vicarage; not a song, no words of love, save those which passed between the Vicar and his wife; yet the interest of a well filled house at Griffin's last evening was at highest tension from the first lifting of the curtain to the final scene. The play was of a religious trend throughout, with a depth of thought and fellow feeling quite out of the common order, as brought out by the superb acting of Wilfrid Roger as "The Servant in the House." True to his subject and typified costume, this magnificent character portrayed time and again the high order of Christianity as taught by the great Book, his faithfulness in his work, his tenderness of spirit and thoughtfulness toward his fellowman going deep to the hearts of those present. Of David Glassford as the Reverend William Smythe, Vicar, and Amy Veness, his wife, too much cannot be said; the wife's amibtion for her husband, the husband's criticism of his own faithfulness to duty, and final discarding of all formality and deception was a strong scene in the play. Preston Kendall as James Ponsonby Makeshyfte, D. D., Lord Bishop of Lancashire, with avaricious tendencies, proved a strong supporter, while Betsy Bacon as little Mary, a niece of the vicar, and Littledale Power as Rogers, a page boy, came in for a generous share of notice. But the superb acting of Tyrone Power as Robert Smith, a brother of the vicar, in the role of the drain-man, took the house by storm. The appearance of this character, the astonishment of the family, and the attempt of the wife to banish him, brought out many points of excellent work; the antipathy between the brothers, the spiritual wor kof the servant, the meeting of father and daughter, the final reconciliation, the announcement of the presence of a famous bishop from India, brother Joshua, who proved to be none other than the servant of the house, brought to a close by far the most interesting play to visit our city this season, and the pity is that more such theatrical subjects are not given to the public.

It is rather cowardly politics to blame the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council for the blunder in wording the Grand Trunk Pacific contract, which will cost the people of Canada $10,000,000.—Mail and Empire.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agent for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within 9 miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him, by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

HOW TO BE HAPPY

An old lady of sixty-four, who says that all her friends call her "the woman with the smiling face," would like us to print her simple recipe for happiness. "I have never known it fail," she writes. "I have induced hundreds of my friends — young and old — to try it, and it always has been a success. If even half your enormous number of readers would take it as their motto for 1912 and act up to it, they would do more good to our beloved Canada than all the politicians who ever sat and waste time at Ottawa. Here is my little recipe: 'Happiness? It's the easiest thing in the world to find. Just try to make some one else happy.'"

Zam-Buk for the Children

MOTHERS TELL WHAT IT DID FOR THEIR LITTLE ONES.

Thousands of mothers in Canada owe a debt of gratitude to Zam-Buk.

Mrs. J. Quiding, of Ninette, Man., says: "My little boy was suffering very badly from a form of skin disease over his eye. I applied Zam-Buk to the affected part, and in a very short time to sores were healed."

Mrs. F. Miners, of 311 Suffolk St., Guelph, Ont., says: "My little daughter Lorinda (6), contracted a skin disease. This broke out like tiny water blisters, afterwards taking the form of dry scabs. These would disappear for a short time, and then reappear worse than ever. We tried Zam-Buk, and perseverance with its use resulted in a cure."

All druggists and stores sell Zam-Buk at 50c. box or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

PLEADS JUSTIFICATION

Sir Wilfrid Says G.T.P. Is Worth Loss on Bonds.

Unable to Do Anything Else, the Liberal Leader Accepts the Responsibility for Mistake Which Costs Canada Ten Millions—Oliver Says It Is a Trifle Considering the Benefit to West.

Ottawa, Feb. 15.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Frank Oliver tried hard to show that the loss of $10,000,000 on the G. T. P. bonds was a mere trifle and that the benefits of the road would amply offset such an error in cost.

Hon. W. T. White moved the second reading of the bill to pay $5,000,000 as ordered by the Privy Council.

The responsibility for this very heavy obligation and for the further $5,000,000 to which they might become liable, said Mr. White, rested on the preceding Government, and he called upon the leader of the Opposition to declare what he had to say in explanation or extenuation of the action of his Government.

Sir Wilfrid declared that it had seemed to the late Government in 1904, when the supplementary agreement was made with the railway company, that if, in the state of the money market at that time, the G. T. P. were bound to raise this money at a sacrifice, its credit might be impaired, and the success of the enterprise jeopardized. He did not think the price to be paid too heavy for the resources of the country, or too heavy for the result to be accomplished in view of the necessity for rapid settlement of the northwest.

This legislation, said the ex-Premier, was merely an incident in the construction of the National Transcontinental Railway. In 1903, he declared, there was a considerable cleavage of opinion as to the necessity for the construction of the road. No one doubted that necessity now, and last year not a single word of objections was heard when legislation was introduced for aid to the railway. The congestion of the railways in the northwest yesterday, be held, formed the best justification of the building of the road.

The financial market in 1904, said Sir Wilfrid, commenced to decline heavily. This decline no one expected to be permanent. However, they were disappointed. The market kept going down.

Nor was it Canadian securities alone that were effected. The depression of the market was world-wide. English consols in September had got as low as 77. It was not the result of any want of confidence in our market, but of the enlarged demand for money.

Their solicitors had advised the Government, continued Sir Wilfrid, that the proper method of implementing the bonds of the railway was by the issue of further bonds. The G.T.P. took the ground that they should be implemented by a cash payment. It was a case of lawyers disagreeing and the Privy Council had sustained the contention of the G. T. P.

Sam Barker (E. Hamilton) denied that any man on the Conservative side in 1903 had doubted the need for another transcontinental railway. Sir Wilfrid Laurier had claimed that it had been hard to get any company to undertake the building of the road.

Ten words inserted in the clause, said Mr. Barker, would have put the matter of the implementing of the bonds beyond the shadow of a doubt.

Hon. Frank Oliver thought the question discussed trivial compared to the construction of a transcontinental railway and the results that would flow from that construction.

"The Grand Trunk Pacific proposition," he declared, "was the effort of the Government of that day to break the conditions of railway monopoly, which prevailed at that time through the prairie provinces to the Rocky Mountains."

It was necessary to impress upon the world that the G. T. P. had the Government behind it to enable it to compete with the C.P.R.

The service of the C.P.R. itself had been immensely improved by G.T.P. and C.N.R. competition.

Hon. W. T. White stated that there were $25,000,000 more bonds of the G. T. P. to be sold. The Government was carefully considering the question of this purchase.

CAN CONTROL PROVINCE.

Temperance People Have Balance of Power, Says Spence.

Toronto, Feb. 15.—Claiming that the temperance people in Ontario hold the balance of power, Rev. B. H. Spence, general secretary of the Ontario Branch of the Dominion Alliance, in an address in Massey Hall yesterday morning on "The Provincial Situation," declared that neither the Liberal nor the Conservative party could hope to win without the aid of the Alliance. Said Mr. Spence: "We have reached such strength now in this province that no party can reach power without our support, and the time has come for us to assert ourselves. We cannot have a province half-wet or half-dry, any more than the United States could have remained a country half-slave and half-free."

"What of the political situation ?" said Mr. Spence. "I will tell you more about that when our delegation has returned from Queen's Park. So far both political parties do not seem to have apprehended the situation as it is. We cannot afford to follow any party leader in half-hearted prohibition measures." He said that though provincial prohibition was now the objective of the Alliance, it would be a good thing to bring on local option campaigns in every possible district in the province this year.

This morning the committee on Political Action, which was organized yesterday afternoon and Controller J. O. McCarthy was made permanent chairman, will report to the convention what it thinks of the result of the deputation's conference with the political leaders in Queen's Park yesterday noon.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

BASEBALL.

SHORTER SEASON IN NATIONAL LEAGUE.

NEW YORK, Feb. 14.—The National league baseball schedule for 1912 was adopted and made public at the meeting of the league club owners here last night. The schedule provides for 154 games, as usual, but the season will be three days shorter than last year, beginning one day earlier and closing four days earlier. The season will open April 11 with these games:

New York at Brooklyn.
Philadelphia at Boston.
Pittsburg at St. Louis.
Chicago at Cincinnati.

The season closes October 3.

The only other work accomplished by the league meeting yesterday was the approval of a staff of umpires, including the two new arbitrators. Clarence Owens, of Kansas City, formerly with the American Association, was appointed to take the place of Hank O'Day, who has become the manager of the Cincinnati Club, and G. C. Bush, of Davenport, Iowa, was appointed an emergency umpire. All of the veterans of the umpiring staff will be retained as follows: R. D. Emslie, J. Johnstone, W. Brennan, Mal. Eason, W. Finneran, Wm. Klem, and Charles Rigler. Klem, Rigler and Owens each signed a contract for three years.

There will be no meeting of the Rules Committee at this time, though one may be held later to consider a change in the box rule. Thomas Connolly, chairman of the American League Rules Committee, and Umpire Emslie, who is on the National League Rules Committee, have both raised a point that the pitcher's box should be cut down to a level with the diamond. No other changes in the rules are contemplated.

There was a large gathering of fans and players in the corridors of the hotels. No trades of any kind were announced, and the managers apparently adopted a stand-pat policy with respect to the make-up of their teams. Among those seen were: J. J. McCaffery, owner of the Toronto Maple Leafs, and his manager, Joe Kelley; Sam Lichtenhein of the Montreal Royals, and Billy Lush, manager of the latter team.

TO JOIN THE GIANTS.

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb. 12.—Some day this week Wilbert Robinson, the former famous Oriole backstop, will depart for Harrisburg, Pa., where he will join John McGraw and his squad of Giants en route to Marlin Springs, Tex., to take charge of the New York hurlers during their spring workouts. Players on McGraw's roster who have been wintering in the east will leave the metropolis, accompanied by the little Napoleon, on Friday, while the members of the team who have been spending the off months in the west will join their team mates at St. Louis.

As in the last several seasons when he went South with the National League champions, Robinson will have full charge of the Giants' flingers. So well does McGraw think of the former Oriole's advice to the juveniles breaking into major circles that he will give him entire charge of the youngsters. Since his experience with Rube Marquard, whose sensational slabwork was instrumental in the National League bunting going to Gotham last season, Robbie has been considered by many the peer of the coaches for the young pitchers. It will be remembered that it was through the persuasion of the big fat catcher that McGraw decided to retain Marquard, who had been called the $11,000 lemon, and the snappy leader of the Giants has never forgotten this.

McGraw is depending on Robinson to bring Pitcher Pearce, formerly of Buffalo and Providence, who has been signed by the Giants, to the major league standard. The scouts of the New York club have touted Pearce as a wonder.

HOCKEY.

Toronto Canoe Club beat Berlin juniors in the semi-final game at Toronto last night by 10 to 1. Berlin was outclassed.

The hockey team in connection with the High School will this evening try conclusions with the Trenton High School boys. The game will be played at Trenton.

PITRE SHOWN UP.

MONTREAL, Feb. 15.—Goldie Prodgers showed up Pitre, of the Canadiens, in the game here last night. From the face Marks smothered al his efforts to score, and in his turn played rag with the human whirlwind when he started to work on the offensive. Pitre stood this for a while, but when he saw that the visitors had it on him he became crusty and began to carrom the lighter man into the fence, slash him over the feet, and force him to quit.

Pitre had been handing to Marks by dealing out similar treatment. This went all through till the last period, when Pitre lost his head completely and struck Goldie Prodgers with his stick. The youngster retaliated by flinging his stick at the Frenchman, and then rushed for him. Jack Marshall intervened, and sent both men to the side.

CURLING.

Two senior rinks from the local curling club went to Napanee at noon to-day and will play in that town this afternoon.

Two senior rinks of the Ladies' Curling Club go to Peterborough on Monday to play in that city on Tuesday. The following ladies will play:—

Rink No. 1—	Rink No. 2—
Miss Wallbridge,	Mrs. O. A. Marshall,
Miss G. Price,	Miss V. Riggs,
Miss A. Wallbridge.	Miss W. Riggs.

THE RING.

THE LATEST "HOPE."

CHICAGO, Feb. 14.—Cowboy Jess Willard is the latest member of the heavyweight white hope boxing family. Charley Cutler local wrestler and boxer, discovered the embryo fighter in Kansas in a recent jaunt in that direction and brought him to Chicago.

Willard is a long way from the ground, being 6 feet 6 inches in height, with a reach of eighty-three inches. He weighs 240 pounds, has a chest measurement of 46 inches, his waist is 36 and his neck is 18 inches around.

Willard is to work with Hugo Kelly, a middleweight fighter, while in Chicago, and the western man will create a sensation in fight circles when the rough spots have been polished off.

Cutler thinks his man is about in a class with Carl Morris now.

Camorrists Released.

Viterbo, Italy, Feb. 15.—The court which for a year has been engaged in the trial of the thirty-five members of the Camorra yesterday ordered the release of Francesco Desiderio and Antonio Percuoco, two of the men accused of having been present in the Alda Tavern, in Bagnoli, on May 28, 1906, when Gennaro Cuocolo was condemned to death for treachery by a court of the Camorra.

Intense excitement was created among the public when the order for their liberation became known. The judge gave as his reason for the step that both prisoners had already served in jail what would be the maximum penalty if they were found guilty of being accomplices.

Seven more Camorrists are to be released to-day and a further thirteen to-morrow for a similar reason.

It is easier to hear about ghosts than it is to see them.

HEROIC WOMANHOOD

Bravery in the face of the elements is not usually placed in the long lists of womanly virtues, yet some of the most famous heroes have been women. Ida Lewis, the only woman who has ever been an official lighthouse keeper on the American coasts, died recently at Newport, R. I. She had passed practically her whole life at her post of honor, and eighteen souls have been indebted to her for life. Many thrilling stories of hairbreadth escapes and daring rescues are told of this woman, and she received medals, plate, insignia of various societies and purses of money in recognition of her ability and courage. In 1907 she celebrated her golden anniversary as keeper of the lighthouse, and Andrew Carnegie gave her a pension of $30 a month. The name of Ida Lewis will be written beside that of Grace Darling in the annals of effective heroism.

at last, and by 10 o'clock the two truant Chinese returned. They had seen Atayals, but were terribly frightened when they learned what had happened.

"The superintendent returned the next day. He, too, was considerably alarmed, and sent the Chinese off to the village for a detachment of district guards. Had I been his own brother, this Japanese gentleman could not have taken better care of me, or expressed more sympathy for the loss of my crew."

To Develop Canadian Resources.

Montreal, Feb. 15.—The formation of a Franco-Canadian committee in Paris for the development of Canadian resources was announced at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

SCHOOL BOARD HAD A BUSY MEETING

Much Business Done in a Short Time—Penny Bank System to be Introduced in Public Schools—Chairman Reid and Col. Ponton Appointed Delegates to Imperial Conference—Full Report of the Proceedings

Although the School Board was in session last evening but one hour, during that time considerable business was transacted. A motion prevailed to establish in the schools as soon as possible the penny savings system. Mr. C. M. Reid and Col. Ponton were selected as representatives of the Board to the Imperial Conference of the Teachers' Association which meets in London, Eng., in July, providing they are in the world's metropolis at that tme.

The members present were: Messrs C. M. Reid, chairman; J. H. Anderson, C .F. Sharpe, W. C. Reid, A. E. Bailey, W. R. Taylor, B. Mallory, F. S. Deacon, P. Harrison, L. C. Pascoe, S. S. Moore, W. N. Ponton, J. F. Wills and J. B. Ives.

The chairman took the opportunity of thanking the members of the Board for the honor conferred upon him by electing him as chairman of the Board He considered it a greater honor to be chairman of the Board than to be Mayor of the city During the year there would be matters of importance to attend to and he hoped to have the hearty co-opeartion of the members in the discharge of his duties.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From the Executive of the Imperial League of Teachers' Associations, stating that a conference would be held at London, Eng., in July and asking the Board to take such action as they desire in reference to delegates to same.

REPORTS

Inspector Clarke presented his report for January which showed the registration and average attendance at the various schools for the month to be as follows:

	Registered	Average Attend.
Queen Victoria	491	440
Octavia Street	305	262
Grier Street	166	131
Pinnacle Street	83	65
Canifton Road	125	107
Station Street	52	47

The report called the attention of the Supply Committee to the fact that the seats purchased through Mr. Tickell and on which the varnish was inferior have not received the attention which the manufacturers agreed to give them. The tops of the seats and desks in many cases are almost bare of varnish.

The geography readers asked for in the half yearly report in January are promised almost immediately and it is desirable that they be placed in the schools as soon as possible.

The Finance Committee recommended the payment of the following accounts:

A. McFee	5.00
Tickell & Sons	1.21
The Globe	1.21
Trenton Electric Co.	7.40
Wm. McGie	20.52
S. Moon	.25
Ritchie Co.	.75
Intelligencer Printing Co. ..	2.65
B. Mallory	6.65
A. E. Bailey	6.65
Greenleaf & Sons	4.31
Stafford Hardware Co... .. .	3.91
Wallbridge & Clarke	4.63
A. McKay	1.50
W. W. Chown Co.	.80

The Board went into Committee of the Whole on reports, communications etc., Mr. Anderson in the chair

The Finance Committee's request was adopted without discussion and portions of the Inspector's report were referred to various committees.

CIGARETTE SMOKING.

The Chairman of the Board stated that the School Management Committee had met with the Principals of the various schools and consulted in reference to the cigarette habit. It was ascertained that the teachers were doing all in their power to discourage the habit and that some good was being accomplished..

A motion prevailed that the chairman of the Board and Col. Ponton be appointed as delegates to the Imperial conference of the Teachers' League to be held in London, Eng., in July, provided they are in London at that time.

MOTIONS.

The rules were suspended and the following motion was introduced:

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. Wills that the Schools Saving Bank System be forthwith established on lines similar to that adopted in Toronto and other cities and that the offer of Mr. H. Sneyd of the Merchants' Bank of Canada to take charge of and superintend the accounts and deposits be accepted, and that the method of introducing and carrying out the system in the schools, be referred to the Finance Committee, with the chairman of the Board chairman of the School Management Committee of the Board and the Inspector with power to act.

Col. Ponton spoke in support of the motion. If the savings system was introduced here it would not only inculcate thrift, but will be of benefit to all children. It will give children a knowledge of banking business. He hoped the system would receive a fair trial in this city.

Mr. Wills thought the system was worth trying and for that reason he was in favor of it being introduced in the schools of the city

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Wills moved, seconded by Mr. W. C. Reid, that the Sits, Building and Repairs Committee be directed at once to see what change would be most desirable in the central school building for High School purposes, either temporary repairs or remodelling, and also see about plans for a new High School, and submit same to the Board at the March meeting, or not later than the April meeting.

After some members had spoken in regard to the motion it was adopted.

Board adjourned.

CALAMITY PROBABLE

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 17.—No fewer than 800,000 miners have already handed in their notices to quit work on March 1st, when, unless one side or the other unexpectedly yields, the country will face a national stoppage which will paralyze every industry and send up the cost of the necessaries of life to famine prices.

PREPARING AGAINST MINERS' STRIKE

Trouble in South Wales Considered Inevitable—Troops Being Sent There

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Eng., Feb. 17.—Preparations are being made for sending troops into the southern part of Wales in anticipation of riots when the miners go on strike, which is called for March 1st. The strike is considered inevitable, and Lloyds is charging a high premium on policies insuring big manufacturers against shut-downs.

FELL TO DEATH

(Intelligencer Special.)

RICHMOND, Eng., Feb. 17.—Aviator Graham Gilmour fell four hundred feet from his monoplane to-day and was instantly killed.

FARMERS BANK

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Ont., Feb. 17.—The appointment of Frank E. Hodgins, K.C., as counsel to assist Sir William Meredith in the Farmers Bank investigation was officially made this morning.

FOR THE SENATE

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Ont., Feb. 17.—Napoleon Champagne, member of the Legislature for Ottawa East, is believed to be slated for the vacant Senatorship, which must go to a French Canadian. Champagne, who has gone to Ottawa, stated before leaving that the appointment was in the hands of the Government, and as yet he hadn't had a chance to refuse the Senatorial appointment.

RAILWAY HOLD-UP

(Intelligencer Special.)

TERRE HAUTE Ind., Feb. 17.—Robbers held up train No. 11, a New York-St. Louis mail train on the Vandalia railway at Liggett, Ind., last night and attempted to open the mail cars but were frightened away. Bloodhounds are on their trail.

It takes an intelligent baby to understand the language women talk to it.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

GOT TEN DAYS.

Charles Nelson and John Kelley, two able bodied men, were arrested last night on a charge of being trespassers on G. T. R. property. They were arrested while roaming about the station premises here. The Magistrate sent them to jail for ten days.

RODE TO STATION

Thomas Finn, a stranger, who was brought to the police station at 12.30 this morning in a wheelbarrow, owing to his intoxicated condition, and the absence of vehicles on the street at that hour in the morning, was allowed to go by the Magistrate.

SENT TO THE SHELTER.

A lad named Joseph Foley, aged 16 years, was to-day taken in charge by the police on a charge of vagrancy. It appears that Foley has been about the city for some days and at night found a lodging place in barns and outbuildings. He claims that his mother is dead, and that his father lives at or near Marmora village. The Magistrate directed that he be placed in the Children's Shelter for a few days until enquiries are made in reference to his father or friends.

HEALTH EXHIBIT

The Provincial Health Exhibit arrived in the city this morning and will be placed in position at the City Hall, where it will be on exhibition Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. Mr. E. H. Jones is in charge of the exhibit, which is numerous, consisting of about 60 cases containing charts, etc. During the three days next week addresses will be delivered by prominent men connected with the Provincial Health Department. These addresses will be both interesting and instructive.

CHURCH UNION.

The Quarterly Official Board of Bridge Street Methodist Church is to vote on the church union question next Tuesday evening.

FOUR ARRESTS.

The police last night were kept busy answering calls and making arrests. No less than four were placed behind the bars, two for trespassing upon the G. T. R. property, a drunk and a young man for vagrancy.

FURTHER ADJOURNED.

The case of Mrs. Florence Munnville was called at the police court this morning, but was enlarged for a week, owing to the fact that she was unable to appear. The accused is still suffering from the effects of the muriatic acid which she partook of yesterday. In the afternoon she was placed under arrest on a charge of attempting to commit suicide and taken to the county jail.

MONTREAL BAR DINNER.

At the Montreal Bar dinner on Thursday night last, among the guests were the Minister of Justice, many of the Quebec Judiciary and representatives from Ontario and various States to the South. Addresses were delivered by Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, Hon. Chief Justice Tait, Mr. Justice Archambeault, Mr. Justice Duff, of the Supreme Court of Canada, F. R. Coudert, of New York; St. George Tucker, of Virginia, President of the American Bar Association; V. B. Southard, of Boston, and W. C. Mikel, K.C., President of the Ontario Bar Association. The occasion was made interesting by the announcement of Sir Melbourn Tait of his retirement from the bench. It is understood that he is to be succeeded in the Chief Justiceship by Hon. Mr. Justice Davidson, father of Mrs. Coleman, of Belleville.

CANADA EXPORTS MUCH PULPWOOD

Would Gain 50 Per Cent More if Manufactured at Home

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—A review of the pulpwood exportation from Canada was issued to-day by R. H. Campbell, Dominion Director of Forestry. The report reads in part.

"In 1910 only some 4,000 cords more wood was cut for pulp in Canada than in 1919. Of the 1910 amount of 1,541,620 cords, 23,642 cords less was manufactured in Canada than in 1909, and 27,508 cords more was exported.

"Over 60 per cent. of the pulpwood cut in Canada during 1910 was sent out of the country without further labor being expended on it. The United States manufactured it into pulp and paper. The amount paid for this wood was $6,210,042, or an average of $6.58 per cord. As the average paid by Canadian mills was $6, this is an average of 58 cents per cord more paid for exported pulpwood at the point of shipment.

"From United States forest products bulletins it is seen that approximately two-fifths of the pulpwood imported by that country is manufactured into mechanical pulp, and three-fifths into sulphite pulp, and that a cord of wood produces about one ton of mechanical pulp, or half a ton of chemical pulp. This means that from the 943,141 cords of Canadian pulpwood sent to the United States, 377,256 tons of mechanical pulp was made and 282,922 tons of sulphite. The value of these 660,218 tons of pulp, for which, in the form of pulpwood, Canada received $6,210,042, was, at the average price ($20.49 per ton), paid in 1910 by United States importers of wood pulp, $13,528,481. Thus Canada did not get one half the amount she would have received if all pulpwood were converted into pulp on Canadian soil.

"Authoritative information supplied by the Department of Customs leads to the statement that the total pulpwood export was cut from the various provinces in the following amounts and values:—779,000 cords, worth $5,090,000, from the timber limits of Quebec; 90,000 cords, worth $647,000, from New Brunswick; and 74,000 cords, worth $473,000, from Ontario."

INTERESTING LECTURE AT ST. AGNES' SCHOOL

An interesting and scholarly lecture was delivered last evening in the hall of St. Agnes' School by Prof. Keyes, of Toronto University. The subject was "Coleridge," as a poet, as a philosopher and as a theologian. While the lecturer ranked Coleridge among the greatest of English poets, he gave him an equally exalted position as a thinker and philosopher of his own or any other age. As a student of theology he was the founder of that practical school which afterwards embraced such men as Arnold of Rugby, Robertson of Brighton, Frederick Dennison Maurice, Charles Kingsley and many others, and in later years Illingsworth and Gore. Extracts were given from the "Ancient Mariner" and other shorter poems illustrating the beauty of his imagery and the purity of his poetic diction.

The entire lecture proved to be a stimulating introduction to the study of the author, and an insight into the workings of one of the greatest minds among the sons of men.

The lecture closed the admirable series of lectures which have been given at St. Agnes' during the autumn and winter. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer of the evening, closing with the National Anthem.

MULCTED $6,000 FOR LIBEL.

MONTREAL, Feb. 16—The Montreal Star was this morning mulcted in $6,000 damages for libelling a skating rink called the Forum, which it had mentioned in the course of a series of articles on "undesirable buildings."

The plaintiffs contended that the Star was actuated by malice because of trouble over an advertising contract.

The Star pleaded that an influential board of citizens had protested against the building.

16TH NEGRESS MURDERED.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 16.—The sixteenth negro woman to be murdered on the streets here in a little more than twelve months was found to-day with her throat cut The negroes are greatly aroused, and attribute the murders to what they call a "Jack the Ripper."

NO ADVANCE IN TEA PRICES EXPECTED THIS YEAR.

There has been a great deal of speculation as to the outcome of the present Chinese revolt and its bearing on the tea situation in general. Mr. Melville, of Thomas J. Lipton, when interviewed, stated that the indications are now more favorable, some believing that the Chinese trouble will be over about February 18, the Chinese New Year. Though tea will not be cheaper, he does not believe there will arise any necessity for advancing prices to the consumer this year. The crops in China will probably be a little late coming forward, but these teas are used very little in Canada, except possibly for cheapening blends. The rapid advance last year in the cost of Ceylon and India teas has spent itself and the markets are now practically stationary for good teas, though for very common teas the market is somewhat easier. The consumers have doubtless, in some cases, been supplied with the lower quality at the old price, but they are not long deceived, realizing that they do not go so far as tea of really good quality.

Mr. Archie Bales, who was for some years an employee of The Intelligencer, has accepted a position in Berlin, Ont.

A LUXURIANT GROWTH OF HAIR

Aside from combing it when they think necessary many people give no attention whatever to their hair. Then when the hair begins to fall out it never occurs to them that their trouble is the result of personal carelessness.

An occasional application of Newbro's Herpicide will not only prevent loss of hair but permits a luxuriant growth.

Herpicide kills the germ that causes dandruff and to this germ most hair losses are attributable. It keeps the scalp clean and free from dirt, allowing the hair to grow unhampered by accumulation of dandruff.

Newbro's Herpicide is sold by all druggists and its manufacturers have such confidence in its germ destroying power that they authorize all druggists to guarantee the one dollar size bottles to do as claimed or money refunded.

Applications may be obtained at good barber shops.

Send 10c. in postage for sample and booklet to The Herpicide Co. Dept. R. Detroit. Mich. Doyle's Drug Store Special Agency.

A Sign of the Times

PEOPLE are becoming very careful about what they eat and drink—

The preference for goods in sealed packages—especially in food stuffs—is now quite definite and becoming more so every day.

We must frankly admit that there are sound reasons for this preference. Food stuffs cannot be exposed to varying atmospheric conditions without losing both strength and flavor.

Tea—of all articles of everyday diet (excepting coffee, perhaps) needs protection most, and best merchants have been quick to appreciate the fact. So much is this the case that the selling of loose Tea in bulk will soon be a thing of the past.

RED ROSE TEA reaches you with all its virginal flavor, strength and purity—

—It is sealed in air-tight packages—dust and damp-proof—

RED ROSE is a blend of the best Indian and Ceylon Teas.

—The former assures generous strength and richness—the latter that coaxing, delicate flavor, Qualities for which Red Rose Tea is famed.

Ask your Grocer for the 40c. package of Red Rose and you'll get better Tea—Tea that spends farther—for the same money.

You want "Good" Tea—well,

SEED, CATTLE AND HORSE JUDGING IN AMELIASBURG

Great Success of the Course Held at Roblin's Mills by a Government Expert.

The Seed, Cattle and Horse judging course at Roblin's Mills, Ameliasburg, on Wednesday and Thursday the 15th and 16th inst., was a grand success. The course was under the management of Mr. A. P. McVannell, of the Department of Agriculture, Picton, and too much credit cannot be given Mr. McVannell for the efforts he put forth in making the course both profitable and interesting. The great drawback was the securing of accommodation for visitors interested in the course. It is well known that Ameliasburg is a local opton township, which simply means there is no prospect for lodging or meals outside of the private houses. A large tent was erected and comfortably seated and warmed. In front of the seats saw dust had been placed, raising the ground in order that animals could be plainly seen which were being judged. The forenoon of the 15th was taken up with judging different kinds of seed grain. Mr. Duke, an expert, had charge of this, and clearly showed how necessary it was that only the best and purest seed should be sown. His instruction as to how to select the best seeds was well worth the attendance of those who were present. The afternoon of the first day was devoted to the judging of horses under the direction of Dr. Reid of Georgetown. Dr. Reid is an expert both in his profession as a veterinary and as a judge of the horse, and his second visit to Ameliasburg was very much appreciated. The horses shown were from the thoroughbred racing horse to the heavy draught, taking in between the general purpose and the carriage horse. The meeting was very interesting, and while there was considerable difference of opinion among the farmers as to placing some of the horses, the decision of the Dr. was so clear that he had no difficulty in converting the crowd to his views. The Dr. was strong in views of breeding to the best possible sires. He clearly showed the great loss to farmers expecting to get good stock through lack of careful selection of sires. It was impossible to get good results from breeding to mongrels. He was emphatic in placing any horse in the draught class which would weigh less than 1600 pounds. The second day was devoted to the judging of seed corn in the morning and cattle in the afternoon, under the supervision of Mr. Stephenson of Ancaster. The breed of cattle shown were the Holstein. There was not so much difference of opinion in the selecting of a good cow for milk and the previous day with selecting the proper stamp of horse. The people of Ameliasburg are more interested in the good cow than apparently in a good horse, although they have a fairly good class of horses. Taking everything into consideration the course was a decided success and clearly proves that the Department of Agriculture intend neglecting nothing which will place the farmers of Ontario in the farmers in the front rank of any profession.

Risky to Marry Money.

Apropos of a beautiful young wife, worth $40,000,000, who had just divorced her penniless husband in order to marry again, Henry E. Dixey, the comedian, said at a dinner:

"The young man who marries for money has none too easy a time of it. His rich wife is likely to tire of him and throw him out in a few years, or else she is likely to limit his allowance to 25 or 50 cents a day.

"'I married money,' a man once said to me.

"'Wasn't there a woman attached to it?' I asked.

"'Yes, you bet there was,' he exploded. 'So much attached to it that she never parted with a penny.'"

An Insect Gunner.

Many insects have some means of defense from their natural enemies, none of which is more curious than that of a small beetle, which, when closely pursued, discharges a puff of poisonous vapor with a distinct detonation. Undoubtedly in many instances this aids the diminutive gunner in his escape, mainly, in all probability, by startling his pursuer and causing him to abandon the chase. From this peculiar acquirement, this little fellow is kown as the bombardier beetle.

An Ignorance of Values.

"You shouldn't have said you could hire all the brains you need for $25 a week," said the politician's friend.

"Why not?"

"Because it's merely an invitation to somebody with only six dollars' worth of brains to come along and cheat you."

HOW TO BE HAPPY

An old lady of sixty-four, who says that all her friends call her "the woman with the smiling face," would like us to print her simple recipe for happiness. "I have never known it fail," she writes. "I have induced hundreds of my friends — young and old — to try it, and it always has been a success. If even half your enormous number of readers would take it as their motto for 1912 and act up to it, they would do more good to our beloved Canada than all the politicians who ever sat and wasted time at Ottawa. Here is my little recipe: 'Happiness? It's the easiest thing in the world to find. Just try to make someone else happy.'"

CHIEFS WANT CHANGES.

Deputation of Police Officials Waits on Hon. Mr. Doherty.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Advocating several radical changes and additions to the criminal code, the executive committee of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada yesterday interviewed the Minister of Justice at Ottawa.

Their desires are many. They wanted the law changed so that those looking on at gambling games will be liable to the same punishment as those actually participating. They would also have it that any gambling appliances found in a raided place would be prima facia evidence that gambling was carried on in that place.

Under the present section only the chief constable or deputy chief constable may sign a gambling search warrant. This they want altered so that the authority may be delegated to any peace officer or constable.

One of the most far-reaching of their recommendations is that bail be not allowed pending appeal to a higher court. It often happens that appellants, out on bail, disappear and thus avoid punishment.

Carrying a revolver will be an offence for which there will be no option of a fine, the punishment on conviction being imprisonment, if the recommendations of the chiefs are carried out. They would also prohibit the manufacture, sale, importation, or having in possession, automatic pistols of every description, also Maxim silencers. Automatic pistols, they claim, are veritable gatling guns, and a serious menace to human life.

Brides Need Not "Obey."

London, Feb. 17.—As a result of the recent suffragette wedding, at which the bride refused to promise to obey her husband, there is a prospect that the word "obey" will be stricken from the Church of England marriage service.

The matter came up at a meeting of lower house of convocation of the province of Canterbury, Thursday, and a resolution was adopted recommending that the 'Scriptural form of exhortation in the marriage ceremony be revised."

The Dean of Canterbury objected strenuously to altering "an exhortation which contains passages from St. Peter and St. Paul on the grounds that these apostles were wrong."

The Dean of Winchester, however, insisted on the recommendation, and it was adopted with a slight modification.

The house also agreed to revise the collect following in the marriage service, asking for children for the couple. For this collect the committee proposes to substitute the following words: "Bestow, we beseech Thee, upon these two persons the heritage and gift of children."

A FAMOUS ENGLISH CLOCK.

Terrestial and Celestial Bodies Incorporated in the movements.

Wells cathedral contains one of the most interesting clocks in the whole world. It was constructed by Peter Lightford, a monk, in 1320 and embraces many devices which testify to the ancient horologist's ingenuity. Several celestial and terrestrial bodies are incorporated in the interesting movement and relationship. They indicate the hours of the day, the age of the moon and the position of the planets and the tides. When the clock strikes the hour two companies of horsemen fully armed dash out of gateways in opposite directions and charge vigorously. They strike with their lances as they pass as many times as correspond with the number of the hour. A little distance away, seated on a high perch, is a quaint figure, which kicks the quarters on two bells placed beneath his feet and strikes the hours on a bell. The disk of the clock is divided into twenty-four hours and shows the phases of the moon and a map of the universe.

A pedigree hog was killed by an American railroad and a jury awarded $10,000 damages. And you couldn't say that for ten dead section men.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

CHAPTER II.

Sir Thomas Hargrave's Secretary

In a handsomely furnished room of moderate size, somewhat darkened by curtains and blinds, sat "Paul Farley," Sir Thomas Hargrave's secretary and his son's tutor.

A streak of warm September sunlight fell across his sleek dark head, as he leaned idly in a carved oaken elbow-chair, gazing absently at his pen. The writing table before him was strewn with papers, letters, parchments and blank sheets of foolscap, while on a mahogany shelf between the book cases stood a smart new Remington typewriter. His dark face wore a gloomy expression, and a perplexed frown drew his eyebrows into a straight line above the gold rims of his eyeglasses.

Firm advancing footsteps without, and a brisk turn of the door handle brought him to an upright position. Sir Thomas, the genial, much-esteemed owner of Weyberne Hall, entered, strode across the rich Axminster in his ponderous riding boots, and flung an open telegram on the library table.

"A wire from Head and Boffin," he said, "about those Mexican shares. I've half a mind to sell."

The young man pushed back his chair, placed a sheet of paper in the typewriter and waited.

"What do you think yourself, Farley?"

"I heard Miss Hargrave say at breakfast that Mr. Graham would be down in a few days. A practising lawyer's and broker's advice, sir, would be of far more value than mine."

"That's a query. He hasn't your power of grasping and shifting intricate details, nor your head for finances. If the shares were your own, Farley, how would you act?"

"Sell out," he said promptly, "the price of the stock will never be higher than it is now."

"Good! Tell Boffin to get rid of this lot. By-the-bye, the reply ought to go in to-night."

"I'll walk over to East Weyberne after dinner, sir, and post it myself."

"Thanks, er—I say, Farley," he said, coming back and seating himself on the edge of the writing-table, "I've a word or two I want to say to you—no time like the present, I suppose," and he swung his legs and laughed a trifle uncomfortably.

Paul Farley turned, and clasped his fingers over the rail of his chair.

"I don't want to hurt your feelings—I hope I shan't—but, my boy, if you possess common honesty, common sense—and my experience says you lack neither, you will clear up a mystery that's been bothering me of late—the mystery of a woman's heart."

Paul Farley flushed to the roots of his smooth, dark hair.

"Ever since my daughter was a child," Sir Thomas continued with increasing seriousness, "ever since Anthony Pelham and she were boy and girl together, their liking and sweethearting has been encouraged both by myself and my old friend, General Sir Anthony Pelham. The Hargrave and Pelham estates join, and the two families have respected and known one another for generations. It is a great grief to my wife and to me that just as our hopes and wishes were about to be realized, Judith should declare there was never anything serious between her and Anthony; that she never dreamed of marrying him. A few days after your arrival he went to town and bought the engagement ring, so you can imagine his dismay when she utterly refused to touch it or listen to him, although until then she had led him and all her circle to believe they would ultimately become man and wife."

"Strange!" Paul muttered, under his breath.

"Do you think so, Mr. Farley? I thought you might solve the problem."

"How?" he asked, slipping a nervous hand into his trousers pocket.

"By answering a plain question truthfully, to the best of your ability. Do you think your presence here has influenced my daughter in her treatment of Mr. Pelham? Have you ever seen a look, a blush, even the quiver of an eyelid, that would lead you to suppose she entertained more than a friendly feeling towards you?"

Paul Farley advanced a few steps and leaned upon the table where Sir Thomas sat.

"You place me in a sorry position, sir," he said, in a grave, suppressed tone. "If I answer 'No,'—it's a falsehood; if I say 'Yes,'—what do I appear in your, in my own, in any decent man's sight? I—I can't help thinking that your daughter is—not indifferent to me and I give you the knowledge, sir, with a horrible sense of shame."

"Thank you, Farley, you are a good fellow. I see you understand and appreciate the peculiar circumstances. I think you are sufficiently wide-awake to be aware that I should not sanction an alliance between a child of mine and a gentleman—whom I duly appraise—but who is, in a measure, a stranger to me, whose family is unknown to me, whose social status is—er—"

"I am fully alive to my position, sir, and if I remain here you will find that I am not the sort of man to forget it."

Sir Thomas left the table, and laid a kindly hand on the young man's shoulder.

"I should be very unwilling to part with you, Farley, most unwilling. I only trust your own heart is not involved."

Paul's short upper lip gave a sudden curl.

"I have an honest, wholesome liking for Miss Hargrave," he said, the harassed expression dying out of his handsome eyes, "as I should have for anything fresh and sweet and clean. If your daughter, sir, were the only woman in the British Isles, and I was desperate to marry a wife, I should, I should go farther afield and choose altogether a different type."

Sir Thomas held out his hand.

"With all my heart I like and respect you, Farley," he exclaimed, smiling, "and now will you go a step further? Will you make my daughter realize her mistake?"

Paul took off his glasses, slowly polished them, replaced them, and looked inquiringly at his interrogator. Sir Thomas picked up a quill, played with it, and finally tapped with it on his secretary's arm.

"I know enough of human nature, Farley, to be sure that a rebuff, a marked slight on your part, would suffice to give Pelham his heart's desire. I should wish the remedy to be effective, but not too severe—see?"

"I will do my best," he said, with a low laugh, stroking the back of his glossy head, "and I will be as considerate as a woman."

"Oh, Lord! I've sometimes seen the consideration women entertain for one another," Sir Thomas exclaimed with a guffaw, recovering his usual flow of good spirits. "Heigh! what a queer world—oh, the deuce!" he said, slashing his boot with his riding-crop, "the ladies are having scandal—I mean tea—on the Terrace. Lady Hargrave entrusted me with a charming message to that effect. Good-bye; tell her I'm gone to Asherwood's farm. All's well that ends well, you know. There's no need to worry yourself."

The door slammed.

Paul sank gracefully into the elbow chair, leaning back in his favorite attitude, his long, white fingers clasped behind his head.

"Oh, ye gods!" he gasped, staring at the embossed ceiling. "What fools women are! Upon my soul, I must have a very pretty way with me! So, Miss Judith, you are to be brought to a proper sense of the fitness of things. Well, you are a sweet girl, but it is not permissible, my dear, to ruin Anthony Pelham's happiness nor Paul Farley's career."

He rose and paced up and down the carpet, the sound of his restless footfalls deadened by the thick velvet pile. The room felt warm and close, he pulled back the curtains, drew up the blinds, and threw open the French window leading on to the broad gravel walk, allowing a cooler atmosphere to play about his hot head and hands. Presently, he bethought a cup of Lady Hargrave's tea in the open air would prove beneficial and refreshing, also a quiet cigarette later under the copper beech might serve to steady his pulse and soothe his irritated nerves. He looked around for his straw hat. He had put it hurriedly away in the morning, and now felt puzzled at its absence. The next moment he espied its white, projecting brim between the book shelves, and made a sudden dash at it.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Farley. I have been petitioned to come and see what has detained you," said a soft, childish voice. "Lady Hargrave has ordered fresh tea for you, so do please come!"

A beautiful woman, with an innocent, pleading face, was peeping through the French window. Her limpid, hazel eyes, full of interested curiosity, were roving slowly round the library.

"I am coming at once, Mrs. Wycherly," he said, bowing courteously and suppressing an impatient exclamation. "I don't like cold tea; and we cannot be sure of many more September afternoons like this."

She came nearer and stepped lightly over the threshold.

"May I come in?" she asked timidly.

Paul hesitated; he had no particular liking for the beautiful widow, he politely endured her society. He neither trusted her, nor quite believed in the wide innocent gaze of those hazel eyes. He fancied he could discern beneath her childish demeanor a great deal of character, a stratum of perseverance, and a strength of purpose which furnished food for thought apart from his own engrossing interests, and at times rather amused him. Still, here was an instrument with which to chastise the rebellious Judith. Handled adroitly, a speedy contrition for her delinquencies, her too open and decided preference for himself, might be brought about.

"May I come in?" she repeated, advancing to the table.

A Year Ahead of His Time.

Luxembourg was not so long ago the scene of an incident savoring decidedly of comic opera. When the late ruler of the Grand Duchy was Duke of Nassau he was officially informed of the death of his cousin, the King of the Netherlands, and promptly journeyed from Vienna to Luxembourg, to which state he was next in succession owing to the operation of the Salic law. A ceremonial entry was made into the capital, and the new Grand Duke had already received personal congratulations from many of his most prominent subjects, when he heard that Kink William's physicians had been misled by a cataleptic trance, and that, so far from being dead, he was on the road to recovery. So Duke Adolphus had to return to Vienna, and when, a year later, the King really passed away, several weeks elapsed before the new ruler of Luxembourg assumed the reins of government.

Sudden Rise in Real Estate.

He bought when real estate was low,
Then hoped that it would rise.
A workman dropped some dynamite;
It did — to his surprise.

Most beautiful women are born without hearts, to lure men to madness... It's a merciful provision of nature. If they grieved over every man whose life they spoilt their whole existence would be one long grief.

HOIST WITH OWN PETARD.

Macdonald Finds Grits Ordered Objectionable Coal.

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—Parliament passed the whole of yesterday's session in committee of supply, with the exception of a short interlude for a trip over to the Senate, where the Deputy Governor-General gave the royal assent to several bills.

The first couple of hours were taken up with attacks on the Minister of Public Works on the subject of dismissals.

In reply to a question of Hon. R. Lemieux, Hon. F. D. Monk stated that there was no immediate intention of carrying out the suggestion for a new residence for the Governor-General on a new site near Rideau Hall. In view of the fact that considerable sums had been spent on repairs and refitting and that large expenditures were needed for Departmental building. Two items for Rideau Hall, $35,000 and $9,000, were passed.

E. M. Macdonald (Pictou) appealed to the patriotism of the Government to burn Canadian coal in heating the public buildings.

"It must be rather peculiar to those not acquainted with the idiosyncrasies of political life," answered Hon. F. D. Monk, "to learn that the coal we are burning here to-night was provided under contracts signed by the friends of my hon. friend opposite in spite of the vigor with which he is assailing that policy to-night."

J. E. Armstrong (East Lambton) asked the Minister, in lighting the public buildings of Ontario, to remember the great work that was being done by the Hydro-Electric Commission.

Hon. F. D. Monk declared that the construction of another graving dock at Quebec was an absolute necessity. Nothing had been done to date in the way of a comprehensive plan for the improvement of the harbor, as had been done in the case of Montreal.

He was not prepared to say, however, that the Government itself could undertake to operate the graving docks in the twelve or thirteen national ports recommended as such by the transportation commission. The policy of the late Government had been to grant a subsidy. He did not think this a bad plan. The Government would consider the matter at an early date.

The Minister of Public Works got the last of his estimates through, and the committee took up the estimates of the Department of the Interior.

FRUIT MEN'S DEMANDS.

Growers Pass Several Resolutions In Convention.

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—With the passing of a number of important resolutions of concern to those engaged in fruit growing industry throughout the country, the third Dominion conference of fruit growers, came to an end yesterday afternoon.

The chief resolutions passed were substantially as follows:

That a board of three fruit dealers in each province be formed as a committee to advise in the appointment of inspectors.

That $10,000 be voted by the Government as a grant to the next national apple show, provided that the promoters of that show are willing to offer $20,000.

That the Government be requested to raise the tariff on peaches.

That an apple box with a capacity of 2,200 cubic inches be made the legal standard throughout Canada, to come into effect within two years.

That the question of most suitable shapes for fruit packages be left over to the next conference, with the understanding that in the meantime an investigation shall be made, preferably by the Government.

That certificates be given by fruit inspectors on the payment of a reasonable fee.

That the Government be urged to inspect as much as possible at the point of shipment and that the Government have daily market prices cabled from agents in Europe during the shipping seasons and published in the daily papers throughout Canada.

Two standards for the apple barrel were adopted by the conference. One is the ninety-six quart size common in Nova Scotia, and the other the 112 quart size common in Ontario and most other parts of the country. Another resolution asked that the shippers' stamp on boxes of apples, the number of apples contained.

Speaking in connection with the resolution asking a boost in the tariff on peaches, Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, said the Government had appointed a tariff commission for the express purpose of investigating conditions pertaining to the tariff. He did not think tariff revision would be taken up piecemeal until the report of the committee on condition as a whole had been presented.

May Turn State's Evidence.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 17.—Intimations were said to have been received by the Government yesterday that some of the defendanst in the dynamite conspiracy cases were preparing "to tell all they know."

The statements followed the Government's charges that 40,000 letters and telegrams taken from the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers showed that Frank M. Ryan, the president; H. S. Hockin, the second vice-president, and members of the executive board and business agents conducted the dynamite plots through the mail, pointed out "jobs" to be blown up and maintained a system of destruction against non-union iron and steel contractors.

Asked if any negotiations had been opened with him concerning the defendants, U. S. District Attorney Charles W. Miller said:

"I wouldn't be surprised if it is shown that something like that had happened."

W. N. Harding, counsel for Ryan, and the international officials of the iron workers, held a long conference with Mr. Miller yesterday, but it was not disclosed what was considered.

Between now and the arraignment before Federal Judge Anderson here, on March 12, the Government will proceed with preparations for the trials, which probably will be early in May.

Keeping the flap closed by a rubber cord, a Washington inventor claims to have devised a coin purse that is safer than the usual forms.

THE BEEHIVE — CHARLES N. SULMAN

RUSSIAN GRAIN KING.

Was Queer Character, But His Business Integrity Was High.

Of a peculiar stamp was the man of millions, Nicholas Boukhroff, the Russian grain king, who recently died. In his externals he was a mujik merchant. He wore the top boots, the trader's kaftan—coat and overcoat in one, fitting close up to the neck and reaching to the knees—and the embroidered cotton shirt without starched collar, which are the historic garb of the Volga traders, men who carry as much as 50,000 rubles in notes stuck in the leg of a boot and who distrust the documentary machinery of credit. Boukhroff's great fortune compelled him to handle investments and bank paper, but he was in sympathy with the old simple ways. He was in fact an Old Believer and a devout churchgoer who lived his religion.

In his housekeeping he lived on much the same scale as an ordinary hand worker in comfortable employment. He gave away millions of rubles in charity, but was close fisted in personal outlays. The porters at Nijni-Novgorod and elsewhere avoided him when they saw him step from a train. He would never pay them more than 10 cents for carrying his baggage. When he met great personages he "thoued" them, as he did everybody else, keeping to the Old Believer, Quakerlike form of address. His integrity in business was of the highest.

He would lecture men in his employment if they spent five kopeks needlessly. His patriarchial ways had sometimes a welcome side. He exacted unquestioning obedience to his instructions; but every now and then a man who served him well for some years would receive a draft for 25,000 or 50,000 rubles with no further remark than:

"Thou shalt now be a Man, too. I know that thou wilt make good use of the money."

Canada Buys a Holman Hunt.

The national art gallery at Ottawa has been enriched by a painting by Holman Hunt, of the British Academy. The painting is a portrait of Henry Wentworth Monk, who was born in the Ottawa Valley and who was known as "The Apostle of Peace." He was an intimate friend of the artist, who painted the picture while with Monk in Palestine. The painting was secured from Mrs. Holman Hunt at a moderate price.

Doing Things Regularly.

The Lady—I thought you said you were looking for work?

The Hobo—Well, I am, mum. But I don't want to get it right now. I'm a detective, you see, an' I'm just after clews, to-day.

"Are you at the head of your class in school?"

"Not exactly," answered the sturdy youngster, "but the boy that is at the head of my class in school isn't in my class in football."

Soup made of wasps is regarded as a great delicacy in China.

The Doukhobors, in a row over grain cars with the Galicians, used pieces of lumber with which to batter their opponents, and several heads were cracked. As one of their strongest tenets places a ban on all violence the Doukhobors in question must be breaking away from their old faith and habits and developing into energetic Canadian citizens.—Montreal Gazette.

Eight thousand two hundred and seventy-two homicides were reported in the United States in 1911, with 74 legal and 71 illegal executions. As an American weekly remarks, no wonder they have so many murders, when there is just 1 chance in 112 that a murderer will be executed by law. Swift and sure legal execution is necessary to deter murder on the one hand, and lynching on the other.

China has found a worthy successor to Li Hung Chang in Yuan Shi Kai. He served the Manchus, then flouted them, then served them again, and fought the revolutionists; then dickered with the revolutionists, finally hauled down the flag of the Manchus, and took possession of the revolutionists, becoming the successor of Dr. Sun Yat Sen. The latter will be appointed Chinese archivist, or Secretary of the Labor Bureau.—Mail and Empire.

Of all the conventionalities which hold poor humanity in a relentless grip none are more difficult to bring into harmony with the dictates of experience and common sense than those connected with death and funerals. It has come to be considered a necessary mark of respect for a member of a family who has died to give him or her what has come to be known as a bang-up funeral, with very little regard to the expense or the means of the survivors. Respect for the departed would be more truly manifested by committing him to the earth in the simplest way possible and devoting the needless expenditure to the payment of debts or to the advantage of the living.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Lion's Leaps—Kimberley, Paardeberg and Ladysmith

Up to the beginning of February, 1900, things had gone badly for the British in the great war with the Boers in South Africa. Immediately following the outbreak of hostilities, the Boers, whose forces in the field numbered more than 40,000, began the war of conquest for which they had for several years been planning and preparing. They at once plunged through the passes of the mountains which separate Natal, a British colony, from the eastern frontiers of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, and succeeded in cooping up a British army of 13,000 men under Sir George White in Ladysmith, a small hamlet surrounded by high hills, and completely encircled the place, which they bombarded with heavy artillery from a distance of four miles. On the western side of the field of operations, they laid siege to Kimberley and Mafeking, two villages, the latter of which was to all seemingly defenceless, as it had no regular troops to defend it and only a very few pieces of artillery of an obsolete type. How these two isolated and apparently indefensible places were saved to Britain is another story, which it may be worth while to refer to in a subsequent issue.

• • • •

Meantime how fared it with the British? It was another case of history repeating itself. Seventy-two years previous to the commencement of the Boer war, Sir William Napier, the historian of the Peninsular war, wrote that at the commencement of every great war Britain had to pay in blood for the experience necessary to insure success. And so it was in October, 1899, Britain was totally unprepared for war on a great scale, and the results of that lack of intelligent foresight are above sketched in outline. True, there was some excuse for the supineness of the British military authorities, who had not been informed of the vast preparations made by the Boers, the reports from their intelligence department which contained the necessary information having been placed, unopened, in a pigeon-hole in the War Office by a criminally careless official. Also, there were entirely new conditions to face, which were created by the introduction into modern warfare of long-range quick-firing small arms and artillery, which forever ended fighting in masses and virtually prohibited frontal attacks. Moreover, there was to be dealt with an enemy of previously incredible mobility, because mounted, and who burrowed in the ground like a mole. In spite of these changed conditions the British had achieved some small successes. The forces under Sir George White's direction had beaten the Boers at Dundee and at Elandslaagte and had fought an indecisive action near Ladysmith before they were surrounded and cooped up there. In the western field of operations Lord Methuen's army had won small but important engagements at Belmont, Enslin and the Modder River, but had been repulsed at Magersfontein, where the Boers blocked the road to Kimberley, and had to retire for reorganization and reinforcements. South of the Tugela, General Sir Redvers Buller, who was the commander-in-chief and whose task it was to relieve Ladysmith, had made a rash and inconsiderate attack on the enemy's position at Colenso and had been repulsed with a considerable loss of men and eleven pieces of field artillery. Buller evidned his total incapacity for high command by meekly accepting defeat, as is evidenced by his heliographing Sir George White to evacuate Ladysmith, which had then been besieged for six weeks, destroy his stores and cypher, and, if he found it impossible to cut his way through, to surrender his army of 13,000 men. This pusillanimous proposal was scorned by the gallant soldier to whom it was addressed, and caused such an outburst of popular reprobation in Britain that Buller was at once superceded, and Lord Roberts was appointed commander-in-chief, with General (now Lord) Kitchener as his chief of staff. Buller, who was retained as commander of the army which was designed to relieve Ladysmith, and which was heavily reinforced with men and artillery, made two more ineffectual attacks on the besiegers' covering force at Spion Kop and Vaal Kranz, in which actions he further demonstrated his weakness as a leader.

• • • •

Following the Vaal Kranz affair, offensive operations on the part of the British were suspended, but the Boers on January 6th, 1900, made a determined attack on the Ladysmith position, which was completely repulsed after hard fighting. The enemies of Britain, who were many in Europe, were now jubilant and confidently predicted the downfall of the greatest empire that the world had ever seen; but the lion, who had been merely pinpricked, instead of having received a deadly wound, as those who had been baiting him at a safe distance imagined, was simply resting, while, backed by his numerous progeny, preparing for another spring. How he sprung when the time was ripe is here to be told.

• • • •

Having completed the reorganization of the armies commanded by Buller and Methuen, with the aid of Kitchener, Roberts, who was with Methuen's force, began his advance a little earlier than had been intended, because he had been informed on February 10th that Kimberley was in sore straits and would fall if not relieved within five days. At 1.30 a.m. on the 11th the cavalry division, under General French, started on its long journey. Cronje's army, which had held the Magersfontein position ever since Methuen's retirement, blocked the direct road to Kimberley, so French had to make a long detour in order to scrape past Cronje's flank. The weather was intensely hot and many horses died, but French rode into Kimberley on the 14th at 6.30 p.m.

• • • •

That was the British Lion's first leap, but it was only preliminary to two much more important ones, in which he attacked and routed his foes.

• • • •

"The dark Cronje," that bitter and determined hater of the "Rooineks"—he who had figured conspicuously in the war which led to the disaster to British arms at Majuba on February 27th, 1881, and who was in command of the army which had repelled Methuen's advance two months previously, was so confident of the strength of his position and so contemptuous because of his ignorance of the military ability and fighting qualities of the British, that he was led to regard French's flank movement as a mere feint; so he hung with true Dutch persistence to his kopjes and his trenches, and thereby brought about his own undoing. Having become better informed, however, he commenced his retreat at midnight on the 15th with 5,000 men, an immense number of bullock waggons and some heavy artillery. Although hampered thus, he made extraordinary speed, but French, who had done some successful fighting, succeeded in heading off the Boers, who were thrown into a panic when the British shells began to fall among them just as they were about to begin crossing the Modder River at Paardeberg Drift, fondly imagining that their escape had been successfully made. Here the Boer army was surrounded, and on the 18th was strongly attacked by Kitchener, who commanded in the absence of Robers, who was indisposed on that day. This attack, which was a frontal one, was both costly and unsuccessful, as the British had to advance over the open veldt, and the Boers had perfect cover under the crest of the river's deep banks and the trees which fringed them. The Canadians took a most creditable part in the day's fighting, and all the Belleville boys escaped unhurt, excepting Charles A. Gibson, who was wounded by a Mauser bullet. After desultory fighting and bombardment of the Boer position, which was steadily being rendered untenable by a gradual drawing in of the lines of investment, a final move on the enemy's lair was made on the morning of the 27th by the Canadians under Lieut. Col. Otter, Lieut. Col. Buchan and Major Pelletier, which attack was so gallantly made and was so successful in its results that on the same morning Cronje surrendered unconditionally, with 4,105 men, of whom 150 were wounded. Majuba was avenged, this surrender having taken place on its anniversary.

• • • •

While the operations above sketched were being carried on, Buller at last found the key to Ladysmith by passing around the left flank of the Boers' strong positions at Colenso and Pieters on the Tugela; but here he made the greatest and most disastrous blunder of his career. After attaining a high neck of land called the Monte Cristo ridge, which was fronted by three hills that formed part of the enemy's lines about Ladysmith, but which enfiladed the Pieters position, Buller, instead of advancing along this ridge, descended into the deep valley of the Tugela and attacked Pieters hill and entrenchments, which the enemy were about to abandon in a panic. The result was the decimation of the Irish brigade and many other brave men, and a return to the ridge, along which the British advanced, and, after some hard fighting, captured the hills above referred to and drove the Boers helter-skelter from before Ladysmith, which they had besieged for nearly four months. This notable victory was won on the 27th of February, the day of Cronje's surrender. On the following evening a small party of horsemen, headed by Lord Dundonald, and in the ranks of which was Russell Weller, a Belleville boy, rode into Ladysmith amid the cheers of the gallant garrison.

• • • •

The Lion had made his third leap, and those who had scoffed at Britain a month before were now lost in praise of the incomparable British soldiers and the strength and majesty with which they had fought.

• • • •

The army commanded by Buller had, in the course of ten weeks, taken part in five battles. Of these four had been unsuccessful, namely Colenso, Spion Kop, Vaal Krantz and Pieters', the last named of which had lasted three days and resulted in great loss, the Lancasters losing 35 per cent. of their numerical strength, the Inniskillings 40 per cent. (the same regiment lost 478 out of 698—half of their total number in 20 minutes—at Waterloo) and the Dublin Fusiliers 60 per cent. And yet, the day after the slaughter at Pieters' those same men fought their way through the Boers' extraordinary defences, won their way to victory, and entered Ladysmith in triumph. Could any other soldiers in the world have successfully sustained such an ordeal? The German, Austrian and French officers who were present said that their men could not have done so. And they were right.

• • • •

Is it any wonder that Canada is proud of the record made by its soldiers in Africa and that this Dominion is one of the British Lion's cubs?

$130,000 A MILE—ENORMOUS OUTLAY

Hon. Frank Cochrane Submits Statement to Parliament Showing Ultimate Cost May be $258,000,000

OTTAWA, Feb. 14.—Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, made a statement in the House tonight on the present situation of the National Transcontinental Railway which shows that the cost of that undertaking has climbed far beyond the wildest guesses even of the Conservative critics. The capital cost of the road to January 1, 1914, is $187,781,128.68. With the interest for the seven years extra when the G.T.P. is not bound to pay interest, the estimated capital cost is no less than $236,000,000, or a capital cost of $130,000 per mile.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane said that the length of the line from Moncton to Winnipeg was 1,804 miles; that grading had been completed on 1,587 miles on twenty-one contracts; that track had been laid on 1,378 miles of main line and 278 miles of sidings; that 928 miles of telegraph lines had been constructed and 82.75 per cent. of the bridges had been erected.

The statement of cost of the eastern division of the National Transcontinental Railway, based on the estimated cost submitted by the Chief Engineer at $171,726,000, and on the supposition that it will be completed and handed over to the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Company on January 1, 1914, and that the money could be borrowed at 3 per cent. was as follows:

Interest during construction at 3 per cent. to Dec. 31, 1911, $7,690,-129068; interest on estimated expenditure at 3 per cent. for one year at December 31, 1912, $2,730,000; interest on estimated expenditure at 3 per cent. for one year to December 31, 1913, $4,635,000; estimated cost of completed road, exclusive of interest, on December 31, 1913, $171,726,000; capital cost estimated to January 1, 1914, $187,781,123.68; interest on $187,781,128.68 at 3 per cent. for seven years from January 1, 1914, $39,-434,031; add betterments during nine years from January 1, 1912, unforeseen and unestimated, $7,884,840.32; interest on $7,884,840.32 at 3 per cent., based on expenditure of one-ninth per year, $900,000; capital cost estimated to January 1, 1921, $236,-000,000, or capital cost of $130,800 per mile.

If the road does not earn 3 per cent in excess of working expenses for the three years ending December 31st, 1923, then interest is added to capital for three years longer, adding $22,-050,000 to capital cost, making the capitalized cost of the railway $143,-015 per mile plus expenditure for betterments for 43 years. The capital cost estimated to January 1, 1924, will then be $258,050,000.

If the road is not taken over by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway on January 1, 1914, each year's delay will add interest of about $4,500,000 to the capital cost. It will be noted that in the above calculations interest is not compounded, except at the period the road is supposed to be handed over to the G.T.P., January 1, 1914, and for arriving at the interest, to December 31, 1923.

The Principles of Life.

Whoever studies the principles of of life finds in them a unity which binds together all events, all industries, all joys, sorrows, and interests, and enables him to use them for the good end of improvement. They are not ends in themselves, but means to something higher; they are not life itself, but methods by which we are able to accumulate life. The child looks at each lesson as a separate task to be learned for its own sake; but the mature student sees running through all his studies and connecting them the higher purpose of mental development. So the shallow and thoughtless look at each circumstance of life as something to be welcomed or regreted for itself alone; but the wise man or woman sees that through them all runs a deep principle, the development of true manhood and womanhood and that only as that principle is upheld and cherished can the real value of external experiences be extracted.

ACCIDENTS IN AVIATION.

Mostly Due to Breakdown in Human Machine

All who walk the earth in safety and apparently in a normal condition of health are not physically qualified to be aviators. This is demonstrated by Dr. R. Moulinier who writes as follows

"The rapid ascent to great altitudes exposes the body to conditions different from any terrestral ones. Mountain climbing offers some analogy, but it is different in the fact that the transition from the high atmospheric transition of the sea level to a low pressure takes place much more slowly. The author has reported some interesting observations on the blood pressure of aviators who have ascended to high altitudes. On alighting after ascending to a height of 1200 to 2000 meters the aviator presents cyanosis of the extremities, probably from the low temperature of the high regions of the atmosphere."

This means that the extremities turn a dusky blue color. Often there is congestion of the inner surface of the eyes. The pulse is quickened, but there is no irregularity of the heart's action, nor bleeding from the nose. There is often slight headache and ringing in the ears. Sometimes there is a tendency to sleep, and this may be felt even during flight. Rising to a great height and coming down again always increases th blood pressure, as the writer explains.

Power From Sea Waves.

At the recent meeting of the British Association the question of economical production of power from tides and winds was again under discussion, and it has been taken up widely by scientific journals in Europe. "La Revue Scientifique" calls attention to a system of utiliing the power of sea waves to actuate a dynamo which has been employed during the last six months at the mouth of the river Gironde. An air chamber is connected with a well, which communicates with the sea at a depth below the level of the lowest tides. By the advance and recession of the waves changes of pressure are produced in the air chamber, and a system of valves enables the resulting air currents to be applied to rotating a kind of turbine. It is said that the apparatus works equally well in calm and in stormy weather.

"Very clever, isn't he?"
"Yes."
"I'm told that his three older brothers are mentally weak."
"Yes, he's the original sane fourth."

Judge Ford Quality Yourself

Visit the Toronto automobile show, check up our claims for Ford Quality by Ford Cars themselves. See for yourself the original and exclusive features that have made FORD Model T the most popular and serviceable car in the world. Here are a few facts about Ford cars that you can verify for yourself:

Marvelous simplicity in design. Few parts, but every part in harmony with scientific principle.

Made throughout of Vanadium Steel, scientifically heat-treated, the strongest of all known steels under tensile stress, and against vibration and shock.
Ford Magneto, built into the motor.

No weight on moving parts, assuring durability, economy and long service.

Ford spring suspension. The axles are attached to the car at the extreme point of the springs, thus giving the utmost flexibility, smoothness in riding and least wear on tires.

Ford Rear Axle—Look at it, no weight but its own to carry; think of the saving in wear this means to the rear tires.

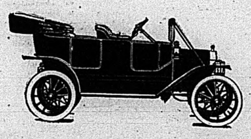
Simplicity in operation. The movement of the car may be controlled by the feet, the hands need never be taken from the steering wheel.

Light Weight. FORD Model T is the lightest in weight of any four-cylinder car in the world, size, power and capacity considered. It has 60 pounds to the horsepower.

Accessibility. Every part of the mechanism of FORD Model T is easily accessible.

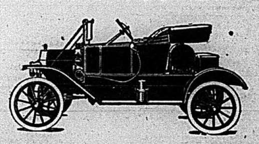
Cheapest to Maintain. FORD Model T is an exceedingly economical car to keep. It goes from 25 to 30 miles on one gallon of gasoline. It is equally economical with oil, and gives from 5000 to 8000 miles on one set of tires.

No Ford Cars are Sold Unequipped. When you buy a Model T you get the whole car.



$850 FORD Model T Touring Car, 4 Cylinders, 5 passengers, completely equipped as follows: Extension Top; Speedometer; Automatic Brass Windshield; Two 6-inch Lamps, Generator; Three Oil Lamps; Horn and Tools; Ford Magneto built into the motor.

This splendid Touring Car for $850, F. O. B. Walkerville.



$775 FORD Model T Torpedo, 4 Cylinders, 2 passengers, completely equipped as follows: Extension Top; Speedometer; Automatic Brass Windshield; Two 6-inch Gas Lamps; Generator; Three Oil Lamps; Horn and Tools; Ford Magneto built into the motor.

This car thus fully equipped for $775, F. O. B. Walkerville.

$875 FORD Model T Delivery Car, 4 Cylinders; the regular Vanadium Steel constructed chassis which has made the FORD Model T world-famous; Steel Body, giving roomy interior. Capacity, 750 pounds of merchandise. Complete equipment as follows: Automatic Brass Windshield; Speedometer; Two 6-inch Gas Lamps; Generator; Three Oil Lamps; Horn and Tools; Ford Magneto built into the motor.

And the car complete as above, costs only $875 F. O. B. Walkerville.

$1100 FORD Model T Town Car (foredoor detachable), 6 passengers, 4 Cylinders, 20 horsepower car, completely equipped with Speedometer; Two 6-inch Gas Lamps; Generator; Three Oil Lamps; Horn and Tools.

Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar

In a 5-Pound Sealed Package"

"Of course I have always bought Redpath Sugar, as my mother did before me, because it is the purest, whitest sugar I have ever been able to buy. But this new Sealed Package is the finishing touch of cleanliness, and if I had never used Redpath Sugar before, I would certainly try the new Package."

The new Redpath Sealed Package is designed for just such discriminating people, who not only want the best sugar, but want it in the best possible condition.

Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar is first refined to absolute purity. Then, without being once touched by human hand, it is packed by automatic machinery and sealed air-tight in the 5-Pound Cartons. Thus in its trip to the wholesale warehouse, the retail store, and finally to your home, Redpath Sugar is perfectly protected from any taint or impurity. It comes to you as fresh and as clean as when it left the refinery.

Each Carton, automatically weighed, contains full Five Pounds of Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar. If you have been buying sugar by the bag or barrel, you will find a case of 24 Five-Pound Packages much more convenient in the pantry. Of course your grocer will still sell you Redpath Extra Granulated in bulk or in 20 lb. cotton bags as before if you prefer.

The New Boarder Again.

"For ten eyars," said the new boarder at a Montreal boarding-house, "my habits were as regular as clockwork. I rose on the stroke of six; half an hour later I sat down to breakfast; at seven I was at work, dined at twelve, ate supper at six, and was in bed at nine-thirty; ate only hearty food, and hadn't a sick day in all that time." "Dear me!" said th edeacon in sympathetic tones, "and what were you in for?" An awful silence ensued.

Rough on Josefa

Dispatches from Berlin say: Rosa Blachek, one of the Siamese twins, who lately appeared at a Paris music hall, was arrested by the police to-day on a charge of breaking her contract. Her sister, Josefa, was, of course, obliged to accompany her to jail, and complains that though innocent she has to share the imprisonment.

All He Was Fit For.

A forlorn Irishman, reduced to the last stage of poverty and destitution as the last resource made inquiry at a marine store as follows:

"D'ye buy rags and bones here?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Then, be jabers," said Pat, "ye may put me on the scales."

The Reason.

Benevolent Old Gentleman: "Johnny, why was Damocles afraid to eat his dinner when the sword was suspended over his head by a single hair?"

Johnny (who does not like being patronized): I s'pose he was afraid the hair would fall into his soup."

A Progressive.

"Madame, dot girl of yours make great progress mit her moosic. Before she was always two or dree notes behint me, and now she is always two or dree notes ahead."

SEEKING TO BOOM CANADA IN LAND OF THEIR ANCESTORS

(From our own correspondent).

MONTREAL, Feb. 15.—The formation of a Franco-Canadian committee in Paris for the development of Canadian resources is the latest move made by business men here to attract money and people from the old land to the new. This time the campaign is to be centered on France, but the proceeds will in no case be confined to the Province of Quebec. The move was started here by the Chambre de Commerce, a semi-official body, which in French-Canadian trade circles coincides with the Montreal Board of Trade.

Readers of history will remember that after the capitulation of Quebec to the English many French families returned to old France rather than live under the British flag, and since that time immigration into this country from France has been nothing compared to the number of people who have come from Italy, the Austrian states, Russia and Sweden. And it is generally known that the better French families which remained in this country after the victory of Wolfe remaned here only because they had not the wherewithal to get away, and that they and their descendants have been more or less unsettled and discomfitted up to within twenty-five or thirty years ago. The cry of the French in Canada to their relatives and friends in France was: "Stay where you are. Canada is a barren land."

Now times have changed. The French Canadians are prospering and living in peace and harmony. Instead of wanting to get out of Canada themselves their desire is to bring others of their stock here. The present move is entirely aside from any Government immigration scheme and was brought about by the French Canadians themselves realizing the vast possibilities which Canada possesses.

DOCTORS GET PAID LAST.

The recent discussion here of the need of a readjustment of the scale of physicians' fees, if they are to be anywhere near in keeping with the higher cost of living, has given rise to an interesting inquiry to discover if possible what bills are the last to be paid by the average citizen. A decade ago when the joke about the tailor's bill was at its height, it was pretty generally admitted that the collections of the clothes makers held the record for slowness, and that more ways of procrastination in the settlement of these bills were practiced than in connection with others. The butcher, the baker and other dealers in the necessities of life had a fairly effective method of securing settlement by refusing credit and consequently a further food supply, while the tailor, with no such means at hand at that time got his pay last now it is generally admitted that his now it is generally admitted that his place has been taken by the doctor or even the dentist, and there seems to be little relief in sight for either. Organization among the tailors made possible a more effective system of credits and collections. Unfortunately for the doctors, however, no such method is open to them, and the same applies in a lesser degree to the dentist, for while the tailor can decline the trade of an undesirable customer no doctor would refuse to treat a sick or suffering person, regardless of the chance of ever receiving a fee. With this condition staring him in the face, coupled with the advancing cost of living, the medical man seems likely to continue to find his bill the last to be paid for some time to come, unless a more general realization of the situation is brought about.

GLASS HEELS FOR LADIES.

The very latest thing in feminine attire to reach Montreal is the cut glass heel, which, say the leading purveyors of so-called smart fashions, must adorn the shoes of every woman who wishes to be correctly dressed. Furthermore, these heels to be really proper will be decorated with the most elaborate cut designs and bear the monogram of the wearer. The new decree does not, however, insist on the scintillating heels for street wear, since this would be obviously impossible. Their use is intended only in conection with evening attire. Even with this limitation, however, at first glance it would seem that the popularity of the cut glass heel is doubtful. However, Montreal has see nthe arrival, adoption and disappearance of so many weird styles in feminine dress during the last few years, some of them no more extravagant or uncomfortable than the cut glass heels promise to be, that it is by no means a certainty that they may not enjoy their brief and painful season of popularity. If such proves to be the case, however, it will probably become necessary to carry about an extra heel just as the automobilist carries a spare tire, for the chance of heel fracture, and an abrupt end to further locomotion would seem to be at least equal to the chance of puncture which the motorist runs.

"Worse than that," answered the other. "I not only have to turn the grindstone, but I have to lend him the axe."

IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

THE SOUND OF OUR VOICE

Experiments Support Contention That Everyone Hears His Own Voice Differently From Others.

That a man does not hear his own voice as all the rest of the world hears it is shown by an interesting experiment described by Dr. L. Laby in La Nature (Paris). Says this writer:

"If a person records on a phonograph a few sentences pronounced by himself, together with others by his friends, and causes the machine to reproduce these at the end of a brief period, it generally happens that he easily recognizes his friends' voices, but not his own. On the other hand, the friends recognize his voice perfectly. This singular fact proves that every one hears his own voice differently from others.

"As is remarked by Professor Exner, the difference must lie in the quality of tone. It must be remembered that one hears his own voice not only through the air, as do his auditors, but across the solid parts situated between the organs of speech and those of hearing. The sound thus produced has a different timbre from that conducted to the ear by air alone.

"We may show this as follows: Take the end of a wooden rod between the teeth and pronounce a vowel continuously. Let the other end be alternately taken between the teeth and released by another person, who at the same time stops his ears. The latter will find that every time he seizes the rod in his teeth the sound becomes stronger than when it reaches his ear through air alone, and has a different quality. The experiment may be varied by applying a wooden rod to the larynx of the person observed and touching it, from time to time, to the observer's own larynx. As in the preceding case, it will be found that its passage through a solid body augments the itnensity of the sound and modifies its quality."

SOUND IN THE UNIVERSE.

We live and move at the bottom of an ocean of air, the earth's atmosphere. One consequence of this is that every mechanical disturbance starts waves of compression and rarefaction, which radiate out from the source, and, striking the drum of our ear, may (if of the right strength and quality) cause in us the sensation of "sound." Among such sensations some affect us merely as "noises"; in others we recognize a more or less well-defined "musical pitch," and "tone quality." Physically the "noise" differs from the "musical note" in that the former is an irregular disturbance, while the latter is periodic and of definite frequency. Not that there is any hard and fast line of demarkation; a rapid succession of impulses, which separately would be mere noises, may impress the ear with a definite sense of pitch. Thus the teeth of a saw, cutting in rapid sequence through a wooden board, produce a sound of definite pitch, though lacking perhaps in musical quality. Or, again, a sharp noise of brief duration, proceeding from a point in the neighbourhood of a series of equidistant obstacles, such as a line of fence-rails, or a flight of stone steps, produces upon the observer a sensation in which a more or less well-defined pitch can be recognized. The explanation of this phenomena is that the sound is reflected back from each fence-rail in turn, and since it takes time to travel, each echo reachs the observer a trifle later than that from the neighbouring rail.

To Make Light in a Bottle.

A safe light for going about at night or where there are inflammable materials, as into a store-room, may be made as follows: Take a long glass bottle and put into it a piece of phosphorus the size of a pea; upon this pour pure olive oil heated to the boiling point until this bottle is about one-third full and cork tightly. When light is needed take the cork out and allow the air to enter, subsequently recorking. The empty space in the bottle will then become luminous [illegible] give quite an effective light. If it becomes dim it can easily be revived by uncorking the bottle for a few seconds. One bottle will last a whole winter. Small bottles may also be prepared in this way and carried in the pocket.

Small but Strong.

The Katydid, which is closely allied to the grasshopper family, is something of a hauler for its avoirdupois. Recently, an average looking specimen was harnessed to a kind of sledge made by folding a piece of ordinary notepaper, and then loaded the sledge with various articles. The insect proved able to draw, in addition to the original paper, twelve paper sheets each three by four and a half inches, a large screw, two steel pens, a stone weighing two ounces, and three and a half lead pencils. When the weight became too heavy to draw otherwise the katydid got its fore feet over the edge of the table for a better hold, and on addition of another weight it increased the adhesive power of its feet by moistening them in its mouth.

How Deserts are Formed

There is a popular idea that deserts like the Sahara are the bottoms of ancient seas which have been lifted above their original elevation by geological forces. This notion is an erroneous one. It is absolutely certain, high authorities contend, that the sands of all the great deserts have been formed on the spot by the disintegration of the solid rocks on which they rest. Desert sands correspond in all respects, so far as their mode of origin is concerned, to the dust and sand that accumulates on our high roads in summer. All deserts are situated where the winds from the ocean, before reaching them, are exhausted of their moisture by passing over mountains or across extensive tracts of land.

BELGIAN CHILDREN.

Parents share their Pleasures with Offspring.

This delight in the family life is characteristic of all Belgians. One sees in Brussels and Antwerp monsieur promenading in the boulevard or the bois with a cigar in his mouth; madame leaning on his arm and the children, hand in hand, walking sedately under the proud eye of their parents.

One finds children in the restaurants and children in the music halls. The pleasures of father and mother are shared always with the nursery. To go junketing without the children would appear to the Belgian not only selfish but dull. His happiness is the happiness of his children. He sees the circus half with his own eyes and half with theirs. The toyshops and bookshops in Brussels tell of th paramount part played by the child. The happiness of this people is the pleasure of domesticity.

More Widows than Widowers.

The proportion of remarriages shows an almost continuous decrease, says the registrar-general in his report on the births, deaths and marriages in England and Wales during 1909.

The number of of widows, he states, is always much greater than that of widowers, because in the first place men marry later in life than women; secondly, because the duration of male life is shorter than that of female life, and thirdly, because the proportion of widows who remarry is much lower than the proportion of widowers who remarry.

Marriages of persons described as divorced have steadily increased and in the year 1909 were the highest on record.

ARE THE MEN THE WEAKER SEX?

Women Gaining Muscular Supremacy.

A college professor expresses the conviction that women are gaining the muscular supremacy over men. He attributes this to their taking a more active interest in outdoor sports, while the men are becoming indolent in that respect, and prefer being spectators to participants in athletic exercises. With their admitted superiority in all the arts and graces, including fluency of expression, and to add to this physical predominance, there seems to be little left for mere man but to plod unostentatiously along in the ranks of the producers, and continue to pass up his gross earnings to his mental and physical superior every Saturday.

MAKING OF CARPETS.

They Were First Used in Europe to Cover Tables.

The primary use of carpets in Europe was to cover tables. The first of these so-called carpets were embroidered—not woven—fabrics, and were made in French cloisters about 1,000 years ago. The manufacture of carpets in Europe did not begin until the reign of Henry IV. of France. In England the industry was established about 1750 by a French artisan, who being at odds with his own country, fled thither.

Carpet-making, as a modern industry, was first developed in France. That country had large factories and a monopoly in Europe of the art of carpet-weaving when a rush-strewn floor was the rule even in the royal palaces of Britain. But the edict of Nantes, that great dispenser of French artisans and artistry, caused many of the carpet craftsmen to cross the channel. They settled at Bristol, Axminster and other places in the southwest of England. From there the secrets of the industry spread to Glasgow, Kidderminster and the towns of Yorkshire. These places are still the great carpet-weaving centres of Great Britain.

Throat Becomes Diseased from NeglectinG Colds

THEN CATARRH SETS IN, MUCOUS DROPS INTO THE STOMACH, COUGHING, HEADACHES AND DEBILITY FOLLOW.

That the best method of curing catarrhal disease consists in using Catarrhozone is now freely admitted. Catarrhozone is infinitely superior to cough medicines, tablets, sprays and emulsions, which for the most part are of no practical value except to ease the cough for the time being. Often liquid cough remedies contain opium, morphine and cocaine. With Catarrhozone you take no drugs—you employ Nature's way—just inhale Catarrhozone's soothing healing vapor and relief and cure follow promptly.

WEAK THROAT RACKING COUGH CURED.

"For five years I suffered from a severe bronchitis. A harsh, dry racking cough kept my throat in a raw condition from one year's end to another. Before going to sleep at night I always had a bad attack, and in the morning before each breakfast I suffered greatly. My voice was harsh and raspy, and sometimes I found it difficult to make myself understood. Catarrhozone seemed to soothe and heal from the first day. It cured me, and now I wouldn't think of being without a Catarrhozone Inhaler—it means life to me."

The above experience is related by Mr. Alexander P. Avary of Hamilton, Pa., and proves the effectiveness of Catarrhozone, which will cure every cough, cold, bronchial or catarrhal attack. The dollar size of Catarrhozone contains two months' treatment and is guaranteed. Smaller size 50c, sample size 25c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

HOLD-UP IN TORONTO

Masked Men Bind Cashier and Foreman to Chairs.

Safe Is Looted of Four Hundred Dollars at Standard Chemical Works by Two Desperadoes—Employes of the Firm Are Held at Point of a Gun and Then Tied to Their Chairs—Phone Broken.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Lurking outside in the dark until all the drivers had turned in their collections, two men, with faces concealed, at 7.30 last night entered the office of the Standard Chemical at the foot of John street, leveled revolvers at the cashier and knocked the night foreman down, unconscious. They then robbed the safe of $400, tied the two men to chairs and departed into the night.

Early this morning the detectives had not located the hold-up men, who had plenty of time to jump on a passing train and make their way out of the city.

The cashier, J. W. Mayo, 481 Brock avenue, a man of about fifty years, was just preparing to close up the day's work when the two robbers entered. Both wore woolly caps such as tobogganists wear, pulled down over the back of the head and fastened around at the front just below the nose. These caps were effectual as masks.

With Cashier Mayo was Geo. Ross, night superintendent of the plant. They were told to hold up their hands. Despite the fact that two guns were threatening them, Ross demurred.

"We mean business. You'll get killed if you don't put up your hands." Ross hesitated, was struck on the head with a billy and dropped to the floor stunned.

Stripping the safe, which had not yet been locked, of all the cash within and gathering up some money lying on a desk, one of the robbers stuffed his pockets with small bills and $50 in silver, while the other kept his eyes and his gun on Mayo and the stirring foreman, who was struggling back to consciousness.

The money secured, the robbers bound the foreman and cashier to chairs, tying the knots tightly and with care.

"There's other men outside and they'll be there for twenty minutes. Don't move," said the robbers, as they started for the door.

One turned back, and as an added precaution, tore the telephone from the wall.

About half an hour later a watchman on his rounds visited the office and found the two men still tied, although they had squirmed and twisted and tried in every way to release each other.

Within ten minutes every police station in the city was warned to keep a sharp watch on every likely spot, and all the detectives were away scouring the city.

SIX PERSONS INJURED

C.P.R. Train is Wrecked Near Chatsworth, Ont.

Mail Clerk Fulton May Die as a Result of a Spread Rail Disaster on the Owen Sound-Toronto Line at Dead Man's Cut—Engineer Little's Presence of Mind Saved Them From Worse Accident.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Running downgrade at forty miles an hour, C.P.R. train 708, bound from Owen Sound to Toronto, jumped the rails and was hurled down an embankment at Dead Man's Cut, near Chatsworth, yesterday afternoon, and six persons were more or less seriously injured. The train was due in Toronto at 7.50 last night, but did not arrive till after midnight. All the victims were men, and one may die. The cause of the wreck was a defective rail. The victims are:

Mail Clerk Fulton of Toronto, may die.

Arthur Shane, Toronto, badly injured internally, two ribs having pierced lungs. Taken to Orangeville hospital.

F. J. McNabb, architect, 23 Winchester street, Toronto, scalp wound and broken nose. Taken to Western Hospital.

Russell Savage, 30 Rolyat street, Toronto, scalp wounds, legs badly bruised. Taken to Western Hospital.

H. O. Parks, mail clerk, 242 Seaton street, Toronto, broken leg and badly shaken up. Taken to Western Hospital.

Harold Harshaw, West Toronto, back injured. Taken home.

Conductor Hines and Engineer Little, both of Toronto, were in charge of the train. Probably the presence of mind of Little averted a more serious catastrophe. The moment the rails spread and the wheels were on the ties he applied the brakes, but just gradually, fearing that to do otherwise might cause telescoping of the cars. As it was all the coaches, numbering five, cleared the rails, the mail and one passenger car going down a 25-foot embankment. The engine and the other coaches, although clearing the rails, lay partially on their sides.

Word of the derailment reached the C.P.R. office at 4.30, and an auxiliary was immediately despatched from West Toronto to the scene of the wreck. A train was taken north from Walkerton and the passengers and badly smashed baggage were transferred to it and brought to Toronto, arriving at the Union Station at 12.20 this morning. Two ambulances were in waiting, which immediately conveyed four of the injured to the Western Hospital.

When Parks was being removed from the baggage car on a stretcher one of the ambulance corps slipped on the ice, resulting in him being thrown to the pavement. He was picked up unconscious. Shane was taken off at Orangeville, being so badly injured that it was not thought advisable to bring him to the city. Two ribs pieced his lungs, and he is in a very precarious condition.

Fulton and Parks were mail clerks and Shane was a baggageman.

The engineer and firemen stuck to their posts and came out scathless.

STILL FORMING POLICY.

Rowell Says He Is Thinking Hard About Temperance.

London, Feb. 17.—Mr. N. W. Rowell, leader of the Ontario Opposition, spoke before a big gathering of Liberals here last night.

The meeting was opened somewhat late, owing to the train on which Mr. Rowell arrived having been delayed.

The retiring president, Mr. George S. Gibbons, opened the meeting with a short speech.

Mr. Rowell was loudly cheered. He told how he had made his start in political life in this city, and said they could see that he was back at it as vigorously as twenty-two years ago. He paid a tribute to the group of men at his back in Toronto, and expressed peculiar gratification over the return of Mr. Robert Sutherland, M.P.P., for his native constituency of East Middlesex. He told how Mr. Sutherland had already got the Government to move in legislation for the advantage of the horse-breeding industry. While the seven sleepers sleep at Toronto, still by persistent prodding they could be made to move, and he said a good service was being rendered the country by the educational campaigns that were being launched, and he urged upon Londoners to develop the London Liberal Club, which could be an influence not only in the city, but throughout the district.

The speaker elicited applause when he said that Sir James Whitney was omniscient and omnipotent. What he did not know was not worth knowing, and what he could not do was not worth doing.

A good deal of interest was being manifested in what the temperance policy of the Liberal party would be. Mr. Rowell recalled how prior to the late elections the announcement had been made that this serious problem would be carefully considered during the next Legislature, and the best form of legislation to remedy the liquor evil decided upon, when the Liberals would stand or fall by the policy to be adopted.

Progressive legislation for the betterment of the people would be advocated, and he believed the people would when the opportunity came tell the present Government to step aside and let the Liberals give the province that government which would give back to Ontario the proud position of the leading Province in Canada, which it held in the days of Oliver Mowat.

London, Feb. 17.—The quarterly return of births which is just published, states that the births registered in England and Wales for the fourth quarter of 1911, numbered 209,269. The birth rate is the lowest recorded for any fourth quarter since the establishment of civil registration.

TO CURB LOAN SHARKS

Hon. J. J. Foy Introduces Bill Respecting Money-Lenders.

They Are Forced to Register Within a Month After Law Is Effective and Any Unjust Transaction May Be Cancelled by a Court—Hon. Mr. Hanna Replied to Questions of the Opposition.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—Hon. W. J. Hanna bore the brunt of all the discussion in the Legislature yesterday. Hon. A. G. MacKay objected to a clause in the House of Refuge Act in which the punishment of inmates was left to the officials of the institution. Under the act, which was framed up by a committee of judges, the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council was never mentioned as having any authority in the matter. Sir James Whitney expressed surprise that such a regulation should prevail in a British country. He said the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council undoubtedly should be held responsible on all matters of this kind.

Mr. Hanna also had to account for a clause in the Health Act whereby compulsory vaccination for smallpox was enforced, on the recommendation of the medical health officer. Hon. A. G. MacKay contended that in cases where the M. H. O. was a responsible man, the rule would hold good, but in other cases where suspicion of a disease, being smallpox had brought about a scare in the neighborhood, he did not think it justifiable that the whole community should be subjected to compulsory vaccination, or the alternative of a fine of $25. He recommended that the matter be left to the chief medical health officer.

Mr. Hanna said the present law was being enforced, and it would be better to take one step at a time.

Hon. W. H. Hearst introduced a bill to amend the Algonquin National Park Act. It provides that during the the construction and after the completion of any railway passing through the Algonquin National Park, the Minister may appoint as many rangers, officers or guardians as he may see fit, for the protection of the fish, animals and birds, and of any other property or interest of the crown or the public therein. The expense and salaries in connection with the new system of protection must be paid by the railways. The money is to be a debt to the crown from the railway company, and is recoverable in any court of competent jurisdiction.

Hon. Mr. Foy introduced a bill respecting money lenders. It provides that where, in respect of money lent, the court finds that the cost of the loan is excessive, the court may order that the transaction be reopened, and notwithstanding any settlement or agreement to settle, may relieve the debtor from payment of any sum in excess of that adjudged as fair. It may order a creditor to repay any such excess, and may set aside, either wholly or in part, any security given in respect to the money lent. If the creditor has parted with the security, the court may order him to indemnify the debtor. The act provides that the powers may be exercised in any action by a creditor for the recovery of money lent and action by the debtor or an action in which the amount due or about to become due is in question. The act is not retroactive.

A clause provides that every money-lender shall be registered within one month after the act goes into force, and no person may carry on the business of a money-lender or enter into any agreement for money lending who is not registered. A penalty not exceeding $200 for the first offence, and on the second offence, imprisonment for six months, or in case of a corporation a penalty of $1,000 is provided. No prosecution for an offence under this bill shall be commenced without the consent of the Attorney-General. A penalty not exceeding $500 is provided for any money-lender who by false or misleading statements or promises induces any person to borrow money. The Government may direct the suspension of any person who has been convicted of an offence.

Mr. Rowell gives notice of a bill to be introduce on Tuesday next to regulate the hours of employment in underground work. The object is to prevent men working for more than eight hours out of the twenty-four, which will include the time descending and ascending to and from the scene of labor. In the case of emergency or imminent danger to life or property, the hours of labor may be extended. Any one who persuades, commands or allows labor to work in contravention of this act may be liable to fine or imprisonment.

Mr. Rowell gives notice that he will enquire of the Ministry as to how many petitions were presented to the Legislature or the Government in each of the years 1909, 1910, 1911, asking for legislation enabling municipalities to levy a lower rate upon improvements than that levied upon lands, or to fix the assessment valuation of improvements at less than their real value.

A Welland Canal Route.

Ottawa, Feb. 17.—The Hon. Frank Cochrane was waited upon yesterday afternoon by a deputation of interests from Brantford and Dunnville urging upon him the advantage of a route from Port Maitland to Jordan Harbor for the proposed enlarged Welland Canal. They claimed that it would mean a saving of distance, less rock excavation, earlier opening of the harbors, in the spring, owing to the existence of natural currents. They also urged that it would mean a saving of distance.

The Minister of Railways promised to refer the matter to the Department for a preliminary enquiry.

Local Option In Manitoba.

Winnipeg, Feb. 17.—Yesterday a large delegation from the Moral Reform Council, representing all the churches in the province, called on the Government and presented a lengthy petition for the submission of a local option vote in Manitoba.

The plan favored by the council will permit of the continuance of the wholesale liquor stores, which is less drastic than the usual temperance demand.

The Government advised the delegation that the subject would receive consideration.

Hebert Decision Monday.

Montreal, Feb. 17.—After court closed last evening Judge Charbonneau announced that he would be ready to give the Hebert marriage decision on Saturday morning. Mr. G. V. Cousins, chief counsel for Mrs. Hebert, found, however, that he would be obliged to be out of town to-day, and persuaded the judge to postpone the delivery of his judgment till Monday morning at 10.30 o'clock.

"GIVE SIKHS A CHANCE."

Rev. Dr. Wilkie Urges Justice for British East Indians.

Toronto, Feb. 17.—"Give the Sikh a chance and he will make good in Canada. The law which excludes this class of people from British Columbia is a huge farce because of its unjust, unfair interpretation." Speaking to the Women's Canadian Club in the Guild Hall yesterday afternoon, Rev. Dr. Wilkie, for thirty years a missionary in India, endeavored to prove that these British subjects should be given different treatment at the hands of the Federal Government. He declared that it was an outrage that Japanese and Chinese should be allowed to enter Canada and the wives of Sikhs barred. He advocated entire Asiatic exclusion if one class was favored.

Classing them as fabrications and misinterpretations, Dr. Wilkie scored the newspaper stories which had characterized the Sikhs in Vancouver as seditionists and unworthy of any consideration. He wondered why families should be separated by an unjust law, and he strongly favored the admission of wives of Sikhs. Of the very few thousand settled in British Columbia, he said 300 were engaged in farming and 500 in dairying, which proved, in his estimation, that the class was not worthless. The province in the extreme west was practically unknown and needed cultivators badly.

"Sikhs as a body with whom I have worked for years, can be trusted," quoth he. "I have learned to love and admire them. In some cases they are not desirable citizens, but they can be easily cultivated into good men and women. They are the same stock from which we sprang. They are our equals in this regard, and they will be our equals in citizenship if given the opportunity."

He believed that the immigration officer of Vancouver was responsible and not the Ottawa authorities. If the people knew the facts he considered the monstrous wrong would be set right. There were only two courses—deport the whole crowd or eliminate the unnatural inhuman, immoral position of the Sikhs in Canada by allowing wives to join husbands. The present conditions caused the severance of home relations.

"India was won for the Empire by the Sikhs," he said. "These people are called brothers when there's a fight, but seditionists and niggars when they want a little concession."

Britain Prevails.

Madrid, Feb. 17.—A most important step in advance has been taken in the negotiations between Spain and France on the subject of Morocco. The Spanish Government yesterday accepted the British proposition in regard to the collection of customs, the proceeds of which are to be applied to the liquidation of the Moroccan loans from 1904-1910.

Spain had entered a decided objection to the collection of the customs by the French acting as the representatives of the holders of the loans.

The British proposal provides for the appointment of a Franco-Spanish commission composed of six experts, and this body is to be empowered to settle all questions relative to the Moroccan customs.

The only remaining question of importance between France and Spain with regard to Morocco is that of the territorial compensations which are to be made to Spain.

DUNLOP Traction Tread

Another Opinion:

"I have driven Dunlop Traction Tread tires over four months to my entire satisfaction. I find them genuine Anti-Skids. They have proven safe and sure for all conditions of wet and dry roads. The tires do not show the slightest wear as yet. I regard Dunlop Traction Treads as trouble proof. It is almost impossible to puncture them, due to the thickness and shape of the corrugations. I also think the absence of friction will add to the life of the gum. The thick corrugations add to the resiliency of the tire and make the car more comfortable."

DARING ROBBERY IN PARIS STREETS.

Mounted on Bicycles, Gang Broke Into Jewelry Store in Broad Daylight.

PARIS, Feb. 17.—Boulogne-sur-Seine, a suburb of Paris, was the scene to-day of an audacious robbery by a gang of highwaymen who were mounted on bicycles. The men invaded the street in broad daylight alighted in front of a big jewelry store, and after smashing the windows grabbed a lot of booty. The people passing in the street began shouting for the police, whereupon one of the highwaymen threw a powerful bomb into the crowd. Fortunately the bomb failed to explode. On seeing this the robbers pulled out revolvers and frightened the crowd and the police back. They then escaped with booty valued at 200,000 francs, or $40,000.

The Paris police are positive that this is part of an international gang of highwaymen, who are operating here and in New York and Berlin.

PERMANENT PAVEMENTS CRITICALLY CONSIDERED

An Open Letter to the City Council and Property Owners of Belleville.

I understand that your city are proposing to lay considerable permanent pavements on your roadways in Belleville.

Having been closely identified with the paving industry for the past ten years, I wish to tender a little advice to your city before committing themselves to any so-called patent pavements. I have acted as sales agent for the Ontario Asphalt Block Co. of Windsor for the past six years and have given close study to this pavement, watching it under all conditions of traffic, and I must say from close observation that it is failing to give the satisfaction which I thought it would when taking up the sale of this material. The standard thickness of that pavement is three inches, having for its wearing stone a conglomerate rock otherwise known as copper stone. This block is very heavy. To enable the manufacturer to get into a market he reduces the thickness of the block to 2½ inches and uses a light soft limestone in the mixture when considerable freight will be saved. But those familiar with the rock creation will admit that it has not the wearing qualities of the hard conglomerate rock. It is better to throw up a sales agency that to fool all the people all of the time; but when the agent is fooled by the substitution then it is time to register opposition with a capital 'O'. Most of the cities outside of Toronto spread their debentures over a period of 15 to 20 years. I say without fear of contradiction that a 2½ inch asphalt block will not last that term in a roadway with heavy traffic. Indede, where there are car tracks, you will have the repair gang kept busy after five years. And right here in Toronto there is a street full of holes which has been down about four years. I wish it to be distinctly understood that I am not interested in any paving company whatever and wish to point out that there are only two known pavements to-day that will stand that long debenture period and even longer. They are a wire-cut-lug vitrified block and a treated wood block of Douglas fir, white pine or long leaf yellow pine, treated under standard specification of 20 pounds of preservative to the cubic yard of wood. If your city in paving will specify wirecut-lug vitrified block you will have a pavement that will last you 30 years if laid under standard specifications. This make of vitrified block will wear perfectly smooth and will not be noisy like the re-pressed levelled block. Use a good pitch expansive joint at the curb and it will not raise. All the big cities in the United States are specifying wirecut-lug but if a creosoting plant is in operation in Canada then the consideration should be treated wood. If your Board of Works, before finally passing on this matter would journey to Toronto without any paving agent or hired tout accompanying them, and interview the Roadway Branch of the City Engineer's Department, where they have had a varied experience of many years, covering all classes of pavement, I think the advice that would be given would follow the above classes of pavement. The wire-cut-lug vitrified block would be laid cheaper than asphalt block and the wearing surface would be 4 inches against 2½ inches. Less concrete could be laid under a wire-cut-lug block than the other. Enquire of St. Catharines, Chatham, Stratford, Guelph and Dundas Street Toronto. Get opinions as to asphalt block from these places and you will find that they can't repeat, unless they do it two or three years after laying. This is a plain unvarnished statement coming from one who sold the block asphalt bitulithic, and from personal knowledge of the mixture and of other kinds, and every word can be substantiated, which should have an influence with your Council in deciding what the pavement shall be.

Yours truly,
FRANK B GOODMAN,
464 Markham St., Toronto.

STOLEN HALF MILLION.

Widow of Bank Wrecker Says She'll Make Restitution.

CHICAGO, Feb. 16.—A woman registered at a hotel here as Mrs. Theresa K. Batten, of New York, said that she is on her way from Reno, Nev., to New York to pay back $500,000 to those from whom it had been stolen.

Mrs. Batten said she once had been the wife of David Rothschild, president, and confessed wrecker of two New York banking institutions, who died in Sing Sing in 1907. She said it was her purpose to restore the half million dollars to the depositors of these institutions, the Federal Bank of New York and the Globe Securities Company.

MR. FLINT DISCUSSES RECENT THEATRICALS

He Is Much Pleased With the Productions Recently Staged in Belleville

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

My Dear Sir,—I believe that the Griffin management should be congratulated upon the character of the plays recently produced by them.

Three plays within the last few years have been received with much enthusiasm—"Every Man," "Passing of the Third Floor Back," and the play of last evening, "The Servant in the House." While the motive in the last two plays mentioned is of the same exalted character, the action is entirely different

Forbes Robertson's spirituelle countenance, his gracefulness of pose and remarkable voice, went a very long way towards achieving his world-wide fame in the "Passing of the Third Floor Back." Tyrone Power's role is entirely different, and one which calls for a display of dramatic talent of the highest order. Mr. Power has surrounded himself with a company of stars. There was not a weak or defective feature, (so far as I could judge), in any of them. The play may be described as a strong play. In the scene where the young girl discovers her father and believes him to be a thief, the poor, broken, drunken scavenger, loving his child with all a father's love, but feeling that she would loathe and despise him, dares not reveal himself, was most touching. Aside from Mr. Power's role, the actor personating the "Servant in the House" has the most exacting part. It is said that in portraying this character, that the actor is intended to represent a priest. The criticism is not correct. The actor is a Bishop, although for a time, a servant. As a Bishop, familiar with the life and teachings of a priest, he follows in the footsteps of his divine Master, and takes in every place of trial, the stand which he believes Christ would take. I have no recollection of seeing a higher class play. Assuredly, no more beautiful woman has been seen on the stage than the lady who personated the wife of the clergyman of the parish. The play was better and more effective than any sermon could be. No one could leave the room quite as he entered it. There seemed to be an atmosphere of truth and beauty, and something that caught, and held captive, the religious sentiments in the breast. Many a day and year will pass befoer we see a play with such a motive, beautifully staged, and so magnificently played.

I am, yours,
JOHN J. B. FLINT.

BOYS OF OLD ENGLAND HAD A JOLLY EVENING

Their First Banquet of the Season Was Held Last Night—The Programme.

The Boys of Old England held their first banquet for the season last night at the Queen's Hotel, and it proved to be a most enjoyable affair. Mine host T. P. J. Power provided an excellent spread and the same was well served. Lt. Col. Marsh was chairman and Mr. J. G. Lindsay vice-chairman. After supper a programme, varied in its character and exceedingly entertaining, was given. All who took part acquitted themselves in a creditable manner. During the evening the toast of the King and Navy was drunk. The chairman gave a brief address, as did also Mr. Lindsay, both of which were to the point. The programme and those taking part, were as follows, the accompaniments of the songs being played by Sergt. Harmon:—

KNIGHTS TEMPLAR EN FETE IN BELLEVILLE

High Dignitaries of the Order Were Present—Honor Paid to Sir Knight Arthur McGinnis.

A most interesting meeting of King Baldwin Preceptory Knights Templar was held on Thursday in the Masonic Temple.

The occasion was the official visit of the Supreme Grand Master Most Eminent Sir Knight W. P. Ryrie, Toronto. Among other prominent members of the order present were Right Eminent Sir Knight W. H. Magwood, of Cornwall, Provincial Prior of the district; Right Eminent Sir Knights Murch and Shaw, Kingston, and Eminent Sir Knight Brown, of Port Hope.

The work of The Illustrious Order of the Red Cross was exemplified by Palestine Preceptory of Port Hope, and the Templar degrees by Hugh De Payens, Premier Preceptory of Kingston, and was so well done as to receive the warmest encomiums from the Supreme Grand Master and the Provincial Prior.

The most interesting part of the evening's proceedings, however, was the presentation of a sterling silver tea service by the Preceptory to Sir Knight Arthur McGinnis on his retirement from the registrarship of the Preceptory, which he had held for upwards of twenty-five years.

Right Eminent Sir Knight Colonel Lazier referred in eloquent terms to the very efficient services rendered by Sir Knight McGinnis to the Preceptory and to the high esteem in which he was held by its members, and asked the Supreme Grand Master to make the formal presentation, which he did in most felicitous terms. In acknowledging the more than kind expression of his brethren, Sir Knight McGinnis made a very happy and feeling reply.

The banquet afterwards, presided over by Colonel Lazier, was one of the most enjoyable ever held in the Masonic Temple. Eloquent addresses were made by the Supreme Grand Master, the Provincial Prior, Sir Knight Colonel Ponton, Eminent Sir Knight Spencer, Sir Knight McGinnis, Right Eminent Sir Knights Murch and Shaw, and Eminent Sir Knight Brown, of Port Hope, and others.

FINE WEATHER AND RATHER LOWER PRICES

It was anticipated that the market to-day would be well attended owing to the weather having moderated and the roads being in good condition and such proved to be the case. It was one of the largest held here for some time. Prices for some farm products, such as eggs and butter were considerably lower than those of a week ago, but for other products there was no material change in prices.

Fresh butter sold at 35c. to 38c. per lb., and basket lots were bought at a lower figure, namely 32c. and 33c.

Strictly fresh eggs brought 35c. per dozen.

While potatoes were offered for sale in considerable quantities, the ruling price was $1.75 per bag

During the week there has been no changes to note in prices in the meat market.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

DANIEL BOONE ON THE TRAIL.

Carrying real Indians, wolves, bears and Kentucky trailing dogs in order to give a play the desired atmosphere is going the limit. That is what is being done by the manager of the Daniel Boone On the Trail Co. that comes to the Griffin Opera House on Thursday, Feb. 22nd. The story of the play is romantic in theme and in thrilling situations. The many exciting incidents that occur during the life of this famous pioneer has given the author ample room to elaborate on. The burning of Boone's home by the Indians closes the first act of this great drama of pioneer days. The second act finds Boone and his brave wife, Elizabeth Zane, homeless in the mountains. The many daring escapes and the hardships endured by them makes the story of Daniel Boone strong in sentiment. Each act and scene follows another showing beautiful stage settings, with nothing but the weird rocky mountain trail for its background. Real Indians, wolves and bears are also worked into the exciting scenes of the play. A screen curtain is also used in separating the audience from the stage in the snow storm scene, where Boone has his fight for life with wolves. This scene is one of the features of the drama and so much so that the moment the stage is set and the curtain is ready to rise on this act the stage boys invariably climb to the fly galleries and do not come down until the wolves have been driven back into their cage. Lovers of the better class of romantic melodramatic productions will find in Daniel Boone a real treat.

Burglar Vandals Do Great Damage—Get $70,000 in Silver.

PARIS, Feb. 16.—The Chateau De Ferrieres, the home of the late Baroness Alphonse De Rothschild, at present in care of a watchman, has been entered by burglars and family silver worth $70,000 stolen.

The grand salon, hung with valuable pictures, was devastated. One picture, worth $50,000, was slashed with a knife in ten different places. The valuable furniture was also ruthlessly damaged.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agent for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within 9 miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him, by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

TRIED EVERYTHING WITHOUT RELIEF

Until I took "Fruit-a-tives"

SARNIA, ONT., Feb. 5th, 1910.

"I have been a sufferer for the past 25 years with Constipation, Indigestion and Catarrh of the Stomach. I tried many remedies and many doctors but derived no benefit whatever.

Finally, I read an advertisement of 'Fruit-a-tives'. I decided to give 'Fruit-a-tives' a trial and found they did exactly what was claimed for them.

I have now taken 'Fruit-a-tives' for some months and find that they are the only remedy that does me good.

I have recommended 'Fruit-a-tives' to a great many of my friends and I cannot praise these fruit tablets too highly" PAUL J. JONES

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only natural cure for Constipation and Stomach Trouble, because it is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices and valuable tonics. Hundreds of people have been cured, as if by a miracle, by taking "Fruit-a-tives", the famous fruit medicine.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At dealers, or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

A CAUCASIAN MARRIAGE.

A Piece of Sugar Put to Lips of Brid to Sweeten Tongue.

In the Caucasus the marriage ceremonies everywhere are of the greatest extravagance in regard to length and the amount of feasting. In Mingrelie large tents are erected for the wedding guests, and the smallest number invited comes to two or three hundred. An interesting and pretty ceremony is the going forth of the bridegroom's mother to meet the bride, to whose lips she puts a piece of sugar, wishing her happiness and joy, and hoping that her tongue may always keep the sweetness of sugar. In the marriage procession all the goods and wealth of the fomily make an appearance. An elderly lady, generally the bride's nurse, plays an important part throughout the ceremonies. She sits by the bride, who neither laughs nor eats during all the merriment and feasting. A meal is served in the nuptial chamber, to which the matron conducts the bride. The bridegroom is refused admission until he buys his entry from the matron. This old lady remains a week in the house, and when she departs the bride breaks into loud lamentations. For a year the young couple are full of respect and attention for their parents, never sitting down in their presence and submitting to their wishes in everything.

REMOVAL OF BIRTHMARKS.

Carbonic Acid Snow Treatment Proving Generally Successful.

In less than a year the carbonic acid snow treatment for birthmarks, warts, and rodent ulcer, first introduced at Charing Cross Hospital, has gained an accepted place in modern therapeutics.

The early experiments with the new remedy, described in these columns last June, have been so successful in suitable cases that now practically every hospital in the country, as well as thousands of general practitioners and skin specialists, is making use of the new medicament.

The snow is prepared by allowing a thin spray of carbonic acid gas, liquefied under pressure, to escape into a felt covering slipped over the tap of the iron cylinder containing the gas. The gas is deposited on the felt as a very fine powdered snow at a temperature of about 100 degrees below zero. The snow is then solidified into an icy pencil by being tightly packed into a hard rubber cylinder with a plunger.

Treatment consists of pressing this intensely cold pencil of carbonic acid ice for a few seconds against the birthmark, wart or rodent ulcer to be removed. The resulting intense cold freezes the part, setting up severe local inflammation, which leads to a breaking down and absorption of the frozen tissues. There is very little pain and the wound heals naturally in a few days, leaving the skin practically normal.

Hint for the Laundry.

Articles that have been put away rough dried, when required again are often extremely tiresome to iron owing to the difficulty of getting them properly damped. If, however, they are well sprinkled, rolled up tightly wrapped in a damp cloth, and then in a newspaper, and placed for a few minutes in a cool oven with the door open, the heat will cause the steam to rise through the material, and thoroughly soften it, and the articles can then b ironed with perfect ease.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEY.

BELLEVILLE WINS AT TRENTON.

The final match of the Quinte H. S. Hockey League was played last night at Trenton between Belleville and Trenton. The championship of the league depended on the result and to Belleville came the laurels after a heart-rending, hair-raising struggle, by a 10-8 score. The game was of junior O.H.A. calibre, and one of the best from the point of view both of play and excitement seen in Trenton for many moons. With a 5-0 score against them, Trenton worked away till the scoreboard read 6 all and then the real struggle began. Belleville scored and Trenton scored—7 all. For ten minutes they battled, till Belleville again notched one and then quickly added another. Trenton came back with one more, but Belleville in ten seconds batted another in, and held their advantage till the gong. The line-up:—

Belleville—		Trenton—
Nurse	Goal	Mowat
Downey	Point	Symons
Tuite	Cover Point	Pelkey
Mills	Rover	McGorman
Cronk	Centre	Hoag
Sinclair	Right	Holly

Referee—Al. Moore.

Tuite and Nurse shone for Belleville, while Mowat and Symons carried off Trenton's honors.

Teams of girls from Belleville and Trenton played a half-hour game previous to the league fixture, which resulted in Trenton's favor by one goal to none.

The first game for the Senior championship will be played to-night at Toronto between the Eatons and the Frontenacs.

In the Intermediate semi-finals last night Midland beat Mount Forest 7-2, and Preston put away Paris 6-3. Midland and Preston will now play for the championship.

At Peterborough last night Orillia defeated the locals 8-2 in the first of the home-and-home games for the semi-finals in the Junior series.

CURLING.

At Napanee yesterday afternoon two senior rinks from the local curling club were defeated by two shots by two rinks of the Napanee club. One of the Belleville rinks was 6 shots behind, and the other four shots to the good. Mr. Iler's rink was up and Mr. Quick's rink behind. The players from here were as follows:

W. B. Riggs,	J. A. Kerr,
W. N. Belair,	T. E. Ketcheson,
J. A. McFee,	S. Robertson,
P. Quick, skip.	H. Iler, skip.

ASSOCIATION STANDING.

The present standing of the Central Canada Curling Association is: Out of six games played in the senior series, Kingston won 2 and lost 4; Belleville won 2 and lost 4; Napanee won 2 and lost 1.

In the Junior series, Kingston won 4 and lost 2; Belleville won 4 and lost 2; Napanee won 0 and lost 6.

The result of the game Wednesday night ties Kingston and Belleville in the junior series. The next game in the League will be played between Kingston and Napanee at Napanee on Feb. 19th.

TRAP SHOOTING.

MOTT WAS THE WINNER

Thirteen members of the Belleville Gun Club yesterday afternoon indulged in the weekly shoot, and some excellent scores were made. Twenty-five clay pigeons were shot at and three of the competitors broke 23 out of that number. Messrs. D. Young, A. Mott and G. Bennett were a tie at 23 each and in the shoot off at 10 birds Mr. Mott won. The scores made were as follows:

D. Young, 23; A. Mott, 23; G. Bennett, 23; H. Day, 21; E. B. Harris, 19; J. Miller, 19; J. Woodley, 19; M. Sprague, 19; H. Howie, 18; J. Thompson, 18; W. J. Andrews, 18; W. Hart, 16; R. Stafford, 15.

GERMANY'S WARM APPROVAL OF AGREEMENT WITH BRITAIN

Chancellor's Statement at Reichstag Greeted With Loud and Unstinted Applause from all Partiee

BERLIN, Feb. 17—In the Reichstag this afternoon the Chancellor, Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg, stated that Lord Haldane, the British Secretary for War, did not come to Berlin with the power of making a binding agreement between Germany and Great Britain, but was authorized by the English Cabinet to discuss with the German Government the points concerning the interests of both countres in order to lay the foundations for confidential relations between the two powers. Negotiations to this end would be pursued, the Chancellor declared.

The loud and unstinted applause from all parties which greeted the Chancellor's statement indicated the general relief with which Germans greet the prospect of a betterment of the relations between the two countries. A majority of the German newspapers had previously commented with warm approval on Premier Asquith's statement on the same subject in the British House of Commons.

There is nothing official as to how the further negotiations on this important subject are to be conducted, but it is stated that Dr. Von Stumm, the chief of the English Department of the German Foreign Office, is drawing up suggestions, and Lord Haldane is performing a similar office in London.

These will form the basis for future friendly discussion here. It is possible that Mr. Von Stumm will go to London.

It is hoped that the visit of King George and Queen Mary to Berlin, which is scheduled for the coming spring, will emphasize the complete agreement of the two countries. It is stated that the Kaiser's return visit to London will be of even greater impotrance.

ROCKEFELLER AND THE GOAT.

No butting for John D. if he could help it.

John D. Rockefeller does not possess quite enough money to keep him from being afraid of a common, ordinary, gardn variety of goat. On one occasion, when he was walking along one of the country roads just outside of Augusta, Georgia, where he spends every spring, he overtook a little girl who was driving a goat hitched to a cart.

Walking beside the cart was a young woman who had taken the little girl out for the ride, and it was with the young woman that Mr. Rockefeller talked.

"I used to drive a goat myself," he volunteered, in explanation of his interest in this one. "Where did you get it?"

He was told that the goat and cart had been hired. By this time the rich man had taken his stand in front of the goat and was leaning reflectively on his cane.

"Does he kick?" was the next question.

"Oh, no, sir," cut in the little girl. "He doesnt kick, but he butts something awful."

That was enough for in that moment Mr. Rockefeller destroyed the popular idea that he is infirm and feeble. He displayed all the agility of a youth of eighteen by making one leap, that took him from in front of the butting goat to the gully beside the road. And there he stayed until the little girl drove on.

Anti-Suffragisms.

Perhaps the Supreme Being made a ridiculous blunder in creating sex, but it is now too late to remedy it.

Woman suffrage is so advantageous to men, in relieving them of responsibilities and endowing them with property at the expense of their wives that it is a wonder all men are not in favor of it.

If voting be a natural right, not only men and women but children may vote, for a natural right is acquired at birth and lasts till death.

The supreme court of the United States has decided that voting is not a moral right, but a privilege.

Governments exist by a consent of a MAJORITY of the governed. There is a small, but very dangerous minority in the jails who have never given their consent.

"Ah!" murmured the sweltering man,
As with vigor he wriggled his fan
"Now, why can't I, say,
Go barefoot today,
As long as Pavlowa and Duncan?"

WHY MALACHI NOLAN STEPPED DOWN.

As Alderman Malachi Nolan sat and smoked and sipped, he thought again of Limerick — the breath of spring blows the fragrance of the hawthorn, white upon the bough; he hears the song of the mavis; he is walking homeward along the black path through the bog, and up the green boreen, and there before him is the little cottage, its thatch held down by sticks and stones, a long ash pole propping up its crumbling gable; there is the mud shed with the thills of the old cart sticking out of it; the donkey is standing by, sad as ever; and up the muddy lane little Annie in her bare feet is driving the cows to the byre; and then he sees his mother sitting in the low doorway, all at once he catches his first whiff of the peat smoke, and, with the strange spell that odors work upon the memory, it makes him a boy again; again he is sheltered on a rainy day in the mud shed, playing shoot-marbles with Andy Corrigan and Jerry O'Brien; again he is in the little chapel with the leaky roof; he sees all the boys and girls — Mary Cassidy among them — standing on the bare clay floor; he brings his bit of stone to kneel on during mass, he even runs out for a piece of slate to give to Mary, who lays it in the puddle at her feet and spreads her handkerchief over it before she kneels. And when the mass is over, he will take little Nora — little Nora?

He placed his hand to his forehead in confusion, and then in a gasp it all comes over him — Mary is old, Andy and Jerry are old, little Annie is old, and he is old — they are all gone away. He bowed his head.

And yet Nora yearned to go. Should he turn the ward over to Brennan and take her this spring? He could run for the legislature when he came back in the fall; a senator would be elected by the next General Assembly, and the graft would be very good then.

The compromise attracted Malachi, for at once it acquitted him of indecision, a quality of statesmanship he hated, and kept for him the life of power that had become as the very breath of his nostrils.

The long day was done, and Malachi, in shirt-sleeves and stockinged feet, sat in his big plush rocking-chair, his legs stretched out before him, taking his ease at his own hearth. When he had come home at midnight, Nora, who always sat up for him, had insisted upon brewing him a cup of tea, under the impression, common to a certain class of women, that it has great medicinal qualities. Malachi had sipped it obediently, though he had not cared for it after all the mineral waters he had drunk that day, and had enjoyed far more than the tea the freckled Irish face of his daughter, as he gravely goggled at her over the rim of the saucer into which he had poured the beverage to cool it.

"Nora, child, do ye sing now — p'hat was that? — it wint hummin' t'rough me head th' daay. Well, well, well, let me see, now — hum-m-m-m — it goes something like——"

And he hummed a quavering old tune:

"I saw the Shannon's purple flood
Flow by the Irish town."

"But it's forbidden in the lease after ten o'clock," the girl protested, leafing over her music. "What if the landlord——"

"It's time enough to saay good marnin' to th' divil, Nora, whin ye meet 'im."

Nora fixed herself on the stool fingered the keys, finding a soft minor chord. The old man closed his eyes, slid farther down in his plush chair, and, just as he was prepared to listen, she suddenly stopped in the provoking way amateur musicians cultivate, to say:

"But, father, that's such an old song; wouldn't you rather I'd sing the Intermezzo from 'Cavalleria'?"

Malachi opened his eyes with a start and sat bolt upright.

"Naw," he said, "none o' thim fur'n op'res — p'hat's the use of yer goin' to th' convint all those years?" But his voice quickly softened. "Do ye go on now, Nora, darlin', there's a good gur-rl."

And so she sang, and the alderman sank in his chair, with his big arms in their shirt-sleeves thrown over his head, closed his eyes again, stretched out his stockinged feet. The smoke from his cigar ascended to the chandelier, and now and then, when he remembered the words of a line, he hummed them behind closed lips, in unison with his daughter. When the song was done Nora whirled around, clasped her hands in a schoolgirl's ecstasy, and said:

"Oh, father, that song makes me homesick — homesick for a place I never saw. You won't run again, will you, father, will you? And we'll go to Ireland in the spring, won't we? Tell me, in the spring?"

A pain struck through Malachi Nolan's heart, a pain that was made only more poignant when, with her American fear of the sentimental, Nora joked:

"I must see our ancestral cabin."

Malachi could not open his eyes. For once he was afraid. He did not move for a long time. But at last he sighed and set his jaw, and said:

"Well, Nora, — if ye saay so — in the spring."

And that was why Malachi Nolan stepped down.

A GRAVE MISTAKE

By Donald Firey

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

Any one would have looked twice at the girl who was coming through the big gates of the railway station together with several hundred other people who had got out of a train.

Once apart from the crowd she hesitated a moment, her eyes sweeping the bystanders. Suddenly she caught sight of a good looking young man who wore a violent crimson tie and patent leather shoes, and who was most patiently waiting. She beamed so relievedly that he unconsciously stepped forward as she fluttered down upon him.

"Oh!" cried the girl, "I knew it was you the instant I saw you! Helen said when she wrote to tell me why she couldn't meet me, and that she would send her brother Dick. She told me such a lot about you because you wore such dreadful ties. I beg your pardon. Of course, your tie isn't at all dreadful, but red, you know—"

"Oh, don't mention it," begged the young man, as she struggled in embarrassment. "I'm always getting rotted about my ties, but—"

"How is Helen?" cried the girl in brown. "I'm just dying to see the dear thing! Just think! We haven't set eyes on each other since we were at school two years ago. I think it was perfectly lovely of her to invite me, to spend the holidays, and she's planned so many delightful things to do. And isn't it fine that you could be here, too? Actually, Helen sung the praises of her brother so much at school that we girls used to get tired of you. That is — I mean, not of you, but of hearing of you. That sounds impolite, I know, but I don't mean—"

"Oh, I understand," said the young man hastily.

He seemed facinated, but uncomfortable.

"Don't you think we'd better be starting?" asked the girl in brown, with an excited little dance step and a lift of her pretty eyebrows.

The young man picked up her bag and opened his mouth, but she broke in again as they began edging their way to the stairs.

"I'm so glad you are a Harvard man," she burst out, "because nearly all the men I know are, and it makes us just about the same as acquainted, doesn't it? I suppose there is going to be a dance, isn't there? Helen said so. I'm so glad. Don't you like dancing?"

"I should say so!" agreed the young man, who was making no particular haste to reach the stairs. "I wish though—"

"Oh, I know," said the girl in brown. "When a man dances he is bored to death with invitations because so many are sulky and lazy and won't and just spoil a party. Does Helen go to a lot of dances since she had her coming out party? I expect she is a tremendous belle, because she is such a splendid looking girl. I hope you won't be bored to death at having me on your hands next two weeks. It was awfully good of you to tell Helen you'd like to give me a good time. I don't want you to feel you have to neglect any one else — your old friends, you know — just to be polite to me, because I shan't mind it a bit, and you must have lots of engagements of your own."

"Not at all! Not at all!" said the young man, hastily, with a sigh that seemed a combination of despairing admiration and hopelessness. "I should be more than delighted—"

"Is that bag of mine heavy?" said the girl in brown with pretty anxiety, as the young man lagged up the stairs. "I'm so sorry; but you see what I'm going to give Helen is in there, and it's weighty. Oh, are you all well again? So stupid of me to forget about that broken collar bone. Isn't football just awful? But it's grand to see a good run. Oh, how I wish I'd seen you in that match! Why, the newspapers—"

"Oh, I say now," protested the young man, looking wildly unhappy and baulking at the door of the station.

"Don't be so modest!" said the girl, dimpling. "Where do we go now? Can we get a car or must we take a cab? If a cab, don't get one with a bony horse, because I'm always so sorry for the poor things. I don't enjoy my ride a bit. Do you suppose Helen—"

The young man shook his shoulders like a water spaniel ready for a plunge, but just then a tall girl in blue dashed into the station, and with a cry of "Mabel!" fell on the neck of the pretty girl. Then she turned inquiringly towards the good looking young man, whose face was the color of his tie.

Mabel looked the picture of bewilderment. "What's the matter, Helen" she asked. "Don't you know your own brother?"

"He's not my brother," cried Helen, in accents of frigid amazement. "How dare he?"

"I never said I was anybody's brother" cried the unhappy young man. "I was just waiting for my train when this young lady—"

But the girl, with an agonized shriek, gathered her bag and Helen, and the two fled out to the street.

The young man mopped his forehead and ran for his train.

HER WEIGHT IN GOLD

By Carlin Joyce.

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

The proposal of the Indian people to weigh King George V., on the occasion of his approaching visit to India, against his weight in silver coin and afterwards to distribute the silver amongst the poor in India, recalls an interesting incident in the history of a well-known Irish family, now related for the first time.

"This is the fifth marriage settlement I have had the honour of drawing up for your family, Sir Thomas, and you will excuse me, I hope, expressing my curiosity respecting one peculiarity common to them all."

"I think" interpolated the baronet, "I can anticipate what you are going to say, Cheevers. You are puzzled to explain why there is a uniform dowry of £8,000 settled upon my daughters from the date of their marriage, especially when you are aware that a similar sum was settled upon my sisters when they married."

"Precisely, Sir Thomas. To speak openly, I wondered why the sum was not fixed at £5,000 or £10,000."

"I comprehend your meaning fully. You might be a long time searching for a solution of the problem and fail to solve it in the end. It is, however, an interesting story.

"My eldest sister, Ita, was a charming girl, idolised by our parents, the most popular of the young county people of her age, and beloved by the common people. Up to the time immediately preceding the public announcement of her engagement she was regarded as heart-free, and unattached to any of the many eligible admirers with whom she was acquainted. One evening, after dinner, Mr. Strewton, a neighbour of ours, called to know if I could play in a cricket match that was being arranged with a team from the metropolis. Subsequently he asked if my father was alone in the library, as he wished to speak with him. I brought him down to the dear old man, and left the pair of them together, never dreaming of the surprise that interview had in store for us all. About a week later we were apprised that Ita had given her heart to Strewton. That herself and her lover had always entertained mutual affection for each other, though Strewton had made no avowal until his bachelor uncle had spoken to him of the desirability of marrying and avoiding the premature ageing and loss of real live interest in life which is the fate of the overwhelming majority of old bachelors. Strewton avowed his desire to marry my sister but explained that he never felt at liberty to disclose his heart's dearest wish to her, because he recognized that he was dependent upon his uncle's generosity for the wherewithal to set up an establishment of his own. Contrary to the code of the romance writer, Strewton's uncle approved his nephew's action and choice, and guaranteed a generous settlement if the marriage could be arranged to the satisfaction of all parties.

"It was after this interview Strewton ascertained that my sister reciprocated his affection and, later, secured audience of the pater. I well remember my father approving of Strewton's manly, straightforward way of urging his suit. 'By George,' he used to say, 'I shall never forget the earnestness with which eulogising Ita, young Strewton averred that she was "worth her weight in gold," or the happy thought that prompted me to say, 'that she is; and her own weight in gold will be her wedding dowry.'

"Of course, Cheevers, you remember that my father was Director of a Bank at that period . What do you think he did? One day he brought Ita into the Bank and, in the presence of two other members of the Board, conducted her to the strong room where she was put sitting into a beam and scales constructed on the principle of those commonly seen at the town market-houses throughout the country. When she was comfortably fixed, one of the porters of the establishment was directed to shovel sovereigns into the opposite scale until the gold placed there equalled the weight of the lady on the other side. When the coins were subsequently counted the amount was found to be £8,000, representing, as well as I remember, my sister's weight to be about ten stones. That was the origin of the £8,000 dot in our family."

A Thought for To-day

As in that which is above Nature, so in Nature itself: he that breaks one physical law is guilty of all. The whole universe, as it were, takes up arms against him, and all Nature, with her numberless and unseen powers is ready to average herself upon him, and on his children after him, he knows not when nor where. He, on the other hand, who obeys the law of Nature with his whole heart and mind, will find all things working together to him for good. He is helped and befriended alike by the sun above his head and the dust beneath his feet: because he is obeying the will and mind of Him who made sun, and dust, and all things: and who has given them a law which cannot be broken. — Kingsley.

'Who?'

'The mare. Spake low! Shure Oi'm desavin' th' crayture? Every toime she 'ears th' door close she thinks wan o' yez is gettin' down ter walk up th' hill, an' that sort a' raises her sperrits.'

POG-WOG THE PEACEMAKER.

A Tale of a Tailless Dog.

By Leslie Morgan.

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

He really came into my possession because his presence made for anything but peace in his own family circle.

He had a distinctly distrubing influence upon his little mother, whilst his tiny brothers and sisters had absolutely no peace at all when he was in the box. Rarely sleeping himself, he would not permit sleepiness in others, and he growled, barked and grumbled at an incredibly early age. In fact, when his eyes opened for the first time he immediately found something to object to.

Perhaps he counted his brothers and sisters, and thought his little world overcrowded. I protested, of course, against this aggressive though tiny personality being thrust upon me, but my protestations were entirely in vain.

It was pointed out to me that when he fitted so nicely into my overcoat pocket it would be decidedly mean upon my part not to offer him a home. Again I objected, and reminded the over-generous ones of the vow I made when the bull terrier died that his place should never be filled.

This was firmly impressed upon me that in all human—or rather canine—probability this black morsel would never grow large enough to anything like fill the vacant space on the hearth-rug that the white one had occupied. So ungraciously, I permitted them to place him in my pocket.

"If you really don't want him," said the donors, "give him to the first kindly-looking person you meet"

I made no reply, but banged the door behind me.

It was a particularly cold and disagreeable February day, and I marveled at the number of people in the streets whose faces matched the weather.

Once, upon perceiving a kindly-looking old lady approaching, I placed my ungloved hand in the pocket—he had taken a violent exception to the smell of tobacco which pervaded the gloves — and his baby teeth vainly tried to make an impression upon my thumb, and finding this ineffectual he sucked and licked it by turns and—well—the old lady had passed, and I absolutely had to take him in to the fireside.

He was so glad to find the hearthrug, and seemed to realize at once that he had come into his own kingdom, for, stretching himself to his very limit, with his little tummy turned towards the fire, he fell fast asleep. After that I became merely a guest at my own fireside. He took absolute possession, and I could only sit in my corner chair when he didn't want it, or preferred the center of the hearthrug. Then I had to be very careful not to let my slippered feet sprawl about, or he would give a deliciously tiny growl, which compelled me to do it again, just to hear the encore.

However, other dogs, other mannerisms, and the tiny tyrant led me whither he would, I had to give in to the stronger personality, and walk just where and as far as he liked.

We had both of us seen many pictures in the fire before "she" came upon the scene.

Pog-wog bitterly resented her presence at the first, and it was not until afternoon when she made tea for us that he really accepted her. I remember how he left my side of the table and sat near her. I thought it so nice of him, and wished that I had his courage.

It was after this that she accepted me.

Then, when we went walking, it was Pog-wog the animal who changed the order of his parade and led us into those dreamy, deserted streets, where our whispers were softly echoed. So I rechristened him Pog-wog the Matchmaker.

I am continually wondering what was the original cause of our quarrel. And yet, what does it matter now? How can one expect a woman to care much for one whose hair shows signs of gray at the temples and looks thin at the top when there are so many bright, handsome young fellows about?

We will go to the old walk tonight, Pog-wog, just you and I, as we went in those days before we ever thought of "her."

. . . .

I know that I don't understand women, but I did think that Pog-wog held me in chains, and yet even he has left me. Why would he insist upon revising the very streets that I was longing to forget? When he caught sight of her he rushed from my side and danced around her as he never danced to me. She stooped to pat him, and unnoticed I hurried away. I had hoped that he would come back during the night, and so waited, listening for that impatient scratch of his on the door.

Never mind, there is still a pipe, a book, and the pictures in the firelight.

. . . .

She carried him in and placed him in his chair.

"He wanted to come back," she said, "only he wouldn't come alone."

"Won't you stay too?" I begged

We call him Pog-wog the Peacemaker now.

SWALLOWS' NEST OF BANK-NOTE

Also How a Mouse Stole $40 Worth of Notes to Make a Home.

A pair of swallows of Fiberbrunn, in the Tyrol, have stolen a number of ten-kronen bank-notes to line their nest.

The parent birds discovered that the new notes were just the shade of blue to match their eggs, the tissue being tough but flexible, and exactly the material they needed. The nest and the missing notes were only discovered when the swallows had abandoned it and it fell to the ground.

This feat has been equalled by that of an enterprising mouse in Dornbirn, which abstracted a number of twenty-kronen notes to the value of $40, of a delicate reddish brown shade, from the cash drawer of a butcher, and, tearing them to pieces, adapted them to the purpose of making a nest for her family of seven. The butcher in his search for the notes suspected and traced the mouse, and found the nest under the boarding. He carefully picked up the remains of the notes and returned them to the bank, where they were pieced together. The butcher recov- mouse's teeth.

Last Call.

Professor Leacock tells the following story about a young man who sometimes drank more whisky than was good for him:

He had been making a night of it, but had forsaken his companions. He was acquainted with an undertaker named George, and got the crazy notion at three o'clock in the morning that he must see this particular man. Accordingly, he found George's undertaking establishment, over which George had his sleeping apartments.

The intoxicated young man rang and rang George's bell, and at last awoke him. The undertaker put his head out of the third-story window, expecting to find that his funeral services were required immediately. Instead, he recognized his friend Frank.

"Well, Frank," he exclaimed crossly, "what do you want?"

"I just wan' tell you, George," said Frank, "that you're the lash man in the world I wan' to do business with."

Very Convenient.

An enterprising builder was one day in conversation with several friends, when he was accused of using inferior materials in the construction of houses which he had recently built, of which a gentleman arrived who

A hot argument ensued in the midst lived in one of the jerry-built cottages, and the matter was referred to him

"Weel, sirs," said he, "I can assure ye they are the maist convenient hooses I ever abode in."

"But," said one of the listeners, "why convenient dae ye say."

"Oh, haud yer wheest till I explain. When first I cam' to bide in Mr. Jerry's hoose, I had to rise i' the middle o' the nicht an' open the door to let oot the cat; but the cat can gang oot an' come in noo thro' the cracks, an' I'm saved a lot o' bother."

No Resemblance.

"Now, Nora," said the departing physician to the Irish girl, who was nursing a bad case of fever, "if the patient sees snakes again, give him a dose of this medicine. I shall be in at six."

The hour for his return arrived. The physician once more visited the sick patient, and found him raving. He had been so, said the nurse, for hours.

"And did you give him the medicine?" inquired the puzzled doctor.

Nora shook her head.

"But didn't I tell you to give it to him if he saw snakes again?" demanded the physician.

"But he didnt say he saw snakes this toime, dochter," replied the nurse, confidently. "He said he saw red-white-and-blue turkeys wid straw hair on!"

Utilizing Waste as Fuel.

The greatest work which has been carried on by the British in Egypt, since their occupation of that country has been the construction of dams along the Nile for the purpose of providing water for irrigating the Nile Valley. As a result of this work vast areas, previously waste, have been brought under cultivation and the output of the country vastly increased.

Another enterprise, of little less importance, is now under way. This is for the purpose of utilizing sudd, a thick tangle of water plants in the Nile bed. This growth has for generations seriously interfered with the navigation of the Nile. It has recently been discovered that it can be utilized as a fuel. The new fuel is known as suddite.

Thought it was a Crack.

A corpulent gentleman with a large appetite entered a mean-looking restaurant, and ordered a chop, and waited twenty minutes. Then the waiter reappeared with a plate on which rested a dab of mashed potatoes, a bit of meat burnt almost to a cinder, out of which emerged a long, thin piece of bone.

The waiter set it down before the starving gentleman and hurried off.

"See here," called the customer, "I ordered a chop."

"Yes sir," replied the man, "there it is."

"Ah, so it is," mused the hungry man, readjusting his spectacles. "I thought it was a crack in the plate."

Knowledge is, indeed, that which, next to virtue, truly and essentially raises one man above another. It finishes one half of the human soul. It gives ease to solitude and gracefulness to retirement. — Addison.

THE HURT OF JEALOUSY

By Gwen Adair

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd.

"You look tired, Bob. What happened at the bank today?"

"A rush day. Everybody coming to cut coupons and take out jewels before going to Europe."

"Nothing more interesting than that?"

Robert Hayward, superintendent of the deposit vaults of the Second National, did not seem to hear Mildred Lorne's question. He stared out of the window and seemed lost in reverie. This was most unusual, so unusual that, watching her distraught caller, Miss Lorne's fine face and clear-cut, strong features were bathed in a flood of indignant pink.

"You ask me to be nice to you. I try to be so, by talking of what will interest you, your work, and you don't even hear me."

"I beg your pardon, dear. I might suggest that there are other topics of greater interest to men after a hard business day."

"As for instance?"

Again the wandering glance. Again Mildred Lorne was conscious of a detachment of interest by this man, who had been her waiting slave for—how many years? She could not remember when it began, when it had not begun. Had she not heard him try to explain to a catechising mother why he had plucked a green apple from his yard while she looked over the fence of hers, an explanation that consisted chiefly of "No, she didn't ask me to pick it exactly, but she looked as though she wished I would" — and was interrupted by what Miss Lorne, listening in a fearsome silence, decided was unmistakably the swish of a whip. A fiend she had not suspected lived in her placid bosom awoke. The pink in her cheeks faded and crimson banners flung their signal instead.

"Robert Hayward, you are thinking—of a woman—and it isn't me."

Robert Hayward's gaze came back from the rose garden and fixed itself upon her. She had never noticed how cold those blue-gray eyes could be, nor how shrewd their glance. They looked at, through, beyond her, and beside this there was nothing. There was silence save for the strange beating of her heart. This sense of suffocation nearly overpowered her. She walked to the window. She tried to calm herself, but failed.

"Isn't it—true—Bob?"

"Yes, Mildred."

While Robert's eyes left her pleading ones and searched the room, each second's hesitation was a stab in her heart. She strangled a sob in her throat and whispered:

"Tell me about it, Bob dear. I am sure it was not your fault, but her's."

Beneath his fair mustache the young man's lip twitched. With an effort he controlled his emotion.

"I met her first eight years ago."

"Oh, Bob!" The words were like a moan.

"She came to the bank. She was a soft, gentle, unassuming little creature. I always thought of her as my little lady in gray."

Mildred's cheeks flushed, and her eyes burned. She had been described once or twice as militant.

"She engaged a lock box, paid for it and wrote her address, handing it to me with a shy little smile. Mildred, from that moment, I couldn't help it."

"Bob!" The commonplace monosyllable had become a cry of anguish.

"Do you want to hear any more, Mildred?"

"Go on," she chokingly answered.

"I did not see her again for a year. When she came she gave the number of her box in the soft small voice that I had remembered all these twelve months and handed me the key. I unlocked the outer box and handed her the inner one. She received it tenderly and carried it into one of the small waiting rooms. The gate clanged after her. She remained there with the box for a long time. Growing anxious about her, I passed and repassed the door. She sat there, the box in her lap, her lovely head bowed over it for an hour.

"Bob! I can't stand any more."

Hayward placed a pitying hand over hers.

"You had better hear to the end," he said. "It is better for us both. She drew her veil and went quietly out without a word. I did not see her again for a year. She asked for the box and went to the small waiting room, remaining as before for an hour. Every year she came on the same day. The last time I saw her she explained that she always called on that day because it was the anniversary of her wedding."

Mildred's pale lip curled. "A divorcee, I suppose."

"Wait, dear! Don't be too hard on her. Last Thursday was the date. She did not come. Yesterday a lawyer came, carrying the key to the lock box. He told me the little woman in gray was dead.

A long silence.

"We opened the lock box, and what do you think we found?"

"It contained a small but beautifully engraved silver urn. In it were the ashes of her husband."

Further silence, broken at last by the man.

"Can you forgive me for loving the dear old soul?"

"How old was she?"

"About seventy."

"Robert!"

"Yes, Mildred Lorne."

"I'm going to marry you soon, at once, but it is for only one reason. I still believe that the development of individuality is the first law of being."

"Yours and your husband's individuality, yes, love. But what is your motive for matrimony?"

"That it hurts so terribly to be jealous. And, Bob, stop mussing my hair on that side. Try the other."

"Yes, sweetheart."

And he did.

NATIVE POLO AT GURAIS.

The Ancient Game of Golf is a New Game in Comparison.

Polo is played at Gurais (three marches up the Gilgat Road) in Kashmir regularly once a week during the summer months, when the ground is free from snow.

Each villager rides his own pony (about 12 hands any distance up to 15 miles in the morning, plays from 12 to 3 or 4 p.m., and then rides back to his home. When there is a bet of a sheep they have sides, otherwise it is each for himself. Each chukker lasts two hours unless nine goals are scored first; if the ball goes between the posts it counts as a goal, and if it can be caught in the hand in mid-air the catcher scores a goal by riding with it in his hand between the posts—if he can. No one bothers about "offsides," fouls, or other embellishments of Europeans.

In spite of plentiful hard knocks, and sometimes worse, no one will miss his weekly game if he can help it. The game generally starts with six or eight players, but by the time it finishes it is no uncommon sight to see twenty players taking part at the same time, and needless to say, the game is fast and furious all the time.

The local telegraph master is the only European who plays, except for occasional visitors and sportsmen on their way through. To our ideas the game is primitive, but it finds great favour in the eyes of all the natives in this part of the world, and one has only to watch the game for a few minutes to realise how keen they all are, and absolutely devoid of nerves.

The greatest tragedy that can befall a keen player on polo day is to have no pony. Sometimes it happens, however, that the animal is hired out and not returned in time. Then the player calmly takes his place in goal — on foot.

System in Salesmanship.

"Young man," says the automobile manufacturer to the new salesman who has astonished the organization by the rapid-fire sales he has made in the two months of his employment, "I must congratulate you on your work."

"Thank you, sir," replies the new salesman modestly.

"I know we build the best auto in the market," says the manufacturer, "but even at that I cannot understand how you can sell ten times as many machines as the very best men we have had prior to you. How do you do it?"

"Well, sir," explains the new salesman, the light of honest pride in his eyes, "I always ask the customer to take a ride in one of our machines as the first move toward getting acquainted with its riding qualities. Of course he accepts the invitation. I then take him out on the boulevard and get arrested and fined for fast running. After that there is no argument."

Ten minutes later the new salesman leaves the private office with a block of preferred stock tucked away in his inside pocket.

Prestige and Irishmen.

A well known Railroad president, in his study of all classes of men who are under him, entertains a great admiration for the Irish foreman of a gang of laborers who went to any lengths to show his men that he was the real boss. One morning this foreman found that his gang had put a hand car on the track without his orders.

"Who put that han' car-r-r on the thrack?" he asked.

"We did, sor," one of the men answered respectfully.

"Well," he said shortly, "take it off ag'in!"

The laborers did so with some difficulty.

"Now," said the foreman, "put in on ag'in!"

Rung himself to Death.

Extraordinary circumstances attended the suicide of a church sexton at the Hungarian village of Koros-Balany recently. The inhabitants were alarmed by the violent ringing of their church bell, and thought a fire must have broken out. As, however, none could be seen, some of them went to the belfry to discover the reason, and there found the body of the sexton dangling from the bell-rope, with which he had hanged himself.

The Sixth Sense?

It is frequently the case that we meet people who antogonize us the moment a glance or a handshake is exchanged, while our inner consciousness offers no explanation for that reasonless antipathy. On the other hand Fate brings us in contact with personalities which at once appeal to a sixth sense which is indefinable, but which seems to comprehend more than the combined educated and trained sensibilities. What is that sixth sense?

The Interesting Lower Class.

"In England while good form restrains and levels the Universities and the Army, the poor people are the most motley and amusing creatures in the wrold, full of humorous affectations and prejudices and twists of irony. Frenchman tend to be alike, because they are all soldiers; Prussians because they are all something else, probably policeman; even Americans are all something, though it is not easy to say what it is; it goes with hawk-like eyes and an irrational eagerness. Perhaps it is savages. But two English cabmen will be as grotesquely different as Mr. Weller and Mr. Wegg."

THAT AWFUL BACKACHE

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing, and everything, and never have the backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Nothing we know of will do this so surely as Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Write to Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., for special advice. Your letter will be absolutely confidential, and the advice free.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS IN SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Ministry of John the Baptist. Mark 1:1-8; Luke iii:1-20.

Golden Text—Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. Matt. iii:2.

1.—Verses 1-3—Where are the predictions to which Mark here refers? (See Isa. xl:3; Mal. iii:1.)

2.—What reason is there to think that Isaiah and Malachi had John the Baptist and Jesus in mind when they wrote the words quoted by Mark?

3.—What difference does it make to the potency and truth of Christ's gospel whether Mark was right or wrong in thinking these prophecies applied specifically to John and Jesus?

4.—Verses 4-8—What did John's baptism stand for?

5.—Show from John's teaching what he meant by repentance.

6.—What difference, if any, was there in their standing with God between John's converts and converts to-day to Christianity?

7.—Luke iii:1-6—What literary and historic excellence can you point out in verses 1 and 2?

8.—Whose son was John, what relation was he to Jesus and what was there of note about his birth and training?

9.—What are the moral equivalents of valleys filled up, mountains leveled down, crooked roads made straight, and rough places smooth?

10.—When will the prophecy be fulfilled "All flesh shall see the salvation of God?"

11.—Verses 7-8—Who composed the multitude that came to John to be baptized?

12.—What reason can you give to justify John using such harsh language to those who came to be baptized?

13.—What effect will any religious ceremony have upon those who are living in sin?

14.—What are the "fruits" of repentance?

15.—If a son persists in living in sin, what benefit will a saintly father be to him in getting him into the kingdom of heaven?

16.—Verse 9.—What are the influences, already at work, which will culminate in the utter destruction of hypocrites and other hardened sinners? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

17.—Verses 10-14—According to John, how much virtue is there in good works as a means of salvation?

18.—Why should all persons who apply to the church for membership get practically the same instructions as John gave those who applied to him for baptism?

19.—Verses 15-18—What was the difference between John's mission and that of Jesus?

21.—What is the baptism of the Holy Ghost?

22.—Verses 19-20—What are the facts in connection with Herod's imprisonment of John?

THE POWER OF SYMPATHY.

Mothers Too Often Form a Habit of Constant Reproof.

Although conscious of the power of sympathy, many loving but overtired mothers not only forget to show affection but form a habit of constant reproof. Naturally enough, the children, unless exceptionally callous to their surroundings, become sullen and resentful. How can they realise that the nagging is an expression of anxious affection?

When Johnny comes rushing into the house full of enthusiasm over some new play or new idea, and eager to tell his plans, such a mother exclaims, "How many times have I told you to wipe your feet before you open the door?" The greetings kills his enthusiasm, and, hurt and wounded, he draws back into himself, and will not again expose himself to such a snub. He confides in her less and less as he grows older, and she wonders way.

There is sound psychology in the statement that if you believe a man is honest he will be honest; that if you trust a young man he will prove trustworthy; that if you praise a child he will deserve praise. Benjamin West's mother kissed her boy when he showed his drawings to her; and the boy, when grown to manhood, said that her kiss made a painter of him.

A RAVENOUS INDUSTRY.

How the Paper Makers Are Destroying the Forests of the United States.

The forests of the United States now cover 550,000,000 acres, or about one-fourth of the area of the country. Forests publicly owned contain one-fifth of all timber standing. The timber privately owned is not only four times that publicly owned but it is generally more valuable.

Forestry is not practised on 70 per cent. of the forests publicly owned and on less than 1 per cent. of the forests privately owned, or on only 18 per cent. of the total area of the forests.

The original forests of the United States contained timber in quantity and variety far beyond that upon any other area of similar size in the world. They covered 850,000,000 acres with a stand of not less than 5,200,000,000,000 board feet of merchantable timber, according to present standards of use. There were five great forest regions—the northern, the southern, the central, the Rocky Mountain and the Pacific.

The present rate of cutting is three times the annual growth of the forests of the United States. The great pineries of the Lake States are nearing exhaustion and great inroads have been made upon the supply of valuable timber throughout all parts of the country.

The heavy demands for timber have been rapidly pushing the great centres of lumber industry towards the South and West. In consequence, the State of Washington has led for several years in lumber production, followed in order by Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Wisconsin and Arkansas. In 1908 the production of yellow pine lumber amounted to eleven and one-quarter billion feet; the Douglas fir of the Northwest held second place, with three and two-thirds billion feet; while white pine came third, with three and one-third billion feet.

The annual cut from the forests, including waste in logging and in manufacture, is 20,000,000,000 cubic feet of wood.

There is used in a normal year 90,000,000 cords of fire wood, 40,000,000,000 board feet of lumber, 118,000,000 hewn ties, 1,500,000,000 staves, over 133,000,000 sets of heading, nearly 500,000,000 barrel hoops, 3,000,000 cords of native pulp wood, 165,000,000 cubic feet of round mine timbers and 1,250,000 cords of wood for distillation.

In 1909 4,002,000 cords of wood were used in the manufacture of paper, of which 794,000 cords were imported from Canada. The demand for pulp wood is making a severe drain on the spruce forests, which furnish the principle supply. The Forest Service of the United States Department of Agriculture is conducting investigations to determine what other woods, such as scrub pine, white fir, tupelo and the like, can be successfully used.

A larger drain upon forest resources is made by the demand for railroad ties, of which 123,754,000, equivalent to three and three-quarters billion board feet, were used in 1908. White oak, hitherto the chief source of supply, is not plentiful enough to meet this demand indefinitely, and in many parts of the country the supply of chestnut, cedar and cypress is dwindling; however, seasoning and treating methods are being found, largely through the work of the Forest Service, by which cheaper and more plentiful woods, such as lodgepole pine in the Northwest and loblolly pine in the South, are made fit for use as ties. Timber to the amount of two and one-half billions feet was used in 1907 for mine timbers. A great saving has been effected in the naval stores industry, also largely through the work of the Forest Service, by the introduction of the so-called "cup" system of turpentining in place of the old destructive system of "boxing." The new systems insure a larger product of better quality and prolong the life of the longleaf pine forests upon which the industry depends.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR THROAT.

Necessity of Rigid Precaution Emphasized.

Necessity of rigid precaution and the skilled care of a specialist in all cases of serious illness and especially in the case of communicable diseases is emphasized in the following clipping from the publication of the Board of Health, the "Sanitary Bulletin," for May:

"Every member of a certain family had a sore throat four weeks ago, which was diagnosed as follicular tonsilitis or quinsy. Two of the girls served as maids in other families, in each of which one of the children took diphtheria and died. Cultures were then taken of members of the first family with sore throats and each showed diphtheria. As they were able to be around, and apparently getting better of their local trouble, constitutional treatment was neglected. They persisted in refusing to believe that they had diphtheria, until baby could no longer stand the strain—and died! Three deaths from 'quinsy sore throats,' and all this happened in Buffalo."

HOMELY WISDOM.

Pull together, said Abraham Lincoln, or Upset the Boat.

A recent biographer of Abraham Lincoln has some interesting things to say of "Honest Old Abe's" views on the dependence of the different classes in socity on one another. "The farmer and the manufacturer" the president once said, with his characteristic shrewdness, "are both in the same boat and I reckon they've got to learn to navigate the craft together or they'll upset." "He compared the case of a Pennsylvania farmer", continues the historian in question, "and a Pennsylvania iron implement maker whose properties adjoined. Under a protective policy the farmer supplied the ironmaker with bread, meat, vegetables, fruit, fodder for horses, etc., and the ironmaker supplied the farmer with all the iron, iron implements, etc., which he needed. Assuming that a change is made and the Protective policy abandoned, the farmer then discovers that he can buy his iron implements cheaper from Europe than from his neighbor, assuming that he sells a sufficient quantity of flour in Europe to enable him to effect the purchase of the iron. He ultimately discovers that the cost of carriage to the coast, transportation by sea to England, insurance and cartage on arrival, does not enable him to receive such a good reward for his labor as he formerly did when selling his flour to his neighbor, the ironmaker. He, therefore, determines to sell his flour as before to his neighbor. But meantime the farmer discovers that while he has been purchasing his iron implements from Europe his neighbor, the ironmaker, has been compelled to stop his works and dismiss his employees, not having sufficient work for them. The farmer, therefore, now finds that he has more wheat than he knows what to do with; also, that he is no longer able to sell his fruit, vegetables fodder meat, horses, etc., to his neighbor, the ironmaker, as he has gone out of business.

DANGEROUS TO USE "ESQUIRE."

How One Writer Was Cured in Germany.

The recovery of a letter which had been sent to a little town in Germany and never delivered to the person addressed, cured the writer of the custom of adding "Esquire" to a name on the superscription of mail matter. The letter in question would probably have been promptly delivered had the address read simply, "Mr. John Brown." But the sender had addressed it, "John Brown, Esquire," and the communication rested comfortably in the "E" compartment of the post restante department, waiting to be calld for by "Mr. Esquire." One of the popular guide books warns against the use of "Esq.," saying that it might be mistaken for a name.

ON A GRAIN OF WHEAT.

A Prayer Containing 386 Letters Inscribed and Four Figures.

Prayers have been written and engraved on many very small objects, but only one person ever has been patient and painstaking enough to inscribe a complete prayer on a grain of wheat. One day Sir Moses Montefiore, the great Jewish financier of England, received a small tin box in the mail. On the cover of the box was written, "A prayer for Moses Montefore, by Bauch Mordecai, son of Zebi Hitsch Scheinemann, of Jerusalem." The box contained a single grain of wheat, on which was inscribd, in characters so small that they could only be read with the aid of a powerful microscope, the 386 Hebrew letters of the prayer, and the date of the year (Hebrew reckoning), 5645. Sir Moses kept the prayer in his desk until he died, and it is now preserved with religious care by one of his friends.

AN EPISODE IN ITALY

"It isn't you who decide what you are going to do in Italy," said the woman.

"It's the cabby.

"I thought I was going to leave Naples that morning. In fact, I had my valises with me as I stood at the door while the porter whistled for a cab, seven of which rushed out of the shimmering sunlight around the corner at me. A handsome young cabby grabbed the valises, put them in the cab, helped me in, and started off.

"'I want to go to the station,' I told him as we went along. 'I'm going home.'

"He slowed up, rested his left hand on the back of the seat, turned half way around and said smilingly in French:

"'You want to go to Pompeii?'

"'No!' I cried. 'I want to go to the station. I am starting for home, for America, for home!'

"'I'll take you to Pompeii,' he offered graciously, 'for 8 lire.'

"I braced myself for the conflict.

"'I want to go home,' I declared. If I went to Pompeii, I wouldn't go over that old road anyway. I'd go by train. That's the same road you take to Vesuvius. I was over it the day before yesterday. It is full of beggars and ruts.'

"My driver paid not the slightest attention. Instead he pointed proudly to a passing cabby.

"'That's my brother,' he grinned, adding softly, 'I'll take you to Pompeii for 7 lire.'

"'A handsome fellow,' I said, 'and if you paid me 7 lire I wouldn't go to Pompeii to-day. I'm going home.'

"He drove awhile, then turned and smiled at me again.

"'This road takes you to the station,' he said, 'and to Pompeii, too. I'll take you to Pompeii for 6 lire. A whole long day, a handsome driver, a fine carriage, and all to yourself for 6 lire,' he summed up, flashing a triumphant face full upon me.

"'If you gave me the cab and the harness and the horse thrown in,' I wailed, 'I wouldn't go. You couldn't pay me to go. I know that old road. Besides, I want to start for home. Amerika! Home!'

"He drove and drove. I got absorbed in the things we passed. In the doorways, back of which was invariably the single room of the family, the one large bed, the three chairs at the foot of it, the table, and in the rear the altar, before which burned the little lamp to the Blessed Virgin, and in her humble worshippers, who lived, it seemed, on the door steps, there being only one room inside.

"There played the children, the little ragged girls of 5 and 6 holding the bambino done up in swaddling clothes, tossing it between them as they would toss an overgrown doll, and the boys more ragged yet, if that were possible. There were the dogs, cats, the chickens, and now and then a proud turkey, ignominiously tied, far from barnyards and its kind, by a string to a post.

"I didn't know which I pitied most, the babies in training for cripples swaddled so, their tiny limbs so unnaturally bound, the unwashed cats and dogs, or the turkeys in chains.

"I recalled my destination with a start.

"'Where are we?' I demanded to know.

"'The station is about a mile back yonder,' my handsome driver said stolidly, 'and you'll be too late for your train. I'm taking you to Pompeii now for 5 lire.'

"I could have wept, but what was the use? I was now too late for my train.

"'Anyway,' I petitioned, 'you'll rescue me from the beggars. Won't you? When you get to them drive fast.'

"To my amazement he complied. We sped past the man with the withered arm, the cripple tangled up with the donkey, and passed another cab. The driver flung a bright look at me.

"'Do you see that man?' he asked.

"'Yes,' I answered.

"'Well, he's my brother,' gloated he.

He seemed to have an oversupply of brothers, but he endeavored to compensate for bringing me out of my way for five lire by showing me the sights.

"He pointed out all the pictures of the saints by the roadside, the crucifixes on the walls, the Holy Virgins at the corners of the lead-colored houses, until at last the wide sweep of level country where the dust and ashes of the buried city were began to show.

"Arrived there, a babbling guide hurried me through with the velocity of a whirlwind, showed me broken columns, old fountains, Madusa heads with the faces worn away by hands long since ashes, the buried dog, its mouth in the attitude of barking, prints of chariot wheels, gray walls through the apertures of which the smoky peak of the mountain that had done all the harm glowed purple, and hurried me out again through the gate to my cab.

"My cabby stood there smiling, a man beside him who was even handsomer than he.

"'My brother,' said he.

"I smiled and bowed, and we started over the long gray road of the poor to Naples.

"The sight saddened me. I wished I had started for America, for home! As we bumped over the terrible slags of the Naples streets my resentment grew. It was not lessened by the behavior of my guide. Three times more he had pointed out brothers. Now he leaned over to me, smiled, and pointed out another before we drove up to my door.

"Some acquaintances ran out, amazed at seeing me.

"'I thought,' they cried, 'that your started for home this morning.'

"'I thought so, too,' said I, 'but my cabby thought differently.'"

McCarthy was boasting of the prominence of his family in bygone ages. "But there were no McCarthy's in Noah's ark," said O'Brien. "No," said McCarthy, "our family was very exclusive in those days and had yachts of their own."

This Coffee Pot FREE

Why Dalton's French Drip Coffee is so Wholesome, Delicious and Economical

When you have once tasted Dalton's delicious French Drip Coffee, made in a Dalton's French Drip Coffee Pot, you will never be tempted to drink ordinary boiled Coffee again.

The Coffee berry, or bean, is protected by nature from the insect world by a tough outer shell or husk which contains tannin and other acid, bitter principles which are poisonous to insects and certainly not wholesome to the human system.

Other roasters of Coffee do not remove this bitter husk, and this is why many people find that ordinary Coffee does not agree with them. Not only that, but the usual way of roasting Coffee in cylinders over coke or gas fires, drives off the volatile essences, so essential to aroma and flavor.

Dalton's French Drip Coffee

The DALTON way is to throw the Coffee berries against an intensely hot flame. This roasts them in half the time and prevents the volatile essences being driven off. Then the Coffee is cooled by a special process, during which a strong suction air-blast blows off all foreign substances. Next comes the grinding, during which another powerful air-blast removes the poisonous, bitter outer shell. The Coffee contains absolutely no chicory and is packed in sealed tins, which preserve all the delightful flavor.

We make Dalton's French Drip Coffee in two strengths Mild Blend and Strong Blend. You cannot tell however which you will like the best until you try both and that is why we ask you to buy two tins in our special offer.

SINGULAR COINCIDENCES

The "Delhi" is Wrecked Just When Delhi is Being Made the Capital and Other Amazing Combinations.

Another of the remarkable coincidences of history has taken place in the concurrence of the holding of the Durbar in India at Delhi simultaneously with the wreck of the P. and O. liner Delhi near Tangier, on the coast of Morocco, at which the Princess Royal and her husband, the Duke of Fife, had such a narrow escape from drowning. At the moment the Delhi became a wreck the other Delhi was being created the capital of India.

"What's in a Name?"

Shakespeare has reminded us that there are more things in heaven and earth than are dreamt of in our philosophy, and it may be that the name given a man, city, or ship at birth may have some occult influence upon their future careers. On the day Lord Salisbury died a vessel called the Lord Salisbury was posted as missing at Lloyd's. The Czar's son, the Czarewitch, was born within forty-eight hours of the time when the Russian battleship the Czarewitch had her disastrous battle with Admiral Togo's fleet off Japan, and she was the only battleship heavily engaged. On the very day that the present Queen of Spain was married—King Edward's niece—a filly belonging to King Edward, bearing the same name, Victoria, won him his first race of the year.

The death of the King's aunt, the Princess Alice, happened within a few weeks of the dreadful accident to the vessel Princess Alice in the Thames.

It may be argued that multitude of well-known people have died or been brought into prominence by some great occurrence without anything happening to their namesakes, but, on the other hand, the same coincidences may have happened without their being publicly known. And it may be said that pure chance explains the most extraordinary similarities—the police-courts give us numerous instances. But what of the cases where the similarity is twofold or threefold?

Fact Beats Fiction.

Most people remember the Hickman poisoning case. A lady doctor called Sophia Hickman disappeared eight years ago from a hospital, and was found poisoned in a wood some days later. The 'Law Journal' found that thirty-seven years before a lady had vanished in a very similar way and was never seen again. This lady's name was also Sophia Hickman!

No wonder the superstitious gambler rushes to back the number or name which is in some way forced on his notice. The racecourse has supplied us with various curious coincidences: A horse called Togo beat Big Gun almost at the hour that outside Port Arthur, and another called Stolen Jewel won a race at Hurst Park within twenty-four hours of one of the most sensational jewel robberies of recent years. When Mr. Chaplin, the British ex-Minister, lost his seat in the House, the same day a horse named Chaplin lost a race.

Staging It.

A leading theatrical manager told a dramatic critic stories as he strolled in the bright, cold weather down the Strand.

"There was one chap," said he, "I couldn't get rid of. Dear me, he was persistent. I refused his farce seven times and he still kept turning up with it, re-written here and there.

"The eighth time he came I told him firmly it was no use.

"'But, sir,' he said, 'is there no possible way you could put my farce on the stage?'

"'Well,' said I, 'there's one way, but I don't know if you'd submit—'

"'Oh, I'd submit!' he cried. 'I'd submit to anything!'

"'Then,' said I, 'we'll grind it up and use it as a snow-storm.'"

Amazing Combinations.

Take the Humbert case. The Paris 'Figaro,' during the Humbert trial, discovered a play in which the principal character was a Therese Humbert (the same Christian name and surname as the distinguished embezzler); the plot revealed the palace of the ruined proprietress, which was sold up; there were shown piles of "dossiers," and a wealthy nobleman is introduced into the house very much like Mme Humbert's "Mr. Crawford." Yet this play was pro[illegible] years before the Humbert fraud was perpetrated.

Quite as remarkable was a play submitted to a well-known London theatrical manager eight months before the Goudie bank fraud. It forestalled the actual events of that celebrated case in no fewer than four particulars: (1) the robbing of a bank for the sake of gambling debts, (2) a pugilist named Burge, (3) a character named Marks, and (4) a jockey named Kelly. How many millions or trillions of odds against such a combination?

QUEER BAITS

Red Flannel for Pike and Tinned Salmon for Bass Are the Baits of the Up-to-date Fisherman.

The old description of fishing as "a worm at one end and a fool at the other" is no longer applicable. Mankind has found out that there are many other delicacies besides the worm which will attract fish, and every year the list of baits grow.

Go up any river on an August day, and watch the bank angler in pursuit of the wily chub. He has a regular larder ready to tempt the fish. Beef-fat, black slugs, crayfish-tails, gentles, small frogs — all these are taken by this sporting, coarse fish. A little earlier in the year the chub will notd isdain a ripe cherry, even when the barb of a fine hook is skillfully hidden in its juicy flesh.

Green Peas and Potatoes

One of the best baits for the shy and sluggish carp is a par-boiled potato, placed on a small triangle by means of a baiting-hook. Green peas are also appreciated by this fish, and a paste of flour, mixed with honey, will sometimes tempt a lusty ten-pounder.

Boiled wheat, wasp grubs, and cheese all make good carp bait. Wasp grubs are liked by most fish. They are too fragile to place on a hook while fresh. They should be steamed in the comb, and then slightly hardened in a warm oven before use.

Tench have a curious preference for congealed blood. The tench is almost as shy as the carp, and the hook must be so baited that none of it shows.

The roach is the pet quarry of most of the Saturday afternoon fishermen in and around the cities. Roach will take almost any kind of paste, also grubs in endless variety, as well as gentles. One of the oddest baits used for roach is "silk weed," a sort of water plant found growing in many rivers.

"Greaves" is the technical name for the refuse of the fatty materials from which tallow is made. It is a good bait for barbel, bream, and chub.

Pith is the spinal marrow of the bullock or cow, and must be boiled for about three minutes to prepare it for use. It is cut into pieces about the size of a hazel-nut.

The Sporting Sea Fish

The greediest of all our fresh-water fish is the pike, and there is hardly any bait which a pike will not strike at, when hungry. A pike has before now been caught on a piece of red flannel trailed upon a triangle. He will go savagely for any small fish, and one of the very best things for live baiting is a small goldfish, a creature which the pike, of course, has never seen before.

Sea fish have tastes almost as varied as their fresh-water cousins. The favourite sport of the Australian sea angler is fishing for the black bream — a very sporting customer. It is found in almost all inlets on the east and south coasts, and is taken with a small shrimp. But before beginning operations, the fisherman always ground baits the spot with a mixture of cheese and tinned salmon known as "berley."

The most sporting of British sea fish is the bass, a fine, silvery fellow of the perch tribe, which is found all round our coasts, both on rocky and sandy ground.

THAWED BACK TO LIFE

Remarkable Experiments With Fish and Frogs Frozen for Months in Ice Blocks.

Some remarkable experiments were made not long since at the University of Geneva by M. Raoul Pictet, whose name is intimately connected with the production of artificial cold. In the course of some work he was able to take live fish and place them in a tank. Then he froze the water in which the fish were swimming, so as to form a block of ice. After two or three months the block of ice was thawed out very slowly, and the seemingly dead fish came to life and swam about as usual. In a recent interview M. Pictet states that his first experiments upon life at very intense cold date nearly eighteen years back. He became convinced that if the chemical reactions of a living organism could be suspended without causing any organic lesion, the phenomena of life would disappear, but these would come back as soon as the organism was restored to the usual conditions. Great cold will suspend the operations of life as far as we are able to observe, but without losing it totally. The freezing must not be carried down too far in the case of fresh water fish, otherwise the fish will be killed. However, there are other animals which can stand a much greater amount of cold. Frogs come next in order to fish in this respect, and can be frozen down to 28 deg. C. below the freezing point. Some water lizards or salamanders will stand more cold, or 50 degrees. He finds that snails will resist the greatest amount of cold among the specimens which he tried, and they can be frozen as low as 120 deg. C. below the freezing point, and will then come back to animation.

PROFESSOR CALDWELL,

A McGill man with a big scientific reputation.

COLOURS OF THE OCEAN

It has been proved that the blueness of sea water is in constant ratio to its saltness. In the tropics the tremendous evaporation induced by the blazing sun causes the water to be much more salt than it is in higher latitudes. For about 30 degrees both north and south of the equator the waters of the world's oceans are of an exquisite azure. Beyond these latitudes the blue fades and changes to green, and in the Arctic and Antarctic Oceans the greens are almost as vivid as the tropical blue.

The extraordinary blueness of the Mediterranean has two causes. One is that very few large rivers of fresh water run into this sea; the second, that the Mediterranean is practically land-locked, and, being exposed to a powerful sun, evaporation is great. By actual test the waters of the Mediterranean are heavier and more salt than those of the Atlantic.

But blue and green are not the only colours observed in the world's seas and oceans. In January, 1909, a river of yellow water, three miles wide and of enormous length, was observed running parallel with the Gulf Stream. It stretched from Cape Florida to Cape Hatteras, and was undoubtedly caused by some tremendous submarine upheaval, probably of a volcanic nature.

Again, about nine years ago, the sea turned almost black off a large portion of the California coast. The whole of Santa Cruz Bay assumed this extraordinary inky hue, and fishing came abruptly to an end. In this case the darkness seems to have been caused by millions of tiny animalcules, known as whale food. The dull reddish tint which is occasionally seen in the Red Sea, and which has given that sea its name, has a similar cause. The water becomes full of microscopic algae — tiny weed.

China's Yellow Sea is usually supposed to owe its origin to the flood of muddy water which its great river pours into it. But here again modern science has proved that living organisms are responsible for its peculiar tint.

Occasionally, and for some cause as yet undiscovered, great areas of the ocean turn milkwhite. In March, 1904, the passengers and crew of a Japanese merchant vessel steaming at night between Hong Kong and Yokohama ran into a snow-white sea. It was an opaque, phosphorescent surface, but an expanse of pure snow-white, having a dazzling effect upon the eyes. The phenomenon lasted for six hours, and alarmed the passengers so greatly that not one slept at all that night.

Eight thousand gallons of fresh water are used in a large battleship daily. About two-thirds of this is taken up by the boilers, and the remainder is used for drinking, washing, etc.

NOT SUCH AN AWFUL WHIRL!

By Campbell Raymond

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

The clerks and officials in one of the smaller bureaus at Washington would, about now, seem to a casual visitor, to be afflicted with a chronic grin. Even the somewhat sedate Chief sometimes breaks into a solemn chuckle. The joke was rather on them, so they tried to keep it quiet, but it leaked out, of course. Briefly, it was nothing less than a grand, red paint whirl by the most circumspect clerk on Uncle Sam's payroll that caused that grin.

"Uncle Charlie," as he is called by everyone from the Chief to the messenger, is a meek, patient little man, weighing about one hundred and five, with mutton-chop whiskers, who has struggled along for fifteen years on a salary of $1,200. Twelve hundred dollars does not mean affluence down there when one has a family of five girls, and Uncle Charlie has always been seedy.

One by one the girls were married, however, and it came about that with the June roses the last of Uncle Charlie's responsibilities as to his family vanished. For several days after this event he was observed to wear a preoccupied look. Slowly his air of abstraction gave way to one of determination, and one sweltering afternoon, suddenly laying down his pen, he announced to the man at the next desk that he proposed to have a whirl.

The news ran like wildfire through the bureau, and presently employees began to pause casually beside Uncle Charlie's desk.

"Say," the office sport whispered. "You take my tip. Drink about an ounce of olive oil before you start in. You will last twice as long." He winked and went on.

"I wonder what that young man really meant?" Uncle Charlie pondered.

"I hear that you are going to give yourself a little recreation, Uncle Charlie," the Disbursing Clerk said, and gave him a playful dig in the ribs. "Of course you know that it is not exactly regular, but if you would like to have a little advance, why, er, I guess we could fix it up between us."

"That's very kind of you, sir, but I really don't think I shall need any advance," Uncle Charlie said, sorely perplexed.

"Perhaps you'd better leave the number of days blank on your application for leave, Uncle Charlie," the Chief advised, meeting him in the corridor. "But then," he added with sudden indulgence, "if you should happen to overstay the time coming to you, why, er, we'll just consider that you are sick and charge it up to sick leave."

That was on Tuesday. On Thursday Uncle Charlie's rusty alpaca coat was hanging on its usual hook and Uncle Charlie was at his old desk when the rest of the clerks came racing in at one minute to nine. Uncle Charlie was chipper and smiling, though his nose was curiously peeled. The office sport dropped his hat with its fancy band in his astonishment, and walked round and round Uncle Charlie, eyeing him from head to foot.

"Nary headache, as I live!" he finally gasped. "Say, Uncle Charlie, put me wise to that dope, will you? You look as fresh as a daisy!"

It was no use trying to disguise their curiosity, and presently half the office force, including the Chief, had gathered about Uncle Charlie's desk.

"Now, look here, Uncle Charlie," the Chief said; "we just want to know what you did, anyway. I guess we sort of—well, misunderstood your intentions."

"Well, it wasn't such an awful whirl, maybe, for one of you boys, but it was a right smart one for me," Uncle Charlie told them, as they pressed eagerly forward. "You see, for quite a long while I have had to look after things about the house — there were always so many little jobs that the girls couldn't do — and I used all my leave working at home. And I wouldn't have felt like being extravagant while they were dependent on me and required so many things. But after Louise was married —she was the last one, and their mother has been dead several years —why, I felt like letting myself out a little. It was one of the most delightful days I have ever experienced."

"But what did you do, Uncle Charlie?" they demanded in chorus.

"Why," he said, "first of all I went down town and bought this red necktie — I've always wanted one," he added bashfully. "And then I went out to the ball park, and bought a bag of peanuts, and sat on the bleachers in the sun, and drank pop, and watched the game. And say," Uncle Charlie concluded impressively, "Do you know, I really believe it was a better game than the one I saw fifteen years ago when our home town beat the Carter Corners' team thirty-seven to twenty-eight!"

Parental Tactics.

A worried parent is sometimes obliged to do something like this:—"Pa, what is a transcendentalist?" "Have you chained up the dog, as I told you?" "Not yet, pa." "Well, do that, and when you come back I will tell you what a transcendentalist is." While Bobby was gone his astute parent dug the needed information out of a dictionary.

A man's ideal woman is simply one who believes everything he tells her.

Sons of the King.

The Prince of Wales, much to his disappointment, it is said, is not destined for a naval career. He may spend only six months on the 'Hindustan,' and after that enter a cavalry regiment.

The future of the King's next son, Prince Albert, has been engaging the King's attention lately, and it is understood that he will eventually become a midshipman. In his case the navy will furnish him with a career. Prince Henry, the third son, is not fitted for the strenuous life of a sailor and he may, after spending some years at Eton, be gazetted to a cavalry regiment.

Mr. Graham's prospects of election in the strongly Grit constituency of South Renfrew are so dim that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is to address two meetings on his behalf.

"WHAT IS SLEEP?"

What is sleep? According to the general definition, sleep is a condition of unconsciousness where all the senses are at rest.

Yet, though this may be true enough there still remains the question, "What causes the actual lapse into unconsciousness?" One theory sets out that sleep is due to a bloodless condition of the brain, which is accounted for by the drawing off of blood in order that the other fatigued organs of the body may be replenished.

As to the amount of sleep required by individuals, there is the popular saying: "Five hours for the man, six for a woman, and seven for the fool." It has been noticed, however, that a woman is better able to stand loss of sleep than a man.

The sleep of flowers and animals is very curious. With regard to flowers, the closing of their petals is usually influenced by the action of the sun; but in the case of animals the state of slumber resembles pretty much that of man, except where the lowest form of animal life is found. For instance, the sleep of some reptiles, fishes, and insects may go on for days, and even months. Speaking of flowers, there are some that sleep in the day, awakening only in the evening. The tobacco-plant and the evening primrose are examples.

"Come, please accommodate me. I'll give you my word that you shall be paid back in full within a week. You know I'm as honest as the day is long, don't you?"

"Well, yes, I've heard you were, but the days are growing very short now."

"I dunno how Bill's a-goin' to vote in this election," said the campaign worker. "I've heard tell he's on the fence."

"He wuz thar," replied the neighbour; "but one o' the candidates let fall a $5 bill on the off side o' the fence, and Bill got dizzy an' fell over."

The young man had gone to the heiress's father — always a ticklish job — but he took his courage with an iron grip. "Sir," he blurted out, "I want to ask you your daughter's hand."

The old man, not in the least disconcerted, said: "Which hand? The one she signs cheques with, I suppose?"

Useful

Tom Purdie, an old man-servant in Sir Walter Scott's household, used to talk of the famous "Waverley Novels" as "our books," and said that the reading of them was the greatest comfort to him.

"Whenever I am off my sleep," he confided to Mr. James Skene, the author of "Memories of Sir Walter Scott," "I have only to take one of the novels, and before I have read two pages it is sure to send me asleep."

THE INGENIOUS GERMAN

German ingenuity has solved a difficult engineering problem at a Doncaster colliery, where, in sinking a shaft for Sir Arthur Markham, M.P., water was encountered. It was being pumped out at the rate of 7,000 gallons a minute, and it looked as though the sinkers would be beaten. Then the Germans came to the rescue with their freezing process.

They bored holes round the shaft to a depth of 400 ft. These holes were then lined with steel tubes, and an inner tube was inserted, down which brine was pumped from the freezing plant, converting all the water, sand, and bad ground into a frozen block of ice. The sinking was then continued through the ice wall.

When the bottom of the ice had been reached iron tubing plates were fixed, and the water thus fastened back. This being completed, warm water was pumped down the tubes to thaw the ground gradually. The frost wall was so strong that it has required three months to thaw it.

Unbreakable Glass

The glass-makers of Baccarat, France, have produced the first glass that is unbreakable. The new process has been successfully applied to the manufacture of lamp chimneys for use in coal-mines containing much fire-damp. The makers have also succeeded in increasing the elasticity of the glass. This they accomplish by adding magnesium oxide to the ordinary crystal glass.

New Ground for Divorce.

Mme. Marie Krisoff, a well-known Russian actress living at Vilna, is petitioning for a divorce from her husband — a noted marksman — on grounds which it is safe to say have never before been urged. The lady, it seems, is partial to the wearing of high-heeled boots, and she alleges that as she takes her walks round her garden her husband has been exercising his marksmanship by shooting off the heels!

The Emperor Gorges Himself.

The "Hoei Pao" says that an American doctor recently visited the palace at Peking to examine the baby Emperor, who, it was found, had gorged himself with a meal of swallows' nests (a sort of glutinous material), and thus provoked a raging thirst. The indisposition yielded easily to the doctor's treatment. The Emperor sleeps in a gigantic bed, big enough for six people! he rises at six, at once has a meal of rice-gruel or rice, and then goes to pay his respects to the Dowager Lung-yu.

A sculptor recently produced the likeness of a celebrated personage in whose biography it was mentioned that he regarded architecture as a very secondary art. The son of this personage visited the artist's studio for the purpose of examining the bust, when, after considering it with the air of a connoisseur, he inquired, "Could you not express more clearly his contempt for architecture?"

The heart of a man is divided into many compartments, mostly isolated. Sometimes there is a door between two of them, or even three may be joined together, but usually each one is complete in itself.

"Lion" Too Powerful.

London, Feb. 15.—It transpires that the trouble with the new dreadnought Lion, necessitating extensive alterations in the engine and boiler rooms, is the development of abnormal heat by her powerful engines. In other words she develops too much power.

THE MAN WHO BEAT BIG BEN

Like a forest fire, the news swept the camp. Big Ben, the mighty, champion sawyer of the world, had been done up, beaten to a lay-down, whipped, humbled — and by an Indian. Wonders would never cease. The loggers swore when they heard the news, but there was one satisfaction back of it all. There would be a fight worth going miles to see.

And that night, in camp, the gauntlet was hurled. Big Ben, striding upon his silent conqueror, knotted his huge fists and glowered down upon him. "You——" he said wickedly. "I'll make your head break your back." The Indian stared back stolidly.

"Mebbyso."

"When will you fight?"

"Sunday good 'nuff day for me."

The white man turned away with a growl. This was Friday night, and the time mentioned was not unreasonably distant. He rolled himself in his blankets, grumbling like an angry bear; but the Indian, slipping quietly from the room, stood long in the biting air without, his face again turned toward the North. And as he looked and listened there came through the starlight night a long, faint, quavering howl, and at its first note he started as though stung. With a quick leap, he reached the bunk house, and, snatching his snowshoes from the peg where they hung against the logs, thrust his feet into the straps, and went slipping away among the dark woods, along his almost obliterated trail of three days before.

Kenny, a hostler, coming from the stable, saw him as he vanished in the forest, and hurried with the news to the long building.

"The Injun has "puckacheed," skipped out, dead scart to fight," he said disgustedly. And Big Ben, hearing the words, sat up in his bunk, and roared with disappointment and rage.

Down the steep hillside that led to the lake, the runaway shuffled and slid, the razor-edged air of the night cutting keenly through flannels and deerskin. At the edge of the frozen surface he stopped and swept it with his black eyes, but it lay like a spotless sheet, and he hurried on. Ahead of him was a low peninsula of tangled, snow-buried brush heaps, and as he rounded its point he gave a guttural cry, for a quarter of a mile ahead of him a black mass lay upon the snow, while slinking upon it from the shadow of the near-by forest was the gaunt form of one of the great gray runners of the North woods.

"Puckachee!" cried the man, from a distance of four yards. The wolf's lip curled.

"Get out," repeated the Indian, more harshly, his knife suddenly gleaming in the moonlight. Slowly, ominously, the brute got upon all fours; and, with ears flattened and legs held stiffly, paced around the man at a distance of six feet. The latter, seeing his great size, his gauntness, and the famine in his eyes, crouched and pivoted in his tracks, with his blade held low. Three times the beast made the circle complete, and three times the man turned round and round about, and never for an instant did the red eyes of the one or black eyes of the other fail to meet, point to point. Then the Indian rushed.

With a catlike leap, a snarl, and a snap of his teeth, the wolf was far to one side, while the assailant, tripping unluckily, fell floundering through the crust, from the violence of the wasted knife sweep. And, before he could clear the smother from his eyes, the stilettolike teeth of the starving one had sunk into his right wrist, and at the first crunch of the iron jaws the knife fell from the helpless hand. But the man, twisting like a worm, buried the sinewy fingers of his free hand in the shaggy throat above him, and floundered to his knees.

Not many men have strangled a timber wolf that stood three feet high at the shoulder with their naked hand; but, for that matter, only one man ever bore the brunt of Big Ben's giant strength, and came off victorious. The Indian killed his enemy with the strength that the protecting spirit of lovers gave him; choked him until the slathering jaws fell apart, and the glowing eyes grew dull as dead ashes. Then, bleeding and dizzy, he arose.

"Live," he whispered, as he painfully swung the motionless form of the woman across his broad shoulders. "Live, and I will always work and hunt for you. And may Mo-no-ko lend me his strength once more, for the trail is long, and my strength runs away like the waters of a river." Bent nearly double beneath his burden, he shambled across the bosom of the lake, floundered up the ridge, reeled along the summit, and fell prostrate upon the floor of the bunk house.

Slowly the sleep-benumbed camp aroused itself, and stared through heavy eyelids at the senseless woman and gasping man, with the red ice thick upon his sleeve. Then, one by one, they crept from their bunks and bent over the motionless pair. Little was said, but muscle-knotted arms laid them tenderly in a bunk, and rough hands chafed the icy wrists of the girl until she sat up, gazed wonderingly about; and then, with a cry, threw herself upon the still heavily breathing form by her side.

"It is the wish of Mo-no-ko that we part no more," said he, as his hand closed over hers. "Your tongue was long, and my patience short, yet you are my squaw, and our trails should run side by side. One tepee is enough for both of us, and the wolfskin shall cover us when we are old."

Big Ben slowly got upon his feet, and glared at his companions. "That Injun is the best man in the woods, and I want to hear some one say different," he said threateningly. "He's the one man that's got me beat, and we two will saw those others out of their hides yet. Shake hands, partner."

A Sign in Gray's Inn Road.

A correspondent thinks he has discovered the shortest shop front name in London. It is above a shop in Gray's Inn road—simply, S. Be. There is some sort of accent on the 'e,' but the sign writer seems doubtful about it. Can you beat that name for brevity?

A regular meeting of the Board of Education will be held this evening.

Perhaps a rolling stone gathers no moss because it isn't on the level.

Woman's World

Lady Muir Macknzie, writing in 'Votes for Women,' says that the last fifty years have brought a great awakening to the women of India. When Queen Victoria came to the throne there was practically not a single institution in India which occupied itself with female education. To-day an ever increasing number of girls seek and obtain education. Their aspirations reach beyond mere book-learning. They are beginning to think of the vast problems which beset mankind, and to interest themselves in social service.

During the seven years I spent in India, says the writer, I witnessed a great upspringing of new life amongst the women. A number of movements were set on foot which showed that Indian women, conservative though they are, are influenced by Western ideals. The founding of the Seva Sadan sisterhood in Bombay seemed to me especially significant. In this sisterhood, Hindu, Parsee and Moslem women work together. Thus to see women of conflicting creeds and opinions united for the first time in philanthropic work is a most remarkable development. Some of the sisters visit in the hospitals and slums of Bombay; others teach or nurse the sick in the institute attached to the sisterhood. One charming Mohammedan woman of my acquaintance is obliged to keep purdah, but she helps the sisterhood by teaching needlework to destitute children in her own home.

Another sufferer under the Hindu system—the child widow—has of late found protection amongst the educated women of her country.

Modern thought is influencing the outlook of Indian women. Their capacity is undoubted, they readily assimilate Western learning, and take university degrees in medicine and literature. Their courage is truly touching, and if they desire education no difficulties daunt them. There were up to the time of my departure, no women's colleges in Inda, but at one of the leading colleges I have seen one girl studying in a class of a hundred young men.

LACE GOWNS AND SASHES.

Evening gowns of lace are among the new importations, very handsome and good laces only being employed Sometimes two or three different kinds of lace are combined in one gown. Filet mesh heavily darned or embroidered is used again, in combination with Venetian and other laces. These gowns are mounted over satin slips with softening interlining of chiffon. One interesting model hs the ivory lace bodice and skirt mounted over Egyptian blue satin, the distinctive feature being a drapery from the shoulders, of a lace wedding veil caught with jewelled stars. A simple arrangement in some models is with the lace of the bodice portion draped over the shoulders like a fichu, extending to the waist back and front, showing the underslip at the sides under the arms, the sleeves being of layers of the mousseline or chiffon interlining.

Quite frequently one sees an odd colored sash used to give an unusual color scheme to the gown. This was daringly attempted in a frock of fine Brussels lace, which was mounted over a rose-petal pink satin covered with flesh-pink chiffon. The sash was in brilliant blue and deep orange taffeta It was wound around the waist and ended in two long streamers at the left side.

Another gown of apricot-pink satin has an overdress of filet net embroidered with darned work in white floss. This is opened at the side and is shorter than the underskirt, which is trimmed with a flounce of pink chiffon. The sash is a deep yellow and a queer shade of red, and is finished with a small Japanese bow at the back, and the long panel ends are held in place with tassels of brilliants.

PARISIAN SPRING STYLES.

The dressmakers who have flocked to Paris as the Mecca of fashion from London, New York and elsewhere, had their first view of the coming spring fashions yesterday afternoon.

Owing to the ruthless manner in which new ideas have been stolen in the past, a most vigorous supervision was exercised over this private view, only those furnished with credentials being admitted.

The Louis XVI. panier dress was in evidence everywhere. The new model however, is not the historical costume generally known by that name. The panier consists of a kind of gauzy mass of tulle, and is but slightly defined, The skirts cling about the figure, but are very wide around the feet.

Other models reflect the direct influence of the Greek. The straight line is not discernible in all the recent tight-fitting fashions, disappearing in favor of the spiral effect.

A third style in robes is a deep slash running from the ankle well up the gown, the slash being filled in with lace, mousseline de soie, or tulle. No underskirts are worn with these frocks.

Shot taffeta is rarely seen in the new evening robes, its employment being practically confined to afternoon and tailor-made dresses.

The "tailor-made" is entirely changed, being made in three tiers. No two jackets are alike. The material is mostly black and white striped taffeta, a new material known as silk crepe, and another new material resembling Irish poplin. Other "tailor-mades" are in three colors, trimmed with very elaborate embroideries in spiral lines.

SWALLOWS' NEST OF BANK-NOTE

Also How a Mouse Stole $40 Worth of Notes to Make a Home.

A pair of swallows of Fiberbrunn, in the Tyrol, have stolen a number of ten-kronen bank-notes to line their nest.

The parent birds discovered that the new notes were just the shade of blue to match their eggs, the tissue being tough but flexible, and exactly the material they needed. The nest and the missing notes were only discovered when the swallows had abandoned it and it fell to the ground.

This feat has been equalled by that of an enterprising mouse in Dornbirn, which abstracted a number of twenty-kronen notes to the value of $40, of a delicate reddish brown shade, from the cash drawer of a butcher, and, tearing them to pieces, adapted them to the purpose of making a nest for her family of seven. The butcher in his search for the notes suspected and traced the mouse, and found the nest under the boarding. He carefully picked up the remains of the notes and returned them to the bank, where they were pieced together. The butcher recovered $37.50, the bank claiming $2.50 for "material loss" caused by the mouse's teeth.

THE HOUSE FLY.

The Most Filthy Insect Known.

This fly, called "Typhoid Fly," on account of its being known as a carrier of typhoid germs, is one of the filthiest insects with which we have to contend. It also carries the germs of tuberculosis and other diseases, and is a menace to the health of the family.

It breeds in fresh horse-manure and other filth, hence, when the stable is near the house, flies are apt to be more numerous. Use screens on the windows; resort to the use of sticky fly paper; keep garbage pails and privy vaults securely closed; if possible, keep stable manure covered.

Some farmers' wives hang stiky fly paper, sticky side out, on the outside of their screen doors, at the top; which, in warm weather, catches flies which gather there.

Flies are attracted and can be killed by the following solution: Place in a room two teaspoonfuls of formaldehyde (formalin) in a pint of water. Flies drink this and shortly die. This not only kills the fly, but serves to disinfect the insect after death.

Intestinal discharges from patients suffering from typhoid, or any other fever, should be sterilized before being emptied into the cesspool.

Traffic on the Lakes.

Canada's Soo Canal traffic, 1909, season of eight months, 57,985,149 tons; Suez Canal, all of 1909, 15,407,527 tons.

Canada's canals traffic, 1910, 45,-over 1909.

The "Midland Prince" broke all records in grain cargoes on July 7th, 1910, by sailing from Fort William with 523,251 bushels of oats.

There are 111 vessels in the Lake Superior trade over 500 feet in length, and 157 between 400 and 500 feet in length.

There were carried down the lakes during 1909, 113,253,561 bushels of wheat, and over 46,500,000 bushels of grain other than wheat.

Dairying in Ontario.

Ontario's dairy industry was valued in 1909 at $31,000,000, with 97 creameries and 1,777 cheese factories, and 35 Government dairy institutions.

Three-quarters of the dairy product of Canada comes from Ontario.

Milk deliverd at cheese factories, 1,661,039,751 lbs.; cheese production therefrom, 120,624,436 lbs.; value of cheese, $13,106,919. Butter made at creameries, 9,895,109 lbs.; value of butter, $2,355,170. Value of milk and butter made on farms, over $10,000,000.

Average value of Ontario dairy products for the past 5 years is at least $30,000,000, and in two or three banner years, $35,000.

Railroad Ticket Printed While You Wait.

The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company have installed a remarkable automatic machine at Sandhills Station, Liverpool, by which, on dropping a penny in a slot, a ticket is printed, dated and cut. The machine is worked electrically, the power being supplied from the live rail. When the supply of cardboard is running short, the clerks in the office are warned by the ringing of a bell.

Cannot Export Feathers.

Plumage skins or eggs of native birds of Australia and New Guinea car no longer be exported, this having been prohibited by the Australian Commonwealth Government.

Average value in farm crops and fruits in Canada, 1901, $10.33 per acre; United States (including subtropical products), $9.41.

Canada's Fishing Fleet.

Canada has a fishing fleet of 1,723 vessels, and 41,170 boats, manned by 68,663 men. 21,694 employed on shore. Total, 90,357.

A Big Investment.

Capital employed in manufacturing industries, 1900, $446,916,487; 1905, $456,585,023; 1911, estimated at $1,000,000,000.

He raised only $13, and everybody's wondering who the other 12 boobs were who gave a dollar apiece.

LOCAL TREATMENT FOR WOMEN'S DISORDERS

The health we enjoy depends very largely upon how the blood circulates in our bodies; in other words, if we have perfect circulation we will have perfect health.

There is a constant wearing out of the tissues in every part of the body. The blood flowing through the veins carries off this waste or dead matter, while the blood coming from the heart through the arteries brings the fresh new living tissue, the essence of the food we have digested, to replace what has been carried off. This constant wearing out and expelling of the dead matter and the replacing of it with new matter, atom by atom, goes on day and night, until in about 7 years a complete change has been effected. Thus every man and woman has an entirely different body in every particle of it from what he or she had 7 years before.

It sometimes happens, however, from a variety of causes, that the blood becomes congested in certain portions of the body. This means that the blood vessels in these parts become weakened, and the circulation in that section of the body becomes sluggish and stagnant. The consequence is that the dead matter in that part of the body is only partially carried away, and that but little of the new, vital matter is introduced there to build up and strengthen the tissues and nerves.

This condition invariably exists in all cases of female disorders. The dead matter retained in the circulation, which should have been expelled, causes irritation and inflammation of the delicate memberane, and oppresses the nerve centres. This condition is the cause of the grievous physical and mental suffering which accompanies female troubles.

To obtain relief it is evident that the first thing to be done is to get rid of the dead matter which is being held in the circulation. If this dead matter is allowed to remain there a species of blood poisoning will result and nature will endeavor to get rid of it by forming ulcers, tumors, etc.

The above explanation will also show why ORANGE LILY is so successful in curing this condition. It is a local treatment, and is applied direct to the affected organs. Its curative elements are absorbed into the congested tissue, and from the very start the dead matter begins to be discharged. A feeling of immense relief, both mental and physical, accompanies it, and the improvement is constant and positive. This feature of the expelling of the dead matter is always present to a greater or less extent, and in some cases it is so marked as to be amazing. The case described in the following letter is not exceptional:

Dr. Coonley—I am thankful to Mrs. F. E. Currah, your Canadian representative, for my health restored by your wonderful remedy. I have suffered for 17 years, but not so bad until 3 years ago. Then I had a doctor, who told me I had a tumor, and could live no more than a year. If I went through an operation I would not live through it. A year later I sent for him again, and he gave me up to die. My husband then sent for another doctor, who performed an operation, and it did me much good. I doctored with him 3 or 4 months, but became so bad again that I thought I could live no longer, and I began to long to die. One day my husband came home and threw a slip of paper to me with Mrs. Currah's address and told me a lady had advised him to write to her for a treatment that would cure me. I said it was too late, that I would die anyway. I could not lift a teacup without hurting me. Then the first doctor told me I was worse than ever. However, my husband sent for ORANGE LILY, and the third treatment brought away one tumor. Others followed, until 7 tumors had been expelled, 3 large ones and 4 small ones. I know if it had not been for ORANGE LILY I would have died, for I could not live much longer. I would have thought it cheap at one hundred dollars for a month's treatment, instead of one dollar. It is worth its weight in gold.—MRS. GEO. LEWIS, Huntsville, Ont.

The above letter is published with Mrs. Lewis' permission. All letters received are treated as being sacredly confidential, but occasionally some patient feels so grateful for being cured that she is willing to make the matter known for the benefit and encouragement of her suffering sisters.

ORANGE LILY is a positive, scientific remedy for all disorders of the female functions. As explained above these troubles are of local origin, and require local treatment. It is just as sensible to take medicine internally for female troubles as it would be to take medicine internally for a bruise, a boil or an ulcerated tooth. In all these cases some dead matter is being retained, and the cure is effected by employing local methods for expelling the dead matter. ORANGE LILY has antiseptic, soothing and healing properties, and also tones up and invigorates blood vessels and nerves. I am so anxious that every suffering woman may satisfy herself, without cost to her, that ORANGE LILY will cure her, that I hereby make the following

FREE TRIAL OFFER

I will send, without charge, to every reader of this notice who suffers in any way from any of the troubles peculiar to women, if she will send me her address, enough of the ORANGE LILY treatment to last her ten days. In many cases this trial treatment is all that is necessary to effect a complete cure, and in every instance it will give very noticeable relief. If you are a sufferer, you owe it to yourself, to your family and to your friends to take advantage of this offer and get cured in the privacy of your home, without doctors' bills or expense of any kind. Address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont.

THEY STOLE OVER $10,000 WORTH OF DIAMONDS

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—A John Street diamond dealer was blackjacked robbed of between $9,000 and $10,000 worth of unset diamonds in 35th Street, just east of Sixth Avenue a little before seven o'clock, by men who jumped out of an automobile, and after the robbery made their get-away in the machine. This is the third highway orbbery in New York streets within a week in which an automobile has been used by the highwaymen and the second within a little over 30 hours. George T. Horth, the victim of the latest of these outrages, was unable to give the police much information to work on, the whole affair occurred su quickly, and he was so stunnned by blows on his head, Horth cannot even say how many men took part in the assault and robbery, except that there must have been at least two.

The diamond dealer, waiting for a customer to keep an appointment with him, was walking leisurely along the south side of 35th Street, from Fifth Avenue When he was within 200 feet of Sixth Avenue he was conscious that an automobile, coming up behind him, had slowed down almost opposite him and close to the curb. At almost the same instant he was struck on the back of the head with a blackjack. The blow made him reel. A second blow following in the fraction of a second sent him to his knees on the sidewalk. He raised his hand over his head to ward off the blows and the third smashed his thumb. His elbows were held together from behind, and an arm reaching around from behind rippel oopen his overcoat and pulled out a leather wallet from the right hand inside pocket of the under coat. Although there seemed to plenty of persons on the street an instant before, there seemed to be nobody passing just at that moment. Horth tried to call for help, but was faint from the blows on his head.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

MISSION AT ST. MICHAEL'S

Fathers McPhail and Welsh of the Redemptorist order, commenced a week's mission at St. Michael's Church last night. The sacred edifice was crowded to the doors.

A FAMILY JAR

On Saturday evening the police were called to the Metropolitan Block, corner of Front and Campbell Streets, where a family quarrel was in progress. Upon the arrival of the blue coat, peace was restored and no arrest was made.

A LITTLE BLAZE

At 10.20 this morning the fire brigade was called to the residence of Misses Murfey, Bridge Street West. Plumbers were engaged about the premises when a lamp they were using ignited some woodwork, which caused a blaze, which fortunately was put out by an extinguisher. The damage was slight.

DOG BIT HORSE

Mr. John Brintnell of this city reports to the police that a horse belonging to him was severely bitten upon the leg by a dog. The horse was being driven along the street when the canine attacked it. The dog is said to belong to a man named Parks residing in the east side of the city. The streets ought to be cleared of these vicious curs which bark and snap at horses, and occasionally pedestrians.

AFRIENDLY VISIT.

On Saturday evening, Feb. 10th, about forty neighbors and friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Stark, 4th concession of Sidney, on the eve of their departure for their new home in Roslin. Mr. and Mrs. Stark were presented with a purse as a token of the esteem in which they were held. The address was read by Mr. F. J. Knight, the presentation being made by Mrs. E. Ketcheson. The company dispersed at an early hour, all having spent an enjoyable evening. Mr. and Mrs. Stark were formerly residents of Prince Edward County, and we believe their Prince Edward friends will join with us in wishing them every success in their new home.

TEMPLARS HAD INTERESTING MEETING.

An extremely interesting gospel temperance meeting under the auspices of the Royal Templars of Belleville was held in the lecture room of the new Y.M.C.A. yesterday afternoon, which was attended by a large number of local ladies and gentlemen who are intecrsted in the cause. Following a cheery song service, and a brief address by Chairman P. C. McLaurin, B.A., Mr. W. C. Senior, of Toronto, delivered a very instuctive address, giving a sketch of temperance conditions throughout the country, and sending home facts worth pondering. He was followed by the Rev. W. G. Clarke, B.A., of the Tabernacle in a forceful address, along the same lines. A pleasing solo by Mrs. McLaurin and an appropriate reading by Miss Jessie Tuite, added much to the afternoon's programme. The society, as reported by its leading members, is doing an aggressive work in this section and many new members are being added.

COUNCIL TO-NIGHT.

A regular meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. There does not appear to be much business for transaction.

DIDN'T DELIVER

On Saturday Mr. W. H. Snider, who resides on Hillside Street, purchased a bag of potatoes from a yeoman upon the market. The latter, for some reason, neglected to deliver the same.

WERE THROWN OUT

At about noon on Sunday a young lady and gentleman were driving along Bridge Street West when the horse ran away. In turning sharply at the corner of West Bridge and Cedar Streets the cutter was upset and the occupants thrown out, but they fortunately escaped serious injuries. The animal was caught after it had ran for some distance. The cutter was slightly damaged.

SPEEDED ON HIS WAY

Charles Simmons, a vagrant, entered the police station about midnight on Saturday and asked for lodging. He became abusive when asked the usual questions and wanted to run the place, but could not do so. He was locked up. This morning the Magistrate gave him an opportunity to leave the city, which he took advantage of.

PRESENTATION AT ST. ANDREW'S.

At the Brotherhood Bible Class in connection with St. Andrew's Church Sunday School yesterday afternoon a presentation took place. Mr. Hickens a native of Dutch Guiana, who has been for some time a member of the class, is leaving for Rochester, N.Y., and he was presented with a handsome pocket book. Rev A. S. Kerr, pastor and teacher of the class, made the presentation, referring briefly to Mr. Hickens and regretting his departure. The recipient made an appropriate reply.

MISSIONARY SERVICES

At the Baptist Church yesterday missionary services were held, the speaker of the day being Mr. W. C. Senior of Toronto, who is secretary of the Baptist Laymen's Missionary Movement in Canada. There was a good congregation present at the services and the addresses were much appreciated. Mr. Senior has a pleasing personality, and is a forceful and eloquent speaker. He is thoroughly imbued with the missionary spirit and imparts the same to his hearers. The evening service was particularly pleasing on account of the musical selections, by the orchestra, a solo by Mr. Wilks and an excellent anthem by the choir.

Montreal Gets Irish Potatoes.

MONTREAL, Feb. 16— The introduction of New Zealand butter having had the effect of reducing prices here from 40 cents a pound to 30cents, wholesalers have decided to import potatoes ten thousand bags of which have arrived from Ireland. Potatoes have been retailing at $2.00 a bag.

AN EXPERIMENT

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—Local hospitals and gas company officers will investigate the claims of and probably bring here the new machine which the officials of the Bureau of Mines at Washington claim will restore life to persons apparently dead from gas asphyxiation. It is hoped thus to lessen the number of gas tragedies here.

CHARTER DAY CELEBRATION AT ALBERT COLLEGE

Students and Teachers Had a Happy Time—Skating Was Followed by an Oyster Supper.

On Friday last the students and teachers of Albert College celebrated "Charter Day." An enjoyable aftrenoon was spent in skating on the college rink, after which the students were given an oyster supper in the dining room. In the evening the following programme was given in the college chapel:

Solo	Miss Girlie Smith
Reading	Miss Laura Stewart
Piano selection	Miss Davis
Solo	Mr. Andrews
Piano selection	Miss Smith
Song	Miss Ivy Dickens
Club Swinging	by four young ladies
Male Quartette—Prof. Cameron, Staples, Burrill and Mr Dyson.
Solo	Miss Free
Reading	Mr. Andrews
Organ selection	Prof. Thomas
Solo	Prof Burrill
Glee Club selection

Dr. Dyer presided in his usual genial manner, and added much to the evening's entertainment. The happy day was closed in a social hour.

OID BELLEVILLE

(Tune: "Loyola 'U.' ")

The following verses were sung at the annual dinner of the Belleville Club at Chicago, on the 24th of January:

Old Belleville!
Dear Belleville!
Prettiest spot on earth,
Home of our younger days,
Scenes of our boyhood plays.
We love you yet, nor will forget
We owe to you our birth.
Chorus.

Old Belleville!
Fair Belleville!
Builded on old Moira's banks.
While we're here, give a cheer
For our dear, good, old Belleville.
Oh, Moi-ra! Oh, Moi-ra!
Good old Belleville.

Old Belleville!
Dear Belleville!
To you we'll ne'er grow cold.
Happy may your homes be,
Filled with sweet harmony,
Holding your place well in the race,
As in the days of old.
Chorus.

Old Belleville!
Fair Belleville!
Nestling by old Quinte's side.
While we're here, give a cheer
For our dear, good, old Belleville.
Oh, Moi-ra! Oh, Moi-ra!

Mackenzie!
Mackenzie!
First of old Belleville boys,
We love you, of all, the best.
You're eighty-eight, we think you're great,
Good Sir Mackenzie Bowell.
Chorus.

Sir Mackenzie!
Sir Mackenzie!
You have come a long way tonight.
While we're, here give a cheer
For our dear Sir Mackenzie.
Oh, Moi-ra! Oh Moi-ra!
Mackenzie dear!

GRAIN ACT AMENDED

Ottawa, Feb. 18.—Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, deputy Governor-General, attended in the Senate yesterday and assented to the amendment to the Grain Act for emergency movement of cars.

WOMAN SAW HER HUSBAND KILLED

Babies Also Watching as Their Father is Caught in Coal Pocket Machinery

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—Mrs. Peter Van Westering placed her two babies in the front window of her home in Shore Road, Sheepshead Bay, yesterday morning, bidding them "watch papa" at work high up on a scaffold in a coal yard across the street. Van Westering was oiling the machinery which operates a continuous chain of buckets extending from the ground where loaded coal cars arrive to the opening in a coal pocket eighty-five feet above the ground. He was at the top of the scaffold.

Mrs. Van Westering and her babies watched the husband and father for several minutes. Then the wife uttered a cry and rushed into the street. There she fell in a faint.

She had seen her husband's clothing catch in a big wheel which is part of the machinery and which raised him into the air and then flung him around and around, beating him on the platform of the scaffold at each revolution.

The woman's cries and her appearance in the street attracted the attention of Harry Kemp, another employee in the coal yard. He saw what was happening at the top of the scaffold and shouted to the engineer in the yard below to stop his engine. It was several moments, however, before the big wheel, carried on by its own momentum, ceased to revolve.

Meantime, Kemp and other employees were running to the top of the scaffold. They found Ven Westering unconscious and badly mangled. It took them nearly half an hour to extricate the body from the machinery. Then Dr. Overend of the Coney Island Hospital, who had been called, gave the man stimulants. He regained consciousness for a few moments and in this time Father McCarthy of St. Mark's Roman Catholic Church administered the last rites of the Church to him.

Van Westering was carried into his home, but he never regained consciousness which left him as the priest finished speaking, and died within an hour.

LITERARY NOTES.

SCRIBNER'S FOR MARCH.

The March number of Scribner's Magazine shows a very distinguished and cosmopolitan list of contributors, including the Englishmen, Sir Henry Norman, M.P., John Galsworthy, E. W. Hornung, and A. E. W. Mason; the Americans, Edith Wharton, Robert Grant, and Henry van Dyke, and Nansen, the Norwegian explorer. No one is better fitted to write of Arctic exploration than Nansen, who at one time held the record 'farthest North.' In a brief space he depicts the present "Race for the South Pole," describing particularly the expeditions of Scott and Amundsen. There are also three other expeditions on the way or about ready to start. Nansen believes that by this time either or both will have reached the South Pole and that early in the spring we shall receive the startling announcement. He also outlines some future possibilities for exploration in the Arctic even after both poles have been added to the map.

FEBRUARY ROD AND GUN.

"Wild Duck Conservation" by Frank Hyde, formerly editor of Outdoor Canada, is the leading numbes in the February issue of Rod and Gun in Canada, published by W. J. Taylor, Limited, Woidstock, Ont. A fascinating tale is that which has been contrbuted by the well known writer who spent forty years, from 1863 to 1903 in the service of the Hudson Bay Co. Fox Farms in Prince Edward Island, A Holiday Trip in the Lillooet District, British Columbia, A Moose Hunt on the Preserve of the Shawinigan Club, Quebec and other articles serve as interesting reminders of the representative character of this Canadian sportsman's publication.

CHILDREN BURNED TO DEATH.

DEATHS.

WILSON—Mrs. Jane Lowden Wilson, beloved wife of Wm. Wilson, who died in her 89th year at the home of her brother-in-law, Frank Rutherford, Alexander Street, Feb. 18th.

The funeral will take place from the residence of Frank Rutherford, Alexander Street, Tuesday, Feb. 20th. Services at the house at 2 o'clock. Omit flowers. Funeral private. Interment Belleville Cemetery.

BODLE—Died in Belleville on Monday, Feb. 19th, 1912, Elisabeth Bodle, relict of the late Robert Bodle, in her 77th year.

The funeral will take place from her late residence, Donald Street, on Wednesday, Feb. 21,1912, at 1.30 p.m. Services at the house at one o'clock. Interment Belleville Cemetery.

CHILDREN INJURED

Ordinary Cathartics and Pills and Harsh Physic Cause Distressing. Complaints.

You cannot be over-careful in the selection of medicine for children. Only the very gentlest bowel medicine should ever be given, except in emergency cases. Ordinary pills, cathartics and purgatives are apt to do more harm than good. They may cause griping, nausea and other distressing after-effects that are frequently health destroying.

yWealle erson ep oe.pd abpno d dw antee Rexall Orderlies as the safest and most dependable remedy, which we know, for constipation and associate bowel disorders. We have absolute faith in the virtue of this remedy that we sell it on our guarantee of money back in every instance that it fails to give entire satisfaction, and we urge all in need of such medicine to try it at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies commonly completely relieve constipation, except of course when of a surgical character. They also tend to overcome the necessity of constantly taking laxatives to keep the bowels in normal condition. Three sizes of packages, 10cents, 25cents, and 50cents. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Belleville only at our store.—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

DEATH ROLL.

MRS. J. L. WILSON.

On Sunday morning Mrs. Jane L. Wilson, relict of the late Mr. Wlliam Wilson, passed away at the residence of her brother-in-law, Mr. Frank Rutherford, Alexander Street. Deceased was 80 years of age and had been a resident of this city for some time. She was a lovely lady, esteemed by all who knew her. Mrs. Wilson was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Her husband preceded her to the tomb 10 years ago. Three sons survive, namely, John, of Atlanta, Ga.; William, of Portage La Prairie, and James, of Winnipeg. Messr. J. V. and William Jenkins, of this city are brothers of the deceased and Mrs. F. Rutherford and Mrs. Holmes are sisters

MRS. (REV.) ROBT. BODLE.

This morning Mrs. (Rev.) Robt. Bodle died at the family residence, McDonald Street, College Hill. An attack of pneumonia was the cause of death. Deceased who was 77 years of age, was born in Thurlow, where she had, with her husband, resided for many years. She was a member of the Methodist church. A brother, Mr. James Mather, and a sister, Mrs. N. Palmer, of Thurlow, are living; also the husband and a step-daughter, Miss Louise, at home.

To Hear the Fly Tramp

The inferiority of the human sense organs to the instruments of science is pointed out by Dr. Carl Snyder. He says that whereas the human eye can see but little more than 3,000 stars in the heavens on the clearest of nights, the photographic plate and the telescope can discover countless millions. It is difficult for the eye to distinguish divisions of the inch if they are smaller than 1-200 of that unit of measure, yet a powerful microscope will make an object 1-10,000 of an inch in diameter look comparatively large. It would be a delicate ear which could hear the tramp of a fly, yet the microphone magnifies this sound until it sounds like the tramp of cavalry. The most sensitive skin cannot detect a change in temperature less than 1-5 of a degree, but the bolometer will register on a scale an increase or decrease of temperature of 1-1,000,000 of a degree, and can easily note the difference in temperature caused in a room when a match is lighted one mile away.

"Just a few minutes, children"

HUNGRY children soon become cross children.

But children never get cross waiting for Tillson's Oats, for they need never wait more than 15 minutes.

Mothers who have many mouths to feed at breakfast time must make every minute count.

The time saved by the quick cooking Tillson's makes many hours saved in the course of a year.

No food that you can give your children furnishes them more energy or saves more of yours.

Oatmeal Cookies

Beat one egg until light, with one-half cupful of sugar. Add one-half cupful of milk, one-fourth cupful shortening, one teaspoonful of salt, one cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats, and one cupful of flour in which has been stirred one teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix well. Drop by spoonfuls on a greased tin, spreading the cookies with the spoon a little, and bake in a moderately hot oven.

Tillson's Oats

Your grocer has Tillson's. Two sizes—10c and 25c. Each 25c package contains a handsome piece of English Porcelain Tableware.

Wireless Communication—Telephone and Telegraph—illustrated lecture by Professor Gill, in John Street church, Monday evening, February 19th. Admission 25c. 1t

Some parties on Saturday night were creating such a noise in a Chinese restaurant that the police had to be called. When the officer arrived upon the scene all was tranquil.

Five tramps and one prisoner have been occupants of the police cells since Saturday.

All citizens are invited by the Provincial Board of Health to visit the Free Health Exhibition to be given at the City Hall, Tuesday 20th, Wednesday, 21st, and Thursday, 22nd. Demonstrations by means of charts, models, moving pictures, etc., will be given both days at 3.30 p. m. and 8 p. m. Visitors will be welcome at any time during the day or evening. F17,2t

Mr. Macfarlane, evangelist of Exeter, England, nightly this week at Bethel Hall. You are specially invited.

Wax from Weeds.

The discovery of a process for extracting wax from the candelilla weed has created a new and important industry in Mexico and Texas. The candelilla weed is a desert plant which grows abundantly upon many millions of acres of semi-arid land in Northern Mexico. The candelilla contains wax to the amount of 3 1-2 to 4 per cent., and the cost of producing a ton of the wax is $75.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mr. F. P. Thompson of the Ritchie Co., has returned from Europe.

Mrs. Hall, of the ladies' ready-to-wear department at Ritchie's, has returned from New York.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Corby left on Saturday for New York and on Wednesday will sail for Europe.

Mrs. E. Graham of Carroll, Man., formerly of Belleville, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Murphy, North Front Street.

Mr. John Wilson of Atlanta, Ga., is in the city to attend the obsequies of his mother the late Mrs. Wm. Wilson.

Mrs. Wm. Robertson, mother of the President of the Belleville Club, has been visiting her son for some weeks past.

Miss Maude Campbell, of Belleville, has been visiting Chicago, Wilmette and LaGrange during the past two weeks.

Ald. R. C. Chown, President of the Ontario Retail Hardware Dealers' Association, is spending this week in Guelph attending the seventh annual meeting of that association.

Mr. John T. Luscombe, M. M. of the Toledo & Ohio Central Railroad at Bucyrus, Ohio, came to Chicago last month for the big "eats." Mrs. Luscombe accompanied him.

Miss Minnie Sills, sister of Mrs. Robertson, and her friend Miss Margaret Milroy, of London, are guests at the home of the President of the Belleville Club.

Mrs. Abraham Diamond, mother of the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Belleville Club, has been visiting in Chicago for some weeks. She is now a resident of Spokane, Wash.

Mr. Henry O. Hart, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a former Belleville boy, well known to all the boys of twenty-five or thirty years ago, was a caller at this office last week. Mr. Hart has succeeded well in business in the foundry line.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cullen celebrated their china wedding on Monday, Feb. 12th. A large number of friends gathered at the Cullen home in honor of the event. The News extends its congratulations and hopes the union may continue on to the diamond event, at least.—Belleville Club News, Chicago.

Fred Fester, our enterprising shoe merchant, felt some time ago that he was losing his grip and needed some one to look after him, so he went over to Toronto and, without a word of warning to any one, chose a fine young Canadian girl and, before she knew what was happening, she had said "Yes." Freddie is an impetuous lad all right. The wedding took place last month and the happy couple are now sighing and exchanging tender little confidences down in the Southland, where the scent of the magnolia and the perfume of the orange blossoms fill the air. Lucky Fred! Long life and a happy one. That's what the News says!

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"Daniel Boone on the Trail," a thrilling romance of pioneer days, will be the attraction at Griffin's Opera House on Thursday, Feb. 22nd. The end of the first act shows a sudden attack by the indians, misled by a renegade white man into betraying Boone's friendship for them. Daniel Boone was always fair to the red men and won their friendship on this account as well as for his bravery and prowess as a hunter. In the second act we see his struggle to retain their friendship and yet rescue two helpless women whom the Shawnees have stolen. The great climax of the third act is Daniel Boone's single handed fight for life with a pack of wolves. Although partly successful in saving the women, Boone remains as a hostage, and we see them prepare to burn him at the stake. The play itself is full of surprises and stirring climaxes, but this one is the thriller and calls for curtain after curtain. In the last act we see our hero happily married, the villian dead; and the Indians, realising the folly of having "Long Knives" as an enemy, come to smoke the pipe of peace and plead for his friendship. Altogether it forms a very pretty picture of the life of early days and makes our hearts swell with pride and admiration for the truly great characters of the early pioneers. 19-25

THINK OF IT

Stop and think a moment about that cough that bothers you so much.

You must have been run-down when you got it, for if you had been perfectly strong your system would have thrown it off in two or three days.

Take our advice about this—what you really need is to build up your strength and enrich your blood; then the cough will disappear. We know it.

Carl Schultz of Coney Island, N. Y. says, "It only took two bottles of your delicious cod liver and iron preparation, Vinol, to put me on my feet again when I was all run down with a severe cough and cold which had lasted two months. I am recommending it to all my friends."

Vinol is the greatest strength creator and body builder we have ever seen, and besides its value in healing up weak, sore lungs, it gives new vitality and strength to all weak, pale, run-down people. We guarantee Vinol to do this and give you back your money if you are not satisfied.—Red Cross Drug Store, J. S. McKeown, Belleville, Ont.

Not Worth Stopping For.

A party of four gentlemen were driving a motor-car along the road leading from Kilkenny to Clonnel. Seeing a fine stretch of level road in front the car was put at full speed, and they raced along for nearly four miles.

Presently speed was slackened, and the driver turned round to see how his two friends at the back had enjoyed the run. A look of scared astonishment overspread his countenance when he found that only one gentleman was seated there.

"Where's Jack?" he gasped, stopping the car.

"Jack?" replied the other, carelessly. "He blew off at the first milestone."

Fathers Work Too Long.

It is a mistake for fathers to toil all their lives in order that their children may escape toil all theirs. Suppose the calculation correct, and permanent idleness secured for the next generation, what evidence is there that the boys and girls will be happier and better for it? The boys will be exposed to the devices of "sharks," and the girls to those of fortune hunters. Leave something for them also to do.

Small Heads Dont Mean Small Brains.

The fact that you take a small size in hats does not necessarily mean that you have a small brain. A man with a small head may be much cleverer than a man with a large one. Moreover, the size of the brain is not everything, since, if undeveloped, it is no more likely to produce anything of value than land which is not fertile. There are people with large heads who display so little intelligence that one almost expects to hear their brains rattle when they move, like a shrivelled kernel in a nut.

Too Much Education a Mistake.

It is a mistake to suppose that a good general education wil secure success in life. No wise man accepts a general invitation to dinner! It involves no particulars. Only a particular education is of practical use. Let the boys be educated for something particular — lawyers, doctors, clergymen, printers, merchants, tradesmen — only something definite. No hands are so often idle as those which are supposed by the owners — and by no one else — fit to "turn to anything."

Expecting Much.

The sphere of our affections is one in which we are very apt to expect too much from others, and thus to cause bitterness and often estrangement. Where we love we naturally crave to be loved; but this craving if not regulated by reason, is very likely to blossom into a selfish oppression.

A Sewing Machine Wrinkle

A hand sewing-machine is often very apt to slip about on the table. To obviate this, all that is necessary is to place a couple of the old-fashioned gelatine lozenges, slightly moistened, under each corner of the base board. In a few seconds the machine will be found to adhere to the table and equal a stand-machine in firmness.

TO PROTEST DECREE.

Protestants Plan Ne Temere Meeting For March 1st.

Toronto, Feb. 19.—Friday, March 1, is the probable date for the monster anti-ne temere decree demonstration at the Massey Music Hall.

Rev. E. D. Silcox, secretary of the Evangelical Alliance, stated last night that the petitions for action by the Dominion and Provincial Governments, continue to pour in to his office.

The petition movement will be continued until the end of the month.

Another member of the Evangelical Alliance executive said that the campaign was in double but parallel lines.

Hon. R. L. Borden is to be asked to supplement the federal test case to the Privy Council by enactment of a general marriage law, asserting in unequivocal terms the absolute supremacy and exclusive jurisdiction of the state control of the marriage law.

Sir James Whitney is to be asked to submit a test case to the Ontario court of appeal to establish the jurisdiction now possessed by the province, and to carry it to the full extent which may be required.

Both sets of petitions are likely to be presented to the respective Governments by the most influential delegation which the evangelical church of the Dominion and province have it in their power to appoint.

Ne Temere In Supreme Court.

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—When the sittings of the Supreme Court commence next Tuesday it is just possible that the stated case in the ne temere situation will be ready for presentation by the Government. The case has been drafted and only one or two things require to be inserted, and, while on Tuesday the case may be laid formally, it will be done on Thursday at the latest.

THUGS IN MONTREAL.

Merchant Is Beaten and Jewels and Cash Taken.

Montreal, Feb. 19.—A desperate daylight robbery with violence took place here yesterday morning, when a Notre Dame street jeweler named Cohen was robbed of diamonds worth $390 and cash to the extent of $890, by two nervy thieves.

Cohen was unlocking his safe, when he was told to put up his hands. Turning round, he looked into the muzzles of two revolvers. He made a grab for one, and one of the burglars hit him over the head, knocking him unconscious. They then grabbed all the loose diamonds around and rifled the safe.

Cohen soon recovered and staggered to the door of his store, called for assistance, his summons being answered by a policeman. The officer saw a man running away and after a stern chase, captured him.

Three men are now held by the police charged with the crime.

Cohen is known as the man whom Timothy Candy, who was hung here for murdering two policemen who had him under arrest for stealing from his employer, accused of tempting him to steal the goods and offering to purchase them.

The three men were arrested at different times, two Saturday and one yesterday. They are Charles Vega, Albert Jones, and a negro known as Po Maldonado. The stolen goods were recovered from Jones.

Cohen will recover, despite the severe beating he received.

Pioneer Woman of West Dead.

Vancouver, B.C., Feb. 19.—Mrs. E. Louise Greenvalley, a native of Quebec, aged 52, who claims to have been the first white woman to cross the Canadian Rockies, having come by the Dewdney pack trail in 1883, died yesterday. She lived in Winnipeg from 1880 to 1883.

School Boys' Murdered Master.

New York, Feb. 16.—A cable from Dublin say: Eight school boys were arrested yesterday charged with the murder of John Kelly, assistant master of an industrial school in County Meath.

The boys, it is alleged, waylaid Kelly while he was making his rounds Monday night and beat him to death with sticks.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —
JOHN MARCH
(AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

"Of course, Mrs. Wycherly, why not?"

"This is the first glimpse I have had of your den," she said, her gown of white crepe de Chine trailing noiselessly over the vivid coloring of the carpet. "Oh, Mr. Farley," she added clapping her little hands joyously, "what a darling of a typewriter! Do show me how you work it."

"Let me give you a lesson another time," he said, striking a few letters with his forefinger. "Lady Hargrave will think me ungrateful if I allow a second edition of tea to grow cold."

"Oh, she won't mind; you are a favorite."

"I am sincerely glad to hear that; still, if you don't mind, I should like some tea, and also a little fresh air."

"Oh, I am so sorry! Naturally, you want your tea."

"Will you give me my hat?" he asked, looking at her with an indulgent smile.

She had taken it from where he had thrown it in his surprise at her advent. She was holding it to her and stroking the plait with a light caressing touch, as if it were something alive, something that felt, something that she loved and prized beyond measure.

"Your hat? Oh, I beg your pardon," and she gave it him with a pretty blush.

They went out into the sunshine, and walked slowly down the gravel path, across a large expanse of lawn to the top of the moss-grown steps overlooking the terrace.

"Come along, Mr. Farley, come along," Lady Hargrave called, beckoning with her tortoiseshell lorgnette, "we have all finished; pray come along."

Paul extended a hand, and Mrs. Wycherley clung to it while they descended the moss-bound slippery steps.

"I don't believe you have met all our neighbors yet, Mr. Farley," Lady Hargrave said pleasantly, holding out a cup of steaming tea as he came forward, "at least there is a lady here who says she has not met you."

He ran his eye round the gay, chattering group. Judith Hargrave, Anthony Pelham, Miss Primrose, the Vicar, the Rev. Arthur Hay, and a dark woman in maize color and old yellow lace whom he did not know.

"Well, I really don't think you have met Mrs. Hay," Lady Hargrave said laughing heartily, "but I didn't mean her. Come, child," she added, looking over her shoulder and addressing someone standing in the shade behind her chair, "as you are staying to dinner, let me introduce you to Mr. Farley."

His eyes followed her movement and fell upon the white, scared face of Agnes Fleming.

CHAPTER III.

An Affray

Some thunder and a shower of rain sent the ladies indoors sooner than their wont, and deprived Paul Farley of his quiet smoke under the copper beech. He went to his room instead, and searched in his letter case for Agnes Fleming's address. Yes, there it lay, neglected and unread—Miss Fleming, the Manor House, Weyberne.

"Come in," he said, in answer to a gentle, continuous tapping on his bedroom door, and replacing the small, square envelope.

"Anything the matter Tom?" he asked, as a good-looking boy entered with a Greek grammar in his hand.

"I know that declension."

"Sure?"

"Yes, sir."

"You're not playing the old soldier, Tom?"

"I know it, sir, honor bright."

"There you are then!" he said, shutting the book with a bang. "Now be off and tell Harry."

"Mr. Farley," the boy said, taking the book and coming further into the room, "I'd like to tell you something if you won't be angry."

"Am I ever angry, Tom?"

"Not about lessons, but you might be about this."

"Well, as I have no conception of the awfulness you are about to unfold I cannot promise one way or the other. Come, out with it, my man, if you are going to tell."

"You left your hat in the hall, Mr. Farley, and it tumbled off the peg."

"That's not an uncommon occurrence, Master Tom."

"No, but I picked it up, and saw some lines of poetry stuck in the lining, and I—I read 'em."

"You saw some poetry inside my hat?" he said in astonishment. "What hat, which hat?"

"Your straw hat."

Paul stood with his hands in his trousers pockets, gazing down at the boy's fair face.

"Nip downstairs, Tom," he said at last, "and bring me that identical, self-same hat."

The lad was gone in a moment, returning almost immediately, flushed and panting.

"Shut the door," he said, drawing a piece of paper from a break in the lining, "You've seen it before, Tom, and I can dispense with your head under my chin."

He either fears his fate too much,
Or his deserts are small,
That dares not put it to the touch
To gain or lose it all.

He read out the doggerel in a drawling monotone.

"What rot," the boy said; "what does she mean?"

"She!" he repeated sharply; "how do you know a 'she' wrote it?"

"I know her spider writing. She wrote once and asked me to her little boy's birthday party."

"Put a name to the 'she', Tom."

"Oh, you know it, Mr. Farley!"

"Are the initials R. W.?"

"Yes, Rowena Wycherly. She must be a rotten—"

"Hush! So Mrs. Wycherly has a little boy?"

"Not now. He used to have dreadful fits, so two doctors went and took him away. She's a bad woman she—"

"Hist! Thomas Hargrave! That's a sweeping assertion!"

"I heard James tell cook that Beelzebub and Jezebel rolled into one were nothing to her."

"If I were a boy of twelve I should neither listen nor repeat kitchen gossip. Of course," he added, looking very grave, "no doubt wicked people used to exist, because there was once a kind of monster, I think his name was Chichivache. He only lived on good women, and the result was he became all skin and bone; his food, poor thing, was so very scarce."

"Oh, Mr. Farley! You always put me off with something sil—"

"I'm going to dress for dinner. I'll bid you good evening, Tom."

Left to himself, the door securely locked, he divested himself of coat and waistcoat, sat astride a chair, his arms folded on the back, and gazed thoughtfully out of the window across the stretch of undulating green.

"Paul, my boy," he said, rising abruptly and apostrophising his reflection in the glass, and rolling back his stiff wristbands, "luck, or chance, or fate, or whatever it calls itself seems to be veering round in a contrary direction. Are your wits sufficiently magnetic to attract the thing and keep it pointed at Paul Farley?"

Taking a fine camel's hair brush from the toilet table, he dipped it into an ebony box and drew it lightly over his upper lip. He paused and leaned forward to scrutinize the effect of his skilful handiwork. Then he brought the brush dexterously round his jaw from ear to chin leaving a bluish tinge, such as would result from a frequent use of the razor upon a dark skin.

"A salary of three pounds a week combined with every comfort, every modern luxury, and within an easy distance of London, is a substantial start. One that must be coaxed and humored, or fought for, and safeguarded just as it happens, for at least six months to come. Afterwards a recommendation from the Conservative member for East Weyberne, followed by a Ministerial secretaryship, and—well, so on. There, my friend!" he said, laying aside the brush and smiling at his finesse, "you look spruce, well-groomed, and in good condition. Now all that remains for you to do is to pull yourself together and—be a man!"

He entered the dining-room somewhat late. The soup was being served, and Lady Hargrave signed to him to take the vacant seat beside Agnes Fleming. Anthony Pelham and Judith were opposite. The latter's pretty, piquant face was clouded with annoyance and expressed disapproval at the dinner arrangement. She made it very plain to her patient companion that she was ill-pleased with the pairing and dissatisfied with herself, with him, and with those around the table.

Sir Thomas, more comportable in his mind, and consequently happier than he had been for weeks, gave vent to his old hearty guffaws. He told stories which caused Miss Patricia Primrose to lean back in her chair, the tears in her eyes, and shake with suppressed laughter. Lady Hargrave, looking between the palm leaves at her husband's jovial face, was correspondingly elated. She poked fun at Miss Patty, and alluded to a certain middle-aged barrister, whose arrival they anticipated in the near future, in her sweet, matronly way, generating mirth without embarrassment. Once during the meal, when the conversation and laughter became general, Paul found an opportunity to whisper to Agnes.

"Tell me of a quiet, lonely spot, where I can talk to you undisturbed," he said, bending his dark head down to hers, and touching her wineglass significantly.

She shook her head in answer to his action. "There is an old unused thatched summer-house in our shrubbery," she said, after a moment's deliberation.

"Can't I see you there to-morrow night?"

"What time?" she murmured, meeting Judith Hargrave's jealous eyes.

"It must be after dark; say eight."

Just His Luck.

The lady bather had got into a hole, and she couldn't swim. No could the young man on the end of the pier; but when she came up for the first time and he caught sight of her face he shrieked: —

"Help!"

A burly fisherman sauntered to his side.

"Wot's up?" he hoarsely cried.

"My wife! Drowning! I can't swim! Twenty pounds for you if you save her!"

In a moment the fisherman was in the sea. In another moment he was out of it, with the rescued lady bather. Swelling with expectation he approached the young man again.

"Well, what about the twenty quid?" he asked.

But if the young man's face had been ashen grey before, it was now deadly pale as he gazed upon the features of the recovering dame.

"Y-e-s, I know!" he gasped. "But when I made the offer I thought it was my wife who was drowning, and now — now it turns out it was my wife's mother!"

The fisherman pulled a long face.

"Just my luck!" he muttered, thrusting his hand into his trousers-pocket. "How much do I owe you?"

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 17.—A sharp break in prices for wheat occurred to-day as a result of big shipments being made from Argentina, and because of heavy receipts at terminals in the United States. The close was weak, ⅞c to 1c under last night. Corn finished ½c to ⅝c down, oats off ⅜c to ⅝c, and hog products less costly by a shade to 20c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅜d to ½d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ⅛d to ⅜d lower on corn. Paris wheat was ⅛c to ⅝c higher. Berlin 1c lower, Budapest ½c lower, Antwerp unchanged.

THE BEEHIVE CHARLES N. SULMAN

LORDS AS MUSICIANS.

Many Peers can make a living by Singing.

The recent announcement that Lord Wolverhampton has achieved considerable distinction in the musical world by composing several tuneful songs, although he has never studied music and plays only by ear, reminds one of the accomplishments of Lord Kinnoull, who plays both organ and piano beautifully, and composes and sings well. It was he who composed the hymn that was sung by the choir on the occasion of his marriage in 1903. Lady Kinnoull, by the way, is an expert violinist. Then there are Lord Tollemache, who is a good 'cellist, and Lord Shaftesbury, who possesses a magnificent tenor voice which is often heard in church, and which once led an enterprising American impresario to offer his lordship $150,000 to go on a concert tour through the United States.

Tit for Tat.

The following funny incident happened in one of the largest Edinburgh auction-rooms. A big, stout lady, apparently of the broker class, had ensconced herself comfortably in an arm-chair, and in due course began bidding for a table, on which a tired-looking man, for want of something to sit upon, affectionately leant. Competition was brisk, but in the end the table was knocked down to the stout lady, who no sooner recognized that it was now [illegible] property than, stretching out her arm, she sharply rapped her knuckles on it, exclaiming: —

"Hey, man!"

But the tired-looking man paid no attention, so she next poked him with her umbrella, and said, with greater asperity than ever: —

"Lean of that table, will you? It's my property, and you'll scratch it."

The leaner regarder her fixedly for a moment or two, but did as requested. He did more, however; for, pulling a scrap of paper from his pocket, he put it under the lady's nose with the quiet remark: —

"D'ye see that number there, mam? And d'ye see that?" and he next indicated a corresponding number on the arm-chair she was seated on. "Well, then," he continued, when she had acquiesced, with a wondering nod of the head, "git off; it's my chair and I want to sit down."

And off she had to get.

THE TRANSCONTINENTAL.

The extraordinary disclosures as to the cost of the National Transcontinental Railway which were made by the Minister of Railways in Parliament, and which statement was reproduced in these columns, has called forth from press and public a storm of reprobation of the spendthrift prodigality of the Laurier Government in that connection. As evidence of what is being thought and said, we reproduce from the Montreal Gazette, which is one of the most fair and moderate of our contemporaries, the following stinging article on the subject:—

Wednesday's discussion of the affairs of the National Transcontinental Railway was, says The Gazette, of a character to impress upon the public mind the inadvisability of putting into the hands of vote-hunting politicians the financial management of a great business enterprise. Nine years ago the men in control of the Grand Trunk Railway conceived the idea of extending their system from its northern terminus at North Bay to the western provinces. The idea was a natural one and could have been easily enough carried through. It would have given the Grand Trunk a hold on the western trade, valuable both for itself and for the business it would bring to the eastern lines. It would have provided all that is likely to be useful of the premature and costly scheme which was substituted for it. It is plain now, both from what is transpiring in Canada and the United States, that not much western grain will go past Cochrane to be shipped at Quebec, St. John or Halifax. The members of the Laurier Government, however, were beginning to feel that their lately won political power was slipping away from them, and they thought they saw in the situation a chance to strengthen themselves at least in parts of the country. So they conceived the extraordinary project that the country is now paying for. They undertook to build the least profitable part of the road the Grand Trunk had proposed to construct, and to add to it as much more which no railway man could have thought about. A part of the scheme included a duplication from Quebec to Moncton of the unprofitable Intercolonial, so as to make it more unprofitable. Mr. Blair, Minister of Railways, who was not altogether innocent of knowledge of practical politics, resigned as a protest against the folly of his colleagues. The thing revolted his business sense. It meant the expenditure of much money, however, and it caught the imaginations of the Fieldings, the Emmersons, the Lauriers, and the other ministers who depended on what they could scatter among the constituencies for their political lives. Half of the hundreds of millions of dollars the National Transcontinental Railway has cost or will cost was thrown away to make a group of constituencies in the vicinity of the city of Quebec and the province of New Brunswick solid for Laurier. So strongly did this politician's views appeal to the ministers that they did not stop to consider what it was they were embarking upon. With the Intercolonial experience and accounts to guide them, if they had wanted a guide, they talked of constructing eighteen hundred miles of high-class railway through an almost unbroken wilderness for a price that would not pay for a third-class local traffic prairie line. The fifty or fifty-five million dollars which they pledged their reputations was to be the limit of the cost of what they were putting upon the country was barely a quarter of what, under their own management, they have made the national treasury responsible for. According to the statements now submitted the capital cost of the road to January 1, 1914, will be $187,781,128. With the interest for the seven years extra when the G. T. P. is not bound to rental, the estimated capital cost is no less than $256,000,000, or a cost of $130,800 per mile. Neither Russia nor Turkey under their old regimes could have anything more effectively proving the incapacity for good of their rulers. What is here set down, moreover, is only a part of the misdoing in connection with the badly managed enterprise. In face of the protests of their opponents in Parliament, the Laurier ministers insisted on a form of words in the guarantee of the bonds of the section of the road built by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway that will draw at least ten millions of dollars from the treasury, from which the country will get not a dollar of good. As for the Quebec bridge adjunct of the enterprise, the arrangement was so bad from the country's side that the collapse of the structure, which cost the national treasury some seven millions of dollars, actually put money in the pockets of the people in whom the ownership was vested. Such a chapter of national administrative finance can only be described as awful in its evidence of incapacity and of waste.

CURRENT COMMENT.

It certainly cannot be said that the Board of Education acted hastily when it decided to introduce the Penny Savings Bank system into the Public Schools.

Mother—If you're a good girl, Edith, I'll take you to the circus.

Little Girl—Do you really mean it mother, or is it just a promise?

The bill for the stamping out of usury which was introduced into the Legislature by Hon. J. J. Foy on Friday will meet with the heartiest commendation from all but the "loan sharks." It is matter for wonder that such a measure was not long ago placed upon the statute book.

"Your play contains too much conversation. You need a hairbreadth escape of some kind."

"What is the matter with the third act," demanded the dramatist, "where the heroine narrowly escapes being talked to death?"

An epidemic of "wild west" holdups, which apparently originated in Paris, has spread to this continent with remarkable rapidity. New York has had several affairs of that sort within the last few days and Toronto had one on Friday evening. If a dose of the cat were added to the punishment of those who are convicted of this class of crime it would have a strongly deterrent effect.

The beneficial effects of electricity as applied to the soil in increasing production are coming to be known in a general way. German scientists find that the application of the electric current to the soil increases the yield of grain and stalks in barley, 12 per cent., and with oats; 43 per cent., and strawberries 50 per cent. In experiments made at Newcastle, England, a surplus of 37 per cent. was obtained with strawberries, a gain of 30.5 per cent. with peas, while the gain of potatoes was 15 to 20 per cent. In another experiment the yield increased by 123 per cent. with barley, by 119.5 per cent. with sugar beets, and by 30 per cent. with beans. Sugar electrically grown yielded 2.2 to 2.7 per cent. more sugar than those grown without it, while tobacco electrically treated during growth is said to have a beautiful color and an excellent flavor.

To begin with, the languages that require special forms of type, there are thirteen publications in New York City in Hebrew or in Yiddish, three of them daily newspapers with a combined circulation of 273,000. There are nine papers printed in Arabic, two in Chinese, one in Japanese, three in Armenian and four in Greek. Three papers in Russian are published in New York City and one in Ruthenian; a Jersey City Ruthenian newspaper has a circulation of 20,000. For Bulgaria we must go to a small town in Illinois, and for Servian to Chicago. The Southern Slavs are represented in New York by three Croat one Slovene, and two Slovak periodicals. The Poles have one in New York and one in Brooklyn; the Bohemian Czeks, four in New York and sixteen in Chicago. The Lithuanians have two papers in New York and the Letts one in Fitchburg, Mass. Of the non-Aryans two Maygar papers serve the New Yeurk Hungarians, while the Finns have one periodical in Brooklyn.

Laughs With Joy! No More Indigestion

MONTREAL MAN SO ILL, THOUGHT HE WOULD DIE OF STOMACH DISORDERS.

Just read what Mr. Larose says of the curative powers of Dr. Hamilton's Pills:

"I suffered from dyspepsia and indigestion for five years. I suffered so much that I could hardly attend to my work. I was weak and lost all courage. I enjoyed no rest until I decided to follow your treatment. To my great surprise I immediately began to feel better. I am now using the second box of Dr. Hamilton's Pills and I feel so well that I want to tell you that I owe this great change to your famous pills. I recommend Dr. Hamilton's Pills to every person who is suffering from dyspepsia. Your grateful servant, D. R. Larose, 338 Joliette St., Montreal, P.Q.

PARDONABLE QUACKERY

How a Physician Had to Fake to Cure

As a doctor, one of the English heroes who assisted in the defence of Kars, had special opportunities of studying the habits and character of the degraded races of Asia Minor. He found it necessary to be more of a quack than a physician among them. "As my patients became numerous, and pestered me at all hours, I fitted up," he tells us, "a spare tent to serve as my dispensary, and gave out that I received at the time of afternoon prayer (lassr). I took my seat at the door of my tent, and soon had a crowd around me, many suffering from real diseases, many from imaginary ones, and many bringing for my inspection the effects of diseases such as palsied limbs and stiff points." One of his patients was an old woman, who came forward, and taking hold of the corner of his cloak, kissed it, and then, kneeling before him, began, in a very wheedling manner, to call his attention to her case. "She went on to describe the most anomalous symptoms, affecting her eyes, ears, limbs, and sometimes every part of her. On further inquiry, she confessed to be quite well at that moment; but a year ago, having had these strange complaints, she dreaded the same thing would invade her this year. I then promised to give her strong medicine, but ordered the crowd to stand at a short distance from us. A space is cleared, and all wait in silent admiration for my remedy. I slowly draw forth a bottle of strong liquor of ammonia, or smelling-salts, from my medicine-chest, and, holding it before my patients eyes, tell her to draw in a strong breath when I put it to her nose. I acordingly first held her nostrils, then, having removed the stopper, I apply the mouth of the bottle to the nose, the fingers are removed, a long sniff is taken, followed by a sort of spasm, and she falls to the ground. A hum of horror runs through the crowd; the patient, after a short interval, rises, her eyes streaming with tears; and then breaks from the crowd, 'La ilaha 'Ila 'llahu Mahommed rasulu 'llah!' — 'There is no God but the God, and Mahomed is the Apostle of God!'"

GLADSTONE'S FAVORITE GRANDCHILD

"It Is Vain for You to Rise Up Early."

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Dorothy Drew to Lieutenant Parish, one of Lord Gladstone's A.D.C.'s, recalls the fact that Miss Drew was the favorite grandchild and companion of the late Mr W. E. Gladstone. She has been the subject of many pretty stories, one being to the effect that she once nonplussed the G.O.M. on a Biblical subject. The famous statesman was trying to induce her to get up earlier. "Why don't you get up, my child?" he asked. "Why, grandpa," rejoined Miss Dorothy, "didn't you tell me to do what the Bible says?" "Yes, certainly," said Mr Gladstone. The little girl then proudly opened her Bible at Psalm cxxvii. and read the second verse: "It is vain for you to rise up early."

Among all the virtues, humility, the lowest, is pre-eminent. It is the safest, because it is always an anchor and that man may be truly said to live the most content in his calling who strives to live within the compass of it

HOST OF LETTERS IN DYNAMITE PLOT

Charges Against Accused Men are Founded on Over 40,000 Letters—These Communications Passed Between Dynamiters and the Accused—Veiled References to Outrages that were Afterwards Perpetrated

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Feb. 15.—Sensational and specific charges that the dynamite conspiracy was conducted with full knowledge of members of the executive board of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers, including President Frank M. Ryan, that the whole conspiracy, extending over years, was recorded on paper; and that Ortie E. McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, was shifted shuttle-like over the country on missions were made public tonight by District Attorney Charles W. Miller.

Mr. Miller announced the contents of an indictment known as that covering "unconsummated acts" of the conspiracy, and it is to be the basis upon which the Government intends to conduct its prosecution.

The indictment charges Ryan, Herbert S. Hockin, of Detroit, Mich., M. J. Young, of Boston; John T. Butler, of Buffalo, and Frank C. Webb, of New York, with conducting the conspiracy through the mail, and names all of the 54 defendants as abettors.

It declares that a regular system of pointing out non-union steel and iron construction jobs was carried on and that the executive members not only contributed money to buy explosives, but assisted in the work which McManigal was to do.

The basis of all the charges lies chiefly in 40,000 letters and telegrams taken from the Iron Workers' Internatonal headquarters. These letter purport to be between Ryan, Hockin, Webb and various other officials and business agents.

The principal allegations in the indictment, which is one of the 32 counts, are:

That from San Francisco in January, 1908, Ryan wrote to J. J. McNamara in Indianapolis, that he had looked over a job in Clinton, Iowa, and described a new bridge there that was later blown up.

That Edward Clark at Cincinnati, in February, 1908, wrote to McNamara, saying: "It would be a foolish thing for me to buy any explosives here, where I am well known. I have sized up the whole job here, and known that it can be done. If this sounds good to you, let me know right away."

That Webb wrote to McNamara from New York, telling him about jobs that were to be blown up in Boston in 1909, and of his having talked to Michael J. Young about these jobs, saying: "Mike wants to see your friend (meaning McManigal) that was in the east once before. Can you get him to come here to do a job for me? Mike will furnish finances."

That McNamara wrote to Webb in answer that the Boston and New York jobs were being considered.

That Webb again wrote to McNamara describing the new opera house in Boston, telling where derricks could be blown up and when the guards were on and off duty.

That McNamara in 1909 wrote letters to powder companies negotiating for explosives, the negotiations beng similar to those which resulted in the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times building.

That McNamara wrote to P. J. Morrin, St. Louis, in March, 1910, about jobs that were later blown up there.

That Ryan from New York wrote to McNamara in April, 1910, as follows: "In regard to the McClintick-Marshall jobs, let Legleitner attend to the jobs in his district. Let Butler attend to the jobs at Buffalo and Rochester, and Hockin arrange for Cleveland, Detroit and Cincinnati jobs. Morrin can attend to Mount Vernon. Webb is now at South Bethlehem. Will also send him to Worcester, Mass., and Davenport, Iowa. Peoria can be handled by Hockin. Chicago is at work on jobs there. Let Cooley work on a bunch at Chalmette. I will take up the job at Jersey City with some one in 45. This should be started at once."

That in response McNamara wrote to Ryan two days later:—"I am writing Legletner, Butler and Hockin about the work of the McClintick-Marshall Company I have already written Coley about the work of the above-named concern at Chalmette."

That Ryan wrote from New York to McNamara in April, 1910 in regard to dynamiting for the benefit of a local union at Peoria, Ill., as follows: "In regard to the Peoria request I am of the same opnion as yourself. What is spent there should be through Hockin. I don't mind expending a reasonable amount in view of all circumstances."

That Morrin wrote to McNamara from St. Louis in May, 1910, reporting an inspection trip he had taken to Mount Vernon, where structures were blown up, as follows:

ing of bail for a subsequent hearing of their case.

According to Miller, if under the federal law Ortie McManigal, upon whose confession, it is claimed, the indictments were based, cannot testify against Webb and Farrell at a hearing of the case in this district, they may go free.

"My friend Coleman took me around to show me where the eruption took place. It seems as though they don't want a recurrence of the affair, as I counted ten watchmen and a couple of others prowling around. I think they were fly mugs and I was not at all through the building. The Big Four extension to Evansville will cross the Wabash about four miles from Mount Carmel, Ill. I wish if President Ryan would happen around the main office of the Big Four he would try to find out who has the job."

That McNamara replied to Morrin he had forwarded his letter to Ryan.

That F. K. Panter wrote to McNamara from Omaha on May 1, 1910, in regard to a job of the Wisconsin Bridge Company which was damaged by an explosion as follows: "They have no police protection within ten blocks of the job. There is a power house for the street car company. Hope if there is any way you could give us help to straighten up the job you will do it, as this is only the second big non-union job in this city."

That McNamara replied to Painter —"He would try to help him out."

That McNamara wrote to Hockin at Toledo, Ohio, in June, 1910, in relation to the expense account of 'Bryce' (J. B. McNamara) saying that he had forwarded Hockin's report to President Ryan for his information

That McNamara wrote to Edward Smythe at Peoria, Ill., in August, 1910, in preparation for McManigal's visit, as follows:

"You can expect to see your friend Thursday evening on the Big Four train. I would suggest you be at the depot to meet him; you need not necessarily get in touch with him, but he wants you to put him on to the ropes."

Hundreds of other letters refer in more or less guarded terms to various dynamiting exploits. In a letter to to Murray L. Pennell, at Springfield, Ohio, in March, 1911, McManigal wrote:

"I am surprised at your letters. That is all I care to say through the mails, for the Lord only knows who reads all the letters that come into this office as well as those that leave it."

While Olaf A. Tyeitmoe wrote to McNamara from SanFrancisco, after the Los Angeles Times explosion under date of December 19, 1910, as follows:

"Trusting that Santa Claus will be as kind and generous to you with surprises and presents of the season as he is to us in the Golden State, we beg to remain sincerely, etc.,"

Frank C. Webb and Patrick F. Farrell, two of the three members of the Iron Workers' Union arrested in New York in conection with the alleged dynamite conspiracies will fight extradition to Indianapolis, according to their counsel, Hugh Gordon Miller. After a visit to his clients in the Tombs to-day where they are still held in default of $10,000 bail, Miller said that their waiving examination befoer U. S. Commissioner Alexander yesterday was not an admission that they were willing to proceed to Indianapolis to stand trial, but was merely a formality to permit the fixing of bail for a subsequent hearing of their case.

GLORIOUS HAIR

FOR EVERY WOMAN WHO WANTS IT

Any woman who neglects her hair cannot expect to have as lovely hair as the woman who doesn't.

Wash the hair once a week, use PARISIAN SAGE daily—keep your hair brush clean and in a few days you will give to your hair a beautiful lustre that you will be proud of.

PARISIAN SAGE is a most reliable hair tonic; so reliable that J. V. Doyle guarantees it to eradicate dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp, or mony back.

It should be used as a dressing by every member of the family because it keeps the scalp clean, prevents hair from turning gray and baldness. Large bottle 50 cents. You will have no use for ordinary preparations after once giving delightful PARISIAN SAGE a trial.

"IT DOESN'T" leave your dealer a big profit, . . .

But it does leave a lasting favorable impression upon the palates of all giving it a trial.

THE VANISHING FORESTS

Timber Resources of the United States Showing Signs of Exhaustion.

Commissioners and commissions have been appointed in various parts of the United States to make reports on what should and could be done to stem the destruction and prepare for the restoration of timber supplies, but wherever actually a response to the recommendations was secured the means employed were too feeble to prevent the former and too inefficient to secure adequate results in the latter direction. For instance, the latest State to move in the matter of taking care of its important timber interest, Alabama (whose annual lumber output is valued at $5,000,000), appropriates $500 for carrying out the provisions of the act providing a commission with various duties. The great State of Minnesota whose forest products in one year approach in value $45,000,000, devotes less than $12,000 to its forest interests, and $20,000 on prairie planting. The State of Maine, which still cuts around one billion feet, and is indebted to the forest for a product of $18,000,000 in value, keeps within the modest sum of $25,000 to pay for the protection against fire and the support of a commissioner. Examples of such picayune and inadequate measures are found in many other States.

The only two States which have not hesitated to spend money for forestry purposes are New York and Pennsylvania. The former, in purchasing forest lands for a preserve, which now comprises about one and a half million acres only, has expended millions of dollars, and is annually appropriating money for further purchase, besides liberal provision for its Forest, Fish and Game Commission. But, alas! the policy of forest reservation which had begun on economic grounds, has degenerated into providing a pleasure ground—a park—for the wealthy, and there is little consideration to economic forest questions given by the State or the Commission.

Pennsylvania is the only State which can be said to have started on a true policy of recuperation, buying up waste lands, protecting them, and in a small way beginning to reforest them, an appropriation of about $500,000 being at the disposal of the Forest Commission.

Sparks from Mars.

Old Sport Saturn is getting very giddy these warm nights. Came home last week with two rings on crooked. Must be warm times on the "Gay White Milk Way."

Our astronomers make some queer blunders. The smoky spot on the earth that was long thought to be an active volcano turns out to be a habitation of earthings, called Montreal. Those immense fields of curious-looking objects are not gigantic mushrooms blown by the wind, but the hats of the earthling ladies. Thus do we live and learn.

Come, spend your summer on Mars. No mosquitoes. High altitudes. Take a gondola ride on the canals. Come and send a souvenir postal card to your friends on the earth.

Her Confidence.

She had stopped, panting, by the road to rest. It was the shell road at Toronto Beach, and she was black. Beside her was a heavy market basket filled to overflowing. A passerby smiled at her with sympathetic friendliness and she responded with full and free confidence

"Yassm. I is some tiahed. An' lame. All painful wid miseries. Yassm. I coulda done sen' some one else to mahket fo' me. Mah grandson he couda done gone. But I dasn't trus' him. He spends mah money too briefly."

Don't Lie Discouraged.

A very large proportion of the suffering that afflicts mankind proceeds from the simple feeling of discouragement. Besides the misery which it inflicts, there is the palsying effect it exerts on all human effort. As long as hope reigns in the heart, no exertion seems too great; it is when hope sinks away and despondency takes its plac that labour of head or hand languishes.

Women Formed for Love.

Women are formed for attachment. Their gratitude is unimpeachable. Their love is an unceasing fountain of delight to the man who has once attained it and knows how to deserve it. But that very keenness of sensibility which, if well cultivated would prove the source of a man's highest enjoyment, may grow to bitterness and wormwood if he fails to attend to it or abuses it.

A Little Economy.

A Northern lady with philanthropic symptoms was trying to instil a little economy into her husband's colored tenants. One of them, Mary Kinney, an anti-race-suicidist, kept a colored girl as nurse to her group of ten growing American citizens. "Mary," remarked the lady, "do you think a woman in your circumstances can afford a nurse?" "I dunno 'm, as I kin, but I don't pay her but twenty-five cents a month, an' I pays dat in ole cloes, and" — with a wide smile — "she don't git dem!"

A Division of Labor.

Bobby had been unusually quiet for several hours, so quiet, indeed, that his mother began to worry over the great quantities of stillness that came from the room in which he was sitting. Finally, unable to stand the strain any longer, she rose up from her work and went into the nursery.

"What are you doing, Bobby?" she said, as she discovered the little chap curled up in a chair with a very solemn expression on his face.

"Thinkin 'and wishin'," replied Bobby.

"What about, dear?" asked his mother.

"I was thinkin' how nice it would be if I was twins," he answered. "Then the other one could do the studyin' at school and I could stay home and play; and then, when I did something naughty, why you could spank him. When I was sick he could take the castor oil, and"—

"And when you had some candy, what then?" asked his mother.

"Oh, I'd eat it," said Bobby. "It wouldn't do for me to let him get sick."

Antique Things and Antique Minds.

Antique things are for antique minds. The mind that is capable of being attracted to antiques ought to be steam-cleaned, overhauled, tarpapered, and laid away in moth balls in a musty attic, filled with love letters, and family skeletons. There it should be felt until the family moves, when it should be thrown into a pile with other truck, from whence it goes to form the substratum of some new real-estate alotment but recently reclaimed from pulsing tides or stagnant swamps.

An antique mind should not be put in an insane asylum. Such an environment would be altogether too rational. On the other hand, there is some hope for the mind that is satisfied with modern things made in imitation of the antique. That is to say, any mind that doesn't look beyond the label is a material assistance to business. If you must lean toward antiques, do not be too particular about the age of the articles offered.

They Couldn't Kill this Boy.

The young man was told that the ranches of the West were fine places in which alcohol and rum could be worked out of the human system. He journeyed forth and accosted a ranch owner with this: "I'm the swiftest fellow you ever saw. I was known as the swiftest thing on Broadway. Give me a job!" The ranch owner looked him over, had a fit of hysterics, and decided to get rid of him by giving him a job big enough to kill him. "There's a flock of sheep, two hundred of them," he said. "Go out there and drive them into that corral you see a mile away. When you've done that I'll give you a real job." In fifty minutes the Swiftest Thing came back and reported: "I've got 'em all in — two hundred sheep, and nine lambs." "There ain't any lambs," objected the ranchman. "Come and see," suggested the Broadway racer. "I know. I rounded them up." The ranchman went and took a look. The swiftest thing on Broadway had driven into the corral the two hundred sheep and nine jack-rabbits.

RICARDO'S REPLY.

Professor Nichols, a famous physicist, during the recitation of a freshmen class in natural philosophy, observed a tall, lanky youth in the rear seat, his body in a languid pose, his eyes half closed, and his legs extended far out. He was either asleep or about to lose consciousness.

"Mr. Ricardo," said the great scientist, "you may recite."

The freshman opened his eyes but did not change his somnolent pose.

"Mr. Ricardo, what is work?"

"Everything is work," was the drawling reply.

"What! Everything is work?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then I take it you would like the class to believe that this desk is work?"

"Yes, sir," replied the youth, wearily; "wood-work."

SUFFERED THREE YEARS

Till Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills cured his Kidney Trouble

There are few diseases that cause more acute suffering than Kidney Trouble, and Mr. F. A. Thomas, of Sudbury Ont., is one of those who know it. He writes:

"For over three years I suffered from kidney disease. First I thought I had sprained my back, for suddenly the pain would catch the small of my back and it would be impossible for me to straighten myself up for several minutes. A dull ache across the kidneys was always present, my urine was thick and cloudy, and passing it caused a burning, scalding pain. Tried medicines, but they failed. I was advised to try Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, as they had cured my wife years before. A few boxes effected a complete cure. I now enjoy the blessings of good health, which is due to this remedy."

Don't neglect kidney trouble—it's too dangerous as well as too painful. That old, reliable family remedy, Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, has cured thousands and will cure you. It is equally effective in curing constipation and its attendant evils, biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, and in purifying the blood. 25c a box at your druggist's. 18

Why Women Are Not RICH.

Man is a millionaire many times over in the possession of blood cells. Woman is not quite so rich, for scientists have proven that the normal man has five million—the woman only four and a half million to a cubic millimetre of blood.

A decrease in number of red blood corpuscles and a person "looks pale"—in fact, is anaemic, the blood does not get the right food and probably the stomach is disordered.

Dr. R. V. Pierce found years ago that a glyceric extract of golden seal and Oregon grape roots, queen's root and bloodroot with black cherrybark, would help the assimilation of the food in the stomach, correct liver ills and in Nature's own way increase the red blood corpuscles. This medicine he called Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. By assimilating the food eaten the system is nourished and the blood takes on a rich red color. Nervousness is only "the cry of the starved nerves for food," and when the nerves are fed on rich red blood the person looses those irritable feelings, sleeps well at night and is refreshed in the morning.

J. D. LIVELY, ESQ.

"I was attacked with a severe nervous disease, which was caused by a disordered stomach and liver," writes MR. JAS. D. LIVELY, of Washburn, Tenn., Route 2, Box 33. "All my friends thought I would die and the best physicians gave me up. I was advised to try Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and derived much benefit from same. My case had run so long, it had become so chronic that nothing would effect a permanent cure, but Dr. Pierce's medicine has done much for me and I highly recommend it. I heartily advise its use as a spring tonic, and further advise ailing people to take Dr. Pierce's medicines before their diseases have run so long that there is no chance to be cured.

CANADIAN NORTHERN

KING'S TASTER

An Important Appointment Held by a Man Whose Knowledge of Vintages and Special Wine Was Keen.

Very few people are aware of the fact that during the lifetime of King Edward a private appointment was held by a gentleman whose sole duty it was to "sample" wines intended for the Royal cellars. The responsibilities of this office were far heavier than may be imagined, for its holder had not only to be a judge and an expert in vintages and brands, but a shrewd business man, capable of dealing with the heads of great wine-growing districts and the countless representatives of firms of many nationalities soliciting the honour of a Royal order.

It was no uncommon thing for the King's taster to be confronted in a single day by an array of bottles which would have stocked a wine merchant's shop, while there were always correspondents whose letters conveyed inner news from the wine centres, or information regarding the discovery of bricked-up cellars holding priceless ports and sherries. And these could not be neglected, as it was always possible that they might lead to a real "find," rich and rare.

Samples had, of course, to be dealt with in a thoroughly systematic manner, and a large number of them were set aside unopened. Like most experts of great experience, the King's taster seldom put his lips to wines which were under consideration, and still more rarely swallowed them. The sense of smell is always the first and becomes the final test. A few drops of a wine rubbed in the palms of the hands reveal the quality and aroma of the vintage with a certainty which the most delicate palate cannot surpass.

It need hardly be said that no official in London was subject to more temptations and cajolery than the man who had the power of making a comparatively unknown brand of champagne famous by putting it on the King's table. But to a great extent the identity of this important personage was left unrevealed. Especially was this the case when periodical visits were made to France, Germany, Spain, and Italy during the grape seasons. Very often growers who received orders from an English buyer were quite unaware that they were dealing with the private representative of the King of England.

The man who sampled for King Edward had no place in the Royal household, and figured in no official list of those who had duties under the Sovereign. His salary, which was an excellent one, was paid out of His Majesty's private purse, and the post of wine-taster to the King was abolished altogether before King George came to the Throne.

His Wife's Tact.

"I'll give my wife credit for not causing me to be swamped by big hat bills of hers," declared the husband boastfully, in the presence of his wife's lady guests. "All the hat bills I get are small ones, which, however, come in very, very often, although I haven't observed a new bonnet on her since Easter."

"I'm so glad you're pleased," rejoined his wife, coming unexpectedly into the room. "The fact is, you're still paying for that last Easter bonnet, the bill for which the milliner is sending to you in installments."

Some people... have such admirable command over their feelings that one is tempted to believe they have no feelings to command.

A TALENTED ARBITRATOR.

Ralph Connor Is a Man with a First-Hand Knowledge of Men.

Rev. Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) of Winnipeg, the famous novelist, who has been appointed Chairman of the Board of Conciliation which will seek to settle the big strike of coal miners in the West, is noted for his tolerance. That quality stands out strongest among his characteristics as a man, a minister, and a writer.

As good an example of this as can be found is an amusing incident in his novel, "The Foreigner."

The Anglican bishop in the story was being driven over the Edmonton trail by Sam Macmillan, a very competent but very profane freighter. Every time the horses became wired in a slough Sam would let loose a string of original oaths which made the bishop's blood curdle. The latter implored the man to desist.

"Just as you say, your reverence," replied Sam. "I ain't hurried this trip, and will do our best."

At the next slough the experiment was tried. Ordinary language was used, but the horses would not budge. Half an hour passed with no results.

"It's getting late, Mr. Macmillan, and it looks like rain. Something must be done," said the bishop.

"It does, your lordship," answered Sam. "But the brutes won't pull half their own weight without I speak to them in the way they are used to."

More time passed. Then the bishop gave in.

"Well, well, Mr. Macmillan," he said, "we must go on. Do as you think best, but I take no responsibility in the matter."

He retired from the scene and—

Macmillan seized the reins from the ground, and, walking up and down the length of the six-horse team, began to address them singly and in the mass in terms so sulphurously descriptive of their ancestry, their habits, and their physical and psychological characteristics that when he gave the word in a mighty culminating roar of blasphemous excitation, each of the bemired beasts seemed to be inspired with a special demon, and so exerted itself that in a single minute the load stood high and dry on solid ground.

MEASURES MINDS WITH MACHINE

Wonderful Apparatus Devised by an English Scientist.

A Mr. John Gray has devised a mind measuring apparatus, and among the persons already tested by him are Lord Avebury, Sir William Crookes, professors and physicians of the West London and Middlesex hospitals, many of the women of the Lyceum Club, and one actor.

Commenting on the results of these tests, he says that, generally speaking, he found the men, with the exception of the actor, came under class V of the scale of persistence, which includes men of thorough and profound thought. What a dramatic critic Mr. Gray would have made!

He found the literary women to be more mentally brilliant, witty and quick of apprehension than the average. Then Mr. Gray takes another whack at the actor by saying he came under class II, which comprises cynics, persons who do not go into the depths of things and only learn superficially.

The apparatus consists of a box, the interior of which is fitted with a revolving mirror, on which powerful colored lights are made to play. The eye of the person to be tested is placed against a whole in the side of the box, the mirror is set in motion, and the length of time taken for the sensation of flickering to disappear from the subject measures his mental persistence, thus giving indication of his intelligence.

The Foolishness of Over Work.

The labourer who wears out all his powers in the machinery of life's work and takes no part in its thought and imagination, and the thinker who wears out his brain before its time and has no part in the practical activity of life, have each lost much of the pleasure that rightly belongs to them. They may not be conscious of it, but it is none the less true that the health, happiness, and real effectiveness of every man can be gained only by the harmonious union of labour and thought.

"So you have adopted a baby to raise?" we ask of our friend. "Well, it may turn out all right, but don't you think you are taking chances?"

"Not a chance," he answers. "No matter how many bad habits the child may develop, my wife can't say he inherits any of them from my side of the house."

EXPENSIVE STAMPS

Examine Your Old Envelopes. They May Bring a Fortune to You. Many Valuable Collections Started Small.

How a little defect or slight variation in printing may enhance the value of a postage stamp in the collector's eyes is strikingly illustrated by the keen competition which exists at the present time to secure specimens of a new variety of the current penny postage stamp, with the portrait of King George V., which has just been placed on sale. The variety is denoted by the presence of a full-stop following the letter "A" in what is known as the control number, "A. 11," appearing on the bottom margin of the sheets, a mark which is absent from all those issued before the present month. For two days in June the new penny stamps were printed by the Stamping Department of the Board of Inland Revenue at Somerset House, before the plates were handed over to Messrs. Harrison's, the new contractors, and in that time stamps to the value of $140,000 were produced. The sheets of this printing were placed at the bottom of the stock, and have consequently only just been issued, although collectors have for several months been on the "qui vive" to secure this marginal control variety.

It is foreign stamps, however, which provide the most remarkable instances of values being increased on account of differences of impression. A writer mentions that $2,000 was paid for a fourpenny blue of Western Australia (first issue), the high price being solely due to the fact that the centre had been accidentally inverted; the ordinary stamp without this error of impression is only worth $250.

The "Connell" Stamp

Then again, used specimens of what is known as the "Connell" five cents brown (1860) of New Brunswick are worth as much as $375. The value of the stamp lies in the fact that it bears the effigy of the Colonial Postmaster-General of the name of Connell, who, about the end of 1859, when the currency of the colony was changed from pence to cents, was ordered by the Government to print new stamps for the altered values. No special instructions being given about colour or design, Connell took the ill-advised course of embellishing the five-cent stamp with his own portrait. Of course, as soon as the Government noticed this, they ordered the withdrawal of the stamps, and Connell, considering himself aggrieved, sent in his resignation. Although the order was given for the destruction of the Connell stamps, some of them escaped, and these are much prized by collectors.

A printer's error led to the first stamps issued by the Grand Duchy of Baden becoming greatly enhanced in value. The six kreuzer value is printed in black on green paper and the nine kreuzer in black on rose. Owing to an error, some of the nine kreuper stamps were printed on green paper. There are only three of these believed to be in existence, and an envelope to which one of these was affixed was sold for $500 to a well-known collector.

Ten Most Valuable Stamps

The question has often been asked; "Which is the most scarce and stamp in the world?" Here are the first ten from a list of the 100 scarcest stamps in the world, recently published: British Guiana (1856), one cent, black on magenta; do. (1851), two cents, rose; Hawaii (1851), two cents, blue; Mauritius (1847), Post Office, two-penny blue; do. (1847), do., penny red; Roumania (Moldavia, 1858), eighty-one para, blue on bluish paper; British Guiana (1856), four cents, black on blue; Hawaii (1851), thirteen cents, blue; do. (1851), five cents, blue; Canada (1851), twelve pence, black.

Although the famous Mauritius stamp does not head the list, it is the most costly stamp in the world. As a matter of fact, the stamps most prized by collectors are the first issue of Mauritius, a penny and twopence, of 1847. It is difficult to affix a definite value to these stamps, but to-day they are probably worth $7,500 to $10,000 each, though they are not the scarcest stamps known. It is not many years since they could have been obtained for $100 each and by many persons that price was thought at the time to be ridiculously high. This will give some idea of how scarce stamps increase in value.

King George's Purchase.

In the year 1904 a specimen of the twopenny blue Mauritius of 1847 was put up for auction. It was by no means perfect, for, though it was unused, the gum was wanting, which is reckoned a defect by collectors. Nevertheless it was sold for $7,250 the actual purchaser being the Prince of Wales now King George.

Perhaps the most complete collection of stamps in the world belonged to the late Sir William Avery, of the Birmingham weighing-machine making company. His collection was sold by his executors for $123,500. Compiled throughout a long life, from the age of eight, it is considered to be the largest collection of postage stamps in the world, next to that contained in the British Museum.

The money obtained for the Avery collection, however, is by no means a record. The following are the prices recently realized at the sales of notable stamp collections: Ayre collection, $225,000; Mann collection, $150,000; Paul collection, $57,000; Thomson collection, $35,000.

Valuable Information about Taxicabs

In reply to many correspondents from the West, it may be said that a taxcab is a lineal descendant of Captain Kidd on its father's side and Jesse James on its mother's. To look at, it is a harmless creature. To read about, it is positively virtuous. But to monkey with, it is the triple concentrated extract of Montreal's Ananias Club, fishermen, real-estate agents, mining promoters, and autobiographers. Whether this is because of sheer willfulness or because it was sick with the scarlet fever at the time the rest of the class studied the tables of linear measurement is not clear, but the fact is that a taxicab can get more miles out or three blocks than a landlady can get pieces out of a single pie, and it can ruffle one's temper more effectually than the most dipsomaniacal Jehu that ever cracked a whip or framed an oath.

For the Camper.

An old mackintosh is full of possibilities to the woman who intends to go camping or fishing or even to one who does gardening and her own laundry work or scrubbling. The circular cape may be cut into two aprons if finished with a waistband. Cut the skirt portion of the coat from the underwaist, form a box plait at the center back, put on a waist band and close at the left front, and it is a splendid water proof skirt. The pocket should be left in if it is placed right. The frayed hem at the bottom may be trimmed and finished with black skirt binding. From the remaining parts of the waist a sponge bag or waterproof cuffs may be fashioned.

The Eucalypus of Australia.

While the eucalyptus, or Australian blue gum tree, destroys malaria and keeps off mosquitoes in marshy soil, it has no such effect on dry soil. The difference is ascribed by a German scientist to the fact that the tree is constructed to act as an evaporating machine, and only does its work in marshy land. A feature of the tree is its daptability to different climates, it being now grow in almost every civilised country where frosts do not occur.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

YUAN WANTS TO RETIRE

Chinese Premier Anxious to Go to His Home.

He Urges the Republicans to Secure the Election of Dr. Sun Yat Sen to the Presidency of the Chinese Republic—Asks for Troops to Quell Disturbances in Manchuria—His Health Is Impaired.

Shanghai, Feb. 19.—Yuan Shi Kai telegraphed Saturday to Nanking requesting Huang Sing, the War Minister in the Republican Cabinet, to despatch troops to the north to assist in quelling the disturbances in Manchuria.

Yuan Shi Kai also telegraphed to Dr. Wu Ting Fang, the Republican Minister of Justice, and to Tang Shao Yi, his representative, urging them to endeavor to secure the election of Dr. Sun Yat Sen as President of the republic in his place. In his despatch he said:

"I am unable to control the involved situation in China, as I am suffering from impaired health. Now that the aims of the Republicans have been attained, I have accomplished my duty. The post of President of the Republic would only serve to lead to my ruin. I ask your kind offices and interest with the people of the country to elect Dr. Sun Yat Sen, to whom credit should be given. I will wait here until I am relieved. Then I will return to my home and resume my work as a husbandman."

The new constitution of the Provisional Government will be approved by the assembly at Nanking on Feb. 19, when it will be notified by a delegation, which will start for the north.

Gen. Homer Lea, the American officer, who has been acting as military adviser to Dr. Sun Yat Sen, and who has been seriously ill, has now rallied and may recover.

Dr. Sun Yat Sen urged that an appeal should be made to foreigners to contribute to the relief of the famine in China. He said that owing to the life struggle and death struggle for freedom which had been going on in China, the administration was helpless, but he hoped hereafter it would not be necessary to make any appeal abroad.

More Plotting In Manchuria.

London, Feb. 19.—The situation in Manchuria has become much more acute since Kang Yu Wei, leader of the reform movement in 1898, and grand head of the Empire Reform Association, has thrown in his lot with the Manchurian viceroy, Gen. Chao Erh Hsun, against the new regime. The latter, according to a despatch from Tientsin, refuses to give up his office. The Manchu Prince Su is financing a movement to establish a constitutional monarchy in Manchuria.

Home Rulers Gather.

London, Feb. 19.—Home rulers were in the highest spirits yesterday afternoon in Trafalgar Square, where from 15,000 to 20,000 people assembled in support of the Government's proposed measure of self-government for Ireland. Liberals and Nationalists combined in the demonstration, members of the House of Commons occupying seven of the platforms.

Resolutions urging the necessity of giving as generous a measure of home rule to Ireland as is consistent with the maintenance of Imperial supremacy and suggesting that the bill be so framed as to be capable of early application to England, Scotland and Wales were adopted with the greatest enthusiasm.

William G. C. Gladstone, Liberal member of Parliament for Kilmarnock Burgs, a grandson of William E. Gladstone, the Liberal "Grand Old Man," who introduced the first home rule bill in 1886, was among the speakers. He said the democracy of this country had made the cause of home rule as its own.

Bandits Left No Trace.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 19.—Posses scouring the neighborhood had found no trace of the bandits who attempted to hold up the Vandalia New York-St. Louis mail train No. 17, near Liggett, Ind., Friday night. Because of more than an hour's delay in making up a special train to carry local Sheriff Walsh and his deputies to the scene of the attempted robbery, and the cutting off of telegraph wires, the bandits obtained a big start on the officials.

Railroad officials say no effort was made to break into the cars and that so far as they know nothing of any considerable value was being carried. It is their belief that when the bandits failed to stop the train in the deep cut they gave up hope of getting any loot and made good their escape.

Jessimane In Kingston.

Toronto, Feb. 19—Joseph Jessimane, whose sentence to hanging was changed to that of life imprisonment for shooting James Lougheed one Saturday afternoon in Hayter street last spring, passed through Toronto streets Saturday morning for the last time. Sitting between two sheriffs, his wrists brought close together by cold steel handcuffs, he was carried to the Limestone City in the Grand Trunk Montreal train. He was apparently unconcerned about anything. The terrible sentence which hung over him seemed not to depress him in the least. Late in the afternoon he was handed over to the penitentiary authorities and for the balance of his earthly career will live within prison walls.

Kaiser Snubs Official.

Berlin, Feb. 19.—According to The Cologne Gazette, the Kaiser has declined to receive the new Reichstag president and vice-president. Herr Kaempf, the president, and Dr. Dove, second vice-president, requested an interview, but Herr Schiedemann, the Socialist vice-president, refused to participate. The Kaiser, however, has refused to receive the presiding officers of the Reichstag. Inasmuch as this decision was communicated through the Court Chamberlain, it proves that this is a personal affair of the Kaiser's.

ASQUITH TO RETIRE?

Rumor Has Not Been Given Official Denial.

London Correspondent Declares That the Whole Arrangement For the Succession of Sir Edward Grey to the Prime Ministership Is Complete—Lloyd-George Men Are on Warpath to Prevent the Change.

London, Feb. 19.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The fact that no official denial has been given to the persistent report of the impending retirement of Premier Asquith and the succession to the Premiership of Lloyd-George or Sir Edward Grey, is in itself significant.

A well-known Parliamentary correspondent, John Foster Fraser of The Standard, claims to have definite knowledge of the subject.

"I am able to state," he writes, "that Mr. Asquith will shortly resign the Premiership and that, according to popular expectation, Sir Edward Grey, not Lloyd-George, will be appointed Prime Minister."

"Loreburn will retire from the Lord Chancellorship, which office will be taken by the present Premier.

"When," continues Fraser, "this decision became known in official circles a while ago, the rank and file of the extreme Radicals, supporters of the Chancellor, started a campaign against the Foreign Minister, who is not in sympathy with Lloyd-George's socialistic reforms, and not by any means an enthusiastic home ruler. It wasn't because they were angry with Grey for having, as they supposed, almost led England to war with Germany, nor because he prevented war with Russia in connection with Persian affairs, that they baited him, but wholly because they wanted to drive him out of office. The only effect of the onslaught was to consolidate his friends. By his side stood Asquith, Lord Haldane, Lord Morley, Lord Crewe and other responsible Liberals, to whom so many of the rank and file of the Radical party owe much.

"Asquith intended to retire about the time Balfour did, but he waited till the return of the King from India. It's now an open secret that the great honor of the Garter, usually reserved for princes and for dukes, was conferred upon the Foreign Secretary on Asquith's advice. This signal distinction was intended as a rebuff to the extremists who repudiated Grey's foreign policy, and it has been rightly interpreted to mean that Asquith genuinely approved Sir Edward's diplomacy when our recent relationship with Germany was strained.

"It mustn't be imagined," concludes the article, "that the Georgites, who preponderate in the Commons, will calmly acquiesce in the ousting of the Chancellor front the Premiership. On the contrary, they vouch they'll smash the Liberal party prospects, which Asquith painfully realizes."

The debate will be shifted from labor, and diplomatic to constitutional issues this week, and will be followed by a dull financial discussion. The three most important measures on the Government's program will be held back until Easter, and there will be no chance of passing them without a prolonged autumn session.

Another correspondent takes a brighter view of the Liberal party's affairs. He says:

"Despite the Chancellor of the Exchequer's quarrel with the doctors and the determination of the extreme Radicals to subject the Foreign Secretary to exasperating heckling over the Persian affair, Ministers have started off with an unexpected revival of confidence. Sir Edward Grey, after remaining too long in the background, is speaking at Manchester this weekend, and is reinforcing the Government by his dignified and persuasive oratory. Mr. Lloyd-George will be the hero of a suffrage demonstration at the Albert Hall next week, and there will be a full muster of Anglican clergy in the same hall for a vehement protest against the disestablishment of the church in Wales.

"Fatuous attempts have been made to represent the Cabinet as divided into two hostile groups over naval armaments and entente diplomacy, when in reality Lord Haldane, Mr. Llody-George, Mr. Churchill and Sir Edward Grey have been working in harmony under the direction of the King and the Prime Minister.

"Practical measures have been taken for removing the impression in Berlin that the entente with France and Russia is necessarily an anti-German bond that prevents a settlement of controversies and involves the necessity for wasteful armaments. The Radical prejudice against the Foreign Secretary has been weakened, especially when the King, by his extraordinary gift of the Garter has made it plain that Sir Edward Grey will be summoned and not Mr. Lloyd-George if Mr. Asquith retires during this year of political storm and stress."

Boy With $1,000 a Rolling Stone.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 19.—After wandering about this city and other nearby places on the Canadian side for two days, twelve-year-old Thomas McHale, who left his home in Corning, N.Y., Friday, was taken into custody by American immigration authorities last night, when attempting to re-enter his native land. He will be sent back to Corning to-day.

"I got tired of things at home, and thought I'd go to Canada to see my aunt," the boy told the American police, who took him off the hands of the immigration department. He had $6 in cash, and carried a bank book showing he has more than a thousand dollars on deposit in his home town.

Falls Seventy Feet.

Hamilton, Feb. 19.—After toppling 70 feet from the roof of a new building at the corner of Hughson and King William streets Saturday morning, Mike Orousi, a Pole, was picked up with none of the bones of his body broken. He was severely bruised, however, and it is feared that he is injured internally. He was taken to the City Hospital.

MANITOBA BOUNDARIES

Question Will Come Up For Discussion This Week.

Premier Borden's Proposed Resolution on the Subject Will Occasion a Debate, But the School Question Is Omitted From the Battle—Bill Cannot Be Dealt With This Session After All.

Ottawa, Feb. 19.—The extension of the boundaries of the Province of Manitoba will be the subject of discussion in the House of Commons this week. It will precede the adoption of a resolution by Premier Borden, of which formal notice has been given as follows:

"Resolved, that it is expedient (a) to extend the boundaries of the Province of Manitoba northward to the 60th parallel of latitude and northeastward to the shores of Hudson Bay, upon such terms and conditions as may be agreed to by the Legislative Assembly of Manitoba and by Parliament; (b) to authorize the Governor-General-in-Council to pay to the said province an annual sum of $381,584.10, being the equivalent of interest at 5 per cent. on $7,631,683.85, the difference between a principal sum of $8,107,500 and $475,816.15 heretofore advanced by the Government to the province for provincial purposes; such annual sum to be paid as from the first day of July, 1908, but subject, however, to the deduction of certain sums received by the said province and otherwise.

(c) To authorize the Governor-in-Council to pay to the said province in lieu of ownership of Quebec lands in the territory to be added (1) an annual sum based upon the population of the said province as ascertained by such quinquennial census thereof, such annual sum to be not less than $562,500 and not to exceed at any time the annual sum of $1,125,000, and (2) the sum of $201,723.57 towards the construction of public buildings.

As will be noticed, the resolution merely provides for the extension of boundaries and the question of separate schools does not enter, so that the debate will be shorn of much of the interest attached to it by reports of a Ministerial split on that question.

The resolution, as brought down, simply provides for the terms governing the allocation of the boundary lines of Manitoba on the extended territory without defining said boundary as between Manitoba and Ontario. The fact that the consent of the Manitoba Legislature must first be required to the boundary as proposed, practically means that the bill based on the resolution, cannot be dealt with this session since the Manitoba Legislature does not assemble for some days, and a long debate will undoubtedly have to take place before any resolution on the question can be put through. Meanwhile, Parliament here expect to prorogue before Easter, and the time limit for consideration of the bill would be too short for action before then.

Roblin Overlooks School Issue.

Lepas, Keewatin, Feb. 19.—Saturday night Premier Roblin arrived here with a dozen friends. He addressed a public meeting, but there was no political significance to his utterances.

It was expected he would announce his policy on separate schools in the new territory, and the boundaries, but he did not touch the school question, and merely referred incidentally to the boundaries.

Premier Roblin thanked the citizens and congratulated them on the choice of the town site. He thought it his duty to consult the people of the new territory.

Both Governments had arrived at an understanding on the boundary question, and he promised when the Manitoba House met, Feb. 22, a measure would be passed for representation of the new territory by one new member. The things asked for in the address would be granted as conditions would warrant.

King to Visit Kaiser?

New York, Feb. 19.—A cable from Berlin to The New York Times says it is believed that the desire for better relations between Germany and Great Britain will receive powerful stimulation by the visit of King George and Queen Mary to Berlin in the spring, and the Kaiser's return visit.

It is understood that at the request of the Kaiser an exhaustive report of Lord Haldane's conversations with German officials is being drawn up. This report will form the basis for an exchange of opinions between London and Berlin Foreign Offices; but, while the Anglophils here are gratified over the prospects of a better understanding between the two countries, the Anglophils refuse to be impressed by Mr. Asquith's optimistic statement, and declare that suspicion and mistrust of British aims are still Germany's watchward.

Ex-Senator Arrested.

New York, Feb. 19.—Former State Senator Frank J. Gardner, who was arrested and locked up late Saturday night on the charge of conspiracy to gain control of the half-million-dollar estate of Samuel E. Haslett, an aged recluse, through a power of attorney which Haslett is alleged to have repudiated, was released on $3,000 bail yesterday, after arraignment. Gardner, who a year ago was acquitted of a charge of attempting to bribe State Senator Otto G. Foelker, in connection with the anti-racetrack legislation in this state in 1909, pleaded not guilty and said that he had no doubt of his ability to clear his name.

Gardner was arrested at a cafe which he conducts in Manhattan. His wife, who was May Yerba, an actress, secured bail for him.

Government Auditor Quits.

Winnipeg, Feb. 19.—J. F. Horan, auditor commissioner of the Manitoba Government telephones, has resigned, being dissatisfied with certain evidence brought out at the commission enquiry.

BIG STRIKE COMING.

Miners In Collieries Threaten to Go Out In Fortnight.

London, Feb. 19.—The acuteness of the crisis in the British coal trade is emphasized by the prohibitive rate of 94 1-2 per cent. asked by Lloyds on insurance against a national strike.

Both sides in the contest are making every preparation for war. The colliery owners are insuring not only the collieries but their private residences as well against damage. The military authorities also have been making enquiries in the coal mining districts as to the facilities for billeting soldiers in the residences, inns and hotels.

No fewer than 800,000 miners have already handed in their notices to quit work in thirteen days from today. On March 1, unless one side or the other unexpectedly yields the country will face a national stoppage which will paralyze every industry and send up the cost of necessaries of life to famine prices.

The authorities estimate that only two weeks supply of coal is in stock, although, of course, the railroads, gas companies and other big concerns with storage facilities, are better supplied.

The Federation of National Transport Workers has pledged itself not to handle "blackleg" coal, so that imported coal will only be landed with great difficulty.

The Government announces that it will take the crisis in hand early this week, although there is as yet no indication of how it proposes to attempt to break the deadlock.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Graham Gilmour, one of the best known among British aviators, was instantly killed yesterday morning by a fall with his aeroplane from a height of 830 feet.

The plant of the Victor Milling Co. near Rochester was totally destroyed by fire late yesterday afternoon, the loss being estimated at $50,000, partly covered by insurance.

Emiliano Vasquez Gomez last night issued a manifesto accepting the provisional Presidency of Mexico. He says he will remain in San Antonio, and take no part in the warfare.

A Halifax firm has imported during the last two weeks quantities of Australian butter, valued at $12,000. It comes via Liverpool. This butter commands the top price in the Halifax market.

General Caneva, commander-in-chief of the Italian expeditionary forces in Tripoli, who has been on a visit to Rome for the purpose of consulting with the Government, has returned and resumed command.

The visiting Mardi Gras clubs assembled yesterday on the Dufferin terrace and paraded to Jacques Cartier Church in Quebec. The procession was an imposing one, fully 600 snowshoers being in line.

George Hodge has been appointed general superintendent of the eastern division of the Canadian Pacific Railway in succession to F. P. Guetlius, who has been selected to investigate the construction of the N. T. R.

Parker J. Crosby, a 14-year-old lad living at 411 Mary street, Hamilton, was accidentally wounded by a bullet from a rifle in the hands of his playmate, a boy named McAndrew, on Saturday. He will recover.

Gifford Pinchot, ex-U. S. chief Forester, in a signed statement announces that he has withdrawn his support from Senator Lafollette's "Presidency candidacy and that he will hereafter advocate the nomination of Theodore Roosevelt."

A move is being made in Ottawa to urge on the Ontario Government the advisability of inserting a "conscience" clause in the proposed amendment to the Public Health Act for those who have conscientious objections to vaccination.

Selborne Is Hostile.

London, Feb. 19.—Following the example of his leader, Bonar Law, who charged the Government with introducing American methods in politics, Lord Selborne, speaking in Cambridge Friday night on political corruption, told his hearers that if they wanted to realize the evils which might proceed from this elevation of the party machine to the seat of government, they must look at the experience of the United States. The party machine was greedy for money and would get it where it could and how it could.

In certain parts of America, he said, it got that money from the great corporations and trusts, and because they supported it, it supported them. Thereby, to a large degree, in certain parts of America, the real ruler of the country had been wealth, and irresponsible wealth was the worst ruler which a country could have.

Strikers' Children Leave.

Boston, Mass., Feb. 18.—Weeping, laughing and chattering, nearly 100 children of the striking Lawrence textile workers, accompanied by a dozen grown-ups, passed through this city yesterday on their way to the homes of friends and sympathizers in New York. Each child wore two cards, one giving its address and the other read as follows:

"We are winning; we will win if we stand together—if the mills are kept tied up tight. Therefore, stick, stand together, or they'll hang one after the other. Don't scab, attend all meetings on Sundays, pack the halls full and keep the mills closed. Put this on your coat—pin it on tight—so that everybody can see this, 'I am not a scab'."

Nine Saved; Eleven Lost.

Liverpool, Feb. 19.—The British steamer Cuban, which arrived here last night from New Orleans, brought into port nine of the crew of the British ship Erne, which was wrecked in a heavy storm at sea.

The Erne was bound from Boston, Feb. 1, for Buenos Ayres. The Cuban passed her on Feb. 8, in latitude 40 north, longtitude 50 west, and rescued those of the crew who had managed to keep themselves alive. Six of the crew were drowned, while the master of the Erne, Capt. Fickett, his wife, the second mate and a passenger are missing. Only the cargo was keeping the wreck afloat.

Count Aehrenthal Dead.

Vienna, Feb. 19.—Count Alois Lexa von Aehrenthal, Austro-Hugarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, died Saturday evening.

Count von Aehrenthal had been suffering for the past month from leuccocythaemia, a disease characterized by profound changes in the blood and internal organs, and no hopes were entertained for his recovery.

During the day he received an autograph letter from Emperor Francis Joseph, accepting his resignation and bestowing upon the Minister the brilliants of the Grand Cross of the Order of St. Stephen. In his letter he reaffirmed his confidence in the Foreign Minister and his policy.

Count von Aehrenthal read the letter after receiving the last sacrament and seemed much gratified.

Count Leopold von Berchtholdt, former ambassador to Russia, has been appointed Foreign Minister. While it is acknowledged by Austria that Count von Aehrenthal had done more than any of his immediate predecessors to raise the prestige of the country, his latter days were embittered by attacks for Italy and his alleged lukewarmness for Germany.

Coast to Coast In 1914.

Winnipeg, Feb. 19.—Passenger service from the Pacific to the Atlantic over the Canadian Northern Railway during the year 1914 was the forecast of Sir Donald Mann yesterday as he passed through from the coast to Toronto. A freight service from coast to coast, it was stated, would go into operation in two years with the passenger service the following summer. The grade from the Atlantic to the Pacific will be lower than on any line in Canada or in the United States through the moutains, and wheat will be handled all winter long to both Atlantic and Pacific terminals. As far east as Central Saskatchewan grain will find its natural route to the seaboard on the Pacific, thence to Liverpool through the Panama Canal.

Woman Ends Life.

Brockville, Feb. 19.—Mrs. E. Lee of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., a patient since the first of the year at the St. Vincent de aul Hospital, where she was under treatment for nervous melancholia, committed suicide under peculiar circumstances.

Lee, who was a patient at the same hospital with his wife, has just recovered from pneumonia, after a month's treatment.

SIR MACKENZIE'S VISIT TO THE WINDY CITY

High Honor Paid by the Chicago Press Club to the Belleville Visitors.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Mr. J. F. Wills left Belleville on the International Limited at 1.50 p.m., on Monday, Jan. 22nd, arriving in Chicago on Tuesday morning at 8.20. On the arrival of the train, the reception committee, composed of Wm. Robertson, R. T. Neilson, H. B. Hungerford, R. F. Benjamin, M. Cummins and T. F. Lynch, met them and escorted them to the Hotel LaSalle, where the entire party sat down to breakfast. The forenoon was taken up with an automobile tour about the residental sections of the city, over the boulevards, and at 1 o'clock a luncheon was tendered the visitors by the officials of the Belleville Club. Tuesday afternoon was taken up with sight-seeing and on Tuesday evening Colonel Walter S. Bogle, of Chicago, gave a dinner party at the Union League Club in honor of Sir Mackenzie and Mr. Wills. The gentlemen present at this gathering have been very warm in their praise of the geniality and general good nature of the two visitors. On Wednesday morning, another automobile drive was taken, and, at noon, the visitors accompanied by some of the officers of the Belleville Club, journeyed to the Press Club under the guidance of Mr. W. J. Shanks, an old-time Belleville boy and for many years a prominent journalist of Chicago. The Press Club had prepared a special luncheon in honor of Sir Mackenzie, and the large dining room was well filled with Chicago newspaper men, gathered to do honor to the distinguished visitors. At the speaker's table were seated Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Mr. Wills, Dr. O'Hagan, Wm. Robertson, R. T. Neilson, Thomas J. Douglas, Thomas F. Lynch and the toastmaster, Mr. W. J. Shanks. Dr. O'Hagan made a ten-minute speech on Canadian journalism, and was followed by Sir Mackenzie, who spoke for about twenty minutes, touching a little on politics and a good deal on journalism, interspersing the whole with several humorous and well timed stories. In introducing Sir Mackenzie, Mr. Shanks paid a fine tribute to him as a statesman and journalist, and the club members responded by a splendid ovation. Wednesday afternoon was occupied by Sir Mackenzie, principally, in receiving and chatting with the great number of visitors who called at his suite to pay him the tribute of their respect. Representatives of the different newspapers also took occasion to call on him during the afternoon and every newspaper in the city had a report of an interview with him. The Chicago Daily News gave him a column and a half on the front page on Wednesday night. Thursday morning, after breakfasting in the suite with some friends, a trip to the stock yards was made, where the party travelled through one of the great slaughter houses. Thursday, at one o'clock a luncheon was tendered the guests by the officers and some of the members of the Belleville Club. This luncheon was given in the German Room of the Hotel Sherman and was one of the pleasantest functions of the entire visit. Seated around the board were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, R. T. Neilson, Miles Wilkinson, R. F. Benjamin, Robt. L. Elliott, M. D. Lynch, J. F. Wills, H. B. Hungerford, Joseph C. Hynes, A. W. James, S. B Corby, T. F. Lynch, Thomas F. Ryan, J. T. Luscombe, Wm. Robertson. At the conclusion of the luncheon the party joined hands around the table and sang "Auld Lang Syne." From the Sherman House the visitors and their escorts drove directly to the Grand Trunk depot, where the entire party, augmented by Mr. W. J. Shanks and Thomas A. Thompson, joined in bidding the visitors God speed and a safe journey. It was a memorable visit, for the Belleville boys, in Chicago.—Belleville Club News, Chicago.

COUPLE WERE WEDDED AS DEATH NEARS

Hospital Companions, Phthisis Sufferers, Await the End as Man and Wife.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 16.—Both dying of tuberculosis, George Sicler, of Germantown, and his bride, only married last Saturday, lie on adjoining cots in the Dermady Cottage Sanatorium at Morton, Penn., serenely awaiting the end. At Saturday's ceremony their beds were pulled close together, so that the stricken man might place the wedding ring on the finger of his stricken bride, while the Rev. George Wilson performed the rites.

Seven years ago, when Sicler appeared a healthy man, he was ordered to Mount Airy, physicians having discovered that he had symptoms of phthisis. At Mount Airy he met his wife, then Genevieve Laurente, who was a ruddy complexioned, healthy girl, and who endeavored to nurse the man back to health, with the result that she contracted tuberculosis.

Three years ago they decided to take their chances of recovery together and were removed to the sanatorium at Morton, where they have since occupied adjoining cots and have been constant companions to each other. But their hopes of recovery were vain. Weeks of sickness grew into months and the months into years, the disease increasing its grip on both meantime.

Last Saturday they both had a recurrence of coughing spells of a character showing that the end was only a matter of days. Then they decided to die as man and wife, and now they are waiting the close of their days, patient and happy.

RECEPTION DAY AT THE TABERNACLE

Eighty Persons Received Into Membership—The Occasion was Highly Inspiring

There was an inspiring scene at the reception service in the Tabernacle Methodist church yesterday morning, when 80 persons were received into the membership of the church. These were the additions to the membership of this church since the Rev. W. G. Clarke began his pastorate in July last. Fifty were received by letter, and thirty on profession of faith, as a result of the special services conducted during January and the cottage prayer meetings that had preceded them during the fall season. Many of those presenting themselves were of advanced years, but all ages were fully represented. One teacher had the joy of seeing almost all of her Sunday School class of young girls present themselves for reception and enrollment. The pastor preached a brief sermon from the text: "Many are called but few are chosen." The need of the church to-day is more Christians and better Christians. We will be better Christians just as we win more to follow Christ. The only atmosphere in which Christian character can thrive and develop is the evengelistic. The pastor then called the ministerial members and class leaders of the congregation within the altar rail. The names of all to be received were read from the church roll. Old "Rock of Ages" was sung as the scores of communicants moved forward to the altar. All the congregation remained standing as the pastor first, and then the Rev. Amos Campbell gave a few brief well-chosen words of counsel and welcome. The Rev. John Ferguson led in prayer. "Blest be the tie that binds" was sung and the ministers and leaders passed from person to person in the great circle, extending on behalf of the church the right hand of fellowship.

The doxology, followed by the benediction brought to a close the most remarkable and inspiring sight ever witnessed in this church. The service was one long to be remembered. Many eyes were dim as hearts were moved by the Spirit of God.

Large congregations were present both morning and evening and a large Sunday School in the afternoon.

Next Sunday is the Anniversary of the re-opening of the church. The Rev. H. B. Kenny, of Bowmanville, will preach.

THE PAVEMENT OF FRONT STREET

Correspondent Thinks It Would be a Pity to Spoil so Fine a Street by Paving It

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—It would appear from what we can judge by reading the daily papers that the City Council are taking no action re paving of Front Street this year. They are surely to be commended for this, as it would be a pity to destroy such an advertising asset as Front Street has been to the city. This street has brought Belleville very prominently before the people of Canada, as it is mentioned in almost every city, town and village in the country. Indeed, it is said that there is not another street to be found like it.

What do we want of a pavement on Front Street? Pavements are said to be noisy, and what progressive citizen would want to add more noise? Keep the city "quiet" by all means. What an awful thing it is to go to a place where street cars are clanging their gongs, and the horses' feet are making noise on pavements! It destroys the idea of a "quiet" place altogether. Then, there are always so many more people on the streets where they have pavements and that should be avoided at all costs. Someone might be run over and hurt in the crowd.

Then if more people came to the city because of a paved street the merchants would have to build larger stores and engage more help, and this would be intolerable. They get little enough time now to go fishing and sleigh riding, and it is often a puzzle how they manage to pay the hands they now employ; and of course if they had more hands their weekly wage account would be more.

Then more people would be living in the city and houses would be scarce and rents would go up. We have few enough houses now, without other people wanting to come here to increase the value of our property and raise the rents

Some say the farmers who come to town find fault with Front Street. Well, let the City Council put toll gates at each entrance to the city and make the farmers pay toll to build a paved street, or else let the farmers stay at home, or go somewhere else to trade. We have a good toll on the bay bridge that keeps most of the people from Prince Edward away. They go to Picton, Trenton and Consecon and wear out their streets and we are saved all that wear and tear. If Front Street were paved far more of them would come to town, and that would mean a great wear on the street and a nuisance to our hotel keepers and merchants.

The Board of Trade are talking of advertising Belleville. What for? We don't want manufacturers here with their smoke and a lot of extra men going down the streets in working clothes carrying dinner pails. We have to mow our lawns and keep up our flower beds in summer, and these people would want to walk right past and see all this beauty for nothing.

Some say it is the merchants that want a paved street. Well, then, is not the noble alderman to be commended who said in the Council: "let the merchants pay for it." These merchants are spending thousands of dollars a year in advertising so as to get people from the surrounding towns and country to come here and wear the streets out, so they should be made to pay for a paved street if they want it.

The citizens don't want the farmers coming here with their butter and eggs. If they remained quietly at home we wouldn't be tempted to buy their luxuries, and of course that money would be saved and put in the banks and more of us could die rich.

No Sir-e-e! No pavements and free bridges for us.

Yours,
SARCASTICUS.

BLOOD FLOWED IN PARIS DUEL

Critic and Playwright Scratched Each Other's Arms in Deadly Encounter.

NEW YORK, Feb. 17.—A Paris cable to The World says a duel with swords was fought this morning in the Parc des Princes, between De Caillavet, the playwright, and Mas, the critic. After two lively rounds, the encounted was put at an end by the physicians. Both men were wounded.

De Caillavet did not like Mas's criticism of his play, "Primrose," and slapped Mas's face.

J. J. Denaud, who is noted as a duellist, directed the first round. De Caillavet was scrathed in the arm, but insisted on continuing. Rouier D'Orciercs, who has directed more than 200 duels, superintended the second round, in which Mas was twice wounded in the forearm.

De Caillavet also wanted to fight another critic, who said that his action in slapping Mas's face was "worthy of a butcher boy," but arbitrators decided the words were not sufficient justification for an encounter.

The woman who suffers in silence usually manages to make a lot of noise about it.

Another Opinion:

"After driving my Dunlop Traction Treads 3,000 miles they not only look good, but I feel that they are absolutely necessary. The sense of security that is felt when driving on wet roads is in itself worth more than the price of the tires. I have not had a chain on my car since I put Dunlop Traction Tread tires on, and have not had one puncture.'

NEED OF THE HOUR.

Major George Washington Stephens Talks on Canadian Transportation.

Not long ago Major Stephens, the President of the Harbor Commissioner of Montreal, delivered a masterly address before the Empire Club of Toronto on the development of the St Lawrence route. "In the possession of this great national asset, the St. Lawrence waterway," said Mr Stephens, "into which has gone the genius, the courage and the money of the Canadian people, Canada unquestionably has within her midst the cheapest and most efficient national trade route on the Continent

"The St. Lawrence River to-day carries to and from the port of Montreal one-third of the country's national trade.

"In this enterprise there are just 6,000,000 Canadian shareholders, all equally interested.

"At her present rate of increase Canada will, during the twentieth century, contribute to the Empire a population exceeding that now occupying the British Isles, and will produce from one-quarter of her available areas in the West more wheat than now comprises the total wheat crop of the United States.

"There are two methods of providing for the handling of this new business, not to mention the concurrent industrial production of the country. First, by increasing transportation and terminal facilities on Canadian soil; second, by allowing business to be taken care of by transportation routes and sea terminals not within the limits of this Dominion.

"I like to regard this system extending from Fort William to the sea, a distance of 2,500 miles, as a great national undertaking, into which are going the money, the genius and the patriotism of the Canadian people, and out of which are coming year by year privileges and powers to the transportation interests of Canada, instead of diversity of control and authority."

Unappreciated Sympathy.

The Soda-fountain clerk was engaged in vigorously shaking up a chocolate and egg, says a writer in the Bellman, when suddenly the glass broke in his hands, and the ensuing deluge made him look like a human eclair. The horrified customer leaned over the counter and tried to be sympathetic. Not knowing exactly what to say, he finally blurted out consolingly:

"Oh—er—too bad! Did the glass break?"

Dripping from head to foot, the clerk looked at him witheringly.

"Did the glass break?" he repeated. "Did the glass break?" And then with freezing sarcasm, "Oh, no, not at all! You just happened to stop in while I was taking my morning shower."

Rise Immediately after Waking.

Get up immediately after waking, says a physician. Do not stay in bed, falling into a half unconscious state. When you are up go through a few light exercises without bells or clubs. Now have a bath, cold if it does not disagree with you, slightly tepid otherwise. Dry thoroughly and use such vigor leisurely. If you do not experience any giddiness, confusion of ideas, palpitation of the heart or nervousness during or after this meal you may continue with it. But should there be one or more of these symptoms there is something in the meal that disagrees. Tea, coffee or cocoa may be responsible, or it may be the heat of the fod, or even the odor-laden atmosphere of the room. The body is never in such a low state of vitality as during sleep, and at no period of the active day is it so weak as just after waking. Do not hurry; do not fill the stomach with irritants; do not indulge in tasks of strength, do not poison it with an impure atmosphere. Thousands of people have found physical salvation in cool, pure air, cool cleansing and a cold, light meal.

An Ignorance of Values.

"You shouldn't have said you could hire all the brains you need for $25 a week," said the politician's friend

"Why not?"

"Because it's merely an invitation to somebody with only six dollars' worth of brains to come along and cheat you."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEY.

INTELLIGENCER AHEAD, AS USUAL.

At the Arena on Saturday evening between the hours of 6 and 7 o'clock, fur flew when the Intelligencer Pet Tigers and the Ontario Wild Cats met in deadly conflict for supremacy in the hockey world. Those who were fortunate enough to be at the rink at the hour named saw a correct demonstration of the game as it should be played. For some time past the Pet Tigers have been, under capable management, training and the result showed it was not time idly wasted. At the start of the game they went after the Wild Cats taming them to such an extent that they were as doves. The final score, as near as could be counted, was 15 to 3 in favor of the Intelligencer typos. They virtually made "pi" of their opponents. Mr. W. Green was referee and did his duties in a capable manner, notwithstanding the fact that there were a few off-sides which fortunately or unfortunately he did not observe. Alex. Dawe in goal for the winners was the right person in the right place. He has a great faculty of stopping the rubber. For the winners, Mason, Fenn, Bateman, Riggs and Lee did good work, the latter making some fine rushes. Wilson was by far the star for the Wild Cats. Due notice will be given the public when the return match is played, in order that they may appear. The line-up of the teams was as follows:—

Intelligencer—		Ontario—
Dawe	Goal	Weese
Cookson	Point	Sharp
Lee	Cover point	Hibbard
Riggs	Rover	Prest
Fenn	Centre	Wilson
Bateman	Right wing	Sullivan
Mason	Left wing	Hampton

Y.M.C.A. BEAT ALBERT.

Between the hours of 8 and 9 o'clock on Saturday evening a hockey match took place between teams representing Albert College and the Y.M.C.A., it being one of the series of the senior City League matches. The attendance of spectators was meagre. Albert College rooters were in the majority. The game throughout, and more especially in the first half, was rough. During the first half Bowen, rover for the Y.M.C.A., sustained a nasty cut over the right eye, as the result of a stick striking him. He continued playing, but was compelled to retire before the game was concluded. The result of the match was a victory for the Y.M.C.A. team, which scored 4 goals to their opponents' 1. In the first half the score was 2 to 1 in favor of the Y.M.C.A. and in the second half the College team were unable to locate the net, while the Y.M.C.A. representatives found it twice. Mr. Dawkins was referee and during the game sent only two players to the fence, when he certainly could have sent many more. The line-up of the teams was as follows:—

Y.M.C.A.—		Albert College—
Ormond	Goal	Smith
E. Moore	Point	Brown
Tuite	Cover point	Emory
Bowen	Rover	Minorgan
Barrett	Centre	Thompson
A. Moore	Right wing	Ford
Finkle	Right wing	Shepherd

A BELLEVILLE HOCKEYIST.

Among the Toronto Canoe Club's Junior team is Eugene Sidley, point player, who was born in Belleville 20 years ago. In 1908 he played in Fernie, B.C. In 1909 and 1910 he was with St. Michael's juniors. For the last two years he has been with the Paddlers. He is the sturdiest man on the T.C.C. line-up. He weighs 160 pounds. Sidley is the mainstay of the defence. A brilliant stick handler and rusher himself, he always sticks to his place until things break for his team and then he is right there with the stuff which turns victory into a rout. "He uses his noodle" Harry Pruse says.

HOCKEY NOTES.

The Deacon Shirt Factory hockey team wishes to play the Printers or the Jewelers a game the latter part of net week.

Eatonias established a lead of 13 to 4 in the first of the final games with Kingston Frontenacs for the O.H.A. senior championship at Toronto on Saturday night. The attendance was 1,330, and the receipts $1,114.75, both records for the rink.

CURLING.

INTER-CLUB GAME.

At the curling rink on Saturday night a match took place between rinks skipped by Messrs. B. L. Hyman and W. E. Schuster. The coal dealer's team were trimmed by the fur trimmer's team to the tune of 13 to 3. The players were as follows:—

W. J. Cook,	J. Caldwell,
J. S. Cook,	A. P. Allen,

IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

SOME FLY FALLACIES

Flies Don't Grow in Size and It is not the Case that the House Specimen Bites.

It is quite a common belief that flies grow in size, and that the small flies one comes across in the house are but the young of the larger house-flies, but this is quite a misconception, the difference one notices in flies of very similar appearance is due to their belonging to a different species. The feet of flies are wonderfully adapted to their habits, for they are equally useful for moving in any position over either rough or smooth surfaces. When walking over a rough surface there are two claws which come into play and enable them to grip tightly, but when the foot falls on to a smooth surface the claws are automatically withdrawn, and a pad comes into contact with the smooth plane. This pad is provided with minute glands, which cause the air to be expelled from between the pads, the surface to which the feet cling. Bristles are also provided in the feet, and these probably contain the nerves which enable the insect to feel its way along and select its foot-hold. Another popular fallacy with regard to the house-fly is that at certain seasons of the year it bites, but this is due to confusion with another species, very similar in appearance, the stable-fly, which possesses the piercing mouth-parts that are so modified in our common house-fly that it makes biting or rather piercing, an impossibility.

SPONGE CULTIVATION

Sponges are becoming scarcer and scarcer, the higher qualities fetching extraordinary prices, as compared with those of a few years ago, and this condition has led to the suggestion that some artificial substitute for the sponge be devised, or that sponge cultivation take on a new and better phase.

Experiments in the Mediterranean show that the cultivation of sponges may be undertaken with excellent prospects of success off the French coast, and that such cultivation need not, as it was first feared, be confined to the Tunisian shores.

Sponges from the opposite shores of the Mediterranean have already been carried to France and planted on its coasts. It is expected that the sponge industry will be greatly strengthened by these methods.

Fragments of sponge transported to another locality heal in about three months, when they again begin to grow. Irregular bits soon become spherical and rapidly increase in size, adding twenty-five times their own value in the course of four or five years. The growth is, of course, slow, especially during the first year, mainly because of the necessity for healing the wound caused by the tearing off of the fragment from the main body for transplanting.

The character of the spongy tissue is altered by cultivation, that dark tint becoming much clearer. It has not as yet been ascertained whether there is sufficient change in this respect to alter the commercial value of the product.

Men Like Stagnant Ponds.

The great ocean is in a constant state of evaporation. It gives back what it receives, and sends up its waters in mists to gather into clouds; and so there is rain on the field and storm on the mountains, and greenness and beauty everywhere. But there are many men who do not believe in evaporation. They get all they can and keep all they get, and so are not fertilisers, but only stagnant miasmatic ponds.

Japan has Cheapest Postal Service.

Japan has the cheapest postal service in the world. Letters are carried all over the empire for two sen, about seven-tenths of a cent. This is the more remarkable when we consider the difficulties of transportation over a mountainous and irregular country that has only about a hundred miles of railway, while only a few of the chief roads can be used for wagons and the steamships connect only a small number of stations on the coast.

We Eat Too Much.

To rise from the table able to eat a little more is a proverbially good rule for every one. There is nothing more idiotic than forcing down a few mouthfuls because they happen to remain on one's plate after hunger is satisfied, and because they may be "wasted" if left. It is the most serious waste to overtax the stomach with even half an ounce more than it can take care of.

Summer Evening Wraps.

Evening wraps are unusually novel this season, the great vogue for sheer materials finding a happy expression in these more elaborate garments. Marquisette wraps are the latest novelties, and while exorbitant prices are asked for them in the smart shops there is no reason why any woman could not fashion one herself, or at least plan one and have it made at very little expense.

Black, white, Alice blue, gray, gold color and king's blue are good colors for these little wraps. Many of them are cut on extremely simple lines with the kimono sleeve and plain back and front. There seems to be no attempt to fasten these garments. They are cut so that the front just meet and are apparently designed to hang free.

Sore Chest Cured In One Night

BROKE UP A HEAVY COLD, RELIEVED PAIN IN THE SIDE, STOPPED AN IRRITATING COUGH.

"Anyone that goes through all that I suffered last winter will appreciate the value of a remedy that cures like Nerviline cured me." These are the opening words of the solemn declaration of E. P. Von Hoyden, the well-known violinist. "My work kept me out late at night, and playing in cold drafty places brought on a severe cold that settled on my chest. I had a harsh, racking cough and severe pains darted through my sides and settled in my shoulders. I used different liniments, but none broke up my cold till I used Nervilene. I rubbed it on my neck, chest and shoulders, morning and night, and all the pain disappeared. Realising that such a heavy cold had run down my system, I took Ferrozone at meals, and was completely built up and strengthened. Since using Nervilene I have no more colds or pleurisy, and enjoy perfect health."

NERVILINE CURES CHEST COLDS

It's because Nerviline contains the purest and most healing medicinal principles, because it has the power of sinking through the pores to the kernel of the pain—these are the reasons why it breaks up colds, cures lumbago, stiffness, neuralgia, sciatica, and rheumatism. Refuse any substitute your dealer may suggest—insist on Nerviline only. Large family size bottles, 50c.; trial size, 25c.; all dealers, or The Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Ont.

ANOTHER MIDNIGHT SESSION OF COUNCIL

Votes for Women Favored—City Engineer to be Advertised for—Committee Appointed to Look After C. P. R. Matters—Library Wants $2000 This Year—Some Other Business and Much Talk

The city legislators were in session until midnight last night although the business brought forward and disposed of did not by any means warrant such a protracted session.

During the meeting motions prevailed endorsing the idea to petition the Legislature to give married ladies the right to vote who have property qualifications; to advertise for a City Engineer and the appointing of a special committee re C.P.R. matters. Some other business was transacted, and a lengthy discussion ensued in reference to Ald. Robinson's motion to dismiss City Engineer Lindsay. An amendment to this motion prevailed that the city advertise for a City Engineer, the present incumbent being privileged to apply.

The members present were, Mayor Vermilyea; Ald. Slater, Canning, Robinson, Lucas, Alford, Parks, Wallace, Smith, Woodley, Bogle, Ackerill, Marshall, White, McCurdy, Lott, Anderson, Clarke, Panter and Black.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and approved.

IN COMMITTEE

Ald. White was called on to preside in Committee of the Whole on reports etc., The reports of the standing committees were read and passed without discussion.

A recommendation from the Fire Committee that the tender of Mr. A. E. Jordan to place a hardwood floor in No. 1. fire hall was adopted.

A communication was read from the Police Commissioners stating that they did not desire to take control of the new police quarters, as intimated by the Council.

Mayor Vermilyea stated that the Police Commissioners decided that the Council was the party to superintend the new police headquarters and not the Board of Commissioners.

Ald. Parks said the City Property Committee could attend to the work.

CITY INSURANCE.

An account from the Accident Insurance Company for $1,250 for a policy to insure the city against claims for accidents for a year was discussed at some length. The Solicitor explained that the provisions in the policy had been made satisfactory to him.

Ald. Panter said the policy was all right, and all the city was liable for was $1,250 per year. We would be foolish to stick upon a technicality.

Ald. Parks contended that there was a irregularity in the policy as to the rate.

A motion to pay the account passed.

TAXES COLLECTED.

Mr. Diamond, Tax Collector, reported the collection of taxes since last meeting of the Council to be as follows:

	Collected	Uncollected
1910	$ 200	$7,800
1911	1,000	19,700

A report in referece to the meeting recently held at Berlin to promote the matter of improving the watercourses of the Dominion was on motion filed.

LIBRARY BOARD'S REQUEST.

The Board of Management of the Corby Library wrote the Council that $2,000 was necessary to be received from the Council for the maintenance of the Library this year.—Referred to the Executive Committee.

A notice which has appeared in the papers relative to an electric railway through Prince Edward County and Belleville was read and ordered to be filed.

A communication was read from the Guelph Council in reference to cities having regular slaughter houses where all cattle to be slaughtered can be properly inspected.—Ordered to be filed for the present.

A motion prevailed that a new map of the city be purchased for certain city officials.

SUFFRAGE ASSOCIATION.

A communication was read in reference to the application of the Toronto Suffrage Association wanting municipal franchise for married ladies in accordance with the following resolution proposed to be adopted by the Toronto City Council:

A resolution will be introduced at the meeting of the Council here, indorsing the application made by the City Council of Toronto for an amendment to the Municipal Act whereby all married women who are assessed for property separate from their husbands may vote upon such property at all municipal elections.

Ald. Panter moved that in the opinion of the Council we should concur in the resolution and petition the Legislature to give to married ladies the franchise if they have the property qualfications.

Ald. Clarke was not prepared to state that the resolution would be endorsed by the Legislature. He could not support the motion as it was worded, but he would support a motion in accordance with the above resolution.

The motion prevailed.

FIRE CHIEF'S REPORT.

Chief Campbell of the fire brigade, presented his annual report, which showed that last year there were 62 fires and 17 false alarms, and two days inspection. The losses totalled $77,000, including the Deacon Shirt Factory, amounting to $50,000. The necessity of more hydrants on Front Street and outlying districts of the city was also mentioned.

WANT WATER AND LIGHT.

A petition was presented for a walk on Howard Street; also light and water works.—Referred to the Public Works, Light and Water Committees.

The Committee rose and reported. The report was received and adopted.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Woodley asked if it was true as reported in one of the city papers that the Mayor had turned down the Ayshire Breeders' Association.

Mayor Vermilyea—It is not correct.

Ald. Robinson—Why was a gate put in the sewer at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets and not a solid wall, and why is sewage getting into the river.

City Engineer—There is no sewage whatever going into the river from the Front Street sewer.

Ald. Canning—Why is the fire alarm rang in the manner it is and not as it used to be?

Ald. Woodley—I will look into the matter.

MOTIONS

Ald. Robinson moved, seconded by Ald. Parks that Mr. Lindsay, City Engineer and Manager of the Waterworks Department, be, and is hereby requested to hand in his resignation as incumbent of these offices to the City Clerk, to take effect April 1st. Also that we procure a competent engineer to fill the offices made vacant as soon as possible.

Ald. Clarke asked if the motion made was the same as the notice of motion given at last meeting of the Council.

The Mayor ruled that there was a difference between the two.

Ald. Robinson—Then we will take up the notice of motion that I gave two weeks ago.

This notice was as follows: That at the next meeting of the Council he would move that the office of City Engineer be abolished for the present.

The following are Ald. Robinson's remarks verbatim, in reference to the motion:

"In speaking to this motion I wish to say on the start that in taking the course I am pursuing I am not in any way incited by either malice or ill will of any kind for Mr. Lindsay personally. My motive is the lack of efficiency which at present exists in the Public Works Department and which has prevailed more or less ever since Mr. Lindsay has had this Department under his supervision; and this lack of efficiency has been more apparent each successive year until last year when it culminated in being, to use a vulgar term, "perfectly rotten." I need not particularize, or go into details to prove this, for I think this represents the consensus of opinion among the ratepayers at large as well as, I venture to say, nearly every member of this Council, including the Mayor. Now, this being the case, is it not high time we were making an effort to improve the existing condition of things in this Department? I might also mention that Mr. Lindsay is not an Ontario Land Surveyor, and therefore cannot sign plans and give evidence as a Surveyor.

"Well, how are we to proceed to bring about a more satisfactory state of affairs? Well, if I may be allowed to voice my own opinion I would say, inaugurate a reformation and commence with the fountain head and work downwards. In pursuing this course I would say, let this Council by resolution request Mr. Lindsay to resign, and then procure another supervisor or an engineer, if thought best, in his stead, and then proceed to reform other branches of the service of this Department in the direction of greater efficiency. But as at the present moment only the office of City Engineer is being considered, I shall proceed to give a few reasons why I advocate that office being abolished or else have it occupied by a new incumbent, one qualified to draw all the plans and maps connected with the city and its service in all departments as required, and otherwise be able to fill the position of Engineer and supervisor of the Public Works and Water Works Departments.

Now, I wait it to be distinctly understood that as far as I am personally concerned, my course in connection with this matter is actuated simply because I conceive it to be a part of my duty as Alderman to keep faith with the taxpayers and represent them honestly and in a business-like way, as far as lies in my power to do so reasonably. Now as I have no desire to damage Mr. Lindsay's chances of obtaining a position elsewhere, I shall bring to your attention only what has already been made public property by the press and which was brought out under the head of "Inquiries" at the last meeting of the Council, which I shall now quote and make a few remarks thereon as follows:

"Ald. Robinson asked the Engineer: 'How do you make tests to find out the nature of the ground when necessary to make out specifications for sewer and waterworks excavations?'

"Mr. Lindsay said he often had places of water and gas excavations made formerly to guide him.

"Ald. Robinson again asked: 'What did you specify was the nature of the material to be excavated for waterworks on Murney Street?'

"Mr. Lindsay said rock.

"'How much rock did you specify?'

"Mr. Lindsay—'All rock. But I was at fault then at is turned out to be only about 1-3 rock.'

"'How about Bettes Street?'

"'I specified all rock but I was at fault as it afterwards proved to be about all earth or dirt.'

"'How about Brassey Street?'

"'That was about the same,' the engineer supposed

"'Why has not the sidewalk been repaired in the lane on the west side of the post office?'

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

FOREIGNERS QUARRELED.

Before Magistrate Masson this morning a case from Point Ann, in which a number of Hungarians were involved, was disposed of. There was a dispute between some of these foreigners as to the possession of some articles in a boarding house. After some evidence had been taken a satisfactory settlement was effected between the parties.

TELEPHONE AND TELEGRAPH.

Wireless communication—Telephone and Telegraph—was the subject of an illustrated lecture given in John Street Presbyterian Church by Professor Gill of Toronto. The address was both interesting and instructive to the goodly number who attended. The pastor, Rev. A H. Drumm, presided. At the close a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the lecturer.

INVITATION RECITAL.

An invitation piano recital, given by Miss Elizabeth Potter, pupil of Mrs. MacColl, assisted by Mrs. Wilmot, was given at St. Agnes' Hall last night. The programme was as follows:

UNDER SUMMER SKIES.

Writing from Mexico City, Mr. C. J. Bowell speaks of the blue skies and the warm weather of the land of Anahuac. He had heard of the extreme could here and appreciated his surroundings. The rebels were, however, making it unpleasant for travellers in that country.

MEDAL CONTEST.

What will likely be the last silver medal elocution contest of this season will be held this evening in the school room of the Baptist Church. It is expected that no less than 12 of the young people of the Baptist Sunday School will compete for the medal, and Rev. Mr. Smith will act as chairman. All previous contests of this series have been limited to eight contestants, but there was such an abundance of good talent in the Baptist school that the Y.W.C.T.U. consented to make an exception in the case of this last contest. Admission free.

ELECTRIC POWER.

Mr. J. G. G. Kerry, President of the Electric Power Company, was in Belleville yesterday, going over the local plant and distributing system, with a view of ascertaining exactly what improvements could be made in the year 1912. The company intends to spend a considerable amount of money in Belleville, improving its distributing system. While he was in town he met a number of the prominent business men with the view to finding out in what way the Electric Power Company and the local company, the Trenton Electric and Water Company, could be of assistance in obtaining industries for Belleville.

OTTAWA, Feb. 20—No confirmation could be secured to-day of the story that deal has been made whereby Ontario will get Port Nelson. On the other hand, it is learned from an official source that the Boundaries Bill which will be presented to the House is the old Laurier bill of 1908, as stated yesterday.

HEN SAVES HER OWN LIFE.

CARLISLE, Penn., Feb. 19.—When Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harlan, who live on the Kutz farm along the Harrisburg pike, drove into town to-day they carried with them a fattened chicken which they intended to sell at a hotel here. As the Harlan waggon drew up in front of the hotel the chicken, flapping its wings and cackling, flew out of the vehicle. Mr Harlan captured the hen, and peering into the back of the wagon, discovered a newly laid egg.

As eggs are worth 35 cents a dozen here and a live chicken worth about the same price, the thrifty farmer decided that the hen would be worth more in the coop than on a hotel plate and carried it back home.

DEATH ROLL.

MRS. MARY A. HUNT.

Mrs. Mary A. Hunt, who passed away on the 19th inst., at the family homestead on the front of Sidney, at the age of 98 years, was the widow of Burleigh Hunt, a resident of Belleville forty-nine years ago at the time of his death. She was the last of Capt. Walden-Meyers' gorty-one grandchildren. Her father was John Row, the elder, for many years a resident of the second concession of Sidney, and she was related to the Meyers, the Bleeckers, the Gilberts and some branches of the Ketcheson family. She had two sons, Henry B. and John W. The latter died last July. Henry curvives and resides in our city.

JAMES A. JOHNSON.

KINGSTON, Feb. 19.—The death occurred at Consecon of James A. Johnson, one of the largest grain buyers in Prince Edward County, and at one time member of Parliament, aged 65.

DEATHS.

HUNT—Died Feb. 19, 1912, Mrs. Mary Ann Hunt, widow of Burleigh Hunt, aged 98 years.

Funeral services Wednesday, 2 p.m., at her late residence on the front of Sidney.

COUNTRY CORRESPONDENCE

WALLBRIDGE.

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 14th, a few of the friends and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. John Hogg invaded their home with well filled baskets and presented them with an address and a beautiful mantle clock. Mr. George Nicolson acted as chairman, and called upon Miss Leah Frost to read the address, while Mr. Everett Ketcheson made the presentation. Mr. Hogg, in a few well chosen words thanked those present for their kind remembrance at this time. Mr. and Mrs. Hogg have lived in this immediate neighborhood for a good many years and among their old friends who met to say good-bye as neighbors were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Ketcheson, Mr. and Mrs. John Hinchcliffe, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Chisholm, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Nicolson, Mr. and Mrs. J. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Frost, Mr. and Mrs. R. Bamber, Mr. and Mrs. H. Weese, of Frankford, and others. After the presentation the evening was spent in dancing and music after which the gathering broke up in the wee sma' hours, all wishing Mr. and Mrs. Hogg success in their new home. The following is the address:

To Mr. and Mrs Hogg:

Dear Friends—Being aware of your intention to depart from our community, we, your neighbors, cannot allow the opportunity to pass without expressing our appreciation of your invaluable friendship. Mr. Hogg, as trustee, you have taken an active interest in school matters, having been a faithful member of the Board for two terms. As an agriculturist you can well be imitated. We rejoice in your successful exhibition of stock at the fall fairs and trust that this success will follow you to your new home which we are glad is not so far removed from us that we have to sever our social intercourse. At our social gatherings your young people have been ever welcome and we hope they will still be pleased to join our "merry-makings." As a token of esteem for yourselves and family we ask you to accept this clock and may it tick many a happy day in your new home—serving to remind you occasionally of your 5th concession friends.

Signed on behalf of Sidney friends,
Milton Seward,
Everett Ketcheson.

Among the various discoveries made by men of science in their innumerable efforts to measure and map the earth with the least possible error are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that, in mapping the island, the northern and southern coast lines, as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.

Mr. John L. Palmer, the new auctioneer, held one of the most successful auction sales which has been held in this vicinity for a long time. This took place on February 15th at the farm of Mr. Gilbert Ross, Lot 15, con. 3, Thurlow, amounting to $1,887.00. Considering the class of goods sold, we consider it a grand triumph for Mr. Palmer and predict that in him we have a wonder at disposing of farm stock and implements at high prices. Mr. Palmer sticks close to his text and works with a vim for his employer's interests, and treats one and all with politeness. Success to our new auctioneer. d&w,1t

FALSE IDEALS

"Graball Too Often the Height of Ambition.

False ideals of happiness haunt the ways of men and lead them on to danger and destruction through the siren song of fantasy. One markes his pile of wealth. He has enough now for all the purposes of refined living; but he wants that extra, that margin, by which enough may be broadened out into excess, and refinement may be made to include frantic luxury and insolent ostentation. "When I have so much, I shall be content," he says to himself. But he is never content. If he gets a hundred thousand pounds, he wants two; if two, three; and so on till he covets a million which then, when compassed, shall positively be the term and boundary of his desires. But the million spreads out and rolls on, as the hundred thousand had done before it.

Rousing Response.

At a Toronto theatre not long since the curtain rose on an empty stage in the second act of a play, and by and by a meek-looking young man with a dust-coat slung over his arm came on and loudly called, "Uncle! uncle!"

According to the book of the play he should have received no answer to his call, and after an appropriate pause he should have gone on with the monologue. But a graceless "god" in the gallery took upon himself to answer the actor.

"All right, I'm coming in a moment; how much do you want on it?" he shouted.

The effect on the audience may be imagined.

"Very clever, isn't he?"

"Yes."

"I'm told that his three older brothers are mentally weak."

"Yes, he's the original sane fourth."

ANOTHER MIDNIGHT SESSION

"Mr. Lindsay it was because there had been but two repair jobs done last year.

"'What is the cause of the sewage at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets not running into the bay instead of into the river.?'

"Md. Lindsay—It was because there gate had been put in at the corner. No sewage ran into the river from Front Street or Bridge Street, except from the sewer connections west of Front Street.

"Now, to my mind these questions and the answers thereto prove conclusively either incapacity or negligence or perhaps both. This is so manifest that further comment would seem to be needless, but I shall nevertheless make a remark or two anent the last two questions and answers. The reason given by Mr. Lindsay why the sidewalk had not been repaired is lame indeed for enough material could have been taken there in a wheelbarrow to neutralize this menace to pedestrians, which has been there for two years or more and already has been the cause of at least one accident. As to the sewer, I am satisfied that very many more times the quantity of sewage escapes from the pipe into the river than is received between Front Street and the river, and therefore something must be radically wrong with the Front Street sewer, especially at the corner of Bridge and Front Streets. So, taking all these things into consideration, and others that could be mentioned, I am constrained to come to the conclusion that several thousands of dollars of the corporation's and taxpayers' money has been wasted since Mr. Lindsay has been our City Engineer.

"I shall now close by mentioning the fact that I am not the only Chairman of Public Works who has been dissatisfied with Mr. Lindsay as a supervisor or executor of the Public Works Department, for both Ald. Lott, in 1910, and Ald. Panter, in 1911, expressed themselves in reference to this, as being very much dissatisfied, and that just as strongly as I have done.

"It is now the privilege of the members of the Council to act in connection with this matter in a way that will greatly benefit the taxpayers or otherwise, as seems best to them, but as for myself, I shall act in the interests of the over-burdened taxpayers even if I should stand alone."

Ald. Alford said this was a serious question, namely, the discharging of the City Engineer. He (the speaker) had seen his drawings and profiles, which were good.

Ald. Ackerill said we had heard about Mr. Lindsay's bad points; could any person tell us about his good points.

Ald Panter said his candid opinion about Mr. Lindsay was that he was not a good manager of men. He would support a motion that the city advertise for a City Engineer and the Council could see and investigate the abilities of those applying for the position.

Ald. Parks thought the City Engineer should be a land surveyor.

Ald. Bogle suggested that an opportunity should be given to Mr. Lindsay to make a defence in this matter. It would leave the city in a bad position to have Mr. Lindsay go at once, and a new man take his place. This matter should not be dealt with in a hasty manner.

Ald. Clarke said, we had heard a great deal about Mr. Lindsay's faults. At the present time he (the speaker) was not in favor of the office of City Engineer being abolished. If the chairman of Public Works will formulate or tell a scheme whereby this department can be improved then it may help to solve the matter. The City Engineer is appointed by by-law and he (the speaker) would like to know if a motion would abolish the by-law.

City Clerk—The motion will have no effect on the existing by-law. A new by-law would have to be prepared.

Ald. Robinson—From the tone of some of the aldermen a by-law would not be necessary.

Mr. Lindsay stated in reply to Ald. Robinson's remarks that he had now been with the city four years and here read a letter received by the City of Belleville from Guelph, where Mr. Lindsay had been City Engineer, stating that Guelph was anxious not to let Mr. Lindsay go, showing the confidence felt in him. He further stated in regard to the conduct of the Public Works Department that last year, owing to the scarcity of labor by reason of the C.N.R. operations, considerable tact and judgment had to be exercised in holding the men at all, especially the teamsters, as the city was not paying the rate of wages. Yet Mr. Lindsay stated the public were not aware of these difficulties and judged only from surface observation whilst the Engineer's tongue was tied and he was misjudged accordingly. He further remarked that an engineer could not be expected to be responsible for the conduct of the men at all times, which was the foreman's duty. The whole trouble, if there was any trouble, arose through the enormous pressure of work entailed by the sewerage operations which was thrown entirely on Mr. Lindsay's shoulders and which comprised over 12 miles of sewers, and for which work Mr. Lindsay could barely obtain the services of one inspector, where in any other city both an assistant and the necessary number of inspectors would have been available. Mr. Lindsay blames himself for tamely submitting to these conditions, and by his silence being misunderstood. Mr. Lindsay further quoted an editorial from a local paper of September, 1908, stating that his conduct of the Public Works Department showed a very considerable saying over former years. This edisaving over former years.

Mr. Lindsay, in conclusion, stated that he was perhaps the only official in any city who had to combine the positions of City Engineer and Water Works manager at a joint salary of $1,400. The lowest salaries elsewhere being $1,400 for Engineer and $800 to $1,000 for Water Works manager, which was the figure paid Mr. Thompson here, by the old water company. Mr. Lindsay's principal statements, it may be remarked, were borne out by the records produced.

In reply to Ald. Panter's remarks that Mr. Lindsay was himself after a position in the west last year, Mr. Lindsay admitted that he had the first refusal of a position at $5,000 per year in a western city, but only sought this when things looked unsatisfactory in Belleville.

Ald. Robinson replied at some length, stating that he was prepared to do all in his power to improve the Public Works Department.

Ald. Panter moved in amendment that the city advertise for applicants for the position of City Engineer.

Ald. Clarke moved an amendment to the amendment that the matter be referred to the next meeting of he Council.

The amendment to the amendment was defeated.

Upon a vote being taken the amendment of Ald. Panter was adopted on the following division:

Yeas—Ald. Bogle, Canning, Clarke, Marshall, McCurdy, Panter, Parks, Robinson, Slater, Smith, White, Woodley.—12

Nays—Ald. Ackerill, Alford, Anderson, Black, Lott, Lucas and Wallace.—7.

Ald. Panter moved, seconded by Ald. Woodley, that in the opinion of this Council it is highly desirable to have the divisional point of the C.P.R. located at or near Belleville, and that a committee composed of the Mayor, Ald. Bogle, Clarke, Alford and the Railway Committee be appointed to look after the matter.—Carried.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Ald. Clarke gave notice that at the next meeting of the Council he would move that in view of the urgent necessity of a large amount of work being done on the roadway of the during the present year except such streets that no new sidewalks be built as are absolutely necessary and these only after having been decided upon by the Council.

That a special committee composed of the Chairmen of Public Works, of the Market and City Property and the mover be appointed to ascertain the feasibility and probable cost of erecting a public lavatory on the corner of Front Street and Victoria Avenue.

Council adjourned.

KING'S KINDNESS

There are many stories of the late King Edward's kindness of heart, and the following is a typical illustration of this:—

One of the most efficient and faithful officers on a certain Royal yacht was a captain of very moderate means. For some years he battled with the situation, but at last, worn-out and heart-sick, he determined to resign and enter the mercantile marine.

In some way or other King Edward heard of his resolve. Less than a couple of months after Captain F—— was surprised, and even alarmed, to receive a peremptory command from the King ordering him to report at Buckingham Palace forthwith. Although he knew that his papers were clean, he felt perturbed nevertheless. His reception by the late King, however, was one of the most cordial nature. After some preliminary remarks, His Majesty said:—

"I think you are entitled to a holiday in return for your many years' work on the ——, so you had better take this."

The astounded officer was handed an Admiralty order granting him a year's leave of absence on captain's full pay.

"You can renew that at the end of the year if you so desire," added His Majesty, with a significant laugh. "And, by the way, this may interest you."

The captain was then given a letter offering him the command of a superb and newly-built ocean liner. The letter was to the effect that the personal recommendation of the King was the cause of its being written. The overhelmed captain never quite remembered how he got out of the palace. But he became the monarch of the ocean liner.

Neglecting His Business.

A country doctor was recently called upon to visit a patient some distance away. Driving to where the invalid tied his horse to a tree and started to walk across the field. It happened that work was in progress on a new well, of which the doctor knew nothing until he found himself sinking into the earth. He fell just far enough to be unable to get out of the hole unassisted, and lustily yelled for help. When he was finally pulled up, the hired man remarked to him:—

"I say, doc, you had no business down there."

"No, I don't think I had," replied the doctor.

"Don't you know," continued the hired man, "you ought to leave the well alone and take care of the sick?"

AN ABSENT-MINDED LAWYER

Two Good Stories of an Irishman.

Prominent among the members of the Irish Bar in its early years was Peter Burrowes. Although successful in his profession, he seems to have been subject to absence of mind in an unusual degree. A brother-lawyer who went to call upon him early one morning found Burrowes watching over a saucepan in which his watch was boiling merrily away, while his eyes were anxiously directed to an egg in his left hand. On another occasion he was counsel for the prosecution at an important trial for murder. Burrowes had a severe cold, and opened his speech with a box of cough-lozenges in one hand, and in the other the small pistol-bullet by which the man had met his death. Between the pauses of his address he kept supplying himself with lozenges. But at last, in the very midst of a sentence, he stopped. His chest heaved, his eyes seemed starting from their sockets, and in an agonised voice he shouted. "Oh-h-h, gentlemen, gentlemen, I've swallowed the bullet!"

Two Ribs Broken.

Several people saw him slip on a wet step and fall. Partly extricating himself from his umbrella he set up such a wail of distress that every one in hearing ran to his assistance regardless of the drenching rain.

"Are you hurt?" asked a chorus of voices.

"Anything broken?" demanded another.

"Only two ribs," he muttered in tones of deep anguish as he wiped his bleared face on his sleeve.

Helping him up, a kind man dragged him into a drug store. One thoughtful person suggested a glass of brandy; another, more generous, said there were two ribs broken, and a second glass followed the first.

"That 'll make you feel better, old man. Ribs hurt you now?"

"What ribs?" he puzzled, smacking his lips.

"Why, the ones you said were broken!"

"Oh," he replied, getting on his feet and moving toward the door. "Dey was de ribs in me umbrella."

The oldest ruler in Europe is the Prince Regent of Bavaria, upon whom on the occasion of his ninetieth birthday, recently, King George conferred the Order of the Garter. He has had the unique experience of acting as regent of that country during the insanity of two kings. Twenty-five years ago the Prince Regent's nephew, King Louis II. of Bavaria, was declared insane, and the Prince was proclaimed regent. Three days later the king committed suicide, and was succeeded by King Otto, who is now sixty-three years of age, and who has been insane since 1875. The Prince is extremely popular in Bavaria on account of his sporting proclivities.

WHAT IS TRUTH?

Men will believe nothing what they cannot understand.

Truth comes to us only by glimpses. There are some who refuse to receive a partial truth, who insist upon having a clear idea of the whole, or at least upon persuading themselves that they have it, before they yield assent to anything. Thy will believe nothing which they cannot understand, they say, forgetting that, although we may both believe and understand many things to be true, it is only by occasional glimpses that we can ever discover how they came to be so. For instance, we all believe the wonders of the natural world, the existence and motions of the planets and starts, the changes in the earth's surface, the marvellous growth in the vegetable world, and the still more wonderful development of the animal creation — of conscious life and human intilligence. In believing these things we understand that they are so; but how they came to be so, how they perform their several functions, what are the laws which uphold them and the forces they obey — these things we do not understand, except as study or thought, or participation in another's thought, give us glimpses of the truth.

An Immaculate Servant.

He was an immaculate servant. To watch him serve a salad was to watch an artist at work. To hear his subdued accents was a lesson in the art of voice-production. He never slipped, he never smiled, and his mutton-chop whiskers marked him as one of the old and faithful stock. But one evening, to the surpise of his master, he showed unaccountable signs of nervousness. When the chicken came on he confused it with the pheasant. He served everything in the wrong order, made blunder after blunder, and put a final touch to his shame by upsetting salt over the only superstitious member of the party. Then at last, when the ladies had retired to the drawing-room, he touched his master on the shoulder, "I beg your pardon, sir," he said in a respectful undertone, "but could you manage to spare me now? My house is on fire."

Couldn't Get the Scotchman.

There was an aged Scotchman who by native shrewdness made a fortune, and he did it without the slightest bit of education. One day he and an acquaintance were talking when the latter said to old Duncan: "Say, Duncan, you don't know nough to go in when it rains. Why you can't even spell bird." "B-u-r-d," said Duncan. "I tell you you dont know anything. Why, if you had to spell to make a living you'd have been dead years ago. I'll bet you a hundred you can't spell bird." "I'll tak' ye," quickly replied Duncan. After the money was put up Duncan said "B-i-r-d." "That ain't the way you spelled it the first time." "I wasna bettin' then."

She smiled and stooped to pick up her serviette.

"I shall not come into the drawing-room this evening," he said, as the ladies rose from the table; "I am going to post a letter at East Weyberne."

"There won't be a moon to-night."

"Never mind, it's only a little over three miles, and I know every inch of the way."

He left Sir Thomas and Anthony Pelham over a bottle of old Madeira, and found James airing himself at the hall door.

"Going out, sir?" he asked, stepping into an ante-room and bringing forth a light overcoat and a checked tweed cap.

"To East Weyberne. It will be pretty dark when I get back."

"The evenings are drawing in, sir, but it's market day yonder, so as likely as not you'll have company home. Look here, sir," he added, with a detaining touch on his arm, "don't you go all round by the main avenue, cut straight across to that haha fence; you'll see a little iron gate leading into a private road, which'll take you on to the turnpike."

He followed the man's directions, and in an incredible short space of time was on the main road. It was chilly after the rain, and he walked quickly with an easy swinging gait, and examining his watch later by the dim light of the station lamp, he knew that he had made the journey in less than fifty minutes.

The little country town seemed full of farmers and farm laborers. The streets were badly lighted and coarse, drunken drovers loafed about the narrow pavements in front of the public-houses using obscene language, or roaring out snatches of ribald songs. A half-tipsy ruffian rolling out from a tavern, singing at the top of his voice, knocked against him as he passed.

"Hallo!" he exclaimed, in idiotic amazement; "why, you're the bloke from Lunnun as sold me that ther broken-winded mare! I allus said I'd break your head whinever I see yer."

Several of the man's comrades gathered round and strenuously advised him to set about redressing his wrongs without delay.

"Take that, yer bloomin' swell!" the man said, doubling his fist and hitting straight out from the elbow.

A sharp cry of pain and a hoarse cheer rang out simultaneously on the night air and echoed away behind the houses, but before the unusual chorus had quite finished re-echoing a tall, powerfully-built man in rough frieze knicker-bockers and wearing a Homburg hat, pushed his way through the jeering throng.

"What are you fellows doing there?" he demanded in a laud, imperious tone. "Is that you, Denham, you drunken rascal?"

"It's all right, Squire," the man answered, partially sobered by hearing his master's voice, "this here's the cnap as swindled me over the old mare. I allus said as how I'd do for 'im."

"You can always say exactly what you please, Denham, but I say that unless you clear out of this at once I shan't expect to see you back at work next Monday"

The man swore undeor his breath, scratched his head, and looked into the crown of his hat.

"All right, master," he said, moving away. "but Joshua Denham won't forget as how Squire Fleming stood by and 'elped to best him o' two pun ten!"

CHAPTER IV.

Paul Farley Makes a Friend

Squire Fleming placed Paul's arm within his own.

"You are a bit dazed, my man," he said, leading him across the street to a freshly painted, comfortable-looking inn. "I always put up at the 'Popinjay.' My dog-cart is waiting in the yard now; it's the only respectable house in the place. Just come into the front parlor and let's see what mischief the brute has done."

"I say, Mrs. Radler," he said to the buxom landlady they encountered in the sanded passage, "just bring a brandy and soda, and a bowl of warm water; this gentleman has met with an accident."

"Why, it's Mr. Farley!" she cried in surprise. "Oh, my. Well I won't be a minute, sir."

Paul sat down on the horsehair couch feeling sick and giddy. Squire Fleming turned up the light and set the lamp on the edge of the table near the sofa.

"By Jove! That 's an ugly cut," he said, removing the hand pressed over the wounded eye. "That scoundrel's knuckle must be made of flint to lay a cheek open in that manner. No, don't touch it, bathe it gently with the warm water."

"Thank you," he continued, relieving the landlady of a basin and towel. "Now, Mrs. Radley, if you could oblige me with an old, soft handkerchief, instead of this huckaback towel, a small piece of lint, and some plaster, I shouldn't need to give you further trouble."

"No trouble at all, sir," she said, briskly. "I have some lint left of the piece you gave my husband when he cut his wrist a week or two since, and plaster, too."

"Capital! We are in luck's way."

"You are Sir Thomas Hargrave's secretary, I take it," the Squire resumed, uncorking the soda water. "My sister is dining at the Hall this evening."

"I had the pleasure of sitting next to her at dinner," Paul answered, rousing himself with an effort.

"Oh, Mrs. Radler," the Squire exclaimed apologetically, as the good creature again appeared. "I am afraid I shall run you off your legs, but I really must have a pair of sharp scissors."

"I've brought a pair, sir," she said with a breathless laugh, "I knew you'd want them for the plaster."

"You're a treasure, Mrs. Radler! I suppose a leash of partridges won't come amiss?"

Mrs. Radler vanished smiling and curtseying.

"Dry that gently, Mr. Farley," he said, placing the brandy and soda at the young man's elbow, and catching his wrist in a firm clasp as he spoke.

Paul looked up at the sunburnt face bending over him. He noted the square jaw, and the bronze moustache and the keen, steady eyes now smiling kindly into his. He saw, too, that the broad forehead was blue-veined and almost white, where the hat had protected and sheltered it from the summer's sun. The man's whole personality expressed powerful energy of mind, a welding together of severity and tenderness, and an open honest fearlessness, bred and fostered, perchance by the simplicity of his pastoral life.

"Why, you are as tremulous as the leaves of a tree," he said, with some concern, "drink that stuff and let me plaster the wound, and you'll begin to feel yourself again."

"I ought to be extremely grateful to you, Mr. Fleming," the patient said, with quivering lips, taking another glance at the face, which began to have a strange fascination for him.

"Why, for not leaving you to Denham to pound to a jelly?"

"Yes, and for the trouble you are taking now."

"Virtue brings its own reward, Mr. Farley, and one handsome brown eye has amply rewarded me, I assure you. I am congratulating myself upon not being a 'weak woman,' otherwise that wanton orb might entangle itself in the mechanism of my heart and cause a deal of mischief. Keep still. Don't move for an instant, and I shall have fixed you up very presentably. There! Now lie down while I go and see what has become of my trap."

As the door closed upon the Squire's stalwart form Paul lifted the lamp and walked unsteadily to the old-fashioned mirror. The left cheek immediately below the eye was neatly strapped with fine strips of pale yellow plaster. The eyelid was swollen and discolored, and an unbecoming puffiness thickened one side of the nose. He set the lamp back on the table, and finished his brandy, and felt in his waistcoat pocket for his eye-glasses. Coming along, the humid atmosphere had blurred the glass, and he remembered taking them off and slipping them in along with his watch, a fortunate circumstance when seen in the light of after events. He was endeavoring to replace them, trying to find a spot where they would sit with the least discomfort, and to fix the rims accordingly, when the Squire returned.

"How do you feel now, Mr. Farley?" he asked, drawing on his doeskin gloves.

"I feel quite equal to the walk back," he said, stroking his inflamed nose.

"Nonsense, I am going to drive you."

"Don't wear those glasses for a day or so," he said, as they went out together and climbed into the dogcart, "they might worry and set up an irritation. Better let the swelling subside with first intentions. Now, my girl," he added, shaking the reins, "take us to Weyberne Hall like a lady."

A north-west wind had swept the sky clear. A great golden moon hung above the plantation trees, and little gusts of wind sighed and murmured among the firs as the dogcart bowled through the town and out along the moist brown road.

"How long have you been at Weyberne Hall?" the Squire asked, as the mare sobered down into an easy regular motion.

"Five weeks. I wonder I have not met you or Miss Fleming before."

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 19.—It looked to-day as if the bull clique in wheat was switching from the May option to July. The sales of the early month jabbed the price down under the dollar mark, but the close was firm and above par. Latest trading left quotations varying from a shade off to 3-4c up as compared with 48 hours before. Corn finished unchanged to 1-8c lower, oats at an advance of 1-4c to 3-8c, and hog products the same as Saturday night, to 10c to 12 1-2c decline.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat, ½d lower than Saturday, and corn ½d to ⅝d lower; Berlin wheat closed 1⅛c lower and Buda Pest, ⅜c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat shows no improvement and the prices bid generally were from 1½c to 2c per bushel out of line. The local demand for American corn was good and sales of 25 cars of No. 2 yellow were made at 72½c, ex-track. In oats the feeling remains firm under a good demand for car lots from local and outside buyers. A good business continues to be done in flour for local and country account. Bran and shorts are scarce and firm. The demand for butter is good and cheese is quiet. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Feb. 19.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 83 carloads, consisting of 1619 cattle, 167 hogs, 155 sheep and lambs, 25 calves and 58 horses.

Butchers.

Three steers of extra finished quality 1400 lbs. each, at $7.25; 1 load choice heavy steers, $6.90; 2 loads steers, 1210 lbs., at $6.75; prime picked butchers, $6.25 to $6.50; good, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.25; inferior, $4.50 to $5; cows, $3 to $5.25, with a few choice at a little more; bulls, $4 to $5.35.

Stockers and Feeders.

Steers, 850 to 950 lbs., are worth $5 to $5.25; stockers, 700 lbs., are worth $4.50 to $4.75.

Milkers and Springers.

There was a fair trade in milkers and springers at $40 to $70 each.

Veal Calves.

Veal calf prices were firm at $6 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, sold at $4.50 to $5, with a few selects reaching $5.25; rams, $3.25 to $4; lambs, $6 to $7.00 per cwt., with a few selects at $7.75 per cwt.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston reported selects, fed and watered, at $6.70, and $6.35 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars at country points. Sows, $1.50 per cwt. less than selects.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 19.—At the Montreal Stock Yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 17 were 1425 cattle, 225 sheep and lambs, 3000 hogs and 350 calves. The supply on the market this morning for sale consisted of 875 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 1575 hogs and 150 calves.

The undertone to the market for good to choice cattle continues strong and prices for such have scored a further advance of 25c per cwt. since this day last week, owing to the small supplies coming forward and the keen competition between buyers. Sales of full car loads of choice northwest ranch cattle weighing 1500 pounds each, were made at $6.60 per cwt., and choice Ontario steers, weighing from 1200 to 1300 pounds each, brought $6.75 and in broken lots as high as $7 to $7.25 was paid. There were a few choice bulls on the market, which weighed from 1800 to 2000 pounds each, and they sold at $5.50 to $6 per cwt.

A stronger feeling prevailed in the market for hogs and prices since this day last week show a further advance of 15c per cwt., which is due to the increased demand from packers for supplies and the higher prices ruling thruout the country. An active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $7.40 to $7.50 per cwt. weighed off the cars.

There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs, but the feeling is very firm on account of the limited supplies coming forward, for which there is a steady demand from butchers. The supply of calves was also small and prices ruled about steady.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $6.75 to $7.25; medium, $5 to $6.50; common, $3.50 to $4.50; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; choice cows, $5.25 to $5.50; medium, $3.50 to $4.50; bulls, $5.50 to $6; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $30 to $45.

Sheep—Ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4.25; lambs, $6.50 to $7.

Hogs—F.o.b., $7.40 to $7.60.

Calves—$2.50 to $8.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 19.—Cattle—Receipts, 2700 head, slow; 10c to 25c lower; prime steers, $7.65 to $8; shipping, $6.50 to $7.50; butchers, $5 to $6.75; heifers, $4.50 to $6.25; cows, $2.25 to $5.50; bulls, $4 to $5.85; stockers and feeders, $3.75 to $5.25; stock heifers, $3.75 to $4.25; fresh cows and springers, $2 to $3 lower, $25 to $65.

Hogs—Receipts, 14,000; active; pigs, 5c lower; others, 10c to 25c lower; heavy and mixed, $6.50 to $6.55; yorkers, $6.30 to $6.55; pigs, $6.25 to $6.30; roughs, $5.75 to $5.85; stags, $4.50 to $5.50; dairies, $6.25 to $6.55.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 21,000; sheep active and steady; lambs, slow, 15c to 25c lower; lambs, $5.50 to $6.75; a few, $6.85; yearlings, $5 to $5.85; wethers, $4.25 to $4.75; ewes, $3.50 to $4.25; sheep, mixed, $2.30 to $4.25.

TO SUBSIDIZE LINE.

Fast Service to Britain Will Get Government Aid.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—The establishment of a fast line of transatlantic steamers is the object of negotiations now in progress between the Canadian Government and several strong transportation companies in England and Canada.

The representative of the English capitalists interested in the scheme have been in Ottawa during the past few days, conferring with the Government. It is understood that all the large Canadian transportation interests, the Canadian Pacific Railway, the Grand Trunk Pacific, the C.N.R. and the Allans are interested.

The scheme, when it is completed, will mean that the Atlantic journey between Halifax and England will be reduced to four and a half days, and six ships will be in operation. The Government will assist the company by means of an annual subsidy.

One of the striking features about the new steamers will be their adaptability to be converted into ships of war at short notice, and it is understood that the capital behind the scheme is in the neighborhood of $30,000,000.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy was in Ottawa yesterday in connection with the scheme on behalf of the C.P.R.

The Canadian Railways are particularly interested in the scheme because it is hoped that much of the ocean carrying trade will be diverted to Canadian trade routes, principally of the western states.

The statement made in Parliament by the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, as to the cost of the Transcontinental Railway, as given in other colums of to-day's Intelligencer is of a startling though not wholly unexpected character. That corruption of the most gross character was rampant in connection with that great enterprise has long been apparent. It is well for the country that the Laurier Government was driven from power as there is now, by means of the probe instituted by the present Government, a chance of exposing the rascality and punishing its perpetrators.

A GOOD REPUTATION

Any firm's business is largely built up on its reputation for fair dealing. This is particularly true of an Insurance Company. You don't want a policy in a Company, that when your fire loss occurs, is going to squeeze you and hold off as long as possible. You want your loss fairly settled and promptly paid. The Company that has earned in the last three quarters of a century perhaps the greatest reputation for liberal and prompt loss settlements is the Liverpool & London & Globe. See that you have its protection. W. P. Hudson, Agent.

THE CLOSED SHOP.

The following article, which was published in the editorial columns of the New York Times on the 17th inst. is so clear in its premises and so sound in its conclusions that The Intelligencer thoroughly endorses it and gives in full herewith. The Times says:—

It appears that the indictment of fifty-four unionists for complicity in over one hundred dynamite outrages, averaging over one death in each case, rests upon evidence obtained from forty thousand letters passing between officials of the unions implicated, and seized at the union headquarters. That such things should happen in America in this century challenges credulity. Nothing in war is more shocking than the planting of mines. Bullets kill combatants, but mines slay miscellaneously, and these mines were planted where they could not avoid injuring non-combatants. Neither the capitalists nor the non-unionists whose lives and property suffered were engaged in any warfare upon the unions. They were engaged in rearing structures of universal benefit, and they were slain or maimed as though they were public enemies. In order to learn who really were the enemies of the public interests instead of soldiers of the common weal, as is their boast, it is necessary to understand the nature of the delusion which alone can explain without excusing the hideous crimes which somebody has committed. If the savages who are responsible for these crimes—whether those under arrest or any others—shall finally be convicted and punished much will have been accomplished. It will be a greater accomplishment if the by-product of the outrages shall be a general understanding of the nature of the closed shop, which is the objective of all the trades-union outrages, whose number surpasses any exact knowledge or statement.

If the closed shop shall be established, no man can earn wages without a union license, and the union is under no necessity to grant the license. The right to live includes the right to earn a living. Work for the unemployed is one of the first demands of the unions upon the society which they condemn and propose to improve by their own methods. And yet the unions would deny that right to any except their own members. That is to say, the right to live would depend not upon universal law, but upon compliance with union standards and bearing of union burdens. The man unable or unwilling to comply with the union requirement would be a social pariah, possessing only the right to starve. Let nobody imagine that this is something which concerns only ironworkers. Whoever buys anything bearing a union label subscribes to the theory of the closed shop. The merchant who submits to sell such articles bows his neck to the yoke. The master of a million minds has decreed that open-shop articles shall not be bought, sold or transported in inter-State commerce, and is now evading punishment for criminal contempt of court in insisting upon this as a matter of conscience. He is unable to appreciate the enormity of his offence against non-unionists because he labors under the delusion that whatever is good for any unionist is good for everybody. Cases like his call for heroic remedies. Nothing is suggested here worse than a general appreciation of the meaning of the closed shop, which in its essence, and as practiced, surpasses in cold-blooded malice and oppression of the needy and the innocent the dynamite outrages themselves. At worst there were only a hundred of them, and only a hundred or so were slain. The closed-shop principle affects scores of millions.

It is a political outrage that there should be obstacles to any man's realization of his own plans for an honest livelihood. The economic wrong on the community is equally offensive, and can be translated into facts of easy understanding. Bricklayers used to work ten hours for $3 or $4 and lay upward of 2,000 bricks. The trade is "closed" now, and wages are $2 higher for two hours' less work. Behold what the union has done for the poor bricklayer, and remark also that the bricks laid in the shorter day for the higher wage are fewer by half. This simply starts an endless chain of higher cost, including higher rent, the greatest single burden upon living, next to food. Carpenters used to hang a door in an hour—eight or ten a day. The shops are closed now, and four doors a day are a full output. When the structural iron shops were closed scarcely one hundred rivets would be driven in a day. The dynamite outrages were the result of the proof that 200 to 400 rivets could be driven in a day by workers glad of the chance, if they were not murdered at the job. Carry these figures through all the trades, and whoever complains of the cost of living can see what the closed shop means to him. It is proclaimed in the name of human uplift, and is the synonym for sloth and inefficiency and cost of living beyond endurance, even if free labor be permitted.

The closed shop is inconsistent with the fundamental principles of humanity and of our system of government. If anybody prefers the system of government by trades unionism now is the time to proclaim his preference and to support the idea of an industrial commission to defend the rights of the meek and suffering advocates of the closed shop.

CURRENT COMMENT.

It will be Lent to-morrow, with its sackcloth and ashes.

Ottawa Opposition may look like a fight, but it feels like a funeral.—Toronto Telegram.

The Education Department has issued a circular containing the information that there will be no shortage of teachers in Ontario this year. It is expected that nearly 1,200 will graduate from the Normal Schools this season.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, when on his way to South Renfrew, where he was to speak on behalf of Mr. Graham, was "dumped" by the upsetting of a cutter in which he was being conveyed to the railway station. Was this occurrence an omen of the downfall of his candidate? The result of the polling on Thursday will determine.

Mr. J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of fall fairs, states that by a new arrangement this year the dates of all the fairs in the Province would be arranged systematically so that no two fairs in neighboring localities will conflict. There has been trouble in the past and loss of money in previous years over lack of central management of fairs. This year, however, these difficulties will be obviated.

The Toronto Star has again discovered that the Borden Government is at a crisis, this time over the question of schools in the Hudson Bay territory to be annexed to Manitoba. Crises have been occurring so often in the Star that brother Atkinson might as well keep a standing heading for them.—Ottawa Journal.

Discussing the matter of the requests laid before the Ontario Government by a deputation from the Dominion Alliance, The Globe remarks: "The Premier had nothing to say because he is neither courageous nor sincere in his professions of devotion to the temperance cause." Which leads to the question, What is "true temperance?" Our contemporary had better get this question settled before speaking so confidently on the subject.

A Russian with an unpronounceable name was arrested for walking along the streets of Philadelphia in his bare feet when the thermometer was 15 degrees above zero. The policemen thought he was insane, but he soon convinced Magistrate Morris that he wasn't and the court discharged him. The decision is one of many upholding the liberty of the subject. A man should be allowed to go abroad without shoes in any city, with the exception, perhaps, of New York. There he might attract the attention of the multitude of pedestrians and thus block traffic.—Montreal Gazette.

It is true that the Laurier Government, which got into power through the policy represented by the war cry "No coercion of Manitoba," reversed that policy in the cases of the new provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and forced a school policy upon them. But that fact does not affect the educational rights of Manitoba. And if it did, Mr. Borden should be the last man to make use of the Alberta and Saskatchewan precedent as an excuse for attempting to coerce Manitoba, for on the floor of Parliament he took the stand that the new provinces should be granted absolute freedom to decide for themselves what manner of public school system they should have. The freedom for which he pleaded in the cases of Alberta and Saskatchewan he cannot honorably refuse to Manitoba.—Hamilton Herald.

Following on the recommendations of the conservation commission, the government has approved and will shortly carry into effect the setting aside of an appropriation of $110,000 to be expended this year on the new Rocky Mountain forest reserve. The Minister of the Interior has also decided, to appoint a forestry expert, a trained man, with a scientific and practical knowledge of the work to take charge of the reserve. As the latter is a tract 900 miles long and anywhere from thirty to sixty miles wide, or about 30,000 square miles in all, a staff of some proportions will be needed, particularly for the preliminary work. The $110,000 appropriation will be used for making trails establishing stations, installing a telephone system, and endeavoring to prevent the possibility of fires in the huge reserve. The question as to whether the reserve should be made a game preserve as well has come up. It is likely that a part, but not the whole of the segregated section, will be set apart for the preservation of Canadian animal life.

WOMEN, AVOID OPERATIONS

Many Unsuccessful — And Worse Suffering Often Follows. Mrs. Rock's Case A Warning.

The following letter from Mrs. Orville Rock will show how unwise it is for women to submit to the dangers of a surgical operation when often it may be avoided by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She was four weeks in the hospital and came home suffering worse than before.

Here is her own statement.

Paw Paw, Mich.—"Two years ago I suffered very severely with a displacement. I could not be on my feet for a long time. My physician treated me for several months without much relief and at last sent me to Ann Arbor for an operation. I was there four weeks and came home suffering worse than before. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did. Today I am well and strong and do all my own housework. I owe my health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and advise my friends who are afflicted with any female complaint to try it."—Mrs. ORVILLE ROCK, R. R. No. 5, Paw Paw, Michigan.

If you are ill do not drag along until an operation is necessary, but at once take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for women's ills, and has restored the health of thousands of suffering women. Why don't you try it?

PASTOR RUSSELL'S SERMON

CALCUTTA, Feb. 18.—The foreign missions investigation committee, appointed by the International Bible Students' Association is here. The committee expedite their work by each member giving special attention to a different feature of the investigation. This is their third week in India and they have already traveled nearly two thousand miles. They are keenly interested in the heathen and in the Bible, but they declined to give in advance any hint of what their report will be as respects the missionary work here.

Pastor Russell, chairman of the committee, preached twice to-day to large and attentive audiences in our finest auditorium. One of his addresses, from Jer. ix:23-4, we report. He said:

Your "City of Palaces" greatly impresses me, as doubtless it does all who visit it. But as I look at its splendor I am reminded of that portion of my text, which declares, "Let him that glorieth glory in this, that he understandeth and knoweth Me, that I am the Lord which exerciseth loving kindness, judgment and righteousness in the earth." Wherever we go we perceive that man, by virtue of his creation is a worshipper. The organs of reverence and spirituality, although only partially developed and much shattered by ignorance and superstition, are to be found in the organism of every man. My journey to this city has impressed this thought deeply.

I stopped en route at Juggernaut; the very name called up stories of my childhood which so greatly aroused my sympathies for the poor heathen. Missionary reports told of how in ignorance the natives would throw themselves in front of the Car of Juggernaut, feeling it an honor to thus sacrifice their lives. And now, here am I on the Ganges River, of which in childhood I heard so much that thrilled my heart with sympathy—how mothers threw their babes into the Ganges River, not because they had no sympathy with their offspring but because they desired to sacrifice to and propitiate their gods. Now that I am here I do thank God that although the heathen have not been converted to a true knowledge of the great Jehovah, they have, nevertheless come under the strong hand of the British Government, which, whatever its defects, seeks at least to protect its subjects from the extremes of their own ignorance and superstition.

While it is true that the worst form of government imaginable is preferable to anarchy, and while it is also true that the British Government is amongst the most just in the world, nevertheless, no government that fallen man has ever made or can make can ever satisfy the ideals of the more intelligent. Hence for centuries the heathen world has dreamed of a golden age to come and Bible students have rejoiced in the divine promise that the Messianic kingdom will follow our present arrangement, and that it will prove to be the desire of all nations.

Since we perceive the ignorance and superstition of heathendom, our hearts cry out for the promised reign of Messiah and the blessing that will accrue to mankind! The very best that we have yet attained in the most civilized lands comes far short of the divine promise of the conditions to prevail as a result of Messiah's rule. Then all ignorance, all superstition, all sin, all sorrow, all pain, all death shall be abolished, and finally the wilfully wicked destroyed in the second death, the time will have come when God's will shall be done on earth as fully as it is done in heaven.

St. Paul wrote: "Now we know in part, but then we shall know even as also we are known."—I. Cor. xiii:12. Alas! how every true Christian must realize how his own knowledge of God and that of his forefathers has so slightly exceeded the knowledge of the heathen, that he found it difficult to glory in his understanding of God. Only those who are adherents to the declarations of the Bible that "God is Love," that His mercy endureth forever, that he is like a pitying father, that He is a God of All Grace, the Father of Mercies, whose loving kindness we cannot measure—only such have the assurances which enable them to offset the horrible theories of our creeds formulated in a darker past, and which told us more horrible things respecting our God and His treatment of mankind than our poor heathen brethren ever imagined.

But now the better day is dawning. We are seeing the glorious outlines of the divine character in the divine plan as never before! Our hearts first led the way and rebelled against the dictum of our fallacious reasoning. And now, in God's due time, when nature is yielding up her secrets and chemistry is making the world anew, behold the key to the divine word is thrust into our hands, unlocking its mysteries and explaining its parabolic symbols to our astonished faith.

Our Redeemer declared, "This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true and living God, and Jesus Christ whom Thou hast sent." Evidently the great teacher had in mind the thought of our text—not merely a knowledge about God, but a acquaintanceship with Him, such as can come only through a fellowship of spirit and an understanding of the divine programme.

This knowledge is intimately bound up with our eternal prospects. Earth's teeming millions know not God. Even those portions called Christian worship God with but slight appreciation of His true character. None of these, therefore, are in a condition to claim everlasting life according to the teaching of the Master. They are the non-elect, in contrast to the faithful few, who are scripturally styled "God's elect," "The Very Elect," and who are urged to make their calling and election sure by persevering loyalty unto death.

In our blindness of the past assuming that all the non-elect would be consigned to an eternity of torture, we have published in our missionary reports that ninety thousand every day go down in death in Christless graves—and, by inference, into eternal torture. Alas, how misunderstood and how unintentionally misrepresented has been our gracious Father, the God of all Grace, the Father of Mercies!

Now we read God's character in fairer lines. Now we perceive that for a thousand years, the Elect on the heavenly plane, "invisible to men," "like unto angels" will live and reign with Christ (Rev. xx:4) for the blessing of the non-elect, for their uplifting from the conditions of sin and imperfection back to the glorious heights of the image of God in the flesh.

For Great Britain's obsolete cruiser Retribution, built in 1889, at a cost of $930,000, the sum of $11,000 was recently realized by auction at Portsmouth. "That's the way the money goes."

2 IN 1 FAMILY

Here is one of the many cases in which several members of one family have benefited from the household box of Zam-Buk. Col.-Sgt. Louis Elliott, 3rd Co., 46th Battalion, Peterboro, Ont., says: "The lower part of my face, cheek and chin broke out in small red pimples, which later festered and broke, forming nasty sores and dry scabs. The itching set up by these eruptions and sores was terrible, and seemed far worse during the night. All kinds of soaps, washes and ointments were tried in the vain attempt to get relief, even to bathing with carbolic acid and water. Finally I thought of Zam-Buk and straightway procured a box at the drug store. One night's application brought great relief from the intense itching, and as I kept on applying this balm daily, the inflammation was soon drawn out, and in less than a week's time the sores were thoroughly healed and every scab banished."

Mrs. Elliott, 139 Sherbrooke St., Peterboro, telling of Zam-Buk's effect on her younger son Walter, says: "He slipped and caused a wound on his right hip, which developed into a running sore. From this smaller sores spread until his lower limbs were covered with ulcers. These proved very alarming and I feared blood-poisoning! I began the Zam-Buk treatment, and it really seemed to aid like magic! In a remarkably short space of time the raw running sores were all healed. I am very grateful indeed for his cure, and I strongly recommend all mothers to keep Zam-Buk always handy."

WHAT ZAM-BUK WILL CURE.
Zam-Buk will be found a cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. HEALED BY ZAM-BUK

Mr. Elgie, the author of "The Night Skies of a Year," agrees with the statement recently made by a French scientist that life on Mars has evolved in the same way as it has done on the earth. It is, he thinks, a reasonable conclusion at which to arrive, and adds:—"Why should not life evolve (that is, on Mars) in the same way as it has done on the earth? And not only so on Mars, but on all the other planets? Life will appear on those planets which are at present without it when the planets are ready for the reception and the evolution of life—and not until then. Why should the earth be an exception, either to the rule of the existence of life, or of its evolution?"

The Best Temperature

Sir Benjamin Ward Richardson found, after long experiments and practice, that 64 degrees Fahr. is the best temperature in which to conduct mental labour. If the temperature falls below this the mind becomes drowsy and inactive, and if it rises much above there is a relaxed state of the body and mind which soon leads to fatigue and exhaustion. It is important that the temperature be the same in all parts of the room and that it be steadily maintained.

An Interesting Watch.

An interesting horological, sidereal novelty has been perfected by the Rev. Daniel B. Marsh, D.Sc., F.R.A.S. The watch contains many ingenious features, and is conceded to be a striking example of timekeeping mechanism. It is adjusted to five positions, fully jewelled with twenty-one rubies, compensated for temperature, and owing to the special construction of the face-mechanism there is no lost motion in the hands. The watch has been acquired already by the leading observatories of Canada, and is being manufactured in Switzerland, the watch-makers of that country alone having proved equal to the delicate nature of the task imposed, so as to bring it within the reach of all.

Safety Window Cleaner.

The invention consists of a wire frame made to clip the window cloth. To the frame is attached a long band of webbing, which passes over trolleys running along the top and bottom of the window-frame and continues right down the inside of the window. There is obviously no danger in cleaning the outside of a window with this invention, as, of course, the pad is moved to and fro, up, down, or sideways, entirely by the manipulation of the webbing strap on the inside of the room. The necessary pressure upon the surface of the window is obtained by springs, and in obstinate cases the busy maid can of course revert to that well-known domestic dodge of adding a little methylated spirit to the water.

A PRACTICAL EXAMPLE.

Example of the Effect of Competition with Australia.

On March 18th last, 750 carcasses of frozen lamb from Australia were landed at St. John, N. B. 250 carcasses were sent to the William Davies Co., Limited, Toronto. The greater part of the remainder were shipped to Montreal. This lamb was purchased at nine cents per pound delivered in bond at Toronto.

Under existing conditions the duty was three cents per pound. This made the lamb cost twelve cents per pound laid down in Toronto.

Fresh dressed lambs were selling in Toronto at that time at 12 1-2c. to 13c. per pound.

Hence, after paying this duty there was not much difference between the prices of the Australian and Canadian lamb.

The duty protected the Canadian farmer against the Australian product.

But under Reciprocity the duty on this frozen lamb will be only 1 1-4c. per pound, so that similar shipments could be laid down in Toronto at 10 1-4c. per pound, two or three cents per pound chaper than the price for the home raised products.

Referring to the lambs which were sent to Montreal. When they reached Montreal Canadian lamb was selling at 10 1-2c. The Australian lambs were sold at 9 1-2c. delivered ex cars Montreal duty paid, the owners apparently being contented to undersell the Canadian market by one cent per pound.

Now, if you wish to see the effect upon the live stock market of the receipt of this Australian lamb in Montreal, turn up the Montreal papers of March 20th, in one of which, for example, the headline was "Sheep Sold Lower in Local Markets."

If, with the three cent duty on every pound, frozen lamb can be profitably imported from Australia, it seems almost conclusive that reducing the duty will also reduce the price of Canadian lamb accordingly.

And not only does Australia export frozen meat, but it exports butter as well. It exports annually between fifty and seventy-five million pounds of butter

Australian butter can be laid down now in bond at Montreal at 23c. per pound. A duty of four cents per pound keeps it out of competition with the Eastern Townships butter now selling at 26c. per pound.

THE REVIVAL OF THE CAMEO

Antique Shops of Europe Doing Good Business.

An early Victorian fashion revival is the cameo, which is being worn on hats or for clasping the belt at the waist or even at the wrist. The antique shops of Paris and London are being ransacked for cameos. The pink and creamy tints of these ornaments are considered wonderfully becoming and as the finishing touch to white evening gowns they are looked upon as indispensable at the present moment.

Jade, too, which has been out of favor for years, has come back into fashion and is to be seen ranging in tint from darkest green to pure white Jade of a delicate bright green is the most popular and is used in necklaces of rounded bead scarefully matched, drops for earings and cabochons mounted in various ways alone or with pearls and diamonds.

A GREAT CAPTAIN OF INDUSTRY

Words of Louis Stevenson Form the Keynote of Great Career.

"To travel hopefully is better than to arrive, and the true success is labor." These words, once written by Robert Louis Stevenson, hang above the desk of Mr. H. Gordon Selfridge, the head of the enormous store in Oxford street, London, who was recently the victim in a motor smash. They provide the keynote of the character of the man who, starting life as a shop-sweeper, made such good use of his opportunities that, by the time he was thirty, he was a partner in the Marshall Field store in Chicago—a store which has earned joint fortunes for its owners amount to over $500,000,000. Mr. Selfridge had retired from business, when, growing tired of a life of idleness, he turned his eyes towards London and ultimately founded the huge business in Oxford street.

TOO MUCH MELON

"Pal, it's a sad, sad story. I was hittin' gravel on the Colorado desert, alone an' hungry.

"Hence, at the witchin' hour, as the feller says, a large, handsome man might have been observed to sort o' trickle out o' the sage-brush around a water-tank and insert himself in the midst of a side-door Pullman. It was a little jerkwater line, runnin' from the main line down through the farmin' district, an' the car was loaded with crates of Rocky Ford melons. I crawled up near the roof where there was two foot of space and made myself as comfortable as a flea on a setter pup, except for a gnawin' at my inwards remindin' me that the tabble de hoaty was long overdue.

"All of a sudden a delicious perfume steals up an' salutes my nostrils, like the scent of blushful Hippodromes you read about. It's melons; juicy Rock Ford melons, an' before you could say 'Methusalem!' I had the top off a crate. Them melons were for Denver an' Chi, and were picked ripe an' prime, an' I don't ever expect to taste anything again so excruciatin'ly delicious. That is, the first six or eight.

"I was dozin' off, perfectly peaceful an' contented, when it happened. I woke up flyin'. I wasn't touchin' a thing. I sailed over them cartes of melons till my feet hit hard against the end of the car. Then I up-ended, an' the jar drove my head between my shoulder-blades; then I went over an' over, like a loop-the-loop; there was a crash, about fourteen tons of melons flew up an' lit on me, an' my lights went out.

"When I come to I was smothered with melons. I couldn't move an inch, an' the sharp corners of crates was proddin' me full of equilateral triangles.

"What had happened was a mighty excitin' game of 'snap-the-whip.' Roundin' a sharp curve, my car, bein' last an' the lash of the whip, was flicked off into a gully, goin' clear to the bottom and landin' in a clump of mosquite bushes. This horrible catastrophe escapes the notice of the traincrew at the time, an' the balance of the train proceeds on its way, triumphant. They remains ignorant, complete, of the calamity, till the yard-master up at the junction discovers he's shy one carload of melons, invoiced, an' one large, amiable gent, uninvoiced, accordin' to specifications.

"Meantime, I'm busy pickin' melons out of my system, tryin' to get room to bat my eyes an' draw my breath just once more for luck. Most of the crates had busted, an' every move I made, more melons would come slidin' on to me. I wasn't broke anywhere, but mashed to a pulp, an' it seemed several years before I got one arm free, dug myself out, an inch at a time, an' got a few lungfuls of air. The car was lyin' on its side, considerably lower at one end than the other, an' up under the peak of the upper corner I had plenty of room. I ate a few melons an' made myself comfortable. The car didn't seem to be hurt none, but I wasn't worryin'. I figured there had been a wreck an' pretty soon some hero'd come along an' dig me out with an ax.

"Nobody did. By an' by it got daylight. I could see it perkilatin' through the ventilator slits; but there wasn't any welcome sound to mar the holy peace an' solitude of that ravine except me hollerin' through the slits. I burrowed down to the door that was top-side, but it was locked fast. Did you ever try to carve yourself out of an iron-bound fruit-car, reenforced with two-by-fours, with a jack-knife? Mebbe it can be done, but towards evenin' my knife broke an' I hadn't made no headway.

"I ate some more melons, but I hadn't no enthusiasm for 'em. I was beginnin' to sort o' founder on a melon diet. A lot of 'em had got all squashed an' mushy in the melly an', lyin' there in a heap with the hot sun beatin' on the car, it wasn't long before they began to bubble an' ferment, an' by the end of the second day the atmosphere of that car was somethin' stupenjus. After that I spent most of my time with my nose at a ventilator slit, gettin' all the outside air I could.

"Pardner, not to harrow up your feelin's further, I was in that car eight days! I'd got into a sort of catamose condition, full of nightmares of melons, when all at once I heard a long "snif-f-f!' at one of the cracks, an' the idea of any one or anything wantin' to sniff at the flavor of that car pulled me wide awake with a jump. 'Sufferin' cats!' I yelled, 'lemme out o' this!' But my voice was smothered like a man shoutin' into a pillow.

"It got an answer, though, for I heard the sound of a horse, a man called through the cracks, and then: 'Look out!' says he, 'I'm goin' to shoot!' Then bang! bang! bang! the door splintered, an' the staple busted. The door was shoved open, I crawled out, took a long whiff of pure, clear, meloniess air, an' collapsed.

"I come to with the whisky an' there was a man an' a pony an' a dog with long whiskers — the man, I mean. He was one of these hollow-cheeked, long-nosed fellers that allers seem to be on the verge of graspin' an idea an' never connectin' up.

"He gave me more whisky an' got me on my feet. There was a kind of halo of melon-smell all around that car. 'Friend' says I, 'lead me hence! I'm weak as a kitten an' I can't look at that car without emotions risin' in my bossom. Now,' I says, when he'd helped me out o' sight an' smell of the car, 'now, friend, you've saved my life. There's only one more thing I'll ask of you.'

"'What air that?' says he.

"'Why,' says I, 'I want you to let me take a bite out o' that hoss of yours. Just a mouthful somewheres where it won't show. I need a change of diet,' I says, 'to get rid of the taste of melons.'

"Well, the old buck sat an' cackled for fifteen minutes. He actually thought I was foolin'. Finally, feelin' I was really done up, he got me on his horse, took me to his ranch, fed me for a week, an' said my story paid him for it all. He was mighty good to me an' I hated to leave.' I haven't beenable to look a melon in the face since."

NOT EVEN IN DEATH

By Eve Grantly

"Don't let anything worry or distress him," said the doctor. "He won't live through the night; but he will probably be quiet and comfortable up to the end. The least excitement may bring on the pain again."

He was a young, soft-hearted doctor with a pair of Irish eyes that had a trick of growing misty at times over the death-beds of his patients. This grey-haired man had interested him from the first. How had he spent his life?

"Poor fellow!" he said to the nurse. "I feel sure he is a Somebody. He looks like a man with an interesting past. Has he no friends, I wonder?"

But the landlady knew of no one. He had lived in her house for five years and always paid her regularly. Business letters, or what looked like business letters, came for him, and he burned a great deal of oil sitting up far into the night—writing, she believed—but beyond that she knew nothing of him.

A coal fell into the grate and startled her from her reverie. She had been thinking of the old days, the days when she had been a happy, laughing young thing, loving and loved of everyone and without a care in the world. It would be spring-time now in the country, and there were primroses and violets under the hedges, and the woods would be all green and leafy. Their woods! and now others would be walking in the narrow paths, and over the leaf-strewn mosses where frail anemones unfolded their buds.

Over the calm, steadfast face there stole a tear, the lonely descendant of all those she had shed long, long ago. She wiped it away with a furtive look towards the bed. The professional instinct reasserted itself; she loved her work and excelled in it; it was time for the patient to take his medicine, perhaps the last draught which would pass his lips till he should drink of the waters of Lethe and be at peace. As she poured the mixture into the glass he opened his eyes and fixed them on her in a fixed, vacant gaze.

"Nurse," he said suddenly, "I shall die to-night."

She gave him the medicine and smoothed his pillow before she answered.

"You will be glad to go?" she asked quietly.

"Out of this hell? Yes! Whatever lies beyond it can't be worse. Nurse, I have spoken to no one of what I have suffered, to no one in the world. May I talk to you a little? It will ease me, I think, and you don't know my name — or hers. Yes, it was a woman, of course. They're the curse of the world, I tell you! No, I won't say that, though—you've been good to me; but then I wasn't your nearest and dearest."

"Listen. I was young and strong and on the high-road to fame, and I married the woman I adored, heaven help me for a blind fool! Yes, I worshipped her, and I thought she worshipped me; but—pah! there was no truth or constancy in her. She deceived me and we parted. I never saw her again in all these fifteen years, and all the time I've been going downhill—you see what I've come to! I didn't care for fame or money or anything else after she went away, and I lost everything by degrees. That's my life-story, nurse. Why, I believe you're crying! Have you such a tender heart?"

"I am not crying; but—it's terrible! Have you never forgiven her? Suppose—suppose there was some mistake? Suppose you were hasty and hurt her too cruelly, and she was proud and went away without speaking? Are you sure you were in the right? Did you never wonder whether she were not innocent after all?"

"She had dark blue eyes like yours," he said dreamily. "But her face was round and her hair was dark and curly. Heaven — or the devil — had made her very beautiful."

"He must not be excited or the pain will come back," the woman kept repeating to herself, and the nails made deep marks in the flesh of her clenched hands. "To tell him — but he would not forgive — he would not believe that he was wrong — and then, the cruel agony!"

The lamp began to burn low; strange shadows danced on the ugly wall-paper, and a cold breath seemed to pass through the room. The nurse rose to look at her watch on the chest of drawers. There was a small cracked looking-glass over it, and as she passed she caught a glimpse of her own reflection. No wonder he had not recognised her, she thought with a sad smile. Fifteen years of bitter pain and hard work had left her little beauty.

The man's breath was coming in gasps, beads of sweat stood out on the wide brow; he was not of those to whom the crossing comes easily. Men of his stamp fight with death as they have fought with life, and suffer horribly. It was midnight now; he would scarcely live another hour.

"Is the pain coming back?" asked the nurse, bending over him. He took no notice of her question.

"Yes, she was beautiful," he gasped. "I wonder where she is now?"

Her eyes shone with a light that was new to them.

"Would you forgive—if she were here?" she asked softly.

But he turned his face fretfully to the wall.

"No, I would never forgive, not on my death-bed, not even now!"

The light died out of her eyes and left her face older and greyer.

"Ah! the pain!" he groaned. "Nurse, give me something!"

She took up the little bottle, the contents of which would send him quietly and painlessly to rest. Then she hesitated.

"No, I would never forgive!" he repeated. "She spoilt my life. Ah, heaven, the pain!"

"Of what use?" the woman said to herself. "He would never forgive."

She uncorked the bottle and bent over him.

THE NEW HERO

By W. Matthew

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

"Sold out the House."

Audley turned away from the box office and went out again into the heat of the Summer afternoon, walking aimlessly for a block or so while he made up his mind how to put in the four hours he still had on his hands before the boat left. There was a play on at the Imperial he was particularly anxious to see. Kenworthy had written him about it.

"The hero is a marker for Earl Drayton," he had said. "Big hearted, but impulsive, and his own worst enemy."

Poor Drayton! He had been Audley's roommate at Old Orange, was one of the most promising members of the class; and then, in his junior year, came the ugly scrape which caused his expulsion from college. Other men would have wormed themselves out of the predicament without marrying the woman, but Drayton was not of that sort. And she had dragged him down to her level.

"I should like to have seen the thing," Audley thought as he turned into the glare of Broadway, "but I'll be hanged if I'll stand three hours and pay a dollar for the privilege. I've two minds to trot straight over to the boat. It ought to be cooler by the riverside."

He took a car downtown, and was making his way through the narrow street to the wharf when the clang of a gong startled him.

"The patrol!" some one shouted and the great free show of the neighborhood was on view.

Audley was jostled and shoved out of the way, for he had no thought of quickening his steps for any such entertainment. He was dragging himself out of the scurrying crowd when the wail of a child gave him pause.

Audley was fond of children, as he was fond of dogs and horses, and could not bear to see any of the three suffer. The cries came from a little fellow who had been knocked down by the rush of the morbid.

"Are you hurt, young man?" Audley demanded, as he bent over the child. He was a boy of some four years of age who kept rubbing one of his legs in a way to suggest that it had been trampled upon.

"Mamma, mamma!" was all the reply that could be obtained, however.

Audley looked up, but not one of the numberless female heads thrust eagerly out of the windows over him made any pretense of claiming kinship with the youngster.

"Where is your mamma?" Audley asked.

The cries ceased for an instant and two warm arms were stretched out to the six-footer, who had not intended doing more than to lead the child to the doorstep out of the crush. But there was evidently something wrong with the leg, so Audley stooped, gathered the little chap under one arm, and repeated, "Where is mamma?"

For reply the boy pointed to a tenement doorway close at hand, and then proceeded to snuggle his tousled head close to Audley's immaculate collar.

"How far up?" inquired the modern Samariton, after he had ascended the first flight.

The place was in an awful disorder and stiflingly hot. The boy had begun quietly to cry again and to clutch at his leg. The man was fain to drop him on the ruckle of rags by courtesy termed a bed and proceeded to make an examination for damages. He was in the middle of the process when women's voices from across the hall reached his ear. Two women, who had been hanging half clad out of the window, were discussing the situation.

"Yis, Mrs. Rafferty," one of them was saying, "only this day wake I was telling Tim it would come to this. Took away by the patrol! Lord save us! who's to look out for the boy. The Society'll have to take him. There's too many childer under me fate already — the Lord forgive me for sayin' it. And Earl's a purty boy, the very picter of his pa, God rest his sowl!"

The name struck Audley with a strange familiarity. Wetting the corner of a cloth—whether towel, napkin or dish rag, Audley recked not — he proceeded to polish the grime from the youngster's countenance, then stood off and gazed at the result.

For the moment he was transported in memory five years back to his room at Old Orange. His room chum was showing him the picture of a chubby little four-year-old.

"Yes, Dick," he heard Drayton's voice say, "that's your chum as a baby. That's the stuff out of which this particular center rush was evolved. Great mystery this growth, eh, old man? I mean to save this photograph for my son, if ever I have one."

Audley, gazed at the atom of God's handiwork, clean now and smiling. He never for a moment doubted the truth of his suspicion, but looked around the greasy walls for the proof he knew was there.

Above the bed, in a little rosewood frame, hang a faded photograph, the photograph of Earl Drayton had showed him in their college room ten years before. He leaned forward and took it down, the boys' great blue eyes following his every movement. On the back of the picture in the shaky hand of a dying man was scrawled: "God teach my son a better life than I have known — Earl Drayton."

Audley slipped the photograph into his pocket and raised Earl, Jr., laughing and crowing, to his shoulder. In the narrow, dirty hallway the pair were crushed into the corner by four men carrying a stretcher. The gong had been the alarm of the ambulance, not of the patrol wagon, and little Earl was a real orphan now.

No one heeded the two as they passed into the street. Such dramatic interest as there was for the people of the Greenwich precinct centered in the cold, stiff thing upon the stretcher upstairs.

For Audley there was no longer any regret over the play he had missed. The principal actor of a more wonderful drama lay snuggled close to his breast in the sunshine.

World's Deepest Hole.

The deepest hole in the world, up to date, is the boring begun ten years ago at Cunchow, Silesia, with the object of attaining a depth of 2500 metres, and which has now reached a depth of 2240 metres (7349 feet). The bore is 44 centimetres in diameter at the top, and diminishes progressively to 5 centimetres. Measurements of temperature have been made regularly. At 2220 meters the temperature is 83.4 degrees C. (182 degrees F.). This gives a "geothermic degree" (amount of descent corresponding to a rise of temperature of 1 degree C.) of 31.8 metres. The change of temperature does not proceed uniformly. In fact an interesting "temperature inversion" occurs between the depths of 640 and 730 metres, where the temperature actually falls, with descent, about 2 degrees.

Giants Among Insects.

While the study of entomology (science of insects) will lead one to observe many minute and microscopical objects, all insects are not small. In size the Hercules beetle is probably one of the largest insects in existence, being about seven inches long, including his snout. He is a native of the West Indies, where he must look a most formidable foe to the insect world, though his prominent proboscis seems to be used chiefly to "lock horns" with the male adversaries of his own order only. Among insects are found many instances of structures present in males and wanting in the female of the same species. Many of them have enlarged jaws, some with horns, and some antler-like projections with which to combat their foe, and probably many a desperate battle has been fought in insect life that would be worthy of record by some Homeric bard.

THE WONDERFUL WATCH

Few pieces of machinery show more marvellous feaures than that of the watch. As a general proposition it may be stated that a watch is the smallest, most delicate instrument of the same number of parts that has ever been devised. About one hundred and seventy-five different pieces of material enter into its construction, and upwards of twenty-four hundred separate operations are comprised in its manufacture. Certain of the facts connected with its performance are almost incredible, when considered as a whole. A blacksmith strikes several hundred blows on his anvil in a day and, as a matter of course, is glad when Sunday comes; but the roller jewel of a watch makes every day — and day after day — 432,000 impacts against the fork, or 157,680,000 blows during the course of a year, without stop or rest — or some 3,153,600,000 blows during the space of twenty years, the period for which a watch is usually guaranteed to keep good time. But the wonder of it does not cease here. It has been calculated that the power that moves the watch is equivalent to only four times the force used in a flea's jump. The watch-power is, therefore, what might be termed the equivalent of a four flea-power. One horse-power would suffice to operate 270,000,000 watches. Furthermore, the balance-wheel of a watch is moved by this four flea-power one and forty-three one-hundredths inches with each vibration, or 3558¾ miles continuously in one year. Not much oil is required to lubricate the little machine on its 3500-mile run. It takes only one-tenth of a drop to oil the entire machinery of a year service.

WORLD'S GREATEST KIDNEY REMEDY

HUNDREDS CURED BY TAKING "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

WILLIAMSTOWN, Ont. July 27th.

"Last spring, I had a severe attack of Kidney and Bladder Trouble, and "Fruit-a-tives" cured these complaints when the physician attending me had given me up." JAMES DINGWALL.

The cause of Kidney Congestion and Pain in the Back, is that the bowels are badly constipated and the skin is inactive. Thus, the kidneys are forced to do double work in ridding the system of impurities,—and become strained.

"Fruit-a-tives"—the great fruit medicine—acts on bowels, liver and skin, as well as on the kidneys,—rids the system of all impurities, and completely cures all kidney congestion and pain in the back.

ASSETS SHOW SURPLUS

Hon. Mr. Hanna Brings in Ontario's Public Accounts.

Statement of Assets Is Most Encouraging, Although the Fact That the Books Were Closed Too Soon Shows an Apparent Deficit of a Quarter of a Million — Revenue Away Above the Estimate.

Toronto, Feb. 20.—Public accounts for the year ending Oct. 31, 1911, were presented to the Legislature late yesterday afternoon by Hon. W. J. Hanna, Provincial Secretary. They show that the total revenue for the fiscal year amounted to $9,370,833.90, and the total expenditure, $9,619,934.03. This leaves an apparent deficit of $249,100.13. The difference, according to Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, is accounted for by the fact that the Hydro-Electric did not pay interest on over $4,000,000 invested, which would amount to $173,000, and the T. & N. O. is credited in the statement with earnings of $515,000, while the actual receipts were $593,000, a difference here of $78,000. Another fact which accounts for considerable was that books were kept open for payments out to Nov. 18, but the receipts were cut off on Nov. 1. In the first week after the receipts were cut off enough money came in to pay all the difference. This amount will be credited this year.

The revenue was $2,400,000 larger than was estimated at the beginning of the year, which was $8,216,000. The increase in the receipts is accounted for by larger succession dues and taxes, which include the five per cent. tax on bar receipts.

The statements of assets and debts shows a surplus of $2,000,000. The total assets of the province are $26,-936,060.30, while the total liabilities are $24,765,922.68.

This year the Hydro-electric will be paying interest, and probably pay its sinking fund. Already a check for $43,000 has been received from the Hydro, for the past three months.

It is shown in the accounts that the cash is hand is reduced from $3,-032,000 to $1,503,000. This is due to the expenditures on the new Government House, Parliament Buildings, provincial prison, provincial museum, Osgoode Hall, reformatory for females, good roads, normal schools, Ontario Veterinary College and other institutions.

The cost of the new provincial prison will be paid for this year by the sale of the present Central Prison site.

The tabulated accounts of receipts show that the balance on hand at the beginning of the last fiscal year was $3,032,000. The amount at current account, exclusive of the special deposit, was $145,385. From the Dominion Government, by way of subsidy on population, the province received $1,879,343.80. While from another subsidy it received $142,414.48 and a special grant amounted to $240,000. The total of the three subsidies was $261,-578. There is an increase in the grant of $132,986, owing to the increase in the population of the province.

Interest paid by the Dominion and interest on investments amounted to $132,284.

The largest revenue was received from lands, forests and mines, and amounted to $2,710,242. From licenses, $656,363 was received, which is $76,201 more than was received during the preceding year, on account of the five per cent. tax on bar receipts.

Law stamps brought in $104,155. Algoma taxes, $5,805. Educational revenue was $42,784. From the Provincial Secretary's Department $323,736. Game fisheries, $130,267. Agriculture, $147,167. Under the supplementary revenue act $854,659 was paid to the Government. This is an increase of $102,321, due to the increased tax on express companies, the tax on transfer of stock and the tax on racetracks.

Succession duties amounted to $963,-195, and the funds deposited in lieu of bond payments for succession duties were $87,437. Casual revenue was $160,671.

From public institutions the province received a total of $274,300, made up as follows: From Toronto Hospital for the Insane, $54,057; Brockville, $16,926; Hamilton, $42,524; Kingston, $15,140; London, $38,485; Mimico, $18,673; Orillia, $12,911; Penetang, $3,461; Woodstock, $14,712; Cobourg, $851; Reformatory for Females, $10,-157; Central Prison, $778; Central Prison, $778; Central Prison industries, $45,555; Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, $515,000. Total, $9,370,833.

Statements of expenditures during the fiscal year show that more money was spent on education than any other branch of the Government, the total amount being $1,885,739; the maintenance of public institutions took $1,197,726. Other payments follow: Civil government $602,528; legislation, $275,959; administration of justice, $653,303; colonization and immigration, $106,906; agriculture, $680,-301; stationary engineers, $6,096; hospitals and charities, $357,849; repairs and maintenance, $199,511; colonization roads, $451,111; charges, crown lands, $617,111; refunds, $67,335; miscellaneous services, $252,953; Hydro-Electric Power Commission, $91,302.

Sir James Whitney introduced two bills in the Legislature yesterday which will be of great benefit to street railway employes and miners. One bill will amend the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board Act, and will cover the grievances of motormen and conductors on street cars who, in order to put in a ten-hour day, have been compelled to string out their working time over a period of fifteen or sixteen hours. Sir James' amendment gives the Railway Board the authority to regulate the working hours regardless of any agreement at present existing between a municipality and a street railway company. All employes are considered in the amendment. When the bill is being discussed penalties will be inserted for contravention of the act on the part of any directors, superintendent, manager or officers of the company.

Another bill will amend the Mines Act by stipulating that no miner shall be employed underground in any mine for more than eight hours in any 24 hours, including the time in descending into and ascending from the mine. For every contravention of this act a penalty of $50 is imposed.

E. E. Fraser, Welland, introduced a bill to provide that elevator operators shall have proper qualifications, and shall be compelled to produce certificates of efficiency.

TO SUSPEND OUTRAGES.

Resolution Was Introduced at Ironworkers' Convention.

Indianapolis, Ind., Feb. 20.—To support its contention that many officials, National and local, of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers were implicated in the dynamiting conspiracy against "open shop" employers, the Government is prepared to submit as evidence the original copy of a resolution alleged to have been introduced at the Iron Workers national convention at Rochester, N.Y., in 1910, reading: "Resolved, that no more bombs or explosions of any kind be exploded while this convention is in session."

When a photograph of the document was shown to District Attorney Miller yesterday, he said the resolution was an important piece of evidence, but he would not add what action was taken on resolution by the convention or through whose hands the manuscript had passed.

Patrick Ryan Arrested.

Indianapolis, Feb. 20.—The arrest in Chicago yesterday of the defendant named in the indictment as Patrick Ryan, a former business agent of a Chicago local union, leaves only one man out of the fifty-four indicted still to be apprehended. The man not yet captured is J. J. McGray, formerly of Wheeling, W. Va.

Brandt's Case Again.

New York, Feb. 20.—District Attorney Charles S. Whitman last night confirmed reports that he had secured four letters which detectives found in Foulke E. Brandt's room subsequent to his arrest for burglary at the home of Mortimer L. Schiff five years ago. The letters have been said to have an important bearing on the efforts to free Brandt from a thirty year prison term, but the district attorney declined last night to discuss the contents of the letters. He replied "No" when asked if the examination of the letters had changed his attitude in opposition to the appearance of Attorney Howard S. Gans and Mr. Schiff before the grand jury. The district attorney reiterated that Schiff and his attorney would not be allowed to appear.

John Rodgers, a private detective, who worked on the case against Brandt, was examined by the grand jury yesterday, and is said to have told of Brandt signing a confession that was "framed up." Another witness before the grand jury was Leonard Borne, employed as third man in the Schiff household at the time of Brandt's alleged burglary. The witness had been secured by counsel for Schiff to substantiate the contention that Brandt actually broke into the house.

Want Both to Quit.

Concord, N.H., Feb. 20.—The suggestion that both President Taft and former President Roosevelt should decline to be candidates for re-election this year, in the interests of uniting the Republican party, is made by former United States Senator William E. Chandler, in an open letter to the Republicans of New Hampshire, made public last night.

Mr. Chandler expresses the opinion that the Republican party is divided between Taft and Roosevelt, and so long as the split lasts, it is certain of defeat.

Mr. Chandler declares that, while he personally favors Senator La Follette, he would surrender his preference for someone like Charles E. Hughes, Albert B. Cummins, Chas. W. Fairbanks or Governor Hiram Johnson of California.

Controllership Goes Begging.

Montreal, Feb. 20.—Montreal municipal circles are still face to face with the circumstance of a position worth $7,000 a year going begging for lack of the proper man to fill it. At a meeting of the special committee of the Citizens' Association, entrusted with the task of securing a man nominate as successor to F. L. Wanklyn, who has resigned from the Board of Control, yesterday, it was reported that all of those whom the committee had thought capable of taking the position, had been approached, but had refused, saying the salary was quite inadequate.

Boy Killed by Train.

Brantford, Feb. 20.—An inquest will be held into the death of Connie Keenan, a sixteen-year-old boy, who jumped in front of a passenger train on Sunday evening at six o'clock on St. Paul's avenue, on the G.T.R. crossing. Keenan was riding the freight train to the outskirts of the city in order to get home quickly, and he did not notice the approach of the passenger train on the other track. He was taking a special course at the business college here.

St. Kitt's Deputy Postmaster.

St. Catharines, Feb. 20—George Gordon, one of the most popular Conservatives in the County of Lincoln, last evening received word from A. E. Lancaster, M.P., that he had been recommended for the vacant deputy postmastership caused by Stanley G. Smith's resignation.

Black Smallpox In Quebec.

Montreal, Feb. 20.—Black smallpox and hemorrhagic smallpox—the two worst types of the disease known to medical authorities—have broken out in the Province of Quebec, according to Dr. Pelletier, the secretary of the Provincial Board of Health.

Army Aviator Badly Hurt.

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 20.—Lieut. Kennedy, at the U. S. Army Aviation School here, fell about 100 feet in an aeroplane yesterday afternoon and was seriously injured. He was taken in an unconscious condition to a hospital.

WILL SUPPORT CANAL

Sir Wilfrid Wants Georgian Bay Scheme Completed.

Liberal Leader Throws His Weight Into the Scale In Graham's Favor at South Renfrew—G.T.P. Was All Late Administration Could Attend to, He Declares—Hon. W. L. M. King Also Speaks at Meeting.

Renfrew, Feb. 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier yesterday threw the weight of his personal influence into the campaign for the election of Hon. George P. Graham in South Renfrew. At Eganville, in the afternoon and Arnprior in the evening Sir Wilfrid addressed a crowded meeting and was warmly received. At Eganville two meetings were held; one was in the town hall and another outside to accommodate the overflow. The ex-Premier and Messrs. W. L. M. King, E. P. Devlin, M.P., of Ottawa; T. A. Low, ex-M.P., and Dr. B. M. Connelly of Renfrew.

That fair play and the honor of the Conservatives of South Renfrew demanded George P. Graham's election was the dominant note in Sir Wilfrid's appeal to the electors. He also defended his administration of the affairs of the country, and referred to several of the transportation problems now before the House, promising his support of the construction of the Georgian Bay Canal.

The candidate then spoke of outsiders who were "butting into" the present election, notably some from the riding of North Renfrew.

"Dr. Reid started this fight and then went back to Ottawa and hasn't come back again," said Mr. Graham.

He had come to South Renfrew on the invitation of the Liberals and with the written pledge of twenty-seven Conservatives of the constituency that they would undertake to elect him.

Sir Wilfrid said: "There was an election on Sept. 21 last. You cannot have forgotten it and I have not. A storm—I will not call it a brainstorm—swept over the country and wiped my Government out of existence. I do not mind telling you I would have preferred to win, but I believe in taking my defeat like a man, so I won't repine, I won't lament but do just like the boys—spit on my hands and lay to."

The ex-Premier, after a warm tribute to Mr. Low and Hon. Mr. Graham, said of the latter:

"I have kept the seat next to me vacant for him and I believe he will fill it. But there are men who said that if George P. Graham were to enter the House he would give them the devil. This is not a political question; there is no issue between us. We are not yet in a position to take issue with the present Government. I want to give them more rope—they may hang themselves.

After alluding to instances in which political leaders, after being defeated at home, had gone to other constituencies, Sir Wilfrid said:

"The Georgian Bay Canal is a transportation matter of particular interest to you people in South Renfrew. Some people want only the Welland and others only the Georgian Bay Canal. To these I say, 'O men of little faith, we need both of them.' You will ask me 'Why didn't you build the canal yourself?' I can only say that you cannot do everything at the same time. We tried to build the transcontinental railway, though Hon. Mr. Fielding, Minister of Finance, hesitated to engage in such a large project. And, sir, I can assure you whenever Mr. White resolves to build the Georgian Bay Canal, I can assure of my own and Mr. Graham's support."

Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King urged less localism in regard to the present election. The man who had had the wide experience of Hon. Geo. P. Graham was the man whom South Renfrew should elect for the good of the country. Canada needed his services. Had not Conservative members resigned to make way for Hazen, Pelletier, Rogers and White, all members of the present council of the nation?

Must Remain Bachelor Maids.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Feb. 20.—In order to share in the estate of their father, the Misses Ruth and Tacie Morgan, daughters of William P. Morgan, a wealthy real estate man, must stay unmarried for life. The will of the father, just made public commands that the two daughters are to be given "a suitable living while they remain single." In the event of marriage, their allowance is to be completely cut off.

The Misses Morgan are prominent in society. The will of their father came as a great surprise to them.

Child Revives In Coffin.

Duluth, Minn., Feb. 20.—After being prepared for burial and apparently dead two days, the three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Maholechek, who live near Black Duck, was discovered to be alive as the burial service was being held. Three days ago the child fell in a bucket of water and was nearly drowned.

It was noticed at the grave that moisture had gathered on the glass of the coffin, and the body was removed. By the use of stimulants the child was resuscitated.

Subsidy for Traction Line.

Brantford, Feb. 20.—It was announced here yesterday that the Dominion Government had been asked for a subsidy for the construction of the Brantford and Lake Erie Electric line to Port Dover. A deputation recently waited on Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways, pointing out that the construction of the road would be of great benefit to Brantford, Paris and intermediate points.

Alberta's Coal Commission.

Edmonton, Alta., Feb. 20.—Premier Sifton has announced a commission to investigate the coal situation in the province. The members are John Stirling, chief coal inspector; W. B. Powell, ex-president of the Mine Workers' Federation, and W. J. McNeil, secretary of the Employers' Federation.

AN APPALLING BUNGLE

Hon. W. T. White Sheds Light on N.T.R. Muddle.

The Wrangling of the Opposition Against the Cutting Down of the Commission Brings Down Upon Their Heads an Expose of Whole Business—Cutting Rates Will Be an Impossibility Now.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—Opposition orators heard some unpleasant truths regarding the National Transcontinental blunders last evening when they stirred up Hon. W. T. White by their renewed fight in committee of the whole, against Hon. Frank Cochrane's bill to reduce the number of the National Transcontinental Railway commissioners.

The Opposition arguments were mainly along the line that the road was a necessity, and a splendidly built road; therefore it didn't matter what it cost.

The bill was reported at 12.45 a.m.

George W. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.) defended the commissioners and the policy of the late Government in regard to the railway. True, it had cost more than the original estimate, but so had all great public works. Between Mr. Fielding's original estimate for the N.T.R., which Mr. Kyte stated was $51,000,000, and the figures given to the other day by Hon. Frank Cochrane, was only $9,000,000.

Mr. Kyte claimed that the late Government had done well in securing a second transcontinental railway for Canada, at an expenditure of $60,000,-000, in comparison with the $240,000,-000 which the C.P.R. had cost the country under the government of the late Sir John A. Macdonald.

Hon. A. E. Kemp remarked that the Opposition were in a sort of apologetic mood. The situation in regard to the N.T.R. was one of the greatest bungles the country had ever got into, and the Government of to-day was perfectly justified in taking steps leading to the removal of the commissioners.

The question of cost, he said, was not the only charge against the late Government. The prime object in 1902 for building the road was that it should be an outlet for western wheat, yet, instead of completing the road from Winnipeg to Cochrane Junction, where connection to tide water could be had over the T. & N. O. Ry., they had completed the section from Quebec to Moncton, and it would be three years before the road would be available for crop movement.

E. M. MacDonald (Pictou) charged Mr. Kemp with misrepresentation. There was in existence to-day, and had been for a year, the line from Winnipeg to Fort William.

Mr. MacDonald took the ground that, with only one man in charge of the road, he might condone dishonesty, but the members of a board of several commissioners would be a check on each other. He charged the Minister of Railways with acting illegally in appointing, by order in council, Mr. MacPherson, the assistant to the chief engineer, vice-chairman, an office not authorized by the statute.

Hon. W. T. White declared that there was no use in blinking facts. The appalling difference between Mr. Fielding's estimates of $54,000,000 and the total cost of the road, as shown by the present Minister of Railways, of $236,000,000, raised a prima facie case against the late Government which they must explain away.

The interest to be paid by the Government, continued Mr. White, was $60,000,000, almost five times the $13,-000,000 mentioned by the leader of the late Government.

"Is that a matter to be treated lightly?" he asked. "I say there has not been such a blunder made in this country since Confederation."

The Opposition seemed to think it did not matter what the road cost. Because, they said, the G.T.P. would pay three per cent. interest, it would not cost the country a cent. But what railway could afford to pay three per cent. over $200,000,000? It would have to earn $20,000 a day before it could pay this $6,000,000 a year.

"I want to tell them," declared the Finance Minister, "that every dollar of this $60,000,000 interest of this $236,-000,000 comes out of the people of this country." From the standpoint of freight rate regulation, what chance was there for reduction under these circumstances?

The late Government, said Hon. Mr. White, were more responsible than anyone else for the present congestion in the western grain traffic. With only one line out of Port Arthur to the east it mattered not how many lines there were from Winnipeg to Port Arthur.

"You've got the wrong end of the line constructed first," he declared. "It is like a man beginning to build a house by building the chimney. The line will be a year late in getting to Lake Superior and three years late in getting to Cochrane.

"The cry at the first election was: 'Let Laurier finish his work.' We'll finish it, and finish it well, and I hope the end of the N.T.R. will be better than the beginning."

Hon. Frank Oliver wanted to know why the N.T.R. commissioners were held responsible for the alleged sins of the late Government. In closing up the expenditures of construction and material traffic arrangements there was the greatest need of careful supervision. There was more need for four commissioners than at any previous stage in the construction of the road.

Sir Wilfrid Thrown From Sleigh.

Ottawa, Feb. 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier was the victim of a carriage accident yesterday morning, which might have resulted seriously.

The Liberal leader was on his way to catch the 8.35 train to Eganville, in South Renfrew. When at the corner of Rideau and Sussex streets his sleigh upset. He was thrown out, but was not hurt. He walked the remaining distance to the station, apparently none the worse for the accident.

INQUEST CONTINUED IN RAILWAY FATALITY

Large Amount of Testimony Taken—Train Crews, Yard Officials, Assistant Superintendent and Other Officials Gave Evidence—More Witnesses Wanted—Adjourned Until Friday Next

Before Dr. Farley, coroner, of this city, the enquiry regarding the circumstances of the collision of Wadnesday last on the Midland division of the G.T.R. whereby J. J. Spencely, a brakesman, lost his life, was continued yesterday afternoon. The proceedings were held in the police court room, which was filled with witnesses and spectators. Mr. P. J. M. Anderson, county attorney, represented the Crown; Mr. J. Pratt, of Montreal, the G.T.R., and Mr. W. D. M. Shorey represented the father of the young man whose life was sacrified. Considerable evidence was submitted, and an adjournment made until Friday afternoon in order to have the evidence of the day operators at Lindsay and Peterborough.

Wm. S. Hutchison, sworn, said he was an engineer of the G.T.R. His run was from Lindsay to Belleville. He knew the deceased, J. J. Spencely, who was a brakesman on the train. On the morning of the accident he was one of the engineers on the double-header train which collided in the Midland yard here; arrived in Belleville yard at 4.15 a.m. The train he was on ran into some cars on the "Y" and in the collision Spencely was killed and engine No. — was badly damaged. Witness was on the second engine. The train stopped at the switch which Spencely opened. This let the train on the east line of the "Y." Nugent, the conductor, closed the switch. The van had just cleared the main line when the collision occurred. The train was going then three or four miles an hour. It was very dark at the time. There were no lights upon the cars that were on the "Y" line. The crew had no knowledge of cars being on the track. Mr. Geach was engineer on the leading engine. If a switchman had been at the switch at the "Y" the accident would not have occurred. The tender of the engine Spencely was on was, in witness' opinion, weak. The cars they struck were not badly damaged.

To Mr. Shorey—The tender was a rather old tender, and the engine was an old one. The weak tender was no doubt to a large extent the cause of Spencely's death. The orders were to run from Lindsay to Belleville on the scheduled time. There was no sign of lights on the cars they struck. There were no lights against the train when they came in.

To Mr. Pratt—The accident occurred within the yard limits.

Alexander McEachren, sworn, said he was fireman on the second engine. He received a signal from Conductor Nugent to go ahead. They had proceeded but a few car lengths when the collision occurred. This was after the conductor had closed the switch. He saw no orders in reference to the running of the train. He saw no light on the cars they collided with.

Wm. G. Geach, sworn, said he was a G.T.R. engineer and on the 14th inst. was engineer on engine No. 2.31, the leading engine on the double-header train which arrived here at 4.15 in the morning. At Peterborough he saw an order which stipulated the train was to run on scheduled time. He had no information as to cars being on the "Y" line. The train at the time of the collision was going about four miles an hour. He looked ahead just before they got to the switch and he could see no obstruction. He did not see the standing cars until he was within about half a car length from them. He made an attempt to put on the air brakes, but he could not say whether they applied or not. They were so close when he saw the cars that it was impossible to avert a collision. The tender was light of coal at the time and was also only partially filled with water. If a light had been on the cars the accident might possibly have been averted. The cars might have been left on a safer place on that line, as there is a curve, and the engine's light was diverted from off the cars. He sustained slight injuries. He received no word of the line being blocked. He did all that was in his power at the time to avert the accident. If he could have seen the cars for any distance he could have stopped the train, as it was proceeding slowly.

To Mr. Shorey—At the other end of the yard he had found that line blocked with cars, and had often received orders to that effect. On this occasion there were no orders as to cars on the line. There were no lights on the cars. After Spencely threw the switch, he jumped upon witness' engine, but had no right to do so.

To Mr. Pratt—Spencely did not ride upon the engine from Peterborough to Belleville. He should have been in a position to communicate with the brakesman on the rear of the train, but where he was he could not have done so.

To juryman Canning—His engine was not leaking steam. He was not working steam at the time of the collision occurred. There were no lights the conductor might not have been able to board the train.

To Mr. Pratt—There was no trouble with the engine. It was all right when Spencely got off.

John Winchester, sworn, said he was fireman on the leading engine. He was looking at the rear of the train for a signal to go ahead from the conductor. This was just before the collision occurred. There was no lights on the cars standing on the line, and no warning was given that such was the fact. Had there been a switchman at the switch the accident would, no doubt, have been averted.

Mr. Blackburn testified that he was the rear end brakesman on the double header train. He saw the conductor close the switch. The train was then moving slowly. Witness gave the signal to go ahead. The train had not gone more than a car length or two after he had given the signal when the collision occurred. The curve at this point is a rather sharp one.

To Mr. Shorey—On one occasion he saw orders that this line was blocked and we did not go in that way.

To juryman Terwilligar—It was not ruleable for the brakesman to get on the front engine.

To juryman Adams—It was not usual for a dead train to be left without signals upon it, but those cars were.

Mr. George Raymes, sworn, said he was an operator at Peterborough. He remembered a freight train leaving Peterborough on the night of the 13th. He gave orders as to the schedule of time. He had no knowledge at the time that there were any cars on the "Y" line. If he had he would have given orders so that they would not go upon that line. He gave the orders to the conductor to arrive at Belleville at 1.45, whereas the train did not arrive until 4.15. Witness gets orders from Lindsay as to the line.

To Mr. Shorey—He had no knowledge that night that the line was blocked. It was customary for the despatcher to be informed when a line was blocked and to transmit the same to conductors. He received no communication from Lindsay that the line was blocked.

Mr. H. H. Baker testified that he was train despatcher at Lindsay and was in that capacity on the 13th. He transmitted the order to Nugent, the conductor, on the train. He received no instructions from Belleville in reference to that train. His jurisdiction was from Lindsay to Belleville. His orders just cover from one yard to another. Other instructions would have to be given if the line was blocked. On Feb. 5th he received notice that the line on the "Y" at Belleville was blocked. There was knowledge that there were cars on the line at the "Y." The order went to Peterborough that that track was obstructed. It was sent to the night operator. The information was at Peterborough before the train left that place.

To Mr. Shorey—He issued no orders that night countermanding any other order.

Mr. Raymes, recalled, said he received no word on the 13th that the "Y" line was blocked, but he did on the 5th inst. On the night of the accident he had no information that the "Y" line was blocked.

Mr. Baker, recalled, said that on the 13th he made no intimation to the operator at Peterborough that the "Y" line was blocked.

To Mr. Pratt despatcher Raymes said he did not find any copy that the order of the 5th was annulled. He had nothing to show that it had been annulled. He understood the rules to be that all orders must be annulled before ceasing to be effective.

To Mr. Shorey—The order that the line was blocked on the 5th was still in force on the 14th inst.

Charles Moore testified that he was night yardmaster on the G. T. R. yard here on the 14th inst. There were 70 or 80 cars on the leg of the "Y." They were placed there the day before and were mostly laden. Information was transmitted to Lindsay on Feb. 11th that the line was blocked. That order was not countermanded. Sometimes cars are on these side lines for a week. The order was never cancelled between the 11th and the 14th inst. The line never was free of cars between the two latter dates. If the trainmen went into the obstruction without having orders of a blockade they were not to blame. If there was any blame, it was upon the operators, who should have given specific orders.

To juryman Canning—Witness could not say that the line on the east leg of the "Y" was blocked all the time from the 5th to the 14th inst.

Mr. Hatton testified that he was general yardmaster of the G. T. R. here. On the 11th of this month he advised Lindsay that the east leg of the "Y" here was blocked. He sent word to Mr. McMillan at Lindsay and this was all witness had to do in the matter. The conductor or engineer of the train should have seen that the line was clear. The conductor should have sent a brakesman ahead to see that all is clear on all lines in the yard. The duty of that train was to stay on the main line. It was no unusual thing to use both east and west legs of the "Y." In his opinion a switchman was necessary at that switch. As far as he was concerned there was nothing he could have done more than he did do to have averted the accident. In witness' opinion, if the brakesman had been in his proper position to exchange signals he could possibly have averted the collision or at any event he would not have been killed.

To Mr. Shorey—If Spencely had been on top of the train he might possibly have seen the cars.

To juryman Canning—Trains had been flagged over the east end of the "Y" between the 5th and the 11th inst.

Mr. Coleman testified that he was assistant superintendent of the G. T. R. On the 11th a message was sent to Lindsay that the east leg of the "Y" was blocked. He could find no record that this order was revoked. On the morning of the accident, in witness' opinion, the engineer, had he been looking out of his engine, could have seen the cars on the track. The conductor was perfectly right, under the circumstances, in going on the leg of the "Y." The engineer on the leading engine should have seen the obstruction.

J. D. McMillan testified he was train master at Lindsay. He knew an order was issued that the east leg of the "Y" at Belleville was blocked on the 5th. The notice was given to Peterborough from Lindsay that the line was blocked on the 5th. There was no cancellation of this condition on the "Y" here.

To Mr. Shorey—The order was still in force on the 14th inst.

To the jury—In his opinion it was a bad practice to place lights on dead cars that were left standing on sidetracks.

Mr. Pierce, clerk in the motive power department here, related what he saw after the accident occurred. He could not say anything that would throw any light on the matter.

Mr. Vincent Lynch testified that he arrived upon the scene of the accident shortly after it occurred. The dead car struck was laden with timber. There is a curve where the accident occurred.

Mr. Geach, recalled—He certainly should have had orders that the east leg of the "Y" was blocked. That was the usual line for trains to come in on.

At this stage of the proceedings an adjournment until Friday afternoon was made.

A TROUBLE MAKER

TEA AND COFFEE POISON BREEDS A VARIETY OF ILLS.

A California woman who didn't know for twenty years what kept her ill, writes to tell how she won back her health by quitting coffee: (Tea contains caffeine, the same drug found in coffee)

"I am 51 years old," she says, "have used coffee all my life and for twenty years suffered from indigestion and insomnia. Life was a burden and a drag to me all the time, and about once a year my ailments go such hold upon me that I was regularly 'sick in bed' for several weeks each time.

"I was reluctant to conclude that coffee was the cause of my trouble, but I am thankful that I found out the truth.

"Then I determined to use Postum exclusively—for a week at first—for I doubted my ability to do without coffee for any length of time. I made the Postum carefully, as directed, and before the week expired had my reward in a perceptible increase in strength and spirits.

"Seeing the good that my short experiment had accomplished, I resolved to continue the use of Postum, cutting out the coffee entirely. This I did for nine months, finding, daily, increased cause for gratification at my steadily improving health. My indigestion gradually left me, my sleep returned, I gained 26 pounds in weight, my color changed from sallow to a fresh, rosy hue and life became a blessing.

"Then I thought I would try coffee again, and did so for a few weeks. The punishment for deserting my old friend, Postum, was a return of my old troubles.

"That taught me wisdom, and I am now and shall be all my life hereafter, using Postum exclusively and enjoying the benefits it brings to me." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

"Daniel Boone on the Trail," a thrilling romance of pioneer days, will be the attraction at Griffin's Opera House on Thursday, Feb. 22nd. The end of the first act shows a sudden attack by the Indians, misled by a renegade white man into betraying Boone's friendship for them. Daniel Boone was always fair to the red men and won their friendship on this account as well as for his bravery and prowess as a hunter. In the second act we see his struggle to retain their friendship and yet rescue two helpless women whom the Shawnees have stolen. The great climax of the third act is Daniel Boone's single-handed fight for life with a pack of wolves. Although partly successful in saving the women, Boone remains as a hostage, and we see them prepare to burn him at the stake. The play itself is full of surprises and stirring climaxes, but this one is the thriller and calls for curtain after curtain. In the last act we see our hero happily married, the villian dead; and the Indians, realizing the folly of having "Long Knives" as an enemy, come to smoke the pipe of peace and plead for his friendship. Altogether it forms a very pretty picture of the life of early days and makes our hearts swell with pride and admiration for the truly great characters of the early pioneers.

COMPLETELY CURED OF DYSPEPSIA

By Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets

We are continually hearing from grateful people who have had experiences like that of Miss Alice E. Cooper, of Niagara Falls, Ont., who writes:

"I wish to express my gratitude to you for the benefit I received from your most wonderful Dyspepsia Tablets. Having taken other medicines without having received the slightest relief, I heard of your Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets and thought I would give them a trial. I have been completely cured of dyspepsia. I will be only too pleased to advise any one troubled with dyspepsia to give them a fair trial."

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets not only give the immediate relief from heartburn, flatulence, acidity of the stomach and biliousness, which is so much needed, but if taken regularly for a few days or weeks they completely cure the most aggravated cases of stomach trouble. When for 50c. you can get a box from your druggist, why go on suffering? National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 144

REMARKABLE TIME PIECES

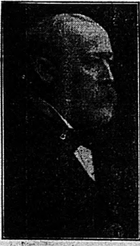
Men Who Have Exercised Their Genius in the Production of Queer Clocks and Watches.

A most extraordinary chronometer is the result of the patience and ingenuity of a French clock-maker. The construction of this time-piece which contains nine hundred and seventy-seven parts and cost about $4,000, consumed the maker's time for a number of years.

On the case are shown the signs of the zodiac. On the main dial, in addition to the usual characters to indicate hours, minutes and seconds, are seen divisions with reference to time in years, months, and days, not to speak of features to indicate the phases of the moon, the seasons, solestices, equinoxes, and other astronomical records.

Then, too, there are large and small gongs, together with a diminutive carillon of three notes for sounding purposes. On the lesser minute dial are 226 stars of the Boreal and 200 of the southern hemisphere; time at 125 different cities of the world, times of sunrise and sunset, and a thermometer and barometer.

Since first men began to construct time-pieces there have almost always been those delighting to exercise their genius in the making of queer clocks and watches. In China they tell of such an inventor who lived forty-five centuries ago. This was Hwang-Ti, who is said to have devised the water-clock. The Chinese honor the name of Hwang-Ti as that of the greatest mechanical genius that ever lived. There was a Chinese emperor, too, who excelled in the clock-making line. This royal inventor, who is rather vaguely assigned to the fourteenth century, is said to have constructed an extraordinary time-piece, for which three toy temples served as bases. At the top of these temples there was placed a box of works. In the middle temple were shown figures of fairies, each carrying the sign of one of the hours.



SIR WILLIAM VAN HORNE
One of Canada's Great Railroad Builders.

It appears that the side temples were dedicated to the sun and moon, respectively, and that they were given over to miniature genii, whose dwelling-places were connected with the central structure by bridges. Without the temple were placed the images of two gods standing before drums.

On the hour the quiet of the temple was broken by the action of the gods striking the drums, and there appeared a fairy with her hour sign. At the same time from the temples of the sun and moon genii wended their way across the bridges, for the purpose, apparently, of ascertaining the time from the fairies, after which proceeding they returned to report to their fellows. Chinese say that the name of the emperor who devised the characteristic conceit was Shun-te.

Mr. Arnott did all in his power to make a success, offering no less than eight valuable prizes. The ice was in good condition and inspiring music was furnished by the I. O.O.F. band. The following handed in their names and the characters they represented:—

Edward Terril—Col. Theophilus.
Spoopendyke Village Brigade.
Raymond Wilson—Uncle Sye.
M. North—Tramp.
Mabel Kaiting—Milk maid.
Gussie Taylor—Milk maid.
Karl Kiser—Evergreen Bedford.
George White—Josiah Simpkins from Pumpkin Ridge.
Lorne Vickers—Uncle Josiah.
Frank Sheldon—Farmer Hiram Snooks from Pike County.
Lloyd Gunter—A Thoroughbred Gent Tramp.
Earl Foster—A rube.
Clarence Burgess—A rube.
Mrs. James Galloway—Aunt Dinah.

The judges for prize winners were Prof Taugher, C. Hannah and L. McGowan. They awarded the prizes as follows:—

Best lady rube—Mrs. James Galloway.
Best gentleman rube—George White.
2nd best gentleman rube—divided between Raymond Wilson and Lorne Vickers.
Best boy rube—Lloyd Gunter.
Best girl rube—divided between Mabel Kaitin gand Gussie Taylor.

FREDDIE WELSH SERIOUSLY ILL

SAN FANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 18.—Freddie Welsh, the British contestant for lightweight honors, announced to-day from his bed at his training quarters at Colma he had called off his American invasion. In three or four days he expects to be able to leave for Chicago, where, after treatment for his stiffened muscles, he will return to England.

Promoter James Coffroth, who had signed Welsh and Jack Britton for a twenty-round fight on February 22nd, said to-day he had abandoned his programme entirely.

HORSES THAT CHEW

Learned the Tobacco Chewing Habit from their Masters, and Love the Weed Which is Considered Healthy.

"Whoa! Whoa!, there! Stop that horse!" shrieked a Kansas man at the junction of Eighth Street and Grand Avenue, as the animal was deliberately following another man who was walking on the pavement. The second man had in his hand a small package of tobacco, and when he turned at the sound of the alarm, it was seen that the horse was intent on getting to the package.

"Oh, now, don't get nervous, Kit," he said, soothingly to the animal "I'll give you a chew."

Kit Smiled.

Then the man opened a package of fine-cut tobacco took an ordinary "chaw" for himself, and divided the remaining part of a newly-opened packet with the horse. The animal took the large quid, and actually seemed to smile as it munched away on it rhythmically as would a cow on her cud.

The owner of the horse, William J. McCafferty, an agent for the Illinois Central Railroad, explained that Kit was very fond of her "chew," and whenever he took one where Kit could see him she would follow him even up a pair of steps and into a house till she, too, was supplied.

"She doesn't seem to want tobacco unless she catches sight of someone in the act of taking a chew, and then she will have hers, no matter who the man may be who exposed the weed," he explained

"What got your horse into the habit — how was it acquired?" asked a dignified-looking man who was in the little coterie which was watching Kit enjoy her wad of fine-cut.

"I did it," replied McCarty. "I began by nipping off a little every time I took a chew in the animal's presence and handing it to her, as she always was curiously nosing about to see what I had. It was not long before she would take a chew of tobacco in preference to a lump of sugar."

"Does the animal expectorate?" asked the dignified person, in all seriousness.

"Well, not so as to be noticed," replied her owner "The horse swallows the juice from the tobacco, and finally the quid itself. And I am here to tell you that I have found the tobacco far more healthy for a horse once in a while than sugar every day, as is given to trick horses."

Good for Horses.

Arthur McKnight an old racehorse man and official starter at most of the big race-tracks in the States, chanced to be present when the tobacco-chewing horse was under discussion.

"I was born and reared down here in the West Botoms," said McKnight, "and I recall Old Tim, a tobacco-chewing fire-horse that used to be on the track in engine-house No. 1, down on Union Avenue. Chief Hale will remember Tim. Why, he was so vicious after a chew if he saw anyone with a plug, that he would almost break his chain to get to you. And if you took a chew and passed him unnoticed, Tim would reward you with a kick. Yes, Tim was a confirmed chewer, and I have known of several good racehorses which had the habit. They are just like human beings; when once they get the desire for nicotine it sticks with them."

"How dreadful!" signed the ministerial-looking spectator. "It is a pity that human beings could not keep their injurious habits without tempting innocent domestic animals."

"Tobacco at intervals is good for a horse," replied McKnight. "It prevents many of the ailments from which they suffer."

A Heavy Smoke

The editor of a certain periodical was rash enough to remove a few lines from a poem which he had accepted, whereupon the author wrote him a letter which wound up thus—"And now, O slaughterer, vivisector, mangler, maimer, destroyer, disfigurer, deformer, defacer, crippler mutilator, good-bye! Put this in your pipe and smoke it!"

Without Nihilism in Russia Siberia would be unnecessary. The very faults which Nihilism seeks to remedy are kept alive by its existence. If it were eradicated Russia would take its place among the Liberal nations of the world.

An expert states that all one needs to to put out a gasoline or kerosene fire is to put foam on it. He does not say so, but we presume the gentleman means to imply that it is always well to have a mad dog around the house to supply the foam.

WHY SNIFFLE AND SNEEZE WITH CATARRHAL COLD?

BY BREATHING THE HEALING VAPOR OF CATARRHOZONE YOU GET RELIEF IN TEN MINUTES.

Every second person that you meet seems to have a sneeze and stuffed feleing in the forehead and nostrils. To cure promptly, say in half an hour, there is nothing worth hsing except Catarrhozone. You inhale its balsamic vapor and feel as if you were among the Norway pines. This is because Catarrhozone contains a healing medicine, light as pine air which is berathed straight into the lungs and bronchial tubes. Away goes the cold; sneezing and catarrhal cough cease, bronchial irritation stops; in short, you are cured of catarrh by a pleasant, simple remedy, free from sedatives and irritants.

That Catarrhozone is a swift, certain means of destroying colds and catarrh is proved by the following statement of Mr. Pulos, one of Brockville's best known merchants.

"In the fall of 1905," writes Mr. Pulos, under date of June 10th, 1910, "I contracted a very severe cold which developed into Catarrh. At that time I was living in New York state and treated with four different physisians, who afforded me no relief. On Coming to Brockville I was advised by a friend to try Catarrhozone. I bought the dollar outfit, and was gratified by the results. I was completely cured by Catarrhozone, and have used it since to check a cold with unfailing results. It is the grandest medicine in existence, and I hope my testimony will be of some use to other fellow-sufferers."

(Signed) George Pulos.

An ideal protection for the chest, lungs, nose and throat is the frequent use of Catarrhozone. Two months' treatment (the large size) costs $1.00, medium sizes 50c.; all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N. Y., and Kingston, Canada.

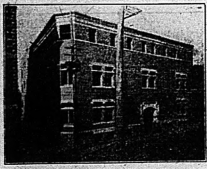
The Magnificent New Building of the Y. M. C. A. Thrown Open for Inspection—What it Looks Like and How it is Furnished and Decorated—Many Interesting Particulars of this Beautiful and Costly Establishment—It is a Great Credit to all Concerned

As was announced in the pulpits on Sunday, the new building of the Y. M. C. A. is this week thrown open for inspection, and the public in large numbers have availed themselves of the opportunity to visit the building around which so much interest has centered the past year.

On Monday afternoon Miss Reid, convener of the Reception Committee of the Ladies' Auxiliary, and members of her committee were receiving and showing the ladies through the building, as they will again do this afternoon from 3 to 5.30.



BELLEVILLE'S NEW Y. M. C. A. BUILDING

A very large number of ladies have been showing a great deal of interest which is evidenced on every hand in the beautiful way which they have decorated and draped the building. They have also had a most prominent part in the choice furnishings which are along beautiful mission lines. Their taste has been highly commented upon. All the furnishings on the main floor are of fumed oak, the second floor of lighter woods, whilst the top floor is finished throughout in golden oak. On Monday morning both the piano firms of Messrs. W. B. Riggs as well as J. A. Goodsell placed in the building their contributions to the building in the way of two beautiful pianos, the one placed in the drawing room and the other in the concert room. By the arrangement of the ladies a magnificent Axminster rug and runners were laid on the drawing room floor. Displayed on the library tables are beautiful specimens of burnt work in centre pieces, executed by Mrs. P. C McLaurin. They have been greatly admired. The drapings and designs of the furnishings reflect credit upon Mrs. Fred Deacon, Mrs. Arthur McGie and Mrs. Hess, of the frunishing committee. The linens, towels, pillows and comforters were selected by a committee composed of Mrs. Asselstine and Mrs. H. W. Ackerman. The dishes and silver were selected by a committee composed of Mrs. P. C. McLaurin, Mrs. A. C. Faulkner and Mrs. G. H. Holton. The rest of the furnishings of the building have been selected by Messrs. H. F. Ketcheson, W. B. Deacon and Mr. Hess, It is expected before the end of the week that the fore the end of the week that the equipment for the new gymnasium will have been received.

As one enters the building he is struck by the spirit of hospitality and good cheer which seems to pervade the rotunda and adjoining rooms. A pleasing effect is given by the light tones of the natural finish of the Georgia pine trimmings. To the left as one enters is a large and well appointed counter with provision for classifying and filing the records and printed matter of the various phases of the work which the modern, up-to-date Association building undertakes to provide. To the left of the counter is a well lighted and well furnished reading room. This reading room is fitted up with two handsome fumed oak reading tables, inlaid with leather and lighted by two pairs of specially designed reading table lamps. Also there is a splendid magazine rack in mission design. At different places around the room are bracket lamps under which is placed a large easy chair for the comfort of the readers. A very suggestive and appreciative feature is a pair of writing desks, on the top which appears the suggestion "Write a letter home." The drawing room at the other end of the rotunda excites much admiration with its massive quarter cut oak mantel and fire-place and furnishings which harmonize well with the interior design of the building. Just off the rotunda is a most convenient kitchen and pantry having the handiest equipment possible. It is fitted with a pair of gas stoves, dumb elevator, refrigerator and an abundance of shelving for the dishes.

In the corner of the room is a shute for carrying refuse to the boiler room below.

This boiler room is certainly worth studying. In order to heat by steam the water of the swimming pool, it had to be located considerably below sewer level. The three boilers, two steam and one hot water, occupy a space blasted out of the rock. A spring of water (200 bbls. a week,) is bubbling through. The spring was housed with cement and tapped. The engineering difficulty of keeping this water pressure from the boilers was overcome successfully by Engineer Allen, who is an expert on rock products. A litter carrier successfully removes the ashes to the outside of the building. The furnace room is capable of holding a carload of black diamonds.

In the basement is a well lighted series of three bowling alleys, a vault, store room, cellar for the caretaker, and a public lavatory.

On the second floor is located the cozy little auditorium, the accoustics of which were very satisfactorily tested by music furnished by the orchestra, as the many visitors passed through.

The location of the boys' rooms is very convenient, as they have direct entrance from the street. Their rooms, because of floor and wall deafening about them, prevent their boyish hilarity from disturbing others in other parts of the building. Their rooms consist of a large bright game room, office, class room, reading room, and lavatory. The door connecting their rooms with the swimming pool, locker rooms and gymnasium is controlled by the Physical Director. They can in no way interfere with the senior members.

The top floor, besides furnishing a bath room and living room for the caretaker, has thirty neatly and comfortably furnished dormitories. Some of these are furnished and already occupied. We are informed that some of our citizens have furnished some of these rooms. The cost of furnishing these rooms is sixty dollars. Visitors are welcome to see these rooms during this week of inspection.

On every floor one sees a beautiful drinking fountain of the sanitary type, which are gifts of the ladies of the W.C.T.U.

If you have not already visited the building, see it now.

ASKS AN APOLOGY

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—I quite recognize the right of any Alderman or any citizen to criticize the actions of any public official. This is of course, speaking generally. In the writer's case, however, statements have been made not only general, but direct, to the effect that some thousands of dollars of the city's money has been squandered by the City Engineer. I hereby give Alderman Robinson 48 hours to apologize in both newspapers in this regard. Other matters requiring attention will be dealt with later.

J. G. LINDSAY,
City Engineer.

ANOTHER CONFERENCE AS TO COAL STRIKE

Mine Owners to Meet Government—Miners will Also Probably Send Delegates

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 21.—The mine owners to-day accepted an invitation to confer with Premier Asquith and other members of the Government in an endeavor to avert a coal strike. It is confidently expected that the miners will also send representatives to the meeting.

KILLED ON TRACK

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—George Cook, aged 65, a laborer whose home is at 16 Shirdell Avenue, was struck by the incoming Montreal express on the G. T. R. this morning near Riverdale station and instantly killed. Cook was walking on the track on his way to work.

FIVE MILLION FIRE

(Intelligencer Special.)

HOUSTON, Texas, Feb. 21.—A fire which started at 2.30 this morning raged till nearly noon, destroying 200 buildings, houses, factories and cotton compressors in the vicinity of the Southern Pacific Yards. The loss is estimated as high as $5,000,000. The area burned is 18 blocks long and 7 wide, and contained the homes of hundreds of the employees of the factories and railroads. One whole block had to be dynamited to stop the flames. The McFadden Compress and the Cleveland Compress and the big Harrel Lumber Plant are the heaviest losers.

YORK LOAN

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Feb. 21.—The third and final dividend to York Loan shareholders will probably not be paid for several years, the liquidator stated todya. A quarter of a million of dollars must be on hand before another payment is made, and although all but $50,000 worth of York Loan property has been sold, a great deal of the purchase money has not yet been paid.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

BOARD OF TRADE

Messrs. W. B. Deacon, C. M. Reid, W. N. Ponton, J. Elliott, H. Sneyd and W. McLachlan left to-day for Toronto to represent the Belleville Board of Trade at the annual meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade.

CHIMNEY BLAZE

The firemen were called out shortly before noon, but the cause was a trifling one, namely, the burning out of a chimney in S. Harris' dwelling on College Street.

WINDOW BROKEN

A large pane of glass, whether accidentally or on purpose, is not known, was last evening broken at Mrs James' store near the G.T.R. station. Evidently, nothing was taken from the store.

CANDIDATE FOR MINISTRY

Mr. John F. Everson, a student of Albert College, was last evening by the Official Board of Holloway Street Church, recommended to the district meeting as a candidate for the ministry.

MASQUERADE ASSEMBLY

Last evening a successful masquerade assembly was held at Symons' Academy, Front Street. A large number of ladies and gentlemen were present and some of the costumes were thoroughly original. A programme of appropriate music was furnished by members of the Belleville Orchestral Society. At midnight a dainty lunch was served. All who attended thoroughly enjoyed themselves.

ELECTED THEIR OFFICERS.

The annual meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association for Prince Edward County was held Saturday afternoon in Picton. Brief addresses were given by Messrs. B. R. Hepburn, M.P., who reviewed the work of the Federal Parliament, and R. A. Norman, M.P.P., who gave a synopsis of the Ontario Legislature's present sitting. The following officers were elected: E. M. Young, president; Wm. Clinton, vice-president; and Jas. C. Hepburn, secretary-treasurer.

WORK APPRECIATED

At a meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of Holloway Street Methodist Church the following resolution moved by Mr. Chas. A. Ostrom and seconded by Mr. A. E. Bailey, was unanimously adopted: "We greatly appreciate the services our minister, Rev. A. R. Sanderson, has rendered to West Bellevile Methodst Church, and to its members during the first year of his work among us, and we extend a hearty vote of thanks and take this opportunity of inviting him to remain with us, also to assure him that he will have our hearty co-operation."

WERE NOT DELIVERED

Mrs. George Taylor on Saturday last paid a party who was on the market 75 cents for a crate of apples which were not delivered to her.

BAND FESTIVAL.

Don't forget the Band Festival to be held in the Salvation Army Citadel to-morrow night, Thursday, the 22nd. This will be the best held in years. The burning club swinging of Mr. Hill will be a great hit.

AT CHRIST CHURCH.

Under the auspices of the Parish Guild of Christ Church an entertainment was held last evening in the Parish Hall and was largely attended. An interesting programme, varied in its nature was presented and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The Rector, Rev. R. C. Blagrave, presided over the gathering.

METHODISTS FAVOR UNION

The Methodist churches of this city are evidently in favor of the proposed union with the Presbyterian and Congregational churches. Last evening the quarterly official boards of Bridge Street and Holloway Street churches took a vote upon this important matter, and both were virtually unanimous in favor of the scheme In Bridge Street the vote was 23 for and 1 against. In Holloway Street church the vote was 14 for and 2 against.

DRIVING PARTY

A party of ladies and gentlemen from the city to the number of twenty last evening drove to the residence of Mr. Joseph D. Thrasher, who resides near Foxboro, where they spent a most enjoyable time socially. During the evening refreshments in abundance were partaken of. Those who attended were loud in their praise of the hospitality extended to them by Mr. and Mrs. Thrasher, who were rated to be ideal host and hostess.

NOT GUILTY—PLEADED GUILTY

Before Magistrate Masson this morning Mrs. Florence Munville was arraigned on two serious charges, namely, with keeping a disorderly house and attempting suicide. On the latter charge she pleaded not guilty alleging that in drinking some muriatic acid she made a mistake, and did not take it intentionally. This charge was dismissed. On the charge of keeping a disorderly house she pleaded guilty through her solicitor, Mr. Flint, who made an able plea on her behalf. After the Crown Attorney, Mr. Anderson, had spoken to the case the Magistrate decided that he would give judgment in two weeks' time, and in the meantime the accused is allowed out on a bond of $150, which was forthcoming.

The Appropriate "Lenten" Food

Jersey Cream Soda Biscuits

Are called the appropriate Lenten Food because markedly superior. All McCormick's Biscuits are that. There are many reasons why. The exclusive quality of McCormick's Biscuits is the result of over half-a-century's careful experience in the blending of the world's best flours--over fifty years' study of the science of baking.

The best Creamery Butter—Fresh Yeast, we make it daily—Sweet, Clean, Whole Milk, and pure sugar. Every ingredient we buy for use in our "Bakes" must be known as the purest and the best. But to make doubly sure of purity and wholesomeness we submit samples to our Chemist for analysis.

Yes; we take more care—spend more money to insure Purity, Quality, and lasting Goodness than competitors; but—it pleases you better and pays us better in the long run. Jersey Cream Soda Biscuits are justly the favorite Lenten Food Perhaps you have decided to try them for the first time. You will like them—and you will continue to use them because of their fine flavor—their lasting goodness, and that nourishing wholesomeness which they possess in such abundance. Ask for

NO CAUSE TO DOUBT

A Statement Of Facts Backed By A Strong Guarantee

We guarantee immediate and positive relief to all sufferers from constipation. In every case where our remedy fails to do this we will return the money paid us for it. That's a frank statement of facts, and we want you to substantiate them at our risk.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effect. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity.

Rexall Orderlies are unsurpassable and ideal for the use of children, old folks and delicate persons. We cannot too highly recommend them to all sufferers from any form of constipation and its attendant evils. That's why we back our faith in them with our promise of money back if they do not give entire satisfaction. Three sizes: 12 tablets 10 cents, 36 tablets 25 cents and 80 tablets 50 cents. Remember you can obtain Rexall Remedies in Belleville only at our store,—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown, Druggist.

An encouraging large increase in business has decided the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to enlarge its Fort William elevators at a cost of $500,000. Construction is to be started at once, and according to present estimates the work should be finished by August 15th. There will be built altogether 116 bins, giving an extra capacity of 2,532,500 bushels of grain, and this, bringing the total up to 6,000,000, will make them the largest elevators in the world.

Boat in a Suit-Case.

A Parisian inventor has devised a craft for getting over the water, which is still so light and compact that it can be folded up and packed into a box no bigger than an ordinary suit case. The case part unfolds and joins together to form the main framework or hull of the boat, which is of the catamaran order. The two cigar-shaped flots are made of waterproof canvas. When packed up they occupy little space, and when in use they are blown up with a bicycle pump. The framework is fastened between them by means of ribs and straps, and when you have fixed a three-jointed, double-bladed paddle together and put a folding seat in place you are all ready to set out on your marine travels.

Overcrowded Ant-Hills

A marvel of scientific research has been accomplished by Professor Yemg, who has been investigating the interior condition of anthills. By dint of patient observation, Professor Yemg discovered that an anthill two feet in height was inhabited by 93,780 ants. Other anthills of almost the same size were found to contain 67,500, 53,000 and 48,000 ants respectively. These observations and the counting of the tiny insects occupied two years.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —
JOHN MARCH
(AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

"We've been away for a couple of months. It was like this. My sister has been at school near Brussels. She came home this July, and I met her at Harwich, with the idea of giving her a taste of gaiety before she settled down to prosy housekeeping duties. However, we found London rather dull. All the fashionable folk seemed to have flown, so I said to my sister one night at table d'hote, 'Agnes, to-morrow we'll dine in Paris.' Well, from Paris we went to the Riviera, Monte Carlo, and several other places, and have only just arrived home."

"Miss Fleming is going to keep house for you?"

"Yes. It's been pretty lonesome for me waiting for Agnes to grow up. Now, however, I hope to have some life and merriment about the old Manor."

"I presume Miss Fleming is several years your junior?"

"Fifteen. Agnes is my half-sister. Have you been there, Mr. Farley?" he asked, pointing with his whip to an oblong grey stone house nestling among a clump of trees.

"It's the Larches?"

"Yes, the ornate home of the Widow Wycherly."

"She has a beautiful face, has she not, sir?"

"Very; it's a beautiful mask to a hideous soul."

"You don't like her."

"I don't know of anything in her to like. I admire her gowns, though."

"What is wrong with her boy? Tom Hargrave told me he had fits, and was sent away for medical treatment."

"Poor little Guy! Some of the more imaginative folk about the village say he is under lock and key at The Larches. That the little fellow is an inmate of a private lunatic asylum is the more feasible and generally accredited version of his disappearance."

"What caused the brain trouble?"

"Fright, whether excited intentionally or not I must leave."

"How? By whom?"

"His mother."

"Oh, Mr. Fleming! Do you think a lovely, childish, shrinking little woman like Mrs. Wycherly could be capable of such superhuman vileness?"

"What I know and have seen of the woman I dislike immensely; therefore, perhaps, I judge her harshly. However, I'll give you my experience, and you can form your own opinion.

"My old housekeeper's neice, Rose Pilgrim, was the child's nursemaid. She used to bring the boy to my place two or three times a week to have tea with her aunt. I gradually slid the habit of ringing the bell for the child to be brought to me in the parlor. He was a quaint, charming little chap, with his mother's great hazel eyes and apple-blossom complexion. After a while I discovered that Rose came alone and my little friend's visits had entirely ceased. One evening I went into the kitchen and questioned her. She said the child was constantly being punished for the most trivial offences, and was always, more or less, crying and miserable. I promised the first evening I had I would call at The Larches and endeavor to persuade Mrs. Wycherly to let him spend a day with me now and again. Harvest was in full swing, and I forgot Guy's troubles, but one night I had occasion to ride into East Weyberne, and as I was passing The Larches I thought of the child. I turned in at the white gate, rode up to the house, gave my horse to a stable lad who was hanging about, and rang the bell. Rose Pilgrim answered it, and when she saw me she came out and pulled the door to behind her.

"'Mr. Fleming,' she said, laying an impressive hand on my arm, 'that woman either intends to murder or craze the child. He is locked in a closet under the stairs and is shrieking himself mad.'

"'Have you the key, or do you know where it is?' I asked.

"She shook her head.

"'What kind of a door is it? Easy to open?'

She nodded.

"'Come along and show me the way, then,' I said.

"'But the mistress! She'll hear you.'

"'No matter at all; she can't prevent me, and the rest does not signify.'

"'Sir,' she whispered, looking cautiously around; 'it's better the poor child should lose his reason than any harm come to you—and Miss Agnes coming home!'

"'What could happen! What is it, Rose,' I demanded, as I saw the girl's face whiten.

"'She carries firearms,' she whispered, 'and if thwarted she would not scruple to use them.'

"'Come, Rose, lead the way,' I said, twisting the leather thong round my whip handle.

"We went softly up the stairs together. Rose stopped at a door under the second flight of stairs and bent to listen at the keyhole.

"'He's very quiet now,' she said, a great fear dawning in her eyes.

"I threw my whip on the floor and made a terrific lunge at the door. The slight framework gave way with a crash. The interior was dark, and before I could fully realize that the place was empty I received an awful blow on the side of my head and face, accompanied by a scream of terror from Rose. For a few minutes I leaned against the wall partially stunned, and then turned to find Mrs. Wycherly facing me, my whip in her hand.

"'Mr. Fleming,' she exclaimed, dropping the whip and holding out her little jewelled hands, 'pray forgive me; I had no idea I was assailing a friend and neighbor. I heard stealthy steps and low voices, and although half dead with fright I followed, determined to make an effort, however futile, to protect my household goods.'

"'But the boy?' I said, bewildered, my head darting and shooting with pain. 'I thought he was in this closet and crying to be let out.'

"'My boy! Why Guy is asleep in his brass crib. I hope you have not been drinking, Mr. Fleming?' and the look of rage and malevolence she turned on Rose decided me to take the girl back to her aunt that night.

"'I humbly apologize,' I said, recovering my hat and whip, 'I came to do you a service, Mrs. Wycherly, but I am afraid I have only annoyed and frightened you.'

"'Never mind,' she said, smiling a sweet, naive smile. 'I belabored you, so we are quits, and can afford to bury the hatchet between us.'"

"How did Rose come to make such an egregious mistake?" Paul asked.

"There was no mistake, Mr. Farley; the child was there up to the time she heard and recognized my mare. She also heard the bell and watched Rose come out to me and close the door. She drew conclusions and acted swiftly. She had wit enough also to perceive that I was not taken in by the ruse, and loves me accordingly."

"Do you think there was ever a period during her widowhood when she contemplated becoming Mrs. Fleming?"

A spontaneous hearty laugh rang through the dusky stillness, awakening the game in the adjoining wood.

"No, Mr. Farley, no. Besides being clever, Rowena Wytherly has a vein of poetic romance and love of mystery in her nature. A common-place, simple-minded country Squire would not arouse her admiration. I can imagine her bitten with a penchant for a more youthful and striking aspect altogether. A young man of native ability, and scholar-like attainments, with a lofty, impending brow, large brown melancholy eyes, and a nervous, sensitive mouth which, unless when he forcibly compresses it, was apt to be tremulous, and—by Jove! I'm painting your portrait, Mr. Farley. Do you recognize yourself?"

"Scarcely," he laughed, looking apprehensively at the Squire's strongly handsome profile. "Please don't insinuate that I am likely to ensnare the affections of the beautiful widow. I have no ambition whatsoever in that direction."

"That's just the rash kind of statement a man makes in the heyday of youth. A very young man thrown into daily intercourse with a lovely, charming, clever woman, yields very readily to a well-regulated system of fascination. Wait till you see under the spell of Mrs. Wycherly's beautiful face, arrayed in bewitching smiles and—"

"Are you speaking from experience, Mr. Fleming?"

"No. I am only saying what anyone may see in Nature's mirror."

"You are kind enough to warn me against Mrs. Wycherly?"

"Well, perhaps that's putting it a little too strong. Say, rather, against a young man's unripe experience."

"Thank you for your kind interest," Paul said, watching the skilful handling of the reins. "I wonder how it came about that you never made a practical personal acquaintance with those matters, Mr. Fleming?"

"Force of circumstances had something to do with it, Mr. Farley. A few years ago I would have given a decade out of my life to have met my affinity."

"And now?"

"Well—you see, Agnes is home, and the world does not seem quite such a dreary place."

"Have you never seen a woman you could like?"

"Certainly. I like most of the women with whom I come in contact, but the one dear woman who should play such sweet havoc with my bachelor heart has never crossed my path."

"What is your ideal woman like, Mr. Fleming?"

"I have none. Ideals are always such disappointing things," he laughed, cracking his whip in the air, "but whenever she comes I shall know her, whoever and whatever she is I shall take her and the happiness she brings to my heart, and not question the wisdom that sent her."

"The poet says a man's best things are nearest him, lie close about his feet," Paul said smiling; "she may lie within your reach, though you are unconscious of her proximity."

The Squire shook his head.

"I don't think so," he said with grave deliberation. "I've seldom been away from Weyberne, and the neighborhood is as familiar ground as the floor of my sitting-room. If she had been a needle in a haystack, I should have found her before this. Sit tight, Mr. Farley, there's a sharp curve to this corner."

The Age of Fish.

Until within recent years there had been ascertained no trustworthy way of finding out the age of fish. It has been shown that mere size does not indicate the age. Reihisch, Heincke, and others have discovered that many of the bones, scales, and otoliths of fishes have annual age-rings, resembling those in tree trunks, and by means of these Professor Wallace and others have now determined the rate of growth of plaice, showing that some specimens attain the age of 25, or even as much as 29 years. Age can now be correlated with size and weight, although it appears that the sexes have a different rate of growth.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 20.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat and oats over the cable were very quiet owing to the limited demand and bids being generally out of line. There was some demand from local buyers for American corn, and a fair volume of business was done. The tone of the market for oats remains steady under a fairly good demand, and small offerings on spot. A firm feeling prevails in winter wheat flour, but the demand is quieter. A good trade continues to be done in spring wheat grades. Demand for bran and shorts is good.

Butter is quieter, but prices rule firm. Owing to more liberal arrivals of fresh eggs prices have declined. Cold storage supplies are now about exhausted and any stock held is to complete contracts with. American eggs are selling at 35c. There is a fair demand from the west for cheese, and a good many car loads are going forward.

'TWAS WESTERN DAY.

Commons Very Busy Putting Grain Bill Through.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—This was exclusively a western day in Parliament. The further consideration of the grain bill occupied the attention of the Commons at both afternoon and night sittings. Western Liberal members placed themselves on record as unanimously opposed to any change in the car distribution clause whereby the farmers would be liable to lose any of the privileges gain through many years of agitation.

Mr. Foster's amendment proposed to give the projected commission authority to control the car situation.

Led by Hon. Frank Oliver, the Opposition took issue with the proposal. The ex-Minister of the Interior pointed out that the car distribution power as decreed by the Laurier Administration under the old Manitoba grain act was a remarkable piece of legislation. It was probably the most extreme Socialistic measure on the statute books for the protection of the individual over the corporation. It was not possible that such strong legislation should have been approved had it not been that there was a dominant public demand. It was the outcome of an irrepressible conflict between the two parties which would never be reconciled. There was only one course to take, in his opinion; either to side with one or the other; either to stand by the legislation and protect the individual, or to remit the legislation and let the corporation have its way.

At 11.30 a division was taken on the clause, which was adopted by a vote of 41 to 29, a Government majority of twelve. Mr. Sharpe of Lisgar voted with the Opposition.

Later in the night Hon. Mr. Foster announced that it was the intention of the Government to ask Parliament at the present session for a grant of money to acquire and operate the elevators at Fort William and Port Arthur. The Minister added, however, that this course would not be followed at any other place. He could not now state the amount which would be asked for. It will, however, likely run up into the millions.

When a woman says she believes every word her husband tells her, it's dollars to doughnuts that the honeymoon is still in its infancy.

Prescription for Headache!

If you should go to your family physician and ask him for a prescription for headache, and he knew the very latest discoveries in medicine, he would prescribe the ingredients of ZUTOO tablets.

Yet he might not get the happy combination of the ingredients secured in ZUTOO tablets after long trial and experiment.

The ingredients of Zutoo Tablets are prescribed for headache by the very best physicians of the day.

Praised by all users, thousands gladly testify to the merits of this reliable cure for headache. 25c at dealers. Try it.

GOOD ROADS.

There is one condition at least which has arisen out of the good roads movement that does not seem to have been foreseen, and which will require definite action to remedy it. Wherever good roads have been built by the county these roads are also maintained by the county, and in such sections, statute labor becomes a very poor asset of the municipality. It has served its day, and good work has been accomplished, in many places by its application, but its day has passed, and something more efficient and more in keeping with this age of progress is now required. The commutation of statute labor in almost any muncipality would be a desirable and an advisable step. With the scarcity of help and the high wages paid it would be money in pocket to a large percentage of farmers to pay the commutation fee rather than to give the time necessary to perform their statute labor. Another thing, if the statute labor were commuted at a reasonable figure and the money placed in the hands of careful and competent men the roads would be kept in much better condition than under the present system.

The municipalities have the power now to bring about the new order either by submitting the matter to the ratepayers, or by a by-law passed by the council. In municipalities through which the good roads system has passed many ratepayers do not want the change, now that there is practically no statute labor to do, and in such districts the only hope is for the council to take action. That the change will be made over at least a large part of the province in the near future is almost a certainty, and may quite well come through the complete abolition of the prevailing system and the adoption of some other more in consonance with the progress of the present day. In this connection, the following circular, issued by the Secretary-Treasurer of the Ontario Good Roads Association, will be read with interest:

Whitby, Feb. 15, 1912

Dear Sir.—I beg to call your attention to the meeting of this Association, to be held in the County of York Municipal Buildings, Adelaide St., East, Toronto, on Monday, 26th February, 1912, at 2 p.m., and the two following days. A good programme for discussion has been prepared.

The last convention held at Toronto was a most successful one. Every county in the province was represented. There were numerous city, town, village and township municipalities also represented.

As the Association grows in numbers and importance, its minutes of proceedings increase in volume by the addresses delivered and papers read, and the useful discussions by practical men which follow. The expense of reporting and printing the proceedings and postage and express charges for their distribution increases.

County contributions and some aid from the Government has enabled the Association to have the proceedings reported and printed in the Municipal World and in pamphlet form.

The announced policy of the present Dominion Government to recognize the claims of those who build and maintain the king's highway to receive assistance in the improvement of the great trunk highways of the Dominion and the determination of the Ontario Government to further assist in the Forward Good Roads Movement, and the interest manifested by municipalities, will make this meeting of the Association a most important one.

The proper taxation of automobiles, by horse power, to aid in road preservation should, in the opinion of the Association, be urged upon the Government.

Reduced fares can be obtained by persons attending the meeting, who purchase single fare tickets and get a railway certificate from the stations where tickets are purchased.

CURRENT COMMENT.

That alleged war in Tripoli is still dragging its weary length along.

That Ontario-Manitoba boundary question has been a great boon to the newspaper correspondents at Ottawa, who have daily been dishing it up in new and ever-varying forms.

"We keep our automobile in the mirage," said Mrs Blenderby.

"That's where most of us keep our automobiles," returned the caller with an inward smile."

Waiter, (observing diner's dissatisfaction)—Isn't your egg cooked long enough, sir?"

Diner—Yes. The trouble is, it wasn't cooked soon enough.

Statistics just published state that over ten thousand hunters went into the Highlands of Ontario for deer and moose during the season last fall. There were 147 non-resident licenses issued which covered the shooting of moose and deer, 9,500 resident deer licenses, and 640 resident moose licenses.

The over-production of books is becoming serious. Last year there were issued in Great Britain 10,914 volumes, an increase of 100 or so over 1910, which was a record year. The greatest increase was in philosophy, religion, science and technology. History, biology, poetry, and drama also showed a gain. Of new novels there were 1238, of which it is not likely that more than 10 per cent. merited publication. Among such a huge rubbish heap the work of sifting is necessarily slow.—Springfield Republican.

Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux has requested the Government to discharge an elevator man in the Parliament Buildings, and E. M. Macdonald and Hon. In California, Idaho, Washington, Wyoming, Utah and Colorado women have the electoral suffrage and will vote for President next November. The voting population of these six states—women included—amounts to nearly two millions. Thus, the Presidential vote cast by women this year—eight or nine hundred thousand—will be more than the probable margin between the two parties.—Chicago Examiner.

A strange discovery lately made in the walls of an old palace of the Louvre, Paris, shows that reinforced concrete was by no means unknown in Paris as far back as the sixteenth century, when the rebuilding of the Louvre was undertaken by that industrious builder, Francis I.

Dr. James Nasmith, head of the department of physical education at the University of Kansas asserts that a man can be taught to swim in fifteen minutes and that he has succeeded in teaching many in that time. The United States Government has ordered an army officer to study Dr. Nasmith's system. If true, this system is of value to more than the United States army. Every soldier, and for that matter, every citizen should know how to swim. Canada could very well afford to learn about Dr. Nasmith's system.—Kingston Standard.

Another Case Where Life Was Saved and Health Restored by Nerviline.

We have all read and heard of the agonies of sciatica, but only those who have been tortured by this dread malady can fully appreciate what it must mean to be cured after years of suffering.

It is because he feels it his solemn duty to tell the world his faith in Nerviline that Victor P. Hires makes the following declaration. "For three years I was in the Royal Mail service and in all kind of weather had to meet the night trains. Dampness, cold, and exposure brought on sciatica that affected my left side. Sometimes an attack would come on that made me powerless to work. I was so nearly a complete cripple that I had to give up my job I was in despair, completely cast down because the money I had spent on trying to get well was wasted. I was speaking to my chemist one day, and he recommended 'Nerviline'. I had this good liniment rubbed on several times a day and got relief. I continued this treatment four months and was cured. I have used all kinds of liniments, and can truthfully say that Nerviline is far stronger, more penetrating and infinitely better than anything else for relieving pain. I urge everyone with lumbago, neuralgia, rheumatism, or sciatica, to use Nerviline I know it will cure them."

TOWNSHIP OF THURLOW SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The annual convention of the Thurlow S. S. Association was held in the Methodist Church at Bethany on Wednesday, Feb. 14th, and from every point of view we consider it a decided success. The weather was ideal and the large crowd that gathered seemed ready to enter into the true convention spirit of camparing ways and means of carrying on the work of God in the great teaching institution of the church.

The President, Mr. L. B. Faulkner, of Foxboro, took the chair at 1.50 p. m. and called upon the pastor of the church, Rev. S. A. Kemp, of Cannifton, to conduct the devotional exercises, after which the President gave a short address, briefly reviewing the work of the past year. The keynote of his remarks was optimistic, and he expressed the hope that the Thurlow association might be made the banner society of south Hastings.

The Secretary, Mr. S. C. Gay, of Foxboro, stated that this is the first time during his years of office that he has succeeded in getting a report from every school in the township. There are at present 16 schools, with a membership of 957 scholars, and on the whole a very gratifying report was given and adopted by the convention.

The reports of the superintendents of the different departments were presented in turn.

Mr. Wm. Moore, superintendent of the Home Department showed the importance of this line of work and emphasized it as a strong factor in increasing the interest in and attendance at the regular church service.

Mr. H. K. Denyes reported the progress along the line of organized class work. South Hastings ranks 5th among the counties, having a total of 22 adult Bible classes and of this number 19 are in the Township of Thurlow.

Miss E. Adams, superintendent of the Teacher's Training and Missionary Department, was unable to be present, but sent a report which was read during the afternoon.

The Elementary Department is in charge of Mrs. McFarlane, of Foxboro, who is without doubt the right person in the right place. Her department includes all children from birth until twelve years of age. She emphasized the importance of the Cradle Roll, declaring the cost but a trifle in comparison to the influence it hda upon the parents.

Discussing the various reports, Rev. Joseph Ward, of Plainfield, stated briefly that he was pleased to note that each superintendent looked upon his or her job as the biggest and greatest in importance, which was as it should be. The Home Department is for those who can't come as well as for those who won't come to S. S. He had a word of encouragement for each department and emphasized the great field for opportunity in S. S. work.

Reports from the various schools were next received and discussed by Mr. W. Clare, of Gilead, who drew the attention of the S. S. workers to the importance of such labor as would result in the winning of the soul for Christ and the church.

Mr. Wm. Moore was then called to the platform to discuss the importance of organization, and in a masterly way he seemed to speak with a power that convinced the delegates that only through a loyal organization of townships and counties could we hope to achieve the ends desired.

After taking his seat, a motion by J A. Holgate, seconded by H. K. Denyes, was enthusiastically carried pledging $20 for organization work.

At the evening session the report of the Nominating Committee was unanimously adopted, electing the following officers for the ensuing year:—

L. B. Faulkner—President.
Joel Brenton—Vice-President.
S. C. Gay—Sec.-Treasurer.
Wm. Moore—Supt. of Home Dept.
H. K. Denyes—Supt. of Adult Bible Class Dept.
W. Clare—Supt. of Missionary Dept.
Miss E. Adams—Supt. of Teachers' Training Dept.
Mrs. McFarlane—Supt. of Elementary Dept.

A question drawer was then led by Mr. Jno. Holgate, of Foxboro, who proved to be a rare encyclopedia on S. S. work and who answered every question asked by the delegates with much profit to the convention and of credit to himself.

The last item was an address by H. K. Denyes, who spoke also along organization lines.

Success in all work depends upon organized effort. We have already solved the boy and the young man problem in the A. B. C. movemnet. What we want now is consecrated leaders with a holy optimism. Failure is due not to our increased machinery, but rather to the lack of worthy leaders. We must strive to procure them and then to go forward, not in our own strength but in the strength of Jesus Christ.

After a hearty vote of thanks to the Bethany people for the hospitality and welcome extended to delegates, a very pleasant and profitable convention was closed by singing the doxology.

AGRICULTURAL CLASS DINED AT STIRLING

The First of a Series of Annual Banquets Was Most Successful in ... Every Respect.

The first annual banquet of the Agricultural class in connection with Stirling High School was held on Thursday evening, Feb. 15th, and proved a grand success in every respect.

It was held in the Masonic Hall and up to eight o'clock streams of students and invited guests were seen wending their way toward the hall where long tables heavily laden with the best that our fair country can produce were awaiting the invasion of the one hundred and fifty guests to do ample justice to the many good things provided.

A long and interesting toast list was then ably disposed of by Mr. F. R. Mallory, B.A., of Frankford, as the genial toastmaster. Mr. Mallory acquitted himself most acceptably. Perhaps special mention should be made of the toast to the ladies, which was responded to by Mr. Wm. Kerr, who, for a "Bachelor Boy," certainly surpassed himself in his humorous hits and take-offs on the students.

Instructor McIntosh was presented with a splendid gift in the form of a Webster's International Dictionary, mounted on a stand, and an address from the class. Mr. McIntosh made a brief reply to the presentation.

At the conclusion of the programme the hall was cleared and the young folks enjoyed themselves with music and dancing to the tune "We Won't Go Home Till Morning." Everybody went home feeling that the Agricultural boys did not do things by halves.

PUSS MOTHERS LARGE FAMILY.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., Feb. 19.—When a Plymouth Rock hen which Peter Donlin had put upon a sitting of 15 eggs died, Mr. Donlin's first impulse was to throw the eggs away. Seeing the family cat, a fine maltese, he carried her to the eggs and deposited her upon them. The cat proved faithful to her trust and a few days ago chicks emerged from the eggs. The next day the cat had a litter of five kittens. The cat manifested an impartial interest in mothering her large family, which thus far has dwelt in peace and harmony.

In This New 5-Pound Package, Redpath Extra Granulated Sugar Comes To You Pure And Fresh From The Refinery

Of course you know Redpath Sugar.
For more than half a century it has been recognized as the standard in Canada.
Here, in this new 5-Pound Package, you get Redpath EXTRA GRANULATED SUGAR at its very best. Packed at the refinery by machinery, and sealed up tight in these 5-Pound Cardboard Cartons, the sugar is never touched by hand, or even exposed to the air, until you yourself open the package.
Thus it has no chance to pick up foreign flavors in shipping, in storage, or in the open barrel at the Grocer's. Barrel scrapings or other impurities simply cannot get into it.

In the Redpath Package you get sugar as fresh and as clean as if you had caught the crystals as they came from the wonderful machine which completes the refining process.

Besides acting as a perfect protection for the sugar in its journey to your pantry, the new Redpath Package makes a clean and convenient box in which to keep it while being used.
In fact there are just the same advantages in buying Redpath Sugar in the new 5-Pound Package as there are in buying cereals, tea or biscuits in the handy cartons in which they are now generally sold.
Of course every Grocer will also sell Redpath Sugar in bulk or in the 20 lb. cotton bags, to any who prefer it in the old way.

All the leading Grocers will have this new Package on sale. Ask your Grocer for the old reliable Redpath Sugar in the new 5-Pound Package.

Does Your Back Ache?

IF YOU HAVE BLADDER OR URINARY TROUBLES AND WEAKNESS OF THE KIDNEYS—READ BELOW.

Your back aches and fairly groans with the distress of kidney trouble. Your're discouraged, but you mustn't give up. The battle can be quickly won when Dr. Hamilton's Pills get to work. These kidney specialists bring new health and vitality to young and old alike. Even one box proves their marvelous power. Continue this great healer, and your kidneys will become as strong, as vigorous, as able to work as new ones.

Remember this: Dr. Hamilton's Pills are purely vegetable; they do cure liver, bladder and kidney trouble. They will cure you or your money back.

Mrs. W. U. Rossiter, wife of a well known merchant in Kensington, writes as follows:

"Ten years ago my kidney trouble started. I suffered dreadful pains in my spine and around my waist, my back feeling as if hot irons were running through. I couldn't sleep, had no appetite, was pale, thin, and very nervous. Cruel headaches and despondency added to my burden. Not until I had used Dr. Hamilton's Pills did I get any relief. They proved capital and helped me immediately. Eight boxes made me well, and now I do my own housework, feel and look the picture of health."

Your complete restoration to health is certain with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut. Refuse substitutes. 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

TALKING BY SUN RAYS

Heliograph, It Is Claimed, Was Operated in a Rude Way by the Red Man Ages Ago.

A recent writer on the subject of talking by sun rays concludes that the civilised world is probably indebted to the North American Indian for the idea of making use of sun rays, reflected from a looking glass, as a means of transmitting messages or signals.

Science has taken the idea, modified and improved upon it, and the now almost perfect means used by all prominent nations to transmit messages by means of a mirror and sun rays are but the outgrowth of the idea of the "untutored savage," who many, many years ago conceived the idea of making the flashes of sun rays from a small piece of glass held in the hand the medium of conveying signals and messages from point to point. Some authorities maintain that the idea came from a period as far back as the time of Alexander, as some histories record the fact that he piloted his fleets by signals made by the rays of the sun reflected from some bright surface.

The Indian with his small piece of shining material could send signal flashes a distance of over twenty-five miles. Today the civilized world, with the idea improved upon, and with fine instruments made for the purpose, is able to transmit long messages over seven times as far. The instrument used is called a heliograph or sun writer.

SENATOR CASGRAIN,
Surveyor and Engineer, Montreal

The heliograph may be described as an instrument by which rays of light are reflected from a highly polished mirror, mounted on a tripod so as to throw the resulting flash on any desired point within the field of vision. The signals are produced by causing the reflected rays to appear and disappear or be obscured, the intervals of appearance and obscuration being varied in length so as to produce the combinations of long and short flashes.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY ON TRAINS.

A phase of human activity which has occupied the attention of many inventors is the devising of a simple system for maintaining wireless telegraphic and telephonic communication with moving trains. Numerous experiments have been made in the United States, Belgium, and Germany, as well as in Britain; but the success hitherto achieved has not been sufficiently convincing to warrant commercial exploitation. An inventor in the Midlands, however, appears to have solved the difficulty, judging from the eminently satisfactory results of tests made. In this invention the method is adopted of encircling a railway carriage with two frames of wires for sending and receiving messages. Along the side of the track is carried a continuous wire, similar to that used for telegraphing purposes, which may be buried or carried on low posts, and which links up with stations and signal-boxes, as well as with the trunk telephone and telegraph systems of the country. In the carriage an ordinary telephonic instrument is installed, and the electric oscillations are transmitted or received by either of the above-mentioned wire frames carried beneath the coach. The system is described as wireless inductive, so that the pulsations produced in the sending wire frame are reproduced by induction in the wire running parallel with the track, and vice versa for inward messages.

SHOEMAKERS' SCHOOL AT THE INSTITUTE

How Pupils of the Deaf and Dumb Institute are Given Practical Instruction in a Useful Trade—Many Graduates are Employed in Shoe Factories or Running Repair Shops of Their Own—Turning Out Solid Hand-Made Boots—The Working Hours and Benefits of the Training—A Post-Graduate Course

Mr. George B. Van Blaricomb, editor of the Shoe and Leather Journal, recently visited the shoemakers' shop at the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, of which he gives the following account in the Journal:

The shoemakers' shop of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, at Belleville, Ontario, is an interesting place. The shop was first opened as far back as 1874, and has been in steady operation since. Hundreds of deaf boys have passed through it and have been trained in the trade by taking part in its busy operations.

The first instructor was Mr. John Flowers, who remained in charge until 1882, when Mr. Wm. Nurse took up the work, and carried it on for twenty-one years, until 1903. He was then transferred to a more responsible department, handing the work over to Mr. Alex Morrice, the present instructor.

In the early history of the shop, as many as thirty-five boys were steadily engaged, but at the present time, with more industries and a smaller percentage of lads old enough to learn a trade, only about fifteen are employed.

The objects of the shop are: To furnish useful employment to the boys after school hours, to train them in habits of industry and the use of tools, to draw out the mechanical abilities of the pupil, and, finally, to gain a livelihood when school days are over, if other and more profitable avenues are closed against them. When the shop was first opened there was much more shoemaking done by hand then than at the present time, while the use of complete repair outfits, has largely superseded the old methods.

There is no costly machinery in the shop to turn out work wholesale as it would not be wise to entrust it in the hands of the very young workers now employed. The shop aims to train old-time shoemakers that can turn out solid hand-made shoes, or neat repairing that will stand inspection. Those in control recognize that probably the boys may never be called upon to make up boots by hand but that they will be better repairers for the training that they receive in all branches.

In preparing the deaf and dumb to become independent masters of a business of their own, shoemaking is second to no trade open to them. With a thorough knowledge one who can do a neat repair job, can start a shop almost anywhere on a very small capital, and with industry, can soon work up a profitable business, for as shoes are made of leather, repairing will always be required, and is the best paying branch of the trade.

The boys work in the shop for three hours every afternoon, and on Saturday mornings, and after their school course is finished they are allowed to return and take a post-graduate course, working all day under the same conditions that govern the trade outside.

The lads who have taken up the trade and succeeded are to be found in the shoe factories of Toronto, Hamilton, Berlin, Georgetown and other places, their employers considering them among the best and steadiest workers. Others will be found in repair shops of their own in Ontario and the West, earning comfortable livelihoods for themselves and families.

Some have made use of their preliminary training to enter the harness trade. Others engaged in farming, etc., find the training at school of great value in the repairs to shoes and harness at home. The training to hand and eye has helped many to acquire much more readily, skill in some other branch, to which they have been led.

Shoes are made by the boys, for the 250 pupils attending the Institution. Last year over a hundred pairs were turned out in nailed and rivetted work, and the boots are sold to the wearers at cost. This is only one of the many important practical branches of the school for the deaf, where baking, farming, dairying, and other lines are successfully followed.

The aim of the Institute, under the progressive and capable administration of Dr. C. B. Coughlin, the superintendent, is to fit all the young in the province of Ontario, bereft of speech and hearing, so that on graduation, they are able to make a good living, and follow useful upright careers. Each graduate, fortified by the excellent course of instruction and application, is self-sustaining, and the work and worth of this splendidly managed seat of learning is recognized on all sides.

GROWING BUTCHER MEAT

Latest Scientific Discovery is that Flesh and Fowl Can Be Grown by Chemical Process.

Dr. Warren H. Lewis, associate professor of anatomy in John Hopkins' University, and his wife, Margaret Reed Lewis, also a physician, claim to have discovered a method of inducing the indefinite growth of cellular substances by chemical processes. What Dr. Lewis and his wife claim to have actually accomplished is this: They have taken pieces of chicken, placed them in a saline solution and grown chicken meat. They have discovered that it is possible to cut off some of this chicken meat without hindering further growth, and the process can be repeated indefinitely. They also claim that the process can be applied to any sort of flesh. Dealing with the question of his discoveries. Dr. Lewis says: "The value of all these experiments which my wife and I have conducted has several different phases. For instance, it may some day have a great commercial value. There is nothing to prevent our operations from being conducted on a much larger scale. Suppose that you had a number of vats filled with saline solutions, and that in these solutions you put the muscles or other organs of various animals, not only while in the embryo, but even when they had reached the adult stage. There would be large growths, and these would be edible. In other words, the salt solutions could be turned into incubators, sure to hatch, and from which pieces of embryo chicks could be taken every day without hindering the increase of the supply."

The possibilities conjured up by this statement are so great as to almost verge on the grotesque. The idea of actually growing meat appears to offend the laws of Nature, and yet Science has done stranger things.

Pigments from Odd Sources.

The ingenuity of the manufacturers of pigments for the use of artists has been so severely taxed within recent years that they have been obliged to employ for the purpose all manner of animal, vegetable and mineral substances. Even Egyptian mummies have been utilised in this way by the manufacturers. It appears that the corpse of the old Egyptian was preserved in the finest bitumen, and that the remains thus treated in the centuries gone present, on being unwrapped to-day, an appearance quite like that of light-coloured leather. Now it has been discovered that, when the bitumen and the leather-like remains are ground down by machinery, there is obtained therefrom a beautiful brown pigment, especially prized by painters of portraits, who claim that this pigment is [illegible] in depicting certain shades of brown hair. Among the other colours obtained from strange sources may be mentioned Prussian blue. This is made by fusing the hoofs of horses with impure potassium carbonate. Sepia is the dark fluid discharged by the cuttlefish to render the water opaque for its own concealment when attacked by its enemies. The cochineal insect furnishes crimson and purple lake and carmine; while ultramarine is procured from the precious metal known as lapis lazuli. Raw sienna is natural earth from Sienna, and, when burnt, becomes burnt Sienna. Camboge is the yellow sap of a tree that grows in Siam.

Fireless Cooking-Stoves.

A system of cooking comestibles, or keeping in a heated condition those which have already been prepared, has been devised, and has aroused considerable attention, especially in regard to its application to railway trains. The stove, which has neither fire nor gas, is based upon the ingenious utilisation of a non-conductor of heat. The outer vessel is wrought in aluminium, and the vessels employed for culinary purposes are of the same metal with aluminium locking covers. The necessary heat is supplied by radiation from several hot plates, which are inserted in the cooker, and the arrangement is such that several dishes can be cooked simultaneously. It is stated that not only is this system, so far as it applies to railway travel, free from all danger, but that it represents a saving of 70 to 90 per cent. in the fuel-bill, while one charge of the plates is sufficient to keep the contents hot, or to cook them, during a journey of several hundred miles.

Cut Out the Cut-Worm

Cultural methods are the only means of combating the cut-worm pest in large fields. These consist of late deep fall plowing, to turn the young larvae out and expose them to the weather, destruction of brush or rubbish and keeping the edges of a field clean and free from refuse, in order that the moths may not be afforded a suitable place to lay their eggs. For garden plots a mixture of poisoned bran is used. This is made by mixing one pound of Paris green into fifty pounds of bran. Moisten it to a nice paste and sweeten by adding about a quart of molasses. This mixture is sprinkled between the rows of vegetables where the larvae are working. This should be done in the evening, and of course all stock or poultry kept away, as it is deadly poison if eaten by any animal or bird. It is well also not to place the poison close to the crop.

HOW TO PRESERVE YOUTH AND BEAUTY.

One great secret of youth and beauty for the young woman or the mother is the proper understanding of her womanly system and well-being. Every woman, young or old, should know herself and her physical make up. A good way to arrive at this knowledge is to get a good doctor book, such for instance, as "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser," by R. V. Pierce, M. D., which can readily be procured by sending thirty-one cents for cloth-bound copy, addressing Dr. Pierce, at Buffalo, N. Y.

The womanly system is a delicate machine which can only be compared to the intricate mechanism of a beautiful watch which will keep in good running order only with good care and the proper oiling at the right time, so that the delicate mechanism may not be worn out. Very many times young women get old or run down before their time through ignorance and the improper handling of this human mechanism. Mental depression, a confused head, backache, headache, or hot flashes and many symptoms of derangement of the womanly system can be avoided by a proper understanding of what to do, in those trying times that come to all women.

MRS. WILLIAMS.

MRS. G. H. WILLIAMS, of Lynnhaven, Va., writes: "It is six years since my health gave way. I had female trouble and all the doctors (I employed three) said I would die. I was not able to do my work, had to hire someone all the time. Finally, I read in the papers about Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and decided to try it. I had not taken but one bottle until I found it had done me good. I took, in all, five bottles of 'Favorite Prescription' and two of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and now I am able to do all my housework, and have gained fourteen pounds. I advise all women who suffer from female trouble to try your 'Favorite Prescription.' It's the only medicine on earth."

AFTER MANY YEARS

By William Jones

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

The family always had decided things for Penelope Bushnell. In the first place there was only one of her against innumerable quantities of family, and in more ways than one might often makes right.

When she was a young girl Penelope was round faced, apple cheeked and of the dumpling variety, and everybody in town then spoke of her as a pretty young woman. She looked the type to amble on through life with only the usual, ordinary things happening to her, but fate got mixed, for the young man to whom she had became engaged as a matter of course, after going with him through high school, was drowned one sunny June morning when he and the "crowd" were in swimming under the railroad bridge up the river.

Penelope went around after Luke's death as heartbroken and tragic as an apple cheeked girl could be, but secretly she was scandalized to find how soon she began to take an interest in fall fashions and what her mother was going to have for dessert. It did not seem decent somehow when her life had been blighted at its very start. In reality it had merely been fancy which had made Luke and her think they were each other's fates. A very sweet, girlish affection she had for him, but love was undreamed of by Penelope. It took Ford Drummond to teach her that, and the family opposed Ford from the very first.

The Drummonds had come to town only a few years before and calmly overrode so many of the current prejudices that people said they were odd and disapproved of them. As to Ford Drummond, he would not settle down to work.

Nevertheless, he easily was the most attractive young man in town. Penelope's family were very set in their ideas, and one among them was that every man should earn his own living and stand on his own feet, instead of living on his father as Ford Drummond did. He made a few essays in business, but always quit in a short time, saying he did not like what he was doing.

"He's shiftless and lazy," Penelope's father said violently soon after Ford Drummond began dropping in to see Penelope frequently. "I'm not going to have a daughter of mine throw herself away on a good looking scramp like him. I'm going to save you from making a goose of yourself, Penelope. When you get married you pick out some steady man who isn't afraid to work and who can take care of you."

At first Penelope plucked up enough courage to argue back, spurred on by the strange new happiness which was flooding her very soul, and then her joy became streaked with misery. But even she could see that Ford had no future before him.

"I wish I could believe in you," she told him piteously. "You did not keep your word to me that you would stick it out in the abstract office. It's been the same with everything you've tried for two years. Maybe father's right."

He had looked at her bitterly and then softened. "I guess I'm no good, Pen," he said. "I can't seem to fit in. Things don't appeal to me. But, somehow, I feel I'll do things when the right chance comes along."

Ford had gone away then and Penelope had cried herself sick helplessly. She loved him even though she could not approve of him and his constant failure hurt. He drifted out of the town's memory in time.

Penelope never went with any one else and in a few years was one of the accepted, permanent spinsters of the place. It did not seem possible she ever had been connected with romance or tragedy. She was over forty when Ford Drummond came back to town and registered at the best hotel. The local editor, being new, did not remember the name as that of a former resident, and judging merely by the stranger's clothes and general air, noted that "Mr. Ford Drummond, a prosperous citizen of Nevada, is stopping at the Park House." Penelope held the paper stiffly for a long while after she had read the item, resurrecting with painful labor the past. When she and Ford met at a social shortly afterward they regarded each other with a kind of wonder, not at their changed physical aspects, but at their mutual consciousness of a living past in which they had cared for one another. Both of them were strangely destitute of words that night, but the next evening Ford Drummond came down the street under the maples toward her home, and she knew his step before she saw him. How many times, years ago, had she sat like this in the dusk waiting for him! They sat long in the shadow of the vines talking as people do when they are on the downward slope. He told all that had come to him, slipping back through the years till he paused at the boy she had known, remembering.

"You see, I was right after all," he said. "I wasn't built for petty merchanting or dry clerical work. I didn't care what became of me when you went back on me, Pen, at first. Then I got angry to think you didn't believe in me and I resolved to succeed. The minute I hit that mining region it was like a new world and I struck my gait. I made good—so good that I was too busy for years to think of anything in the past. Then when I did I concluded you had, of course, married some one else. And then of late I wanted to see you so bad that I came back anyhow. Will you go back West with me?"

Penelope Bushnell was crying and somehow the tears made her face seem younger. "How can you want me," she asked, "when I didn't have any faith in you then?"

"There wasn't anything to have faith in then," the man told her gravely. "I'd never amounted to a row of pins if you hadn't cast me out and hurt my pride. You've made me what I am and I've never cared for anyone else, Pen. We're going to grow old soon and it seems to me the rest of our days might be happy. Will you marry me?"

When Ford Drummond left town shortly for home he took his wife with him.

World's Deepest Hole.

The deepest hole in the world, up to date, is the boring begun ten years ago at Cunchow, Silesia, with the object of attaining a depth of 2500 metres, and which has now reached a depth of 2240 metres (7349 feet). The bore is 44 centimetres in diameter at the top, and diminishes progressively to 5 centimetres. Measurements of temperature have been made regularly. At 2220 meters the temperature is 83.4 degrees C. (182 degrees F.). This gives a "geothermic degree" (amount of descent corresponding to a rise of temperature of 1 degree C.) of 31.8 metres. The change of temperature does not proceed uniformly. In fact an interesting "temperature inversion" occurs between the depths of 640 and 730 metres, where the temperature actually falls, with descent, about 2 degrees.

Giants Among Insects.

While the study of entomology (science of insects) will lead one to observe many minute and microscopical objects, all insects are not small. In size the Hercules beetle is probably one of the largest insects in existence, being about seven inches long, including his snout. He is a native of the West Indies, where he must look a most formidable foe to the insect world, though his prominent proboscis seems to be used chiefly to "lock horns" with the male adversaries of his own order only. Among insects are found many instances of structures present in males and wanting in the female of the same species. Many of them have enlarged jaws, some with horns, and some antler-like projections with which to combat their foe, and probably many a desperate battle has been fought in insect life that would be worthy of record by some Homeric bard.

Nothing Like Politeness.

It is much easier to be polite and neighbourly than to fly into a passion when things do not suit you. Take this note as an instance, addressed by a lady to a neighbour next door—"Dear Madam—Your children, who are numerous, and appear to be disorderly, no doubt deserve the frequent floggings you give them; but, as my nerves are weak, I write this to ask if you can't do something to deaden the sound!"

It is doubtful if old Diogenes would make out any better with a modern searchlight than he did with his lantern.

ASQUITH INTERVENES

Premier Requests Another Meeting to Avert Mine Strike.

British Cabinet Holds Long Sessions to Consider Menacing Situation in the Collieries and Conflicting Parties Are Asked to Confer With the Cabinet on Thursday—A National Calamity.

London, Feb. 21.—The Government last night intervened in the coal dispute which threatens to cause a stoppage of work in the mines throughout the United Kingdom, involving not less than 800,000 miners. After the subject had been discussed at a Cabinet meeting, Premier Asquith addressed a letter to the representatives of the coal owners and miners, requesting them to meet him and some of his colleagues at the Foreign Office on Thursday next in order to endeavor to arrange a basis of settlement. He added that the industrial council had advised the convening of such a meeting.

The Premier states that the Government hoped that a means would be found, by direct negotiation between the parties concerned, to avert the disaster of a national stoppage, but the prospects that that would be achieved before the miners' notices of cessation of work expired on March 1, were so small that the Government felt compelled to intervene.

"There is no need for me to enlarge upon the very serious consequences, both to the industries of the country and to all classes of coal consumers, which would inevitably follow an extensive stoppage of the coal trade," adds the Premier.

"If prolonged, it would involve a general stoppage of industry and His Majesty's Government feel that they could not allow such a calamity to ensue without making every endeavor to aid in preventing it."

As a result of the intervention of the Government, the situation is a trifle hopeful, although the prospect is none too promising. Premier Asquith's action followed upon complete failure of the negotiations conducted by the English conciliation board, which has been sitting in Westminster for several days. These negotiations reached the state, where the owners agreed to the principle of a minimum wage, but upon conditions which the miners declined to accept.

On announcement of this failure, the Cabinet held a second prolonged council, with the result that the Premier had invited the disputants to confer with the Ministers. Hopes are now centered upon the proved ability of Sir George R. Askwith, the board of trade representative, in arranging labor difficulties. Both sides are in an angry mood, under the belief that the dispute must now be fought out once for all.

Didn't Reach Agreement.

London, Feb. 21.—The conference between the coal mine owners and the men's representatives, which has been in session in London for two days, broke up last evening without any agreement being reached. This perhaps is partially attributable to the fact that the International Miners will meet to-day, and the men are waiting to see if their hands will not be strengthened by the decisions reached by that organization.

Negotiations have been commenced between the Board of Trade and both sides in the dispute. Arbitration is strongly urged.

C.P.R. Made Proposal.

Montreal, Feb. 21.—It is generally understood here that the proposed new fast line service from Halifax to Great Britain comes from the C.P.R. alone rather than from the three big railways, as mentioned in the morning despatches from Ottawa.

The C.P.R. thinks that its proposition will solve the naval problem of the Government, and money intended for the Canadian navy to be diverted in way of a subsidy to the maintenance of such service. The C.P.R. will build three 24-knot boats and put them on from Halifax to a British port all the year round, making the trip in four and a half day, and they will also be built so that the change ito armed cruisers in time of war will be quite easy.

Horseman Seriously Hurt.

St. Catharines, Feb. 21.—A series of races between local horses on the new canal yesterday afternoon were attended by an accident to Jos. Quinn, widely known as a horseman throughout Canada. Quinn was performing the duties of a course judge when he drove in front of a horse being driven by George Houtby of Port Dalhousie. His sleigh was overturned and, in falling, he received a severe wound on the back of his head, which rendered him senseless for several hours, his life for a while being despaired of. He was finally removed to his home, where he is still in a critical condition, but will probably recover.

Supreme Court Decisions.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—The midwinter term of the Supreme Court of Canada opened yesterday morning. Judgment was delivered in the following cases: St. Stephen's Parish vs. St. Edward's Parish, Montreal, an action over ownership of property, appeal dismissed, Idington and Duff, J.J., dissenting.

McKillop vs. Alexander, appeal dismissed with costs.

King vs. Cotton, appeal allowed in part. Cross appeal dismissed.

Shawinigan Hydro Electric vs. Shawinigan et al, appeal dismissed.

Liverpool, Feb. 21.—The official receiver of wrecks has had no request to detain the nine survivors of the ship Erne, who were picked up at sea by a Liverpool-bound steamer.

It was reported that the South American line to which the Erne belonged, had asked for their detention, pending enquiry into the conduct of the captain, who was said to have taken the only lifeboat and deserted the ship with his wife, the mate and a passenger.

PILLORIES MR. ROWELL

French Member Discusses His Attitude on Bilingualism.

Napoleon Champagne Describes the Vacillation of the Opposition Leader With Regard to School Question—Z. Magean Says Sudden Interest In North Means Guilty Conscience on the Part of the Government.

Toronto, Feb. 21.—New Ontario, its progress and development, was a subject that provided some interesting discussion in the Legislature yesterday. T. R. Atkinson of North Norfolk, in a rather uneventful speech, blazed the way for the French-Canadian members and after that there wasn't a dull moment. Bilingual schools were under the hammer and the discussion extended to nearly every public policy of the Government.

Z. Magean, Sturgeon Falls, is a young French-Canadian member, who bids fair to be an excellent speaker. He is enthusiastic and knows conditions in New Ontario just as they are. Speaking of a Conservative hotelkeeper who lost his license and got it restored again on two occasions when elections were coming on, Mr. Magean said he had no doubt that the Provincial Treasurer knew nothing about it. "I am of the opinion that somebody benefited by these occurrences previous to the elections. I wouldn't say who it might be, but I have my thoughts in French, although I don't express them." (Laughter.)

He maintained that the very fact of the Government spending $5,000,000 at one throw on New Ontario showed that the north had been neglected for the past seven years.

While not complaining of the money spent on education, Mr. Mazean stated that the amount of money spent during the past few years on Toronto University was more than all the expenditure for bridges and roads through New Ontario.

Napoleon Champagne, Ottawa East, defended the Government.

"Let us see," said he. "The Conservative party has a majority of 60. At four seats a year it will be 15 years before the leader of the Opposition can sit on this side of the House. Before that time he will either have thrown up the job in disgust or he will have been fired out by his party." (Laughter.)

He paid a compliment to Mr. Rowell for his pre-election statement that the French people should not be deprived of the use of their mother tongue. Mr. Champagne assumed that the Opposition leader was referring to schools in this regard, for "the French mothers will take care of that in their homes. They won't need politicians there."

After the publication of Mr. Rowell's campaign address referring to bilingual schools, The Ottawa Free Press hailed the new leader as a Moses. The Free Press is a Liberal paper and it can call Mr. Rowell a Moses one day and a Judas Iscariot the next." Mr. Champagne warmed up in his recital of N. W. Rowell's vacillating policy on this bilingual school question.

"At that time," he continued, "if the law was against you, you were willing to break the law, if the law should be amended you were willing to trim it to suit your purpose—you were willing to give fair play to the people to whom you were talking.

"To-day it is quite different. To-day you stand up and say to the Attorney-General, who has said that bilingual schools are illegal — observe the law. Doubling and wheeling may be alright for the rank and file, it might do for the satellites, but is unbecoming for a pole star, the general of the great Liberal party."

"There is nothing so cheerful around home as trees," said T. R. Atkinson (North Norfolk) in resuming the long-drawn out address in reply to the speech from the throne. He urged reforestration, not only to provide lots of timber land, but also to beautify the country.

It seems to me that the Government's policy in North Ontario for the past few years has been one of cut and slash," said he. "That's a nice place for a settler to try and locate and find a home." He recommended that every tree or sapling under 10 inches in diameter should be protected by the Government and used for reforestration. He urged the appointment of an independent man to administer the $5,000,000 loan for the development of New Ontario.

In reply, R. A. Norman said the speech from the throne was one of the most momentous speeches of modern times.

Peterboro's Postmaster Dismissed.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—An order-in-council was passed yesterday dismissing A. H. Stratton of Peterboro from the position of postmaster of that town. Mr. Stratton, who has occupied the position since 1908, is a brother of Hon. J. R. Stratton, former M.P. for West Peterboro. Offensive partisanship is given as the reason for the dismissal.

The same order-in-council contains notice of the appointment of James Edgar, a well-known wholesale grocer, of Peterboro, to the position vacated.

Shot While Fondling Baby.

New York, Feb. 21.—Mrs. Rose Silverman was shot and mortally wounded yesterday afternoon by Benjamin Fried, an unwelcome admirer, who afterwards turned his weapon upon himself. The shooting occurred in Mrs. Silverman's apartments, in a fashionable uptown apartment house, while she was fondling her baby in her arms. The child was unhurt.

Bank Merger Rumors.

Montreal, Feb. 21.—The rumors of the amalgamation of the Bank of Montreal and another are again rife. While the negotiations are said to be on with the Royal, to-day rumor has it that the Union; Quebec and Montreal banks will join forces. So far there seems to be little to any of the rumors.

SIMPLY A JOKE.

"Bomb Resolution" Referred to Firecrackers in Hall.

Indianapolis, Feb. 21.—Fire-crackers in the hall, not dynamite under non-union "jobs" were referred to in a resolution submitted to the conference of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers at Rochester, N.Y., in September, 1910, according to a statement by Frank M. Ryan, president of the association, yesterday. Ryan had denied the authenticity of the resolution, the original copy which the federal officials investigating the dynamiting conspiracy assert they have, but yesterday he recalled, he said, that the measure proposing that "no more bombs or explosives of any kind be exploded while this convention is in session," was introduced.

"It was just a joke," said Ryan, "and it came about because P. J. Morin of St. Louis had put bunches of fire-crackers under the chairs of the delegates and set them off. The explosives startled all of us. The resolution went to the resolutions committee and never was reported out. I suppose John McNamara kept it. We did not discuss it because we knew nothing of the dynamiting plot."

The document came into the hands of the Government with other records of the iron workers' association in raids on its offices.

Twenty-five explosions destroyed or damaged property of employers of non-union iron and steel workers in the year preceding the convention, and according to Ortie McManigal, the confessed dynamiter, he was kept particularly busy just before the national meeting.

After amputating his legs and arms the doctors at Montreal were unable to save Hormisdas Gervais, who was frozen to the ice for 24 hours on the St. Lawrence on Feb. 11. His companion says the two had been drinking, and on their way home the horse ran away, Gervais being thrown out and stunned.

Troops For Churchill.

London, Feb. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—In the Commons yesterday Col. Seeley, in reply to a question, said the additional cost of moving troops in connection with Hon. Winston Churchill's visit to Belfast was $13,500, "but," he said, "the right of free speech must be safeguarded at any cost."

W. Moore, M.P., Armagh—"There was no attack on free speech; it was the offensive choice of the hall." (Cheers.)

Col. Seeley—"If the hon. member went to Dublin to make a speech we would take the same measure to preserve his rights."

"Some uneasiness is caused by today's development into influenza of the cold which Lord Strathcona has had for some days.

"Sir Thomas Barlow is in attendance. The high commissioner's splendid constitution will, it is hoped, assert itself."

To Extend Brantford Library.

Brantford, Feb. 21.—The Brantford Public Library, to which Andrew Carnegie contributed $30,000 towards construction a few years ago, is already congested with an overflow of books, and the board has decided that a $10,000 extension is necessary,

FLIES OVER LAKE ERIE

Aviator Sandt Falls on Return Trip, However.

Daring Young American Successfully Negotiates First Flight Across Inland Seas, But When Ten Miles From Completing Return Journey He Comes to Grief—Unconscious Under Aeroplane.

Erie, Pa., Feb. 21.—Earl Sandt, aged 23, an aviator of this city, made a flight from Erie to Port Rowan, Canada, over frozen Lake Erie late yesterday. At 5.50 p.m., he started from the Canadian shore for this place, but up to a late hour last night had not arrived. Searching parties started to cross the lake.

It was reported later that Aviator Sandt had been found at Northeast, near here, on the American shore of Lake Erie, and that he is badly injured.

Sandt is claimed to be the first aviator to cross the inland seas. The trip was made in 34 minutes. It was 2.41 by the aviator's watch when he took to the air here and at 4.30 he telephoned friends from Port Rowan, Canada, that he had landed at 3.15.

In coming to the ground Sandt broke a rib of his Curtiss biplane, but the injury was not serious. Shortly before six o'clock a telephone message from the Canadian shore announced that Sandt had departed for the American shore at 5.50. When over an hour passed and the aviator failed to appear, the huge crowd which had assembled became uneasy. Relatives and friends of Sandt communicated with the Canadian side and verified the report that he had started the return flight.

Later in the night Sandt was definitely heard from. While high in the air, and twenty miles east of his course, the engine of his biplane stopped, he said. For a time he glided toward the ice-covered lake, but suddenly the machine turned turtle and he was buried unconscious in the wreckage. How long he remained in this condition, Sandt does not know. When he recovered he was literally saturated with blood from many cuts. Aided by a pocket compass Sandt walked ten miles to the American shore, landing at Northeast at ten o'clock last night. He was found staggering along the shore by boys who were skating, and later carried to an hotel and word telephoned to this city.

He was brought here from Northeast at midnight in a special car. Thousands of persons, a brass band and loud blasts from shop whistles greeted him.

Hebert Decision Thursday.

Montreal, Feb. 21.—Judge Charbonneau delivered an official declaration yesterday morning in regard to the date on which he would hand out his finding in the Hebert case. He said it would be Thursday.

He took rather an amusing method of breaking the news to the reporters. A group of them was standing outside his room speculating as to when the long-expected judgment would be given, when the door suddenly opened and the judge glared out. Some of the scribes sauntered off, while others stood their ground under his gaze.

"Come inside," he said, in a gruff voice.

The reporters entered the judge's room, expecting to receive a reprimand for bothering him, as his lordship has already told one or two of the scribes that their pestering was driving him to the lunatic asylum.

However, the judge suddenly burst out laughing, and said that he was able to announce that he would deliver his finding on Thursday.

C. C. James Looks Over Job.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—C. C. James, who has been appointed by the Government to work out a system of agricultural co-operation between the provinces and the Dominion, was in Ottawa yesterday, and had a conference with Hon. Martin Burrell, when they mapped out the work.

Mr. James will commence his duties with the Dominion Government on April 1.

Mr. Burrell is planning a reorganization of the experimental farms of the Dominion, with a view to making them more practical and useful. At present many of the farms are not up to a very high standard. It is understood that in the supplementary estimates will be placed a considerable sum for improvements to buildings on experimental farms.

Guards and Prisoners Fight.

Mexico City, Feb. 21.—Twenty-seven prisoners and prison guards were killed Monday at Puebla, in the State of Puebla, in a fight which followed an attempt by the prisoners to escape from jail, according to a special despatch received by The Mexican Herald from that city. Twenty of the men succeeded in escaping.

A force of cavalry, which was hurriedly despatched to the assistance of the prison guards, had a severe fight with the escaping prisoners.

Won't Discuss New Line.

Montreal, Feb. 21.—"I have nothing to say at present," was the remark of Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, when asked re the twenty-four knot vessels of which reference was made in despatches from Ottawa.

None of the other officials of the G.T.R., C.P.R., or the C.N.R. would talk, nor the Allans. That there is considerable in it is shown by their attitude towards questions.

Teller Perished In Hills.

Fernie, B.C., Feb. 21.—P. Thompson, teller in the Bank of Hamilton here and recently transferred from Winnipeg, perished alone in the hills across the river Monday. His body was found in the afternoon above Ferry Falls.

He started for a tramp at 10 o'clock Sunday, taking with him a camera and snowshoes.

Australasia Getting the Men.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—"I am the most abused man in Canada; but let them abuse; I am satisfied to be judge on my record."

This was the greeting yesterday of Arthur Hawkes, special commissioner of the Immigration Department, who arrived in Ottawa yesterday morning after several weeks' visit to the old country investigating the situation as regards immigration to Canada in the British Isles. Mr. Hawkes will make his report to the Government in two weeks.

Australia or Australasia, he said, is becoming a keen competitor of this country in attracting settlers from the British Isles, according to Mr. Hawkes. Last year 9,000 people left Scotland for Australasia, three times as many as ever before, and they secured 60,000 from the British Isles, twice as many as ever before.

"The day I arrived at my home town, Maidstone, a party of forty left for Australasia," said the commissioner.

Railway Settles Taxes.

Brantford, Feb. 21.—The Brantford Street Railway Co. officials here yesterday gave security to the city tax officials for several thousand dollars taxes outstanding, and, as a result, the sale of all the movable chattels of the company, which was to have been conducted under the bailiff's auspices on Saturday, was cancelled.

Seizure had been made of the office furniture, copper wire, rails and other unused material, at the instance of Tax Collector Benedict.

It is stated that President Verner is now negotiating a deal in New York, whereby the local street railway and the radial lines will be greatly improved.

Legal action to revoke franchise rights has been commenced by the city, but as yet service of writ has not been made.

Nesbitt to Argue Case.

Ottawa, Feb. 21.—What the stated case to the Privy Council on the marriage question shall be is still under consideration by the Government.

It is understood that Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., has been asked to argue the case but has deferred acceptance of the brief until the precise terms of the reference have been determined. Some doubt is expressed by those who hold that the Lancaster bill is ultra vires of the Dominion Parliament that the reference may be framed in such a form that the judicial committee of the Privy Council will not have the full facts of the case before them when the case comes up for adjudication.

Hamilton Against It.

Hamilton, Feb. 21.—Hamilton City Council will protest against the compulsory vaccination bill, which is causing such a furore of excitement throughout the city here.

The controllers unanimously agreed to wait upon the Legislature when the bill comes up. They want vaccination authorized only when the parents are willing.

Mayor Lees declared he would rather pay the $25 penalty than issue a proclamation ordering compulsory vaccination.

Shot Father and Self.

Grand Forks, Nd., Feb. 21.—Rex Wallace, of St. Paul, Monday night shot and killed his father, H. W. Wallace, a prominent banker, at Drayton, Nd., seriously wounded his brother-in-law and then killed himself. The tragedy occurred in the bank of the elder Wallace.

It is alleged that young Wallace had written a letter some weeks ago to his father, threatening to kill him unless he fulfilled a promise to give him $25,000.

CAT GOES TO THE THEATRE.

Wearing a Crown and Ermine Robe Because It Is a Royal Cat.

NEW YORK, Feb. 19.—A cat wearing a small crown and an ermine robe furnished a between-the-act diversion at the Republic Theatre last night. The cat was brought to the theatre by Mrs. A. Arthur Alfred Brooks, president of the Gotham Club. It sat on the rail of a downstairs box and ate Japanese rice cakes.

Mrs. Brooks explained the crown and robe by saying:

"This is King Edward VIII. He came from Windsor Castle, England, in the reign of King Edward VII. He is a royal Persian cat. It was his first experience at the theatre, and I can say he acted like a little angel."

Mrs. Brooks was followed from the theatre to her home, the Hotel St. James, by a small crowd of the curious.

GIRL COULD NOT SLEEP

Miss Van Steenburg, a Brooklyn, girl lately found herself unable to sleep. Of course she was worried because there is nothing that will more quickly and certainly wreck health than to be unable to rest at night.

Now sleeplessness is just a symptom of failing health, and is caused by unequal circulation of the blood. Someone evidently gave her some good advice for she says in a recent letter, "I had been all run down and tired out for some time and got so I could not sleep nights. I had heard so much about Vinol that I tried it and found it highly satisfactory.

It has restored my strength, made me able to sleep and eat well, and I am now quite well again.

This delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil (Vinol) does wonders in building up weak, nervous, sickly people of all ages. It makes the blood rich and pure, corrects the faulty circulation and restores appetite. We promise to give back the money in case Vinol does not please you.—Red Cross Drug Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

BAPTIST JUNIORS HAD FINE ENTERTAINMENT

EXTENSIVE AND PLEASING PROGRAM CLEVERLY RENDERED LAST NIGHT.

Better than the best was the entertainment put on by the Baptist Juniors in their Sunday School rooms last evening. Rev. C. G. Smith, who occupied the chair, must have felt elated after hearing the splendidly rendered selections by these young members of his congregation. Every number on the programme was fine. The musical part alone would have made an enjoyable evening, but taken with the recitations made an ideal programme, and was voted by all a most excellent concert. After a Bible reading and prayer by the pastor, there were twelve recitations, interspersed with musical numbers. Miss Adeline Rose gave two solos—"God is Love," and "A Song of Life"; Miss Gladys Bongard, two piano solos; Mrs. Decton, two piano solos; Miss Vera Morton sang "Take Me Back to Babyland," and "If Every Star is an Angel"; Miss Elsie Adams sang "Drifting." Miss Neva Deeton gave a solo with violin obligato by her brother Lorne. There was also a duet by Miss Neva and Master Lorne Deeton. Little Miss Dorothy Smith gave a temperance recitation which was composed by a member of the congregation, and did credit to the composer and reciter. This was not in the contest, but was much appreciated by the audience.

The following were the recitations and contestants: 'When I'm a Man'—Louis McHale; 'Rum and Revenue' Cecil Kiser; 'The Price of a License' Neva Deeton; 'A Boy on Prohibition'—Lorne Cook;, this was considered by the five judges to deserve the medal; 'Ten Reasons for Signing the Pledge'—Ida Ellis; 'The Fence or the Ambulance'—Ethel Prest; 'The Goose Tale'; Edna Barlow; 'The Watcher on the Tower'—Edna Case; 'Advice Gratis'—Arthur Blackburn; 'Where the Cross Roads Meet'—Jennie Butler; 'Mother Knows'—Irene Clark; 'The Saloon Must Go'—Florence Barlow. The judges were Misses Craig and Vincent; Messrs. J. R. Harvey, of the High School, R. J. R. Shortill of the D. & D. Institute and W. Harvey.

Miss Nettie Ketcheson, a 'Y' girl presented the silver medal and a silver maple leaf pin to each contestant.

Mrs. Alex Ray, 'Y' Vice-President, invited those that would like to hear a good programme on Woman Suffrage, to come to her home next Tuesday, where the 'Y' parlor meeting for February is to be held. She also gave the names of those who will compete for the gold medal as follows: Miss Ethel Allen, John Kaitting Arthur Ferguson, Helen Archibald Winston Wensley, Harold Cornell Milton Kerr and Lorne Cook. This contest will be held in about four weeks. She closed her remarks by thanking the church trustees, the judges and all who helped to make this programme such a complete success.

JEALOUS LOVER'S CRIME

PROHIBITION AS VIEWED BY ALD ACKERILL

He Condemns it for Many Reasons, and Holds it Contrary to Liberty

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—It's weak, it's silly, it's unreasonable, it's womanish and it's contrary to the law of freedom and liberty held so sacred by the Anglo-Saxon race.

It's weak because it is no solution at all for the evils of the liquor traffic as conducted at the present day.

It's silly because it is taking the bull by the tail instead of the horns and men advocating it as a solution of the liquor traffic reason like a woman, and, as far as doing God's service, they are, like Saul of Tarsus kicking against the pricks.

It's unreaonsable because it can't be successfully reasoned out to a logical conclusion, because it can't be made applicable the world over, and any principle that can't is "no principle at all." Imagine prohibition in the torrid zone, where they grow millions of tons of grapes and where wine is their natural beverage. Imagine taking the lager beer from the German and Prussian nations, and the old bitter beer and ale made of pure hops and malt, the greatest and best and truest tonic ever given to mankind from the English—the beverage that has given them their backbone and bulldog courage and tenacity and stamina. Have we forgotten the prohibition wave that swept over England over a century ago, when a law was passed forbidding the manufacture of ale and beer. The English farmer at that time brewed his own ale and beer. The ale was for himself and family and guests, and after brewing the ale he added more water to the mesh and brewed beer for his hired help, and then he added more water and brewed the small beer for the children. Well, the people had to drink something, so they took to tea, and very soon they had to form societies to get the people to sign the pledge against tea, and those who joined this society were called the tee-totalers and in three or four years the medical profession said: "Open the breweries and let the people brew their ale and beer again, because for the want of it and on account of excessive tea drinking our people are becoming pale and anaemic, nervous, dyspeptic and insomnic. England's is a salt atmosphere and their natural beverage is ale and beer made from malt and hops only and not from various drugs as a substitute for the hope, such as bitter aloes and quassia chips, as too much of our beer and ale are made from. Bread and cheese and beer is food and drink for the English working man of the heartiest and best kind.

Now to consider the evils of the liquor traffic here in Ontario; also their cause and remedy. It is a law of nature that the more secretly anything is carried on the more evil connects itself therewith, for the Scriptures tell us that men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil; therefore, the saloon or bar hidden away behind the screen, with its ante rooms and back rooms removed from the public gaze and hearing are hotbeds of all kinds of vices and iniquities as well as drunkenness. Another evil is the licensing system. The saloon keeper has to pay a big license and, in order to make his business pay, has to resort to every means that his alert and business-like brain can concoct to encourage and compel men to drink and treat one another.

Another evil, and a very great one, is the impurity of the liquors and the adulteration, such, for instance as I have just instanced, viz., the drugs in the beer to substitute the hops, because they are cheaper, much cheaper; and the more liquor is adulterated in this way the more it affects the brain and even instances have been known where that deadly drug known as nux vomica, from which strychnine is produced, has been used in the manufacture of liquor. No wonder men who drink such stuff become crazy and violent, dangerous and criminal.

Now, what is the remedy for all these evils? Simply government control of the business. Let the Whitney Government take the business over, and let it run the saloon or salon. Let each saloon have plate glass windows and door and no ante rooms or back rooms, so that every man, woman and child passing by can at a glance look in and see everybody inside and all that is going on. Let each saloon have a bar, also numerous small tables to seat four each for men and women to sit down and talk over their affairs if they want to, let the bartender be a government official, with instructions to keep his place respectable. It would not matter to him whether he sold only one drink a day or one hundred; his orders would be to allow no drunkenness or misconduct on the premises and to discourage rather than encourage drinking, that is intemperate drinking. This and this only will make the saloon respectable and as it should be; all liquors would be pure and wholesome and good. There is no reason on earth why the saloon or salon can't be made and kept just as respectable as the ice cream parlor. The saloon is an absolute necessity and it is folly to try and abolish it, and when we consider the tremendous mental, as well as physical, strain mankind has to undergo in this battle of life I believe the regligious, conscientious and temperate use of alcoholic beverages is oil for the machinery, so to speak, and will conduce to the health and longevity and happiness of mankind when used properly and not abused. Do not all thinking men wonder ofttimes how many men who use liquor, even impure liquor sometimes to excess, have better health and live longer than many a total abstainer. I once heard that great preacher, the Rev. Joseph Wild, lecture on the lost ten tribes, and he showed the Anglo-Saxons to be the people spoken of in Holy Writ, and he told us the Scriptures said they were to be the greatest colonizers and also hard drinkers. There is certainly something wonderful in good liquor, and to take it away from mankind is folly of the worst kind. Is there not a danger, under local option and prohibition, of mankind becoming effeminate? I fear so. Straight laced communities always die out, like the Quakers and Shakers and others. Yes, good liquor is oil for the machinery and without it a community loses its hilarity and wit and humor, and becomes morbid and morose and degenerate both mentally and physically. Are not the Irish noted for their bright witty brains and their happy dispositions, as well as for their good health and rugged constitutions, and they certainly get away with a lot of good old mountain dew.

No, it is not the use, but the abuse, of good liquor that works evil, and any chrisian man who uses it religicusly and conscientiously will not become a drunkard, for God will give him control, as He does over all other appetites, for Christ said: "My grace is sufficient for you."

I blame the dissenting churches for a great deal of the intemperance of to-day and in the past because their teaching has been wrong. They take the child as soon as he is able to go to Sunday School, and ofttimes the parents begin earlier at home and teach the little boy that he must not "touch, taste or handle," and if he does either one of these three things he is committing a terrible sin, and so greatly is this magnified in the child's mind that the boy grows up with the very idea in his mind that if he either touches, tastes or handles liquor in any form he will commit an unpardonable sin, consequently when he becomes a big boy or a young man and gets out with the boys and is tempted to take a drink and does so, his mind at once becomes so filled with remorse and fear and despair at the enormity of what, to his mind, has always been a transgression or sin worse than breaking the ten commandments, that he is very apt, in his state of mind, to plunge headlong into dissipation, especially as he has been kept in a straight-jacket so long, and become reckless, and in the end despise such teaching and probably also his teachers. Yes, as I said before, what thinking, observing man has not noticed how the majority of our goody-goody, straight-laced people of both sexes who look upon liquor as a deadly viper to be utterly exterminated, grow wrinkles and grey hair, and have distracted, pinched and unhappy, prematurely old faces, the result of their indominable conceit and self will and determination to make everybody else conform to their way of thinking, etc. But, in conclusion, let me say, "Let us not try to ride liberty down," for in every town or city or community you must have all kinds of people; there must be room for the man of rather free habits, for the moderate or temperate man, as well as the straight-laced.

The straight-laced die out quicker than the temperate or even the riotous; they go to seed for want of fun and hilarity. The straight-laced must allow some freedom for the others. He usurps altogether too much when he says to the rest of his fellowmen, "and to his equals," that there must be no more drinking in saloons, or only as much drinking "as I choose to allow." He is not here to dictate or, to rule or to make the rule for life for you or for me. But he can make it for himself. And yet the cause of tempernace, of moderation is growing. "Let it grow." The cause is good and this country has, when the rights of all are considered, whether bond or free, christian or unbeliever, European or American, Jew or gentile, white, black, brown, yellow or red, done a great deal, all she can fairly be expected to do, when she has not increased her saloons within the last decade, although her population has increased enormously. This is the thing that shows a healthy public sentiment towards temperance in drinking. But to press the matter home in two ways—by growing in population without increasing the saloons and by reducing the number of saloons at the same time, is neither fair nor liberal to all the people. A straight-laced sect or community always dies out. Cities are made, business is made, wages are found, above all enterprise is generated in the mind and within the energies of the "even-minded" generous man. This is the teaching of history.

Let our country grow, do not increase the saloons, let the government run them and wipe out the man who breaks the law; but above all deal fairly with all sections of the community and respect personal liberty rather than destroy it. For liberty is in the end priceless and is the one essential of human progress and human happiness. Finally—public sentiment more than public regulation is the force that makes for the growing sobriety of our people to-day.

Yours truly,
D. H. ACKERILL, V.S.

SEALED TENDERS ADDRESSED TO THE undersigned, and endorsed "Tender for Dormitory Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.," will be received at this office until 4.00 p.m., on Wednesday March 6, 1912, for the construction of a Dormitory Royal Military College, Kingston, Ont.

Plans, specifications and form of contract can be seen and forms of tender obtained on application at the office of Messrs. Power & Son, Architects, Kingston, Ont., and at this Department.

Persons tendering are notified that tenders will not be considered unless made on the printed forms supplied, and signed with their actual signatures, stating their occupations and places of residence. In the case of firms, the actual signature, the nature of the occupation and place of residence of each member of the firm must be given.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank, payable to the order of the Honorable the Minister of Public Works, equal to ten per cent. (10 p.c.) of the amount of the tender, which will be forfeited if the person tendering decline to enter into a contract when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for. If the tender be not accepted the cheque will be returned.

The Department does not bind itself to accept the lowest or any tender.

By order,
R. C. DESROCHERS,
Secretary.

Stops Pain of Burns and Cuts

REALLY WONDERFUL HOW ZAM-BUK GIVES EASE.

This is the verdict of all who have tried Zam-Buk. The woman in the home knows best its value. A burn from the stove, from a flat iron, or a hot pan, is instantly soothed by Zam-Buk. When the little ones fall and cut or scratch themselves, Zam-Buk stops the pain and, incidentally, their crying. The best proof of this is the fact that children who have once had Zam-Buk applied come for it again.

For more serious burns, too, is is unequalled. Mr. John Johnston, of 734 South Marks steet, Fort William, a moulder in Copp's Foundry, says: "Some time ago I burned the top of my foot severely by dropping some molten iron from a ladle I was carrying. A large hole was burned through my shoe and into the top of my foot. I was taken home and Zam-Buk was applied to the burn directly. It was surprising what relief this balm afforded. The burn was so deep and so serious that it required careful attention, but Zam-Buk prevented other complications arising, and as it was daily applied, soothed the pains and allayed the inflammation. In the course of two weeks the hole burned in my foot had been well healed."

Mr. W. B. Gibson, of Belleville, writes: "We have tried Zam-Buk often on cuts and sores, and I think there is nothing that can equal it."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, piles, scalp sores, ringworm, inflamed patches, babies' eruptions and chapped places, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price.

MEN FOUGHT IN MID-AIR

Iron Workers Had Scrap While Seventy Feet Above Ground

TORONTO, Feb. 20.—A fight in mid-air.

No, this isn't any circus announcement, but what actually took place yesterday in Toronto.

There were just as many thrills in the fight as any circus announcement ever caused, but this was in deadly earnest.

Standing on a 6-inch plank, 60 feet or more above terra firma, Abraham Lissoff was at work on the roof of the new arena on Mutual Street. Below him there was nothing to save him if he made a misstep.

Charles Homer, another workman, was near Lissoff, and after a few words were spoken the thrilling fight commenced. Just in time to prevent himself from falling from the plank, Lisoff clasped his arms around an iron beam just above his head.

Then shrieks and cries were heard, and shortly afterwards Lissoff was helped down to the ground and it was found that he needed medical attention. He was taken to St. Michael's hospital. This morning with his head bandaged and one eye covered up, Lissoff told his story of what happened to The Telegram.

"We had no words or trouble before this, but suddenly Homer punched and kicked me. I was afraid to do anything, so clasped my hands over the beam above my head. I hung on and cried for help.

"My cries attracted others and Homer stopped. Then I was helped down. I wanted to be sure that I was doing things right, and just asked the man a few things when he hit me. I don't know any reason why he should have done this."

Homer was arrested later in the day by Detective Miller and charged with assault. In the police court this morning he appeared to answer the charge and was remanded for a few days while the police get witnesses.

RICHESON ENGAGED TO FIVE.

BOSTON, Mass., Feb. 20—While four young women were wearing diamond rings, which Clarence V. T. Richeson had given them to seal premises of marriage, he ordered a $200 solitaire for a fifth girl, whose identy is not revealed.

Shipment of the last engagement ring by a western firm, was stopped by news of Richeson's arrest. The list includes Avis W. Linnell of Hyannisport, Viola Edmunds of Brookline, Grace Howard of Georgetown, Mass., and Patsey Felts of Denver, Col.

Grace Howard of Georgetown, has not hitherto been mentioned. It was learned to-day that Richeson had given Miss Howard an engagement ring and taken it back.

Richeson patronized a jeweler in Liberty, Mo. He bought his first solitaire there in 1907, and used that and one or two others more than once. He was engaged to five girls when paster of Emmanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge.

PRINTERS' FORMES PIED.

Although the Printers' hockey team last evening at the Arena went down to defeat before the Jewellers' team, they were by no means disgraced or discouraged. They feel confident that when the return match is played on Friday night the temporarily lost laurels will be regained. The game last night was a good one, clean and at times swift. The Jewellers were victors by a score of 7 to 4. Mr. E. Whalen was referee and performed his duties in an impartial manner. The line-up was as follows:—

Printers—	Position.	Jewellers.
Dawe	Goal	McBride
Cookson	Point	Best
Riggs	Cover point	W. Wannacott
Thomas	Rover	Hamilton
Cronk	Centre	Bell
Mason	Left wing	A. Wannacott
Bateman	Right wing	Frost

Orillia defeated Peterborough one goal last night, and by seven goals on the round. The northerners will play Toronto Canoe Club in Toronto next Saturday and back in Orillia on Tuesday.

Preston goes to Midland for the O.H.A. intermediate final to-night.

THE RING.

BRITISH LIGHTWEIGHT WON.

NEW YORK, Feb 20.—Owen Moran, the English lightweight, earned a clear victory over Joe Bedell, of Brooklyn, last night in the main bout of ten rounds at the Carlyle A. C. The Briton weighed in at 133 pounds, the lightweight limit, while his opponent tipped the beam at 140 lbs., but despite the weight handicap Moran completely outclassed the Brooklynite.

The bout was a thriller from beginning to end, with Moran doing a lot of clever work, while Bedell, a rugged boxer, just bored in and took whatever came. In the early stages of the contest Moran was content to go along and hold his man safe by taking the honors of the rounds by small margins, but toward the end he cut loose and after dropping his man in the ninth and tenth rounds almost succeeded in gaining a knockout. Bedell while strong in the opening rounds, forced the work to Moran, and was able to make a good showing. He began with a left to the face, but Moran came back with two well-placed rights, both landing on the point of the chin. Again in the second Bedell showed up well by his body punching. After scoring heavily on the Briton in a clinch, he stuck a left jab to the face, with Moran getting in a hard right over the heart.

Moran had all the advantage of the third round, and made his first clean score. He jabbed Bedell all over the ring, and after tiring of the jabs crossed right to the body with great effect. Moran kept his ripping rights for the body, but at the close of the round Bedell made a fair showing by staggering Moran with a hard right to the heart.

Bedell did not land a telling blow in the fifth, being kept busy dodging left jabs and body smashes. Moran shot over a straight left jab, landing squarely on the nose, which caused the blood to flow from Bedell's nose. Another straight left to the mouth brought the blood from there also.

The Briton jabbed his way all through the seventh after almost closing the Brooklynite's left eye in the sixth. He kept up a steady assault on Bedell's face and it was full of blood and swollen at the end. The eighth, ninth and tenth were all easy for Moran. In the ninth he floored Bedell for the first time. A left hook to the jaw put Bedell down for the count of nine, the bell saving him from being counted out. During the rest his seconds worked hard over him, but when he came out for the final he was weak and unsteady on his feet. Another straight left floored him again for nine, but in gaining his feet he managed to last the round out.

INDOOR BASEBALL.

RED COATS BEAT IRON MEN.

At the Armories last night an indoor baseball match took place between the Fifteenth Regiment and Marsh & Henthorn teams. The attendance of spectators was meagre, owing to the fact that it was not known the game was to take place. Eight players on a side were played and the game was somewhat one-sided. In the second inning the red coats secured 8 runs, which gave them a decided lead. The final score was 27 to 16 in favor of the regimental team. Mr. Gorman was umpire and Mr. J. Quincey umpire on bases. The line-up of the teams was as follows:—

M. & H.—	15th Regt.—
Smith, ss.	Mills, c.
Brown, r.f.	Lloyd, 1b.
Connell, ss.	Moore, 3b.
Philp, 1b.	Ketcheson, 2b.

SIX WEEKS SHORT COURSE AT STIRLING

Fifty-Two Students Enrolled and Its Success was Largely Due to Instructor McIntosh

The first short course in agriculture which opened in the High School, Stirling, on Jan. 8th, has been a great success under the charge of the District Representative Mr. A. D. McIntosh. It is probably one of the largest classes of this kind ever held in the Province, there being fifty-two students enrolled and an average attendance of over thirty-five.

During the first four days of each week, Dairying, Stock Raising, Poultry Raising, Study of Weeds and Weed Seeds were taken up and discussed. On Friday afternoon the students were given practical training in public speaking, public reading and organization work. They organized themselves into a Farmers' Club on the first Friday, and each student was called upon for an impromptu address. They also organized a Fruit Growers' Association and again took up public speaking along fruit lines. Another Friday afternoon was spent in the perusal and discussion of the benefits to be derived from the many useful bulletins issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Among the special lectures given to this Agricultural class from outside instructors the following are the most worthy of mention:—Lecture on Bee keeping by Mr. Caverley, of Foxboro; Lecture on Breeding and Training of Horses by Mr. C. W. Gurney, of Paris; Lectures on the Draught Horse and the Dairy Cow by Mr. S. G. Carlisle, of Chesterville; and practical instruction in the wrapping and box packing of apples by Messrs. W. F. Kydd, of Simcoe, and Leslie Smith, of Wellington. In addition to these the last three days of the regular course were given over to practical Stock, Seed and Grain Judging under the expert instruction of Messrs. R. S. Stevenson, of Ancaster; F.R. Mallory, B.S.A., of Frankford; and Dr. H. G. Reed, of Georgetown.

The attendance at the Box Packing School was very large, being at one time fifty men actually packing apples. The final course in Stock, Seed and Grain Judging had an attendance of over two hundred the first day and over four hundred the last day.

The students all took a deep interest in their lectures and as a result of the co-operative spirit which grew up among them, they joined together and sent away to the Seed Growers' Association at Ottawa, for nearly two hundred and fifty bushels of Pedigreed Banner Oats. Many of the fields sowed with these oats will enter in the Field Crops Competition this year.

Not a little of the success of this class is due to the Instructor Mr. A. D. McIntosh, who is the right man in the right place. The Government, the County of Hastings, and the Village of Stirling, are to be congratulated on securing such an efficient teacher as Mr. McIntosh has proven himself to be, and the people of the surrounding country have shown their appreciation of his efforts by very largely attending all of the courses he has put on this winter.

Not least among the important branches which the students of this class undertook was the entire preparation for a closing banquet.

A SUGGESTION

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Dear Sir,—Would the public kindly in future refer any complaints on any matters affecting the Water Works or Engineer's Department direct to the Engineer? Going to a chairman of Public Works or an Alderman appears to me as if in many cases we were a lot of old women instead of men. The sooner there is some head or tail to the conduct of the public business the better. Whilst it is stated that our good public men are disgusted with conditions, yet our city is worth looking after. It is significant and typical that outside of one deputation no action has been taken by the city re securing the C. P. R. divisional point. Another town has had a half dozen interviews regarding this, and what are we doing? A public meeting and the formation of a strong citizens' league in which is some of the young blood lately come to our city might impart a little life into our system. Thirty years is a long sleep—though, like China, the awakening may yet be great. We will see.

City Engineer.

DECISION GIVEN IN THE FAMOUS HEBERT CASE

Judge Charbonneau Decides that the Ne Temere Decree Has no Civil Effect in the Province of Quebec—Also that the Heberts were Legally Married and their Children are Legitimate—Notice of Appeal Given

(Intelligencer Special.)

MONTREAL, Que., Feb. 22.—Justice Charbonneau to-day rendered judgment in the famous Hebert marriage case, the decision being of a most sweeping nature, to the effect that the Ne Temere decree is not law in Quebec.

Briefly, his findings are as follows:—

That the marriage of the Heberts on July 14th, 1908, by Rev. Mr. Timberlake is valid, and their children are legitimate;

That the annulment of their marriage by the Roman Catholic Church authorities in 1909 is null and void;

That Justice Laurendeau erred when, in March, 1911, he gave civil sanction to the decree of the Church annulling the marriage, and that the Ne Temere is of no force, as far as the civil law of Quebec with reference to marriage is concerned.

Judge Charbonneau's judgment in no way affects the attitude of the Catholic Church, being simply his interpretation of the civil law. As the case stands, the Heberts are legally married, but their marriage is not recognized by the Roman Catholic Church.

L. J. Lefebvre, acting for Hebert, will enter an appeal, but it is not known if the Church will appeal the judgment or not.

Judge Charbonneau's decision covered fifty-five pages.

PIERCED TUNNEL OF JUNGFRAL

Tunnel has a Length of 27,900 Feet at an Altitude of 13,000 Feet

GRINDELWALD, Switzerland, Feb. 21.—The great Jungfrau railway tunnel, which has a length of 27,900 feet, was pierced to-day as far as the new station of Jungfarujach, which is at an altitude of 13,000 feet above the sea level.. The railroad is to mount another 400 feet to the terminal station, which is to be connected with the summit of the Jungfrau by an elevator ascending 224 feet.

The total cost of constructing this railroad, which is the highest in Eur amounts to $2,600,000.

Wise men mail their love letters in a waste basket.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

During the past three days hundreds of citizens have been shown through the new building. It is the spontaneous expression of all that the building far exceeds their most sanguine expectations. Everyone seems to be in love with it. Hereafter, visitors who desire to be shown through will apply at the office counter, when one of the staff will pilot them around.

Tonight the Campaign teams dine together. The speaker of the evening will be Mr. F. S. Sheppard, of Toronto.

Friends will bear in mind that the Star Course is on Friday and Saturday nights. Course tickets acceptable Friday night. The entertainer will be William Battis of New York.

The plan is now open at the new building.

40 SOLDIERS KILLED.

San Domingan Troops Suffer Heavy Loss in Battle

CAPE HAYTIEN, Hayti, Feb. 21.—An official report has just been received of a severe fight between the revolutionary forces and the government troops which occurred near the San Domingan frontier last Wednesday. The result of the fighting is not recorded, but the government troops suffered a loss of 40 killed and a large number wounded.

A small San Domingan coasting vessel has been engaged for the conveyance of the mails from Monte Christi to Cape Haytien, owing to the interruption of communication by way of the frontier.

FREIGHT TRAINS COLLIDE HALF MILE IN THE TUNNEL

Four Men Killed in Accident—Fire Starts and Seventeen Cars are Burnt—Wrecking Parties Cannot Enter Tunnel for Tremendous Heat

NORTH ADAMS, Mass., Feb. 21.—Fierce fire and heavy explosions in the debris made it impossible for wrecking crews early to-day to reach the scene of the collision of a passenger train and a freight train on the Boston & Maine Railroad inside the Hoosac tunnel and the attempts to get to the burning cars were abandoned until the fire was burned out.

Already 17 freight cars have been destroyed. Railroad officials say that it would be impossible to reach the wreckage before Saturday or Sunday.

The dead are: Arthur L. Simonds, 50, of Williamstown, engineer of electric motor on passenger train; Henry Gregg, 52, assistant engineer; Luther Davis, 22, of Greenfield, who was learning to operate the electric engine, and Reuben Kemp, 31, of North Adams, flagman, of the freight train.

The cause of the collision has not been determined, according to a statement issued to-day by the railroad officials.

The accident occurred about 2,500 feet inside the western entrance to the tunnel. Because of the intense heat and the dense smoke from the burning wreckage it has been impossible for the wrecking crews to get within 400 feet of the wreck. Large rocks, loosened by the heat, have fallen on the tracks and have made the attempted trip inside the tunnel dangerous.

MANY OIL BURNING VESSELS ORDERED.

Liverpool Reports Contracts Made for Twenty-One Such Ships.

LONDON, Feb. 21.—One of the most remarkable developments in shipping in connection with the use of oil fuel for steamers is reported by the Liverpool Journal of Commerce. Contracts, it states, have been completed this week for the building of no fewer than twenty-one oil-tank steamships of large dimensions, which will be adapted for the consumption either of coal or oil. Several of these are for American owners.

All the contracts have been placed in England and nineteen of them have been apportioned as follows: Armstrong, Whitworth and Co., two of 15,000 and one of 9,000 tons capacity; Swan, Hunter and Wigham, Richardson, two of 15,000 and four of 9,000 tons capacity; Palmers' Shipbuilding and Iron Company, two of 15,000 and four of 9,000 tons capacity; William Doxford and Sons, two of 15,000 and two of 9,000 tons capacity.

"THE MYSTERY LADY" DEAD.

Had Been an Inmate of the Philadelphia Hospital Sixty-one Years.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 21.—Sarah Keen, known at the Philadelphia Hospital, where she has been an inmate for the last sixty-one years, as "the mystery lady," died to-day of old age and general debility. She was 87 years old.

The woman was taken to the institution sixty-one years ago, long before any of the present attaches of the hospital were born. She had smallpox and was cured, but in the curing she apparently lost her memory. The questions as to whom she was or where she came from she could not answer. Apparently her memory was gone and her mind a blank, and she was allowed to remain in the institution. That was in 1851,

The hospital authorities have started on what they consider a hopeless task to find some relative of the aged women, as it is understood she had some wealth.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20—Mrs. Rose Silverman was shot and mortally wounded this afternoon by Benjamin Fried, an unwelcome admirer, who afterwards turned his weapon upon himself. The shooting occurred in Mrs. Silverman's apartment house, while she was fondling her baby in her arms. The child was unhurt.

ENGLAND PREPARING FOR SIEGE

Government Intervention to Prevent Coal Strike Fails to Reassure the General Public

LONDON, February 21.—Although the Government finally moved yesterday in an effort to adjust the differance between the coal operators and their employees and avert the strike which begins automatically in eight days unless the two factions are brought together on a satisfactory basis London and all England are preparing for a state of siege in the event of a coal famine.

The big business concerns and shipping industries are all sending representatives to Belgium, France and America with orders to get as much coal as possible on short notice, while families are filling bins, and in some quarters, are even stocking bedrooms and living rooms with coal.

Householders in the suburbs are making making elaborate preparations. One woman has her house packed tight with fuel. Her parlor is stocked half-way to the ceiling with coke. Under the beds chopped wood is stored, and in one corner of the pantry is a large barrel of oil

WEST INDIES FOR RECIPROCITY.

OTTAWA, Feb. 21.—Representatives of the British West Indies are expected to come to Ottawa by invitation of the Canadian Government in the latter part of March to discuss the framing of a reciprocal trade agreement.

The recommendations made by the British Commission headed by Lord Balfour of Burleigh, which investigated the West Indian trade situation two years ago, will not necessarily be the basis of the coming negotiations. One of the suggestions of the British Commission was the granting of a substantial preference on Canadian flour. Reports from New York indicate a belief among New York experts that this preference is to become effective.

Hon. George Foster, Minister of Trade and Commerce, stated last evening that this was a wrong idea.

TIEN TSING, Feb. 21.—The new republic of China to-day came into its first conflict with a foreign power. The Japanese military authorities at oT-Japenese military authorities at To-army in Manchuria to withdraw.

Accompanying the ultimatum was a veiled threat to expel the Chinese by force of arms if they resisted the order. The Republican strength has been steadily growing in Manchuria, to the dissatisfaction of Japan and of Russia.

BLIZZARD SWEEPS WHOLE PROVINCE

Six Inches of Sleet and Snow—Wind Blew Fifty-Six Miles per Hour—Railway Service on North and South Lines Tied Up—Country Roads Have Been Rendered Impassible—Only One Stage Arrived Today

The worst storm for years struck Belleville and the vicinity yesterday about 8 a.m. and continued, so far as the wind is concerned, to-day. The gale, accompanied by snow and sleet, came at first from the northeast and continued all night, and early to-day the wind changed to the westward, but the snow, which had succeeded the sleet, ceased. In consequence the various avenues leading into the city were piled up in places indiscriminatly with snow, making in many cases traffic impossible. Inconsequence of this state of affairs business in the city to-day was virtually at a standstill. During last evening and the night the train service on the line of the Grand Trunk Railway was kept open only by the continuous travelling up and down of snow ploughs. Some of the trains, and especially those from the east, were late in arriving here. To-day the road was kept well open. The morning mail train from the west, due here at 11.05, was nearly on time, as was the fast train from the west.

On the Midland division, however, there was a different story to tell. That line is blocked to such an extent that all trains had to be cancelled after an effort had been made to open the road. The Peterborough train leaving here at 5.20 a.m. had two engines attached to it, but they proved to be of no service after a short distance of the route had been traversed. Near Corbyville the train became stalled in a snow drift and remained there. No train arrived from Madoc or departed from that village.

If railway lines were blocked to such an extent, what conditions must some of the country roads be in? The east and west roads were not so bad, but the north and south roads were completely filled up. Several stages usually arrive in the city during the forenoon, but up to noon today but one had put in an appearance, namely from Ameliasburg, which was about one hour behind time. The driver reported having encountered some bad places on the road. It was reported that the Ivanhoe stage, which left here shortly before 6 o'clock last evening, was unable to reach its destination.

At an early hour this morning two carryalls, laden with workmen employed at the Cement Works at Point Ann, made an effort to reach that place, but were unable to do so. They proceeded down the Kingston road to a point about a mile east of the city limits, and were then compelled to return to the city.

A party from the city last evening was upward of two hours driving into the city, and he was out in the country but a short distance. When the storm subsides it will take some time to get many of the roads in shape for travel.

One of the milkmen had an upset, as a result of which he lost thirty quarts of milk.

Walking is very heavy in many parts of the city, and in the outlying portions there are drifts of several feet in depth.

Reports from all over the province show that the storm was more severe in many places than it was here. At Toronto six inches of snow fell and it was driven by a gale which blew at fifty-six miles per hour.

To Destroy Caterpillars.

Caterpillars are one of the greatest sources of annoyance to gardeners, both professional and amateur, and the following is a capital method of getting rid of them. The method is simplicity itself. If your garden is infested by caterpillars just catch a few of them and feed them on some lettuce that has been soaking in water for four days. After they have eaten their fill of the lettuce turn the caterpillars loose again, and they will soon do the rest. Entomologists have recently discovered that the consumption of watered lettuce leaves induces a violent and fatal attack of cholera amongst caterpillars. One caterpillar so infected quickly spreads the disease amongst its fellows, and so quickly rid the garden or orchard of the pest that has so long been the despair of farmers and the like. A caterpillar suffering from the caterpillar cholera soon stops eating. It becomes weak, and has no inclination to move; usually crawling up the trunk of a tree, fence, wall, or other vertical surface, where it remains without motion. In a few hours there drops from its mouth a blackish liquid; the caterpillar becomes more and more flaccid, one leg after another loses its support, and finally the creature, reduced to a black skin, hangs dead, still holding on with one or two of its false feet. There is no danger of caterpillar cholera spreading to human beings or animals. It is a variety of disease quite distinct in its way, and only infectious as regards caterpillars.

Many a man is willing to pocket his pride if by so doing he can pocket your money.

And a man who falls in a good cause is better than two men who didn't tr.

An important contract for 25 locomotives has been placed by the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway with the Canadian Locomotive Company, Kingston, Ont., for delivery May, 1912.

These are of simple consolidation type with Schmidt super heaters, having cylinders 25 inches in diameter by 20 inches stroke, 63-inch driving wheels, and a boiler pressure of 180 pounds.

Their tractive power is to be 38,541 pounds, while their tenders will be of water bottom type with a capacity of 8,000 gallons of water and about 15 tons of coal.

DISTANCE GAS-LIGHTING

A Useful Appliance by Which Gas Jets May be Lit Up All Over a Warehouse by Merely Moving a Switch.

Users of gas for lighting purposes will be interested in the very useful appliance for lighting gas at a distance by means of an electric spark. The whole apparatus is compact and inexpensive, and may be used with existing fittings and be applied to any number of lights, and when once installed costs practically nothing for upkeep, as there is no permanent bypass-jet used. The apparatus consists of a small dry battery which generates a current of four to six volts, and measures about twelve by six by three inches, and is capable of serving any number of lights up to five hundred. To each burner is affixed a patent valve-tap which can be opened or shut as desired by means of a switch, and this can be fixed at any convenient place in the room, its connection with the battery and the valve-tap being made with ordinary bell-wire. The switch has two buttons, the first of which, on being pressed, opens the gas-way, and at the same time makes a very hot spark at the point of the burner which sets it alight; the second button when pressed shuts off the gas. To obviate the trouble and expense of using insulated wire in the wiring, the current from the battery is altered by means of a trembler, and is transformed to high tension by passing it through a transformer which is fixed to each valve-tap. The transformer is made of a core of laminated soft iron surrounded by a short coil of thick wire and a long coil of thin wire; the spark-leads are of stout sparking wires with steatite insulators, and the spark emitted is of the same strength as is used for firing explosive mixtures for internal combustion, and cannot miss fire. The whole apparatus is neat and compact, the valve and transformer, being quite small, do not show any apparent indication of their presence on the fittings.

MANY ARE ADVOCATING CANDY AS A FOOD

It is Declared to be a Great Muscle-Builder and Useful in Many Ailments—Good for Football Players—Experiments Show that Soldiers March Well on it, Suffering Little from Thirst or Hunger

The growing recognition of the food value of candy and its importance as a tonic and muscle builder is emphasized in the American Druggist and Pharmaceutical Record, which says:—

"The love of children for sweetmeats of all sorts is so universal and so well recognized that it is somewhat surprising that it is only within the last few years that the physiological significance of this desire for sweets has been realized. There is a growing school of physicians who believe that nature is not so dangerous a guide as has been supposed and to whom the existence of a well-nigh universal love of sweets is accepted as significant of some physiological need. In his admirable work on 'Food and Dietetics' Prof. Robert Hutchison of London points out that the carbohydrates are probably the chief source of muscular energy, and the sugars, on account of the ease and rapidity of their absorption, are better calculated to fill this want than any other of the carbohydrate group.

"Swiss guides and arctic explorers have long appreciated the value of such saccharine foods as chocolate, and extensive trials made in the German army manoeuvres over a period of five weeks proved that the soldiers who had been supplied with ten lumps of sugar daily in addition to their regular rations marched better and suffered less from hunger, thirst and fatigue than their fellows who were not so supplied.

"The surgeon under whose observation this experiment was carried out recommended a sugar ration of about two ounces daily. Numerous instances have been reported by Steinitzer, Pettenkofer, Ziemussen and others, in which the value of sugar as a muscle builder has been demonstrated. Prof. Hitchison himself suggests the use of sugar by football teams in the intervals of rest.

"Another strong argument for the value of sugar is its usefulness in abating the appetite for alcoholic stimulants. Conversely, it is a notable fact that persons addicted to the use of strong alcoholic stimulants rarely care for sweets. Prof. Hutchison points out that the cheapness of sugar must have a favorable influence on the health and growth of children, for it insures them an ample supply of the body fuel which they so much need, and which the dearness of fat is apt to make unobtainable. It must be borne in mind, however, that sugar, whether in the form of candy or otherwise, does not entirely take the place of fat, and while parents should be encouraged to give their children ample supplies of candy and jams, they should be cautioned against permitting the child to do without necessary fat, taken either in the form of butter, oil or meat or nut fat, for many children who cannot be induced take an adequate supply in other forms will readily take fat in the form of nuts.

"The value of sugar as a food was pointed out last March by two prominent contributors to the British Medical Journal—Dr. Goulston contributing to that journal for March 18, 1911, a paper on 'The Direct Beneficial Effects on the Digestion of Feeding Sugar in Certain Forms of Heart Disease,' while the issue of April 1, 1911, contains a note on 'The Therapeutic Uses of Sugar,' by Sir James Sawyer, who during ten years has used it with success in a variety of morbid conditions.

"In wasting disorders, in various forms of anemia, in adynamic varieties of rheumatism, and especially in the neurasthenic manifestations of neurotic persons, he has found the continued ingestion of cane sugar to be markedly beneficial, 'increasing weight and power and appearing to act not merely as a nutrient, but also as a tonic in the best sense of that word, the continued administration of which in debilitated and relaxed conditions of the body imparts strength and vigor without producing any certain excitement.' Sir James Sawyer prescribed about half a pound daily to be eaten at odd times through the day or night, except just before the meals.

"All that has been said about sugar as a tonic and muscle builder applies to all wholesome candies. The fact that some forms of candy contain considerable glucose as well as cane sugar does not militate against either their digestibility or their food value. It is true that glucose is cheaper than cane sugar, but, according to Professor Hutchison it is more readily digested, and 'in the cases of dyspeptics the superiority of glucose for such patients over ordinary cane sugar can not be too strongly insisted upon.' This is a point in relation to the consumption of candy in which glucose is present in which the public have been generally misled. Because glucose is cheap, the undiscerning public holds that it must be nasty."

ARAB JOAN OF ARC LEADS WARRIORS IN FIGHT

She Carries a Staff of Olive Wood and Exhorts Arabs and Curses Italians

LONDON, Feb. 21.—Alan Ostler, the special correspondent of the London Daily Express, with the Turkish army in Tripoli, sends a graphic account of the war goddess of the Sultan's African forces—an Arab Joan of Arc, leading a recent dash against the Italians. He says:

"When the Arabs attacked the Italian infantry in the trenches of Gargaresh, two days ago, at their head was a figure cloaked and hooded who carried no weapon but a staff of olive wood, whose voice rang high and shrill, whose face, beneath a hood, was deep brown, almost black, with glittering eyes, square jaw and heavy nose, with widely distended nostrils. A collar of panther teeth glistened against the broad, brown bosom.

"With a voice like a scream this figure alternately menaced and exhorted the Arabs or shrieked out terrible curses against the Italians.

"The desert men swept up to the earthworks and the leader, leaping into the trenches, stooped, plunged an arm elbow deep in blood and then stood with dripping right hand flung upwards, the statue of a goddess of African battle,—for it was a woman, a Soudanese she-warrior, who fought in the ranks with the men.

"Her voice maddened the Arabs as only the voice of their women-folk can. She was struck by a fragment of a shell in a charge, and went forward shaking her bleeding hand in the faces of the men, bidding them earn glorious wounds like hers.

"After the fight she was the heroine of the Arab camp, and strode among the tents, one hand bandaged and the other still brandishing the staff of olive wood. In this guise she went about chanting fiercely like another Deborah."

Few of the things that come to the man who waits are the things he has been waiting for.

ARE MICROBES IN YOUR SCALP

It Has Been Proved That Microbes Cause Baldness

Professor Unna of Hamburg, Germany, and Dr. Sabourand, the leading French dermatologist, discovered that a microbe causes baldness. Their theory has time and again been amply verified through research experiments carried on under the observation of eminent scientists. This microbe lodges in the Sebum, which is the natural hair oil, and when permitted to flourish it destroys the hair follicles and in time the pores entirely close, and the scalp gradually takes on a shiny appearence. When this happens there is no hope of the growth of hair being revived.

We have a remedy which will, we honestly believe, remove dandruff, exterminate the microbe, promote good circulation in the scalp and around the hair roots, tighten and revitalize the hair roots, and overcome baldness, so long as there is any life left in the hair roots.

We back up this statement with our own personal guarantee that this remedy called Rexall "93" Hair Tonic will be supplied free of all cost to the user if it fails to do as we state.

It will frequently help to restore gray and faded hair to its original color providing loss of color has been caused by disease; yet it is in no sense a dye. Rexall "93" Hair Tonic accomplishes these results by aiding in making every hair root, follicle, and pigment gland strong and active, and by stimulating a natural flow of coloring pigment throughout the hair cells.

We exact no obligations or promises "93" Hair Tonic a thorough trial and —we simply ask you to give Rexall if not satisfied tell us and we will refund the money you paid us for it. Two sizes, prices 50 cents and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain it in Belleville only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown.

HOUSTON FIRESWEPT.

Five Millions Will Be Damage In Great Conflagration.

Houston, Texas, Feb. 22.—Fire, which started about 1 a.m., in a one-storey building adjoining the Southern Pacific tracks, swept the populated section of the fifth ward of Houston early yesterday morning. Thousands of persons are homeless and the property loss will run from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000.

At least twenty-five squares in the residence district have been destroyed. There have been no casualties, so far as is known. The weather is cool and there is little suffering.

Most of the burned homes, however, are not of great value, as the fire burned through a large district that comprised cottages of workmen. Many manufacturing plants have been destroyed.

The heaviest single classification of loss is involved in cotton. The estimate of the loss on cotton compresses and the stored staple reaches two million dollars.

The total loss, which is in excess of $5,000,000, is uncovered by insurance. There is no lack of food or shelter for the homeless.

Among the mills, factories and plants either totally destroyed or seriously damaged by the fire are: McFadden Southern Compress & Warehouse Co., Dew Bros., syrup mill; Houston & Liggett Lumber Co., Magnolia Compress, Hudson's Pencil Factory, Houston Packing Co., E. H. Farrell lumber yards, Standard Compress, the Co-operative Manufacturing Co., and Acme Mills.

The burned area is at least a mile and a half long and at points a quarter of a mile wide. It was swept clean by the flames. Nothing was saved. One of the first of the more pretentious buildings attacked was the brick Star and Crescent Hotel. Inmates had been warned of the oncoming flames and all escaped without injury. The flames' roar gave warning of their coming. Hundreds of persons, giving no heed of their night attire, rushed from their homes as they heard the roar of the fire.

Women, carrying babes; women at whose skirts small children clung, gathered in homes of nearby neighbors for refuge, only to be driven out a few minutes later by the fire.

Homes were quickly provided for these people in other residential sections of the city. Clothing and food was prepared by a relief committee.

Risky to Marry Money.

Apropos of a beautiful young wife, worth $40,000,000, who had just divorced her penniless husband in order to marry again, Henry E. Dixey, the comedian, said at a dinner:

"The young man who marries for money has none too easy a time of it. His rich wife is likely to tire of him and throw him out in a few years, or else she is likely to limit his allowance to 25 or 50 cents a day.

"'I married money,' a man once said to me.

"'Wasn't there a woman attached to it?' I asked.

"'Yes, you bet there was,' he exploded. 'So much attached to it that she never parted with a penny.'"

The heart of a man is divided into many compartments, mostly isolated. Sometimes there is a door between two of them, or even three may be joined together, but usually each one is complete in itself.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —

JOHN MARCH (AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

The mare stepped slowly along the gravelled avenue in the shade of the great trees. The light grew fainter where the mass of boughs met and wove a thick network overhead. Here and there a moonbeam peeped through the sweep of dark, clustering foliage, and left a silvery dance upon the upper branches.

"Good heavens! What's the matter, man?" the Squire exclaimed, as Paul Farley gave an unexpected start.

"A figure slipped between the trees lower down, that's all; my nerves are unstrung."

"A well-directed sledge-hammer blow to one's face is not calculated to strengthen them. Was it a man or a woman?" he asked, flicking the mare with his whip.

"A woman."

"One of the servants, I'll wager; moonlight and sentiment, you understand? We shall come upon a hulking, bashful bumpkin next. I expect the sound of wheels disturbed them."

The remainder of the journey, however, was performed without further disquieting manifestations and disappearances into the surrounding shade. Not even a rat or a shrewmouse came to rustle the tangled undergrowth in the coppice.

CHAPTER V.

Judith's Proposal

Weyberne Hall was well lighted, and had a comfortable, pleasant air of activity about it, emanating from the stir and hurry of a large family and good cheer within. A deep-toned clock on a gable at the rear of the building struck ten as the dogcart came to a stand before the portico of the main entrance.

James threw open the heavy iron-clamped door, and revealed Sir Thomas standing in the centre of the hall, the light gleaming on the spacious breadth of his white waistcoat.

"Come up to my place to-morrow evening and have a pipe with me, Mr. Farley," the Squire said, detaining Paul's hand in a warm, friendly clasp. "I am sure my sister will make you very welcome."

"Thanks, I have an engagement to-morrow. Will the evening after suit you?" he asked, endeavoring to withdraw his hand.

"Just as well," the Squire affirmed, unwilling to loosen his hold on the long white fingers; "if you don't turn up, young man, I shall drive round in the morning with the idea that your wound is bothering you."

"No! Please don't let me be a source of further trouble to you, Mr. Fleming," he said earnestly. "As it is I am quite at a loss how to return so much sympathetic kindness."

The Squire laughed.

"I'll take it out in pleasure."

"In pleasure."

"Yes. Give me the pleasure of your society a night or two in each week, and I shall feel more than repaid for playing the good Samaritan. The bald fact is, I'm a lone sort of fellow, and I've taken a fancy to you."

"I'll come whenever I've a spare evening," he said, turning away from the wistful smile. "I sincerely trust, though, I shan't develop into an arrant nuisance at the Manor."

The Squire gave his hand a painful grip.

"You'll be safer having a quiet time up there with me in the old Dutch parlor. I know the amorous set of women who come down here. I—"

"Is that your voice, Fleming?" Sir Thomas asked, coming from under the porch as Paul alighted.

"Yes," he said, jumping down, the reins gathered into one hand. "I picked Mr. Farley up at East Weyberne. He's slightly damaged, as you will see when he gets into the light."

Sir Thomas took his secretary by the elbow and turned him so that the light from the porch lamp fell full upon his face.

"God bless my soul! How on earth did you manage that?" he asked in amazement.

"You know that drunken lout Denham, sir?" the Squire interposed; "he does my hedging and ditching and odd jobs. Well, he encountered Mr. Farley in the high street, and in his sodden state mistook him for a flash horse-dealer who had fleeced him a few months back. I was in the 'Popinjay,' and heard the fracas, and I am glad to say arrived on the scene before Mr. Farley's features were pomelled past redemption."

"Mercy on us! That idiot Denham spends two-thirds of his wages at The Goose and Gridiron. Here, take the cellar keys, Farley, and tell James to bring you up half a bottle of champagne. You look as pale as a ghost at cockcrow."

As Paul disappeared, Sir Thomas went forward and patted the mare's neck.

"I suppose you did not see anything of Judith as you came along?" he asked, in an undertone.

"Judith!"

"Yes. Mrs. Pilgrim came a couple of hours ago for Agnes, and Judith said she would walk with them as far as the private road runs. I don't think she is back yet."

The Squire's thoughts instantly flew to the figure seen to slip between the trees in the darkest and densest part of the avenue, and maintained a discreet silence.

"The truth is," Sir Thomas continued after a short pause, "we've had rather a scene with Judith this evening. She was evidently out of sorts at dinner and I, acting on the strength of a piece of information I received to-day, persuaded Anthony to resume his role of fiance. I believe poor Pelham proposed again; at any rate, Judith was very much upset at the sudden turn affairs had taken, and laughed and cried in the most approved hysterical fashion."

"What has come over her of late?" the Squire asked. "There used not to be a nicer or sweeter girl than Judith."

"She's an exceedingly foolish girl, Fleming."

"Yes; if she's dissatisfied with Pelham. What sort of husband does she want? Do you think she knows, sir, what she does want?"

"I know what she thinks she wants."

"And what's that?"

"Why, Paul Farley."

"The deuce!"

The Squire stepped back over to the mare, and the next five minutes were employed in quieting her.

"Does he want her?" he asked at length, gently rubbing the animal's nose.

"Not a bit of it. I had it out with him this afternoon. He told me straight to my face that he wouldn't have her at any price—at least, what he said amounted to that much. I felt awfully relieved. I don't wish to part with Farley, for the simple reason I couldn't replace him. A doctor of science and civil law and an honors man in classics and mathematics is not to be had every day in the week; besides, the fellow is a genius."

"Yes," the Squire concurred, "and a quiet, gentlemanly fellow to have constantly about one's place. Judith must be made to see her folly. What is her object in wandering about the grounds at this time of night?"

"I don't know, unless it's temper and a vague idea of intercepting Farley on his way back from East Weyberne. I wish to goodness her intentions had not been frustrated. I don't think he would have much patience with that kind of evanescent silliness. At present the fellow has no prospects, and accordingly does not give a thought to such foolery. He has his way to make—I won't deny but that I think he will succeed in making it to the top of the tree; still, if human foresight and skilful diplomacy can accomplish anything, Anthony Pelham will be my son-in-law."

"Of course. Any other supposition is beside the mark. If you will stay by the mare, sir, I'll walk down the avenue and try to find Judith. I don't seem to recognize the shy Judy under the influence of these love vagaries."

"Wait a moment, Fleming," Sir Thomas said, beckoning to James, who was busying himself beneath the hall lamp, ignorant of the picturesque effect the glare lent to his silk stockings, velvet breeches, and powdered hair, "let us inquire first if she has returned. The young puss may have gone in unnoticed, either through the conservatory or by the French window in the library."

The two men did a little star-gazing. Squire Fleming accepted a cigar from Sir Thomas, and they exchanged humorous comments on the weather until James came back with a message from Miss Hargrave's maid. The young lady had returned half an hour ago, and had since gone to bed.

"Oh, well, that's all right, Sir Thomas, I'll bid you good night," the Squire said, taking the cigar from between his teeth and springing into the dog-cart.

"I wonder who it could be wishing to escape observation," he said to himself, as he drove down the avenue. Farmer Ashwood has three daughters, and Farley's handsome eyes certainly had a way of looking unutterable things, and perhaps caused some devastation in that quarter. But in all likelihood it was only a girl out o' the village. It was of very little consequence, he ultimately decided, providing pretty Judith was not rambling about after dark, waylaying and encouraging eligible young men.

Which Cooks Quickest?

EVEN a child knows that it takes longer to cook a thick slice of steak than it does to cook a thin slice of bacon.

This homely illustration shows you precisely the difference between average rolled oats and Tillson's Rolled Oats.

The flakes of average rolled oats are thick and uneven. They can't cook very quickly or very evenly.

Notice the flakes in a box of Tillson's—so delicately and uniformly thin. It's because of this that the heat gets through them and quickly reduces their various elements into a perfectly cooked state.

15 minutes is enough.

Tillson's Oats

To Fry Oatmeal Porridge

Cook the porridge the Tillson way. Pack in small, greased round or oblong tins and let stand until cold and solid. Remove from the box, slice thin, dip in flour and saute in hot fat. If desired fried in deep fat, the slices must be covered with egg and bread crumbs.

IN GRIP OF BLIZZARD.

Ontario Spends an Unpleasant Day Wrestling With Storm.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—The province was visited with the worst storm of the season yesterday, the blinding snowstorm and driving wind, piling up and drifting the snow so that railway tracks, roads and streets were made almost impassable. In Toronto the street railway service suffered most. As fast as the snow plows went over the streets cleaning the tracks, the driving wind drove the snow back on the tracks and made them just as bad as ever.

The railroads were also completely tied up. All trains were from one to five and six hours late. The Montreal express did not get in until 12.30 owing to being stalled behind a derailed freight train near Havelock. The different railway officials all had the same tale to tell. Blocked lines and excessive wind, couple with the blinding snow, made speed impossible. It is reported that one train from the east became stalled within the city limits, and the passengers resorted to the street cars for transportation to their different hotels.

During the height of the storm yesterday morning a large frame store and dwelling on Ashdale avenue, just south of Danforth, owned by William Large, 93 Ashdale avenue, collapsed from the force of the strong wind. The roof was on and the windows in ready for the plasterers, who were going to start work. The building will be a total loss. It was worth about $2,000

Bad In Hamilton.

Hamilton, Feb. 22.—The storm was the worst known here in years. Besides the heaviest fall of snow this winter, the wind blew a terrific gale, and at times reached a velocity of 40 miles an hour, driving the snow, and occasionally sleet, before it into the faces of pedestrians in stinging sheets, which made it well nigh impossible for them to see their way. Immense drifts of snow formed and effectually tied up all vehicular traffic yesterday afternoon, and almost put the street car service out of business. The street car people, however, struggled heroically and by pressing all their sweepers into service and running their cars in double-headers, managed to maintain an intermittent service.

While the storm raged at its height last night, the firemen were called out to two small blazes, which they found it hard work to reach.

Trains Hours Late.

Berlin, Feb. 22.—The worst blizzard of the winter has been raging here all day, and the wind and storm is not abating. The radial street car service was badly crippled, and some of the country roads are impassable. Trains are hours late.

In Kansas Tuesday.

Chicago, Feb. 22.—Kansas City reports that sunshine and a temperature of from 25 to 30 degrees above zero over Kansas and Western Missouri yesterday brought relief from the blizzard of Tuesday, and railroads in general throughout that district are in most cases running trains practically on time. In southwest Missouri where traffic was demoralized, a semblance of order has been restored, but conditions in Western Kansas and Eastern Colorado, where three feet of snow fell, are not so good.

In St. Louis the snowfall was the heaviest ever recorded for the same length of time since the St. Louis weather bureau started to keep snow records in 1884.

Woman Leads Arabs.

London, Feb. 22.—Alan Osler, the special correspondent of The London Daily Express, with the Turkish army in Tripoli, writes:

"When the Arabs attacked the Italian infantry in the trenches of Gargaresh, two days ago, at their head was a figure cloaked and hooded, who carried no weapon but a staff of olive wood, whose voice ran high and shrill, and whose face, beneath a hood, was deep brown, almost black, with glittering eyes, square jaw and heavy nose, with widely distended nostrils. A collar of panther's teeth glistened against the broad, brown bosom.

"With a voice like a scream, this figure alternately menaced and exhorted the Arabs or shrieked out terrible curses against the Italians. The desert men swept up to the earthworks, and the leader, leaping into the trenches, stooped, plunged an arm elbow-deep in blood, and then stood with dripping right hand flung upwards, the statue of a goddess of African battle— for it was a woman, a Soudanese she-warrior, who fought in the ranks with the men.

"Her voice maddened the Arabs as only the voices of their women folk can. She was struck by a fragment of a shell in a charge, and went forward shaking her bleeding hand in the faces of the men, bidding them earn glorious wounds like her."

War To Go On.

Rome, Feb. 22.—Tripolitana and Cyrenica will be proclaimed Italian territory to-day. The sessions of the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate are likely to remain noteworthy in the annals of Italian Parliamentary history, as they will mark the conversion into law of the royal decree proclaiming the annexation of these two districts of Africa.

Four hundred and fifty deputies out of 500, and 300 Senators have arrived in Rome to be present at the sittings. The bill is expected to pass practically unanimously on Saturday.

It is expected that Parliament will manifest its patriotism and give to the Cabinet complete powers with respect to the war. For the present it is realized that it is impossible to take any action in the direction of hastening peace, as Italy cannot offer concessions to Turkey as a basis for negotiations or force matters to a conclusion.

Didn't Know He Held Up Train.

Keyser, W.Va., Feb. 22.—"If I robbed that train I was so drunk that I didn't know what I was doing," declared F. A. Becker, the Baltimore & Ohio brakeman, held under arrest here charged with holding up the B. & O. passenger train at Everett Tunnel, Md., on Monday night.

STREET PAVEMENT.

Although, after examination of permanent pavement of various kinds in other places, it has been generally understood that asphalt block had been given the preference by our municipal authorities, it is well to be up to date in a matter of such great importance. A few days ago asphalt block, as laid under certain conditions was condemned, in a communication which appeared in these columns by one who professed accurate information in that regard, and recently tar macadam, which was condemned by Belleville's investigators, has been favorably spoken of. It is well, therefore, to lay the facts concerning the use of the latter material in Hamilton before the people of this city.

It is stated that the first tar-concrete pavement in Ontario was laid in Hamilton in 1880, a part of which is still in use. During the years 1889-1906, numerous tar macadam pavements were laid in seven cities of the Province, aggregating about twenty-five miles. Except in the city of Guelph, the use of commercial coal tar has been displaced by fine tar or other proprietary bitumens. The general experience was that for the first three years the surface has been satisfactory; in five years, the surface coat, if not renewed, was worn away in spots; at the end of ten years, the surface was generally rough and disintegrated, but still protected the foundation. In Hamilton and Toronto the tar macadam, after five or ten years, has been protected by a wearing surface of sheet asphalt, from one to two inches in thickness. Experience has indicated that tar of uniform quality, and of composition within certain range of proportions, while susceptible to extremes of temperature, is not debarred by climatic or other conditions, as a useful road material; that best results require a dense mixture, preferably proportioning the aggregate for maximum density, that some doubt may be attached to the complete durability of bituminous surfaces made by the penetration process, and suggesting that the grading of stone in this method, rather than having a uniform size, is desirable; that a moderately coarse aggregate should be brought to the surface, to overcome slipperiness and take up wear; that tar-concrete is less durable under concentrated wear than is sheet asphalt; that broken stone will provide a more stable structure than will water rounded gravel when bounded by tar; that a paint and grit coat is necessary as a preservative as frequently as signs of surface wear or oxidation appear.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

COSTLY MONEY.

The record of the old age annuity service of the Government of Canada as set out in the report of the Department of Trade and Commerce indicates that when he conceived the plan and persuaded his colleagues to adopt it, Mr. Fielding struck the most costly way of raising money in his somewhat wide experience. The idea of the service was to the mass of the Canadian people a new one. Insurance companies sold annuities but the demand was from a limited class. The ordinary man or woman was not informed on the principle which ruled their purchase and payment. Considerable public money has been spent in the process of education with, so far at least, only moderate results being shown. In the twelve months ending with March 31 last it appears 1,092 annuities were sought and payments to secure them were made. In 117 cases the annuities were to begin at once, in 975 they were to be deferred for various periods in accord with the purchasers' desires. In all, 1,709 contracts are in force, their actuarial value on March 31 last being put at $865,427. The statement of receipts for the year is interesting. It reads:—

Purchase money for contracts	$396,091
Amount transferred by Government to maintain reserve	25,344
	$421,435

As the purchase payments are based on a 4 per cent. compound interest calculation the above record will show that the service is likely to be expensive to the country. It only represents one phase of the business, however. The expenses of administering the service, exclusive of the salaries paid to the officials in charge at Ottawa, amounted to $26,905. The officials in charge at Ottawa numbered 19, including the superintendent with a salary of $4,000, and the appropriation for their payment was $20,025. It seems therefore, to have cost nearly $47,000 to administer a financial department whose receipts for the year were given as $380,519. Some years ago the ministers who were responsible for this sort of thing were shocked at the extravagance of the insurance companies' management. A bank which would run its business on such lines would soon be bankrupt. The law under which such a record was made should have been called an act for the relief of persons who thought they were in need of Government jobs.

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

"If sick and ailing women would only know enough to take your medicine, they would get relief."—Mrs. BENJ. H. STANSBERY, Route 6, Box 18, Upper Sandusky, Ohio.

If you have mysterious pains, irregularity, backache, extreme nervousness, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait too long, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound now.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and such unquestionable testimony as the above proves the value of this famous remedy and should give every one confidence.

ONTARIO FINANCES.

The statement with regard to Ontario Finances, submitted to the Ontario Legislature tells of a satisfactory condition of affairs.

The total receipts of the fiscal year ending with October 31st, 1911, were $9,370,838 and the total expenditure $9,619,9374. The apparent deficit is explained by a more early closing of the books and the fact that the Hydro-Electric did not pay interest on an investment of over $4,000,000. This year it is likely to pay not only that but the sinking fund into the bargain.

Education calls for the biggest outlay, nameily $1,885,739. The maintenance of public institutions required $1,197,726. Other payments follow: Civil government, $602,528; legislation $275,959; administration of justice $653,383; colonization and immigration $106,906; agriculture, $680,101; stationary engineers, $6,006; hospitals and charities, $357,849; repairs and maintenance, $199,511; colonization roads, $451,111; Crown lands charges, $617,111; refunds, $67,335; miscellaneous services, $252,953; Hydro-Electric Power Commission, $91,302.

The statement of assets and liabilities for the province shows total assets amounting to $26,936,096, and the total direct liabilities are $24,765,922, a surplus of assets over liabilities of more than $2,000,000.

The lockages total nearly four hundred more than last season. About fifty million bushels of wheat went down through the canal during the season. The fastest trip from one end to the other was made by the steamer City of Montreal, in nine hours and twenty minutes.

Sir Robert Baden-Powell announces that he intends teaching baseball to the 200,000 boys who are enlisted in the ranks in Great Britain. He says cricket is all right in its way, but it is too slow for Boy Scouts. "I want a good strenuous game. Cricket is too lengthy," he is quoted as saying to a Detroit interviewer. He thinks baseball is just what is needed for the British boys, and proposes that they shall know and play the game. If a couple of crack American teams could be secured to make a tour of Great Britain, and give exhibition games the good work of Anglicizing baseball would be greatly forwarded.

Interest in the coming labor conspiracy trials in the United States is intensified by the frequent mention in the papers of a contrivance called a dictagraph. By the use of this machine it is claimed you can almost hear a man think, especially if he thinks aloud. By introducing and concealing the transmitting end of the machine into a room where a meeting or discussion is to be held, it is said to be possible for a person at the other end to hear and record everything that is spoken. The possibilities of such a contrivance are startling, to say the least, but it may be, suggests a contemporary, that the dictagraph figures more prominently in the newspaper stories than it will in the trials.

A new bill to exclude minors from pool and billiard rooms has been put through its first reading in the Legislature. It is one that will make it difficult for boys under age to play pool and, costly for a proprietor of a pool or billiard room to even allow them in the place. The text of the Act reads:—"The keeper of a licensed billiard, pool or bagatelle room, kept directly or indirectly for hire or gain who admits a minor under the age of 18 years thereto, or allows him to remain therein, without the consent of his parents or guardians, shall incur a penalty not exceeding $10 for the first and not exceeding $20 for each subsequent offence, recoverable under the Ontairo Summary Conviction Act.."

Rules for side-stepping pneumonia are offered in unique form by the Chicago department of health in a recent bulletin and causes of the infectious disease made plain. Under the caption: 'Some Things You Should Know About Pneumonia,' these conditions which render infection probable are listed: "Contact with a pneumonia patient. Working in a dusty, poorly ventilated place. Living in rooms that are too hot and dry and unventilated. Sleeping in an unventilated room. Eating more or less food than the system requires in relation to work, exercise and exposure. Drinking alcoholics. Excessive work. Lack of sleep. Worry and grief. Other diseases. Unseasonable clothing." If you can side-step all these pneumonia will not get you.

ENIGMA OF GROWTH.

Reason Why Persons Do Not Keep on Growing.

Six pounds and a half is the weight of the average child at birth; at the end of the first year the average weight is eighteen pounds and a half, a gain of twelve pounds; and at the end of the second year the weight is twenty-three pounds, a gain of only four pounds and a half. And with each successive year the gain is less and less until maturity is reached. Why is the gain less each year? And why does it finally cease altogether? The reason is that the absorbing surfaces inside the stomach and intestine do not, and in the nature of things cannot, grow proportionately to the growth of the body as a whole. During the first year of growth the child's body becomes approximately three times as large as it was at birth, but the interior of the stomach and bowel of the child at the age of one year is not even twice as large as it was at birth, let alone three times as large. Yet all the nourishment which supplies materials for growth has to be absorbed by the membrane which lines the insid of the stomach, and especially the small intestine. It is, therefore, plain that growth of the body as a whole must gradually subside as the tissues to be nourished gradually approach a size at which their demands balance the utmost supply of nutrition taken up by the stomach and intestine.

QUEEN MARY FROWNS.

Order about Hobble Skirts was Disobeyed.

Queen Mary's order about hobble skirts was disobeyed at the two courts by all except the actual court ladies. All the rest wore tight skirts, but their trains covered them. They say they didn't see why they should make themselves unfashionable because the queen herself is abnormally large around the hips and unsuited to tight dresses.

Nevertheless everyone was staggered by the costume of the Marchioness de la Vill Urrutia, the wife of the Spanish ambassador. Her dress was so tight that her whole figure was sharply outlined and she had great difficulty in walking. As she belongs in the diplomatic circle she is independent of the queen's wishes and fortunately had no courtesy to make with consequences which might have been indescribable.

The queen only smiled when she saw her trouble and seemed wisely obvious of how her order was generally obeyed. Indeed, the queen was the surprise of the court, she was so smiling and bright, with a word for everybody.

Not Loaded.

No other language under the sun is open to so many interpretations as the English language, as witness the conversation between two Sharon Hill girls the other evening

"Oh, May," said the first one, "Jim and Bill tried to fight a duel over me."

"How romantic! What happened?"

"It was terrible. I came into the room, and those foolish boys were pointing big pistols at each other!"

"Pistols? Heavens! were they loaded?"

"Not a bit. That is just what made it really very serious. They both were sober."

The Importance of the Beard.

The importance of the beard was fully recognized in the middle ages. Here is a passage from a letter of the writer, Bartolomeo Catena: "It is well that those who have to lead and govern should have a long and fine beard. And I can assure you that the government of cities and provinces has been given to more than one prelate because he had a long and fine beard; otherwise he were not worthy that honor."

IDEAL PROTECTION AGAINST INROADS OF CATARRH

BY BREATHING THE RICH, BALSAMIC VAPOR OF CATARRHOZONE YOU PREVENT AND CURE ALL HEAD, NOSE AND THROAT DISEASE.

Remember this: You don't take drugs when using Catarrhozone; you simply inhale a healing vapor that cures every type of catarrh, bronchitis, asthma, throat and nose soreness and irritation.

No medicine brings such prompt relief, exerts such an invigorating and speedily cures throat troubles as "Catarrhozone." Doctors, hospitals, sanitariums, all say that for those who suffer from changeable weather, for those who are predisposed to catarrh, lung trouble, deafness, or bronchitis, no treatment is so indispensable as "Catarrhozone."

VICTIM OF CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.

I contracted a severe cold while following my occupation of furniture travelling and eventually it developed into Catarrh. The desultory mode of life I was following gave me very little chance to attend to the Catarrh condition, and at last I became a victim of Chronic Catarrh. I bought a large package of Catarrhozone, used it as per directions, and have never been bothered since. I will be only too glad to give any information I possess to any person suffering from the disease that was the bane of my life for two years.

AN ATLANTIC TRAGEDY

By Bower Jones

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

Mabel and I had known one another since as children we had played together. The friendship of our childhood had ripened into a love that was little short of ideal, and when she was nineteen — I being her senior by four or five years — we were married. I was an orphan, and had spent many years on the Continent; her parents were wealthy, and wtih them she had travelled much. Thus it happened that we were both familiar with the European capitals, watering-places, and winter resorts, and determined—as we had neither of us crossed the Atlantic—to spend the winter and the following summer in the new world. So a few days after our wedding we found ourselves on board the Royal Mail steamship Arcadia, our faces turned toward the setting sun, looking forward in joyful anticipation to the novel scenes we were to witness together.

The passage began by being a rough one, but we were both excellent sailors, and enjoyed its opening days. There was only one cloud in the horizon of our happiness, and that —foolish as it may seem—was Mabel's fear of the sea.

"Eugene, pray that the ship does not go down in the night."

One night we had retired as usual, and certainly the sea was awfully rough. It took even me, hardened as I was, some time to get to sleep. I was awakened by Mabel rapping on the side of my berth and crying out:—

"Eugene, Eugene! what is the matter?"

I roused myself and listened. Certainly a dull, roaring sound filled the ship—a banging and splashing which drowned the noise of the propellers. A little alarmed myself I jumped out of my berth, and telling Mabel to keep quiet, I went out into the passage.

I ran into the arms of a scared, white-faced stewart, of whom I inquired the cause of the commotion.

"The ship's sinking!" he cried. "Haven't they roused you? They're manning the boats up there on deck."

It was true. Isolated as we were in our state-room we had been forgotten. Assuming as careless an air as I could summon up on the moment, I returned to our state-room, where Mabel lay in an agony of alarm.

"Well, little woman," I said, "the curtain is rising on your long-looked for drama. The ship is going down, but there's no particular hurry and no cause whatever for alarm."

I helped her, and dressed myself, putting some papers and valuables into my pockets, and then, fastening the life-preservers round myself and her, we sent up on deck. We had indeed been forgotten! The last boat was just preparing to leave the ship with the captain and some of the crew. We hailed them, and jumped in just in time.

The boat that had left the ship before us had been swamped by a wave, and its occupants were struggling in the water. Instead of pulling off at once we hovered in the dangerdus vicinity of the sinking ship, trying to rescue them. All at once the deck burst up, and the ship settled. Our boat was engulfed in the water; I had only time to seize Mabel by the arms, and we found our selves struggling for our lives in the eddy.

The night was pitch dark; there was no moon, and the stars were hidden behind the masses of storm clouds. I could not see Mabel's face, but her feverish clutch on my arm reassured me, and I knew that she retained consciousness. After about ten minutes, during a lull in the wind, I said to her:—

"You see, darling, the night is warm, and we are perfectly supported. It cannot be more than three or four hours to day-light at most, and then we are bound to be picked up immediately. You feel safe with me, do you not?"

Her voice came back in the impenetrable darkness:—

"Yes, Eugene, I feel safe with you; but you have tied this belt too tightly 'round me. It makes me feel faint. Can't you shift it a little?"

"Of course I can," I replied, and the moment the sea seemed to be a little calmer I proceeded to do so. She was lying on one arm, and I was busily readjusting the belt with the other, when, in the darkness, a great wave came over us, and dashed her out of my grasp. I dived instantly and caught her by the hair, just as she slipped away, and, bringing her to the surface, I held her closely in my arms. The life-belt had been washed out of my grasp, and I had to trust to my own strength, assisted by the belt that was tied round myself.

Alas! my wife had lost consciousness, and hung a dead weight in my arms. For hours and hours and hours, it seemed to me that I bore her up in the blackness of the night, imploring her to speak to me — to open the dear eyes which I could feel were tightly closed.

It was all in vain; save for the occasional beat of the heart she might have been dead.

What a night of agony! Heavens! how I prayed for morning — for one ray of light by which to see my darling's face. I thought I should go mad. My arms ached, my limbs — my whole body grew numbed and cold; sometimes I almost felt myself dozing off into the sleep of death, waking with a start to cry aloud, "Mabel, Mabel, my darling, speak to me!" and nothing answered but the moaning of the storm as it died away in the distance.

At last a faint streak lit the horizon, a flush tinging the edge of a cloud, made it visible in the darkness, a breeze rippled the sullen billows that rose and fell smoothly around us. The day was breaking: I shrieked aloud a prayer of thanksgiving to heaven that the night was over, and bent over the motionless, senseless body that I held in my tired arms with a renewed vigour.

Little by little the sun uprose, and the dawn came. With the first grey beam that crept across the ocean I peered into the face that had lain close to mine all night.

It was that of another woman!

A man may avoid a great deal of trouble by not following his own judgment.

Anyway, it is just as well to put off till tomorrow the worries of today.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

LAURIER IS TO BLAME

Sir Wilfrid Responsible For Hudson Bay Situation.

Sir James Whitney Tells Mr. Rowell That the Ontario Government Has Taken Every Possible Step With Regard to Getting Share of Keewatin, But Laurier Balked—Cochrane Now Representing Province.

Toronto, Feb. 22.—That the Laurier Government at Ottawa was entirely responsible for any settlement, whatever it may be, of the Ontario and Manitoba boundary, was the declaration made by Sir James Whitney in the Legislature yesterday afternoon. The matter was introduced by N. W. Rowell, leader of the Opposition, who asserted that the claims of Ontario had not been presented in a sufficiently forcible manner to the Dominion Government to persuade it to minimize the importance of the counter-claims of Manitoba. He maintained also that the forcible arguments that finally were presented by Sir James on behalf of Ontario were not presented soon enough to the Dominion Government, and that the point was overlooked of demonstrating to the Dominion Government that the boundaries of Quebec, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta were all extended to the 60th parallel.

Sir James Whitney ridiculed the idea of having the boundary of Ontario extended to the 60th parallel, because it would land in the deep water of Hudson Bay, or as an alternative, would provide a strip of shore line belonging to Ontario, shutting out the Province of Manitoba from getting even the slightest access to the water's edge on Hudson Bay.

The debate on the boundary question was opened by Mr. Rowell, who moved the following resolution: That in the judgment of this House the Province of Ontario is entitled to its own hinterland, and to have its westerly boundary extended north to the 60th parallel of north latitude, so that its northerly boundary shall be the same as that of British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba, but in order that the Province of Manitoba may have access to an ocean-going port on Hudson Bay through its own territory, this House is prepared to approve a settlement whereby the westerly boundary of Ontario shall be extended north to the Churchill River, northeasterly to deep water on Hudson Bay. That this House respectfully protests against any settlement of the boundary which shall deprive Ontario of any portion of her hinterland south of the Churchill River, and which does not secure for Ontario a good port on Hudson Bay for ocean-going vessels.

"So far as I can find," he said, "the Ontario Government has never asked the Legislature to pass on this important matter, and the lateness of the day when this clear and forceful evidence of Sir James Whitney's had been sent, is what I take exception to." The Government should have kept pressing the matter, he said, and should have pressed it still further and should be pressing it even now.

Sir James took issue with Mr. Rowell's statement that there was any hinterland in the north belonging to Ontario. It was foreign territory belonging to the Dominion Government. Neither one of the provinces had any right or claim to an acre of that land. "We must start from a correct premise in this matter, instead of an imaginary one, or we won't know where we will land," said the Prime Minister. "Manitoba had a claim, primarily to this unorganized territory, on the ground that it was required by the postage-stamp province, and had no outlet by any port anywhere. There was no possibility of it extending its boundaries westward, so the province then directed its attention to obtaining an outlet on Hudson Bay."

About that time a newspaper discussion said that the Dominion was going to divide up between the three provinces of Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec, the district known as Keewatin. Immediately afterwards he wrote to Sir Wilfrid Laurier with regard to the published statements, and asked that if any such division was made, Ontario should be given a reasonable part of the territory.

The case for Ontario was argued at length afterwards, and impartial listeners will agree that Ontario's claims were presented every bit as forcibly as Manitoba's. Sir Wilfrid then declared that Ontario was far ahead of Manitoba, in having already ports on Lake Superior.

"What more can the Province of Ontario be expected to do at the present time? Hon. Frank Cochrane has put, and is putting, Ontario's case clearly before the Dominion Government. More than that he cannot do at present. But I will never believe that Ontario will be prevented from having access to a port on Hudson Bay, and that this province, in spite of the obstacles thrown in its way by the members of the Luarier Government, representing the people of this province, will be able to obtain just and decent treatment which should be accorded to her."

Sir James said that there were other features of the case which he had not yet prepared, and in the meantime he asked that the discussion be adjourned.

Railroads Score This Time.

Washington, Feb. 22.—A prolonged contest between railroads carrying coal to Atlantic tide water, particularly Norfolk, Va., and the New England Coal & Coke Co. of Boston, over the charges exacted by the rail carriers for trimming and levelling coal in the holds of ships, was ended by the Inter-State Commerce Commission yesterday, by a decision that the charge of three cents a ton for trimming and 4 1-2c. a ton for both dumping and trimming was reasonable.

The charge of 4 1-2 c. a ton by the Virginia Railroad for trimming alone was declared to be unreasonable so far as it exceeded three cents.

BRANDT GETS RE-TRIAL

Celebrated New York Case is Opened Again.

Writ of Habeas Corpus Is Granted and Former Valet Will Get Bail—Judge Gerard Says Sentence of 30 Years Was an Illegal One—Reputation of a Woman Is at Stake Say Schiff's Lawyers.

New York, Feb. 22.—Except for the service of five years in prison, Foulke E. Brandt, is to-day the same man in the eyes of the law as he was before he was sent away on April 4, 1907, to serve thirty years for burglary at the home of Mortimer L. Schiff, the banker, where he once worked as a servant. The long prison term was broken up yesterday by Justice Gerard of the Supreme Court, with an opinion sustaining a writ of habeas corpus.

The young Swede remained locked up in the Tombs last night, but not as a condemned man, and with assurance that within forty-eight hours he will be released on bail to await a new trial or whatever development occurs to clear up his remarkable case. The hearing before Commissioner Richard L. Hand, appointed by Governor Dix to hear Brandt's application for clemency, has now no importance as a factor in Brandt's fight for freedom, as a pardon cannot be given to a man who stands uncondemned, with only charges pending.

Justice Gerard's decision brought to a climax a case which has had the absorbed attention of the New York public nearly every day for a month and which is still a matter of grand jury investigation, with a view to determine if there was conspiracy in the sending of Brandt to prison for so long a term.

In sentencing him to thirty years in prison, Judge Otto A. Rosalsky illegally condemned Brandt, according to Justice Gerard's opinion yesterday.

"If Brandt was sentenced because he was involved in a net of verbiage," said Justice Gerard, "and pleaded guilty to a crime which his examination at the time of his plea showed he did not admit committing, and did not intend to plead guilty to, he should not be left to seek his remedy from executive clemency alone. He is entitled to a decision of the court relieving him from the stigma of his mistaken plea.

Alton B. Parker and De Lancey Nicoll, counsel for Mr. Schiff, telegraphed to Governor Dix late yesterday asking that they be allowed to appear before the governor next Friday to move for a broadening of the enquiry started by Commissioner Hand, in order that Mr. Schiff and Howard S. Gans, who acted as counsel for Schiff in connection with the prosecution of Brandt, be allowed to testify at the Hand hearing. The suspension of the hearing Tuesday, on the ground that volunteer witnesses would be immune, was characterized by Messrs. Parker and Nicoll as "absurd." On the heels of the telegram to the governor, a long letter was mailed, stating reasons for the application for a broader hearing "to the end that scandalous rumors should be dispelled and the truth made known."

The letter declares that, through these rumors "the probity of a business man and the reputation of a lawyer has been assailed, and beyond and above all, the reputation of a woman has been besmirched by insinuations and innuendoes." The frustration of all of counsel's efforts to bring out the Schiff story at the public hearing was pointed out and the ruling of the district attorney that such appearance would involve immunity was declared to be a "legal absurdity."

Patching Up Treaty.

Madrid, Feb. 22.—The negotiations proceeding between France and Spain on the subject of Morocco have been further advanced by Spain's definite acceptance of several French proposals.

The first of these is that all questions relative to the accord between the two countries shall be subject to arbitration. The second provides for the unification of the customs. The third is an understanding by which Spain does not abandon any of her rights throughout the zone which will eventually be ceded to her by France. The fourth arranges for a revision of the Madrid accord relative to the protection of the natives of Morocco.

The questions of railroad and territorial compensations have not yet been settled.

King George Did It.

Berlin, Feb. 22.—A highly optimistic account of the recent visit of Viscount Haldane, British Minister of War, to Berlin, and of the Anglo-German negotiations is given in an article published in the Lokal Anzieger, which there is reason to believe is authoritative.

The credit of putting an end to the diplomatic tension between the two countries is ascribed personally to King George, who realized that the atmosphere was without doubt capable of being cleared up by frank discussion and took steps towards this end before his departure to India.

Mawson Gets Vancouver Contract.

Ottawa, Feb. 22.—Thomas H. Mawson, the British landscape artist, who addressed the Canadian Club of Ottawa a few months ago, has been appointed by the City of Vancouver to lay out Stanley Park there, according to news received here yesterday.

Stanley Park contains about 900 acres and is one of the finest in the world.

New King's Treasurer.

London, Feb. 22.—Captain the Hon. Frederick Edward Guest has been appointed treasurer of the King's household, replacing W. Dudley Ward, who has held that position since 1910. Mr. Ward resigned in order to better attend to his duties as Liberal whip.

THREE PERSONS KILLED

Special Train Hits Sleigh at London Crossing.

While Driving Across Track Horse Is Frightened and Breaks Away From Vehicle, Leaving Charles Drake, His Sister-In-Law and Her Baby to Perish In Closed Milk Sleigh—Horse Gallops Home.

London, Feb. 22.—Three lives were snuffed out in the twinkling of an eye, about 1.30 p.m. yesterday, when a special train from Hamilton struck a closed milkman's sleigh about three miles east of here. The victims were:

Charles L. Drake, a milkman of the second Gore, London Township.

Mrs. Robert Drake (sister-in-law).

Mrs. Drake's two-year-old daughter, Frances.

The woman's head was cut off, and the other bodies were terribly mutilated.

The accident occurred only a stone's throw from where Henry Drake, sr., father of the dead man, was splitting wood in the yard of his homestead.

Mrs. Henry Drake, mother-in-law of the dead woman, has been unwell for some time, and it was for the purpose of assisting her in the housework that Mrs. Robert Drake was being taken to the farm by her brother-in-law, who had called for her at her home here.

They were following another sleigh, and just as they were crossing the tracks the driver of the first vehicle cracked his whip. This alarmed the horse attached to the Drake sleigh, and it broke away, leaving the sleigh in front of the train.

The first intimation Mr. Drake, sr., had of an accident, was when the horse with the broken traces trailing, came running into his yard.

Mrs. Drake, sr., on learning that an accident had happened, left her bed, and hurried to the scene. The shock has left her in a serious condition.

Engine 324, which struck the sleigh, was in charge of Engineer Galbraith of this city.

An inquest was opened last night, and was adjourned until Tuesday evening next.

George Cook of Shudell street was struck by a G.T.R. train and instantly killed a few hundred yards north of Riverdale station; Jas. Todd was found in an unconscious condition in the cellar of his residence, 92 George street, and died shortly afterward; John Henery, a farmer of Newmarket, died while breakfasting in the Clyde Hotel, due to heart failure, and Mrs. Mary Oliver met with the same fate while working in her store at 81 Spadina avenue.

Reverse For Mexican Rebels.

Cuernavaca, Mexico, Feb. 22.—The rebels suffered a loss of 37 dead and six taken prisoners, while 11 rural guards were killed and nine wounded as the result of three sharp encounters between a force of rebels, from the State of Guerrero, under the command of Jesus Salgado, and a body of federal troops near Tlatlaya, on the southern boundary of Mexico State Tuesday. Salgado's force was driven back into the State of Guerrero by the federal troops with the loss of a large amount of munitions and a number of horses.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Corn to-day led an advance in all the principal staples on 'change. Storm-clogged railway facilities were chiefly responsible. Latest trading left corn with a gain of 5-8c to 3-4c, wheat up 1-4c to 3-8c; oats varying from the same as last night to 1-4c higher and hog products slightly higher.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ⅛d to ¼d lower than yesterday, and corn ⅛d lower. Paris wheat closed unchanged, Berlin ⅛c higher and Buda Pest ¼c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—There was no improvement in the demand from European sources for Manitoba spring wheat for May-June shipment, but there was a fair enquiry from London for prompt shipments, which is difficult to fill on account of the scarcity of ocean room. A good local trade continues to be done in oats and American corn.

The flour market is fairly active and firm under a good demand from city and country buyers, but the export trade continues very quiet. Demand for millfeed is good, of which supplies are still very limited. Butter is quieter, but prices rule firm. Eggs fairly active. Provisions steady with a fair demand.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 74½c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 53½c to 54c; Canadian western No. 3, 51½c to 52c; extra No. 1 feed, 52½c to 53c; No. 2 local white, 51c to 51½c; No. 3 local white, 50c to 50½c; No. 4 local white, 49c to 49½c.

Barley—Malting, $1.04 to $1.05.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 72c to 73c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.60; seconds, $5.10; strong bakers', $4.90; winter patents, choice, $5.10 to $5.35; straight rollers, $4.65 to $4.75; do. bags, $2.15 to $2.25.

Rolled oats—Barrels, $5.05; bags, 90 lbs., $2.40.

Bran—$24; shorts, $26; middlings, $28; moullie, $28 to $34.

Hay—No. 2 per ton car lots, $15 to $15.50.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 15½c to 15½c; finest easterns, 14½c to 15c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 33c to 34c; seconds, 32c to 32½c.

Eggs—Fresh, 35c to 40c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.70 to $1.80.

Dressed hogs—Abattoir killed, $10 to $10.25; country, $9.25 to $9.50.

Pork—Heavy Canada short cut mess, barrels, 35 to 45 pieces, $22.50; Canada short cut backs, barrels, 45 to 55 pieces, $22.

Lard—Compound tierces, 375 lbs., 8¼c; wood pails, 20 lbs. net, 8¾c; pure, tierces, 375 lbs., 11¾c; pure, wood pails, 20 lbs. net, 12¼c.

Beef—Plate, bbls., 200 lbs., $14.50; tierces, 300 lbs., $21.50.

Buffalo Grain Market.

BUFFALO, Feb. 21.—Spring wheat dull; No. 1 northern, carloads, store, $1.13¾; winter firmer; No. 2 red, $1.01; No. 3 red, 99c; No. 2 white, $1.

Corn—Steady; No. 4 yellow, 65¾c, on track, thru-billed.

Oats—Firmer; No. 2 white, 56½c; No. 3 white, 55¾c; No. 4 white, 54½c.

Barley—Malting, $1.22 to $1.25.

DULUTH, Feb. 21.—Wheat—Close—No. 1 hard, $1.05½; No. 1 northern, $1.04½; No. 2 do., $1.02½; May, $1.04 bid; July, $1.04⅝ bid.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 21.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 17 were 625 cattle, 225 sheep and lambs, 1220 hogs and 650 calves, while the offerings on the market this morning for sale were 600 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs and 1250 hogs and 600 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle, prices being well maintained for good to choice stock at the advance noted earlier in the week, owing to the fact that the supply of such was only moderate, for which there was a good demand. The trade in common and inferior stock was slow and values for such rule about steady. A few choice steers sold at $7 to $7.25 and good at $6.50 to $6.75 per cwt. Choice butcher cows were rather scarce and in demand at $5.75 per cwt., which is an advance of 25c per cwt. There were no choice bulls on the market and the top price realized for the best stock was $5 per cwt. The trade on the whole was fairly active and a good clearance was made.

The market for sheep and lambs was very quiet, owing to the very limited supply of which the quality was only medium. The trade in calves was fairly active and prices ruled steady as the receipts were not in excess of the requirements.

The market for hogs was strong at the recent advance under a good demand and sales of selected lots were made at $7.35 to $7.50, and for small lots as high as $7.75 was paid per cwt., weighed off the cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; medium, $5.50 to $6.75; common, $3.00 to $5; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; medium, $3.75 to $4.75; bulls, $3.50 to $6; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $30 to $45.

Sheep—Ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4.25; lambs, $6.50 to $7.

Hogs—F.o.b., $7.25 to $7.50.

Calves—$2.50 to $8.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 21.—Cattle—Receipts, 75 head; market, quiet and steady; prime steers, $7 to $8; butcher grades, $3.25 to $6.75; calves, receipts, 200 head; market active and steady; cull to choice, $5.75 to $10.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 7000; market light and steady; choice lambs, $6.60 to $6.75; cull to fair, $5 to $6.50; yearlings, $5.25 to $5.85; sheep, $2 to $4.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 2550; market, active, 5c higher; yorkers, $6.40 to $6.60; pigs, $6.20; mixed, $6.55 to $6.60; heavy, $6.50 to $6.60; roughs, $5.25 to $5.35; stags, $5 to $5.25.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Cattle—Receipts, 14,000; market strong to 10c higher; beeves, $4.70 to $8.60; Texas steers, $4.50 to $5.65; western steers, $4.80 to $7; stockers and feeders, $3.80 to $6.10; cows and heifers, $2.10 to $6.40; calves, $5.50 to $7.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 43,000; market strong, 10c higher; light, $5.90 to $6.30; mixed, $5.95 to $6.35; heavy, $6 to $6.37½; rough, $6 to $6.10; pigs, $4.35 to $6; bulk of sales, $6.20 to $6.30.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 20,000; market strong; native, $3.20 to $4.75; western, $3.80 to $4.80; yearlings, $4.90 to $5.75; lambs, native, $4.30 to $5.85; western, $4.75 to $6.90.

He Comes Out Strong For Recall of Judges.

Columbus, Ohio, Feb. 22.—Recommendations that judges be subject to removal by popular vote and that the judgment of a court declaring any statute to be unconstitutional should be subject to reversal by a referendum, together with a vigorous denunciation of the highest courts in the country, for their recent rulings in the Workmen's Compensation Acts, were among the salient features of an address delivered yesterday morning by Col. Theodore Roosevelt, before the Ohio Constitutional Convention.

Under the present constitution, a convention may be called at the end of every 20-year period, which may submit to the people a new constitution to become effective when adopted by a majority of the people. Much interest attaches to the present convention, because of the progressive policies which have come to the front during the past few years, and have made a deep impression upon the people of Ohio. Col. Roosevelt is a leading progressive, and his recommendations as to the new constitution have been eagerly anticipated. Yesterday he declared himself in favor of the initiative, the referendum and the recall of officials, including judges.

The trust evil was also discussed at length, and a Government regulation of the big corporations and Governmental control of prices were suggested as the only effective remedies. Col. Roosevelt also declared himself in favor of the "short ballot," the direct nomination, primaries for Presidential preferences, and the election of U. S. Senators by the people. He believed that judges should be liable to removal from office by a majority vote of the Legislature, and by the "recall," and with these safeguards saw no reason why they might not be appointed for long terms of service.

Col. Roosevelt cautioned the convention against putting shackles on the Legislature. The Legislature, he said, should have a free hand, otherwise all attempts at social betterment would probably be thwarted by judicial construction. He favored reducing the number of officers to be elected; few officers charged with great responsibilities could be kept under public inspection and their power for evil could be cut off at any time by the recall. He favored the initiative and the referendum, but thought they should be used sparingly.

The address was conservative in tone so far as dealing with the combinations was concerned. He did not believe that we could restore business conditions to what they were 100 years ago, any more than we could arm soldiers with flintlock muskets or build up an efficient navy with wooden ships. The combinations should not be harried because they were big; but they should be prevented from growing big by unlawful means. He saw no reason why the prices of their produce should not be as subject to Government regulations as are railway rates.

Urges "Dry" Election In Renfrew.

Renfrew, Feb. 22.—An appeal to both political parties not to send liquor among his Polish parishioners has been made by Father Yankowski, parish priest at Wilno, in connection with the bye-election in South Renfrew.

In the last election quantities of liquor of all kinds were brought up to Wilno and other places.

SHOT THREE NEGROES IN COURT

Crowd grew Angry during their Trial for Murder.

SHELBYVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 19.—Three negroes were shot dead in the county court room here this afternoon They were charged with the murder of a railroad detective several days ago near Bell Buckle, Tenn

As evidence in the preliminary trial piled up against the three blacks the anger of spectators in the court room flamed out. Simultaneously the negroes fell as a hail of bullets rained in on them from all parts of the court room.

ONTARIO GOVERNMENT HEALTH EXHIBIT

A Novel and Effective Way of Educating the People as to Cause and Prevention of Disease

The Ontario Government, which has proven to be in all respects a progressive Government, is at present employing a novel method to educate the people in the prevention or cure of certain diseases by an exhibit which is termed "A Health Exhbit." This exhibit has been in the city during the past three days under the capable superintendency of Mr. E. H. Jones, who is always ready to answer questions and impart knowledge in reference to the exhibit.

There are a great number of photographs of all the principal sanatoria in Great Britain, Sweden, France, Germany, the United States and Canada, with blue prints of the buildings, sewerage systems, etc. There are also many models of the "shacks" in use at the various places, a window tent, pasteurizing outfits for pasteurizing milk at home, sanitary drinking cups, sputum cups, and many other articles, many of which the public know little or nothing about. With the exhibit there is a very fine lantern used in illustrating the lectures with reflectoscopic views. These views are explained in an explicit manner by Mr. Jones. While the exhibit has been the city many citizens have visited it and become intesely interested It cannot but have a beneficial effect.

LOCAL LEGAL

Divisional Court, before the Chancellor; Latchford, J.; Middleton, J.

Hooey v. Tripp—E. G. Porter, K. C., for defendant; W. C. Mikel, K. C., for plaintiff. An appeal by defendant from the judgment of the county court of Hastings of Dec. 12, 1911. An action by plaintiff claiming $500 damages for the alleged wrongful entry on his lands by defendant and her servants and the erection thereon of a fence, thereby preventing plaintiff from the use and occupation of a portion of his land. At the trial the judge found that the defendant had trespassed upon the land of the plaintiff in building her fence where it is now situate and directing that the fence shall be removed, or moved to the line shown in exhibit four and assessing the damages at $25 and costs of action. Judgment: We think the equality which the deed contemplates is best preserved by giving as far as possible an equal division of the whole lot, with the required result of giving each party an equal superficial area. The straight line parallel to both sides from the point on the south part of the lot going about two-thirds of the whole length of the lot, and the deflected line starting where the parallel line of division ends and going north for the other third part of the lot to the north, which has the diagonal slice taken off to the east, will also effect this equal division. This method of partition, by the employment of a middle line of division for two-thirds with a partial deflection for the other third length, is justified by the considerations taken into account by the judges of the privy council in Herrick v. Sixby. The Surrey Act does not apply to a case of private survey of a lot laid out on a private plan, and if it did, it casts no light upon the method of division by which an equal aliquot part is to be secured. Both parties claiming erroneously, we think this case should be without costs throughout, including the appeal to this court. Middleton, J., dissenting, arriving at the same opinion as the county judge, but by another route, and would dismiss the appeal with costs.

MR. NORTHRUP'S SPEECH ON THE LANCASTER BILL

(From the official report)

Mr. W. B. NORTHRUP (East Hastings). I did not intend to speak on this Bill, and I do not know that I would have spoken on it had there not been the most unprecedented scene here to-night, I venture to say ever witnessed on Canadian soil. Everybody on both sides of the House admits frankly in private and will not deny in public that the Bill introduced by the hon. member for Lincoln is one of the most important measures ever brought before this House. There is not a member of this House who is not aware that the Canadian Public is as deeply interested in this measure as in any measure that ever came before the House, and yet 221 representatives of the people are prepared to allow a measure of this kind brought before this House and to be passed out of the House without even a discussion.

It is not for me to say whether or not the legal grounds adduced by the hon. member for Lincoln are sound or not. I quite appreciate the statement of the right hon. gentleman who leads the House (Mr. Borden) that there is a profoundly difficult question involved, but I cannot forget that a Minister of Justice years ago after studying this same statute, the British North America Act, came to a conclusion which was entirely upset on every point by the law officers of the Crown in England when the matter was left to them. Therefore, I feel that I am bound to use my own judgment when such a matter comes before the House. It seems to me with all respect to the argument advanced by the right hon. gentleman who leads the House, that the point has not been touched at all. Everybody admits that the local legislatures have exclusive jurisdiction as to the solemnization of marriage, there has been no dispute as to that or as to the jurisdiction of this House. Every member is aware that the Fathers of Confederation, warned by the experience of our neighbours to the south where the residuum of power was left to the states and only alloted power to the federal authority which led to the unhappy civil war, took the opposite course and under our constitution all power is alloted to the federal authorities save in so far as a portion is clipped out and alloted to the provinces. Therefore, when the British North America Act said that the solemnization of marriages was allotted to the provinces, if there had not been a word further on the subject the Dominion would have had exclusive jurisdiction on everything else relating to marriage and divorce. But as if to make assurance doubly sure, the Act went on and gave marriage and divorce to this House as part of its jurisdiction. Therefore, we have exclusive jurisdiction as to everything affecting marriage except its solemnization. Then it comes down to the meaning of solemnization of marriage.

I quite understand that there can be a difference of opinion as to what these words mean, but I think that no two lawyers in the country would differ on the main point that the only question now before us is what is included under the words 'solemnization of marriage.' It seems to me that these words relate to the formalities which precede and accompany the ceremony. I would take it that the solemnization of marriage included nothing more than the forms, whether by license or banns, the selection of a person to perform the ceremony, and the forms which are necessary to complete the solemnization of marriage. We must not forget that the Roman Catholic, the Anglican, and as far as I know every Protestant church and, in days gone by, the Jews all held the same view, that marriage is contract made by the people themselves, and not by the clergy. The priest does marry, the Anglican clergyman does not marry the couple. One has but to look at the service of the Anglican church to see that, the man takes the woman, the woman takes the man. In proof of the contract a ring is produced and then, and not till then, the priest says: Inasmuch as you have made your contract, and witnessed by a ring, I declare you to be man and wife. The essence of the whole ceremony is that the two people make a contract, and whoever the official may be, he is merely a witness to the contract. As to who is to be the witness, as to how the marriage is to be performed, the province has a right to legislate, but suppose British Columbia should lay down one form of marriage for whites, and a different form, or appoint different persons to marry whites and blacks, or blacks, I would be very sceptical as to their jurisdiction, because I would think the moment they began to legislate in that way they would be touching the status of the parties, and I do not think they have anything to do with that.

It seems to me that inasmuch as this question is exciting so much interest, and is not one of those religious questions where a difference of opinion depends on principle, but the only question involved, even in Quebec, is an ecclesiastical rule that has not at all been binding when we know as a matter of fact that throughout the world that marriages were not even required to be performed in churches up to the thirteenth century, when we know that the Tametsi decree was passed in order to avoid clandestine marriage, that the blood may be pure, and children inherit what is rightfully theirs, and when we are told that the Ne Temere decree is to prevent clandestine marriage, and when difficulties have arisen owing to that decree, it seems to me that the government might have supplemented what they have said in asking to have this Bill stand over until the Bill can be referred to the Privy Council.

They might have said in the meantime, we will make such representations as can be made to endeavor to secure that the Ne Temere decree will be withdrawn from Canada so that Canada may be made as free as Germany, for instance. There can be no point of conscience on a Catholic apart from the order of the church when one country is free from this decree and another is not. I submit that the government of the day should endeavor to secure the freedom of Canada altogether from this decree and that done, a great deal of bad feeling, and possibly a great deal of future trouble would be saved to this Dominion. Then as to the question to be submitted to the Supreme Court and the Privy Council, if the only question to be submitted, and I am now speaking from my own standpoint, is as to the power of this House to pass the legislation, I think I am entitled to surmise that difficulty may arise, just as a number of years ago the Manitoba School question was submitted to the courts, and when the decision had been given Conservative members of a Conservative government went up and down the country stating that when the courts had decided we had jurisdiction we were bound to exercise that jurisdiction. I state now, so there may be no subsequent misunderstanding, that as I appreciate the situation, if the government leave this bill to the courts it will be on the implied understanding that if the courts decide we have jurisdiction, then of course we must exercise jurisdiction, and pass legislation in the direction of the Bill before us to-night. How absurd it would be for us to ask the courts if we have the power to pass a piece of legislation, and the courts saying we had the power, then that we should not pay sufficient respect to the courts and to ourselves to pass the legislation. If the questions are to be submitted, why should we not come to a conclusion now which might relieve this country from the embarrassments which beset us. It has come out in the course of the discussion that there has been a difference of opinion from the legal point of view in the province of Quebec, and so far as I am able to understand, though divergent judgments have been rendered by the courts of that province, none of these judgments have been taken to a higher court. If a kindred point is to be submitted why not take advantage of this opportunity to submit all the points, so that we may know exactly what the law is in the various provinces. And then if it should be held that we have the right to legislate here, surely we can legislate with more intelligence, more propriety, and more success if we know what the law is, than if two or three years hence when this legislation comes back we are confronted with the puzzling proposition that we do not know what powers we have with regard to Quebec. Therefore, we will have to submit another case to the courts, and pehaps be tied up for two or three years longer. I submit in conclusion, that while I have spoken on this subject with diffidence and regret, I felt that in justice to my constituents, that I make this appeal to the House. We must not forget that we represent not one single county or one single riding, but that under the constitution we were elected to represent all the people of Canada, and those of us who are sitting here, are sitting here to represent and protect the innocent girls, be they Protestants, or Roman Catholics, who have gone through the ceremony of marriage believing it to be a binding ceremony, and to protect also the children of these poor women, who would never have been brought into the world had their mothers not believed that they were legally married. It is a tremendous responsibility resting upon the shoulders of a member of this House, to think that possibly he has the power to right wrongs that exist in regard to the mothers, the women, and children of this country, and we are to take such little interest in it, that an important measure like this is to be allowed to pass over without discussion, and be relegated to consideration three or four years hence.

6,000,000 CHINESE SARVING

NEW YORK, Feb. 20—A Pekin cable says:—More than six million Chinese are dying of starvation throughout China as a result of the destruction of crops by floods and war.

Bishop Graves, of Shanghai, who is sending out appeals for $1,000,000, is suggesting, through the Laymen's missionary movement, that a definite date be set when collections may be taken up in the churches throughout the world.

DON'T LET THAT COUGH ROB YOU OF SLEEP

You probably know all too well how it goes. Just as you doze off, the tickling starts in your throat. A gentle cough, still asleep. A harder cough, and then another. First thing you know, you're wide awake, coughing your head off.

A few nights of that and you're so worn out and weakened that the cough takes a tight grip on you.

But why endure it?

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne will soothe that exasperating tickling, loosen the phlegm and cure the inflammation of the mucous membrane. It not only stops the cough quickly, allowing you to get sound, refreshing sleep, but it goes to the root of the trouble and drives out the cold completely. Children willingly take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, because it tastes so good. Your Druggist has it or can quickly get it for you in 25c. and 50c. bottles. PERFECT PANACEA FOR RHEUMATISM

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" WILL ALWAYS CURE THIS TROUBLE

McMILLAN'S CORNER, Ont.

"Your remedy Fruit-a-tives is a perfect panacea for Rheumatism. For years, I suffered distressing pains from Sciatic Rheumatism, being laid up several times a year, and not being able to work at anything. I went to different doctors who told me there was no use doing anything; it would pass away.

Fortunately, about two years ago, I got "Fruit-a-tives" and they cured me.

Since then, I take them occasionally and keep free of pain. I am satisfied that "Fruit-a-tives" cured me of Rheumatism and they will cure anyone who takes them". JOHN B. McDONALD.

Rheumatism, Sciatica and Lumbago are caused by Uric Acid—a poisonous substance formed as a result of acid indigestion and impurities in the blood.

"Fruit-a-tives", or intensified fruit juices, is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world.

"Fruit-a-tives" keeps the whole system free of uric acid and will always cure Rheumatism in every form.

NO MORE HOBBLES.

CHICAGO, Feb. 21.—Members of the American Trotting Association, at the biennial meeting of that organization, made drastic ruling against the use of hobbles. The association ruled:—

1.—That hobbles will not be allowed on any horse four years old or under during the 1912 racing season.

2.—That hobbles will not be allowed on any horse five years old or under during the 1913 racing season.

3.—That hobbles will not be allowed on any horse six years old or under during the 1914 racing season.

This action, with a change of rule regarding points, was the principal business decided by the meeting. The new rule on points is:—

"In deciding the rank of a horse, the winner of two heats in a two or three race, or the winner of three heats in a five race, shall be entitled to first money.

"In deciding the rank of horses other than the winner, the horse having the smallest total number of points in the summary is entitled to second money, and the next smallest to third money, and the next to fourth money.

"A dead heat shall count one for each horse making it, but where a deciding heat is necessary, the horses starting in such deciding heat shall be entitled to first and second money according to their position in that heat."

New legislation to relieve the New York situation was introduced at Albany yesterday.

BILLIARDS.

POGGENBURG WON.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, of New York, won the international amateur 18.2 balk-line billiard championship in the tournament which closed here to-night, the New Yorker defeating Charles F. Conklin, of Chicago 400 points to 191 in the final game. Conklin won second place in the tournament.

Joseph Mayer, of Philadelphia, won the third place in the international amateur 18.2 balk-line billiard championship tournament at the Liederkranz Club to-day. Mayer first defeated E. W. Gardner, 200 points to 182, with an average of 9 2-22 and high run of 71. Mayer next defeated Edouard Roudil, the Frenchman, 200 to 129. Mayer's average was a flat ten, with a high run of 56.

In the next game Roudil defeated Gardner 200 points to 99, so that he took fourth place and Gardner fifth, while Dr. L. L. Mial finished last. Roudil's average for the last game was 7 18-26 and his best run was 73.

CURLING.

Two senior rinks from the local Curling Club went to Kingston at noon to-day and will play in that city this evening. The composition of the rinks was as follows.

J. Farley,	C. H. Vermilyea,
F. Quick,	S. W. Vermilyea,
T. E. Ketcheson,	S. Robertson,
J. A. McFee, skip.	B. Iler, skip.

Braden won three open competitions at Winnipeg, but lost the last game of the Tetley Tea to Bob Dunbar. Flavelle in the Black-Girvin, Andrew Hood in the Whyte and L. V. O'Connor of Lindsay in the points were the eastern trophy winners.

THE COLOR OF ANIMALS

The Influence of Surroundings on the Coloring of Animals and Birds.

That colour may be influenced in some cases by the taking of special kinds of food is well known, but little is understood as yet of the extent to which pigmentary colour in animals is related to the particular kind of food they eat. Writing upon the subject of this question in his work upon "The Colour-Sense," Mr. Grant Allen draws attention to the fact, as of probable significance, that the two most beautiful classes of animals in the world, as far as colour is concerned — butterflies and humming-birds — are, perhaps, the most exclusively flower-hauting of all invertebrate or vertebrate creatures respectively, and the parrots and their allies, which possess equally beautiful colouring, are fruit-eaters. Indeed, a correspondence with, if not a direct relationship to, the colour and nature of food, as well as of habitual surroundings, may be traced, with few contradictions, and many of these but seeming; and the general rule emerges that animals that possess conspicuous colouring themselves are those, also, which live upon the essence of flowers, or fruits, and are guided, in the search for food, by their "eye for colour." The inverse of this rule is found equally to correspond, on the whole, with facts, for the raptorial birds, which live mostly in the air, and whose senses are more attuned to discriminate sound and movement, are generally, themselves wanting in bright colours. The whiter-plumaged birds in a flock of pigeons, for instance, are nearly always the first to be destroyed by hawks on land, and on the coast where there are sea-eagles, black pigeons are at an equal disadvantage.

Don't Talk Too Much.

When we are in the company of sensible men, we ought to be doubly cautious of talking too much, lest we lose two good things — their good opinion and our own improvement; for what we have to say we know, but what they have to say we know not.

INDOOR BASEBALL.

TERRIERS TRIMMED TIGERS.

A great game of indoor baseball was played in the Armories last night between teams calling themselves Terriers and Tigers. The former were supposed to be old-time baseball players and the manner in which some of them played was evidence that they had considerable knowledge of the game. The team was composed of railway officials, bankers and professional men. The Tigers were chiefly officers of the XVth Regt. Lt.-Col. Marsh was umpire, fulfilling that position in a most acceptable manner. When nine innings had been played the score was a tie, both teams having made 18 runs. It was decided to play an extra innings, and the Terriers went in to win. Before three men had been retired they had secured 9 runs. The Tigers made a determined effort to scalp their opponents, but were unable to do so, securing but 6 runs. The final score was 27 to 24 in favor of the Terriers. A goodly number of spectators witnessed the game, including many ladies. At the conclusion of the match refreshments were served in the officers' quarters. The line-up of the teams was as follows:

Terriers—	Tigers—
Edmunds,	Hyman,
Clarke,	Allen,
Coleman,	Cook,
Snyder,	Hudson,
Ferd,	Wilson,
Saunders,	Orr,
Campion,	Brown,
Bull,	Wallbridge,
Whick,	Proctor.

Score by innings:—
Terriers .. .. 2 5 5 1 0 1 0 4 0 9—27
Tigers .. .. 3 1 1 5 3 1 3 1 0 6—24

HOCKEY.

PRESTON GOT FIRST.

MIDLAND, Feb. 21.—Preston defeated the home team in the first of the home-and home games of the O.H.A. intermediate finals by a score of 18 to 17. Half-time score was 10 to 5 in favor of the visitors.

Midland not only overcame Preston's lead in the second half, but looked like winners just before the finish, when the score stood 16 to 14 in its favor. Then two of the local septet were penalized by Referee Hern, with the result that Preston eventually won out by 18 to 17.

Other games of general interest last night were: At Quebec—Ottawa 3, Quebec 6. At Montreal—Wanderers 9, Canadiens 1.

CAMPAIGN STARTED TO RAISE $8000

The Y. M. C. A. Need that Amount to Furnish their Building and Put it on a Sound Financial Basis—Three Days Campaign Inaugurated Last Night—It Will be a Strenuous One

A campaign to raise $8,000 in three days to complete the equipment and run the new Y.M.C.A. building for one year has been launched, with every prospect of success. The rally cry is that this can and will be accompished.

Last evening in the new building the campaign teams dined together, and despite the severe weather there were a large number of prominent citizens present, who are thoroughly imbued with Y. M. C. A. work. Mr. D. V. Sinclair, President of the Association, occupied the chair. The supper provided was all that could have been wished for and was served well by a number of the boys who are members of the Association.

J. F. SHEPARD
Field Secretary, Y.M.C.A.

After supper the aims and objects of the gathering were explicitly explained by the chairman and Mr. J. L. Hess, the indefatigable Secretary.

Mr. F. S. Sheppard, of Toronto, Field Secretary of Y. M. C. A. work, spoke at some length, detailing the work of the Association and the good it had accomplished. He congratulated the local Association on having erected such a fine building, which could not help but be a great benefit to the city by helping young men. The religious phase of the work was especially emphasized by the speaker. Such an Association offers many privileges to the young men of the city. The growth of Y. M. C. A. work was phenomenal. There were at present 5,000 such organizations on this continent, and many more were being organized. To his mind it was the best investment a person could make when subscribing to Y. M. C. A. work. A person could not put too much into such a noble work.

Minute speeches eulogistic of Y. M. C. A. work and especially what had been accomplished here, were given by Messrs. R. J. Graham, Walter Alford, H. Pringle, L. R. Terwilligar, C. B. Scantlebury and A. E. Bailey. Nearly all the speakers spoke in glowing terms of what Mr. Hess had done and the sacrifice he had made. Mr. Pringle stated that Mr. Hess had refused the offer of a position which financially was worth to him more than double what he was receiving as Secretary of the Association here.

Mr. Hess spoke at some length on what could be done by the Association. Personally he was pleased wtih the building and equipment. It was a unique building, well knit together and such a vast improvement in every respect over the premises the Association had occupied for years. The atmosphere of the building, the speaker said, was such that it would be beneficial to the boys. There was everything for the boys and young men to help them, not only physically and morally, but spiritually. Classes would be formed to help those who desired to improve their position in life. He referred to the city's prosperity and that it was advancing. There would virtually be in the near future three Y. M. C. A.'s in the city, namely, this building, a branch at Abert College and the G. T. R. were going to erect a building for their employees here It was possible that the C.N.O.R. and C.P.R. would also join in the project.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair mapped out explicitly what was required to be accomplished in the present campaign. The cost of the building, equipping of same and runing expenses for one year amounted to $52,500. Of this amount $30,000 had been subscribed, $5,000 subscribed conditionally by Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.P., of this city, and $5,000 by Lord Strathcona, leaving still $12,500 to be provided. Of the latter amount $1,500 had been subscribed by the directors of the Association, $500 by the Ladies' Auxiliary, $250 by Mr. Longwel, of Toronto, $100 from the Dominion Bank, $250 by the W.C.T.U. and $2,000 from other sources, leaving $8,000 to be raised yet. Can this amount be secured, asked the speaker. He felt confident that it could, and a three days' campaign to get this amount would be started in the morning and closed on Tuesday, with Saturday as a day for business. Eleven teams had been selected, ten being senior and one boy team. The speaker then outlined how it was proposed to divide the work of canvassing the city, and the number of subscriptions each team were required to secure in order to obtain the amount required. He personally had no misgivings, but that the required amount would be subscribed in the time specified.

During his remarks Mr. Sinclair referred to the sacrifice Mr. Hess had made on behalf of the Y.M.C.A. in this city. The present building was largely due to his energy and perseverance.

The teams selected to obtain the required amounts are composed as follows:—

R. J. Graham, Capt.; C. Clapp, S. T. Thompson, F. W. Millard, J. A. Goodsell, and P. F. Canniff.

E. F. Dickens, Capt.; Dr. Yeomans, Dr. McCullough, Mr. Shorey and W. Cornelius.

Geo. Woodley, L. R. Terwilligar, C. A. Hart, W. B. Riggs, F. S. Deacon and H. Hampton.

W. A. A. Chown, Capt.; Mr. Moorman, A. Schryver, Dr. Clarke, Bert McCoy and E. A. Ridley.

Mr. H. Mowry, Capt.; H. Holton, H. Saunders, T. H. Dando, Mr. Marston and T. Thompson.

H. Pringle, Capt.; W. McGie, C. M. Reid, W. C. Mikel and Walter Alford.

H. F. Ketcheson, John Elliott, R. Stafford, C. J. Symons, W. T. Fleming and E. R. McBride.

A. E. Bailey, J. H. Moore, Geo. Dulmage, A. Blackburn and E. P. Frederick.

W. B. Deacon, Capt.; A. M. Chapman, J. C. Moynes, J. O. R. McCurdy, F. [illegible] O'Flynn, W. Lattimer.

D. V. Sinclair, R. Templeton, G. Barlow, W. S Smith, Jas. Dyer and J. Griffith.

Boys—[illegible] McCreary, Capt.; Pat Yeomans, H. Rodgers, G. Sinclair, S. Nurse, H. Woodley, H. Reid, Scantlebury, Pearce, W. Finkle, J. Archibald, G. Berkley and A. Hitchon.

MEXICO IS AN ARMED CAMP

Reports Indicate Outlawry is Spreading Rapidly--Fear For Lives

WASHINGTON, D.C., Feb. 21.—That a condition of anarchy and general outlawry exists throughout Mexico, marked by depredations of a most serious character, involving Americans, British and other foreigners was made clear in despatches from the American representatives in that country, which was received at the State Department to-day.

That women and children are not regarded as safe in Mexico, is made plain by the fact that hundreds have been fleeing the country for the last week.

In response to an appeal for protection for 30 Americans employed on the Nogales ranch of the Sonora Mexican Land & Timber Company, which was received by President Taft to-day acting Secretary of State Wilson cabled to A. V. Dye, the consul at Nogales, directing that a thorough investigation of the trouble on this ranch be made at once. The appeal from the ranch was signed by W. H. Moore, the foreman, who demanded protection for himself and the other Americans employed there.

According to the State Depratment's advices the State of Chihuahua is in a condition of chaos. The entire district of Casas Grandes is under rebel dominion.

It is feared here that all that is needed to plunge Mexico again into civil strife is the appearance of a leader who can harmonize the factions and bring the rebellious elements together. Sinaloa, Oaxaca and Yucatan are said to be virtually in a state of open warfare against the Madero government, while from all quarters of Mexico reports of raids by marauding bands continue to increase.

Americans in the Culiacan Valley, in South Mexico, have suffered to such an extent from the operation of the robber bands that they have made an urgent appeal for aid to the United States government through Consul Alger.

48 Killed in Engagements.

GUERNAVACA, Mex., Feb. 21.—The rebels suffered a loss of 37 dead and six taken prisoners while eleven rural guards were killed and nine wounded as the result of three sharp encounters between a force of rebels from the state of Guerrero under the command of Jesus Salgado and a body of Federal troops near Tlatlaya on the southern boundary of Mexico State yesterday.

Salgado's force was driven back into the State of Guerrero by the Federal troops with the loss of a large amount of munitions and a number of horses.

Purchase Square Mile of Land for Big Harbor Works.

QUEBEC February 22.—The Canadian Northern Railway has just bought about a square mile of land and beach lots at Cap Rouge. There is a depth of 35 feet at low tide, where their new property is situated.

It is sa'd that the company's object in buying this land is to have deep-water quays for a mile along the river front to establish freight yards and erect grain elevators.

HYDRO ELECTRIC ORGANIZATION

Ask that Hon. Adam Beck be Paid for His Services as Chairman

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—Delegates to the Hydro-Electric convention to-day decided upon the name "Ontario Municipalities Electric Association" for the organization of municipalities taking hydro power. They will act together as far as possible in the purchase of supplies and try to standardize equipment. They forwarded a resolution to Sir James Whitney asking that Hon. Adam Beck be given adequate remuneration for his services in the past in hydro matters and that he be placed on an annual salary as Chairman of the Hydro-Electric Commission.

PRINCE INJURED

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 22—While fox hunting in Yorkshire to-day, Prince Arthur of Connaught, the Governor-General's son, was thrown from his horse, sustaining injuries which at first were thought to be serious, but later were found to be only trifling.

(Intelligencer Special.)

GLASGOW, Feb. 23.— The steel manufacturers of Glasgow to-day posted a notice that all work will be suspended in their plants in the event of a coal strike. Ten thousand men would be affected.

STALLED ON C. P. R.

(Intelligencer Special.)

HAVELOCK, Ont., Feb. 23.—The Montreal and Ottawa C.P.R. trains which left Toronto at ten o'clock last night are stalled in the snow at Cavan, where immense drifts have piled up.

WIND BLEW NINETY MILES AN HOUR.

Record Velocity for Eastern America.—Many Wires Down.—What the Storm Did.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The gale from the southwest which swept the east last night and early this morning attained in New York and vicinity a maximum velocity of 90 miles an hour This breaks all weather bureau records here, the highest previous wind velocity having been 83 miles, in April, 1908.

Telegraph companies say it was one of the hardest nights on wires in the history of this country. Wire service is generally demoralized east of the Mississippi, and the damage will run into the thousands. No loss of life is reported from New York and environs, but several plate glass windows were blown in and wooden structures were damaged. This morning a fine snow was falling.

Frank S. Coffyn's hydro-aeroplane was wrecked on a raft in the North river, and the tugboat 'Margaret D.' was sunk in the East river. Brick chimneys were toppled over by the score.

BAND FESTIVAL.

Despite the inclemency of the weather last night there were a goodly number present at the Salvation Army baracks where a band festival took place. A programme, varied and intensely interesting was presented. The fine Army band rendered a number of selections which were of a high order. A number of vocal selections were rendered by members of the Army and Miss Robinson gave some recitations, which were highly pleasing. The entertainment throughout was one that was thoroughly enjoyed by all present.

DIED IN CALIFORNIA.

Word has been received in the city announcing the death of Mrs. Annie Hines, which occurred at San Jose, California, on the 13th inst. Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. Wm. Kyle, who resided in the 6th concession of Thurlow. She had resided in California for some time. Mrs. Hines was a cousin of Mrs. (Chief) Newton, of this city.

LAUGHS AND JEERS ON WAY TO GALLOWS.

Murderer of Three Spurns the Pleadings of his own Son, a Priest

MOBILE, Ala., Feb. 22.—Spurning the pleadings of his own son, a Catholic priest, and a Protestant clergyman, J. Lawrence Odom, laughingly mounted the gallows and was hanged here for the murder of three persons. Father Odom and the clergyman remained in the condemned man's cell all night, praying and urging them to join them, but he steadfastly refused.

As daylight came he was asked to say a last prayer, and his only response was a request that Hazel, his five year old daughter, be brought to the prison to remove the black cap. He jeered when he was asked if he would not see his wife.

Odom was convicted of slaying Charles Goland, Joseph Stokes and David Gartman on March 18th, 1910, at Citronelle, Ala. Gartman was only 16 years old. Odom shot him down at the feet of his mother because the boy and both men had testified against him on a charge of cruelty to dogs. and ergulate their charges.

'DESTITUTE' ON $250 A MONTH.

Mrs. Sutton Says High Cost of Living Is Responsible.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The "high cost of living" figures in the suit which Mrs. Louise S. Sutton of 139 Bainbridge Street, Brooklyn, has brought against her husband, in the Supreme Court of that borough. Yesterday Mrs. Sutton asked Justice Marean for counsel fees and alimony.

Although she owns and lives in a fine house in one of Brooklyn's best neighborhoods, she declared that she was 'destitute. Mrs. Sutton alleges that what she received from her husband was not sufficient in this time of high prices to support herself properly. She put in a statement showing that her average monthly expenses amounted to $574. Of this $150 was for car fare, luncheons, hire of conveyances, 'entertainments, entertainment, and amusement." She said that her husband, who is in the exporting business in Manhattan, had an income of least $30,000 a year.

Mr. Sutton stated that he bought the house in which his wife lives, that he gave her $10,000 three years ago, and that he makes her a monthly allowance of $250. He was also, he said paying his eldest son's expenses at college. It was not stated in Mrs. Sutton's petition what amount of alimony was expected.

Justice Marean took the papers in the case, which were submitted without argument by counsel, and reserved his decision.

If ignorance is biss we feel sorry for the fellow who know it all.

FORGOT $1,400 UNDER PILLOW.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—When C. A. Sigmund, of Detroit, Mich., got up yesterday morning at the Breslin Hotel and dressed preparatory to going to Palm Beach, he left a wallet containing $1,410 and two round-trip tickets from New York to Palm Beach under his pillow. He had two round trip tickets because Mrs. Sigmund was with him.

Smilingly the two called a taxicab and departed for the Pennsylvania terminal to catch the 11.16 train. Manager David Mulligan, of the Breslin was just strolling into the lobby, when a Swedish chambermaid, entirely unmindful of hotel rules and conventions went up to him and said, as she handed the bulging wallet to Mulligan:

"Ay ban tak dis oop yust naow. Ay tank it ban big money. You ban batter keep him." Mulligan counted the roll and sent for his house detective. While the house man was speeding to the Pennsylvania station Mr. and Mrs. Sigmund were breaking records back to the Breslin.

After some good work by the Breslin 'phone girl, the whole crowd got together and the lawful owner of the roll took possession of it and liberally rewarded the telephone girl.

HARDWARE DEALERS ELECT OFFICERS

Wholesalers also Organize and Confer With Retailers at Guelph.

GUELPH, Feb. 22.—At this afternoon's session of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association the chief business transacted was the election of officers as follows:—President, M. S. Madole, Napanee; Vice-Presidents, H. Occomore, Guelph, and F. F. McPherson, Prescott; Treasurer, John Casier, Toronto; Secretary, Wesley Wrigley, Toronto, Executive W. Magladery, New Liskeard; W. W. Bennett, Gananoque; D. A. McNab, Orillia; Ed. Wanless, Chatham; C. W. Conn, Tilsonburg; F. W. Otton, Barrie. Auditors, J. W. Peacock and S. M. Burt, Toronto.

Mr. W. G. Wright of Toronto spoke on "Fire Insurance Problems Affecting the Retailer."

This evening a big euchre party was held in the city hall, for which a large number of prizes of worth were offerd. One hundred tables were used. The convention closes at noon on Friday. Next year the convention will be held at Hamilton.

About one hundred manufacturers and their agents, who are in attendance at the convention, met this morning and gave their feelings vent. They were unanimously of the opinion that as they were the backbone of the convention they should have some say in the arrangements, and not be at the beck and call of the retailers. It was decided to form an association known as the Canadian Hardware Manufacturers' Exhibition, Limited, to control all exhibitions of manufactures in that line, and the following officers were elected:—President, A. E. Bittues, Montreal; Vice-Presidents, F. M. Tobin, Woodstock; W. J. Norwal, Owen Sound; Charles E. Stewart, Woodstock, and M. R. Griffiths, Toronto. Two committees, the Exhibition and Entertainment, respectively, were also lected.

The officers met later to confer with the Executive of the retail hardware men and arrange to have the two associations work in harmony. Satisfactory arrangements were made.

MESSENGER BOY HELD UP.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Philip Rosenberg, a 17 year old American District Telegraph messenger boy, was held up and robbed by three men in Lexington Avenue between Thirty-seventh and Thirty-eighth Streets, at 7 o'clock last night. The robbers got away, and although detectives searched the neighborhood with the lad they were unable to find any trace of them.

The boy walked into East Thirty-fifth Street station, his face and head bruised and crying. He told the police he had been sent from the American District Telegraph branch, where he worked, to the firm of Julius Stern & Co., women's costumers, at 303 Fifth Avenue. They gave him two parcels which he was to deliver at an address at Thirty-eighth Street and Park Avenue. He walked over to Lexington Avenue and took a car. He said he got off at Thirty-seventh St. in mistake for Thirty-eighth Street, and walked north in the avenue. Half way up the block where the light was out and the avenue was badly lighted, he said three men pounced on him. One of them caught his throat, another batted his face and head with his fists, and the third man wrested the parcels from his hands. The three men fled, but Rosenberg was so frightened that he had no idea as to the direction in which the men ran.

WEDDING BELLS.

BOWLER—FOLEY.

The marriage of Milton H. Bowler and Mary Ethel Foley took place at the residence of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Bowler, Front Street, who now occupy the restaurant stand formerly carried on by Mrs. W. A. Morton. The ceremony was duly soleminized by Rev. W. G. Clarke., pastor of the Tabernacle church, in the presence of a large company who had gathered to witness the happy event in spite of the severe weather. The bride was tastefully dressed in a navy blue silk dress with cream lace and carired a bouquet of carnations. The bridesmaid, Miss Ethel Haslip, wore a white silk dress. The groomsman was Mr. Roy Westover. After the ceremony the company sat down to an elaborate supper prepared after Mrs. Bowler's best manner. The celebration was continued to the small hours of the morning.

FINDS $1,000 IN GEMS.

Fireman Picks Them Up Near Cemetery, Where Mrs. Cantoni Lost Them.

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—The effort to trace $3,500 in cash and jewelry which Mrs. Irene Cantoni of 253 West Forty-second St., Manhattan, had told the police were either lost or stolen as she was returning from visiting the grave of a friend in Calvary Cemetery Tuesday evening, ended before Magistrate Miller in the Long Island City Court yesterday afternoon, when Fireman Frederick W. Petry of Truck 78 was cleared of any suspicion that might have attached to him because of his having found about $1,000 worth of gems. This, Mrs. Cantoni admitted at the hearing, was practically all she lost, her first estimate having been wrong.

Cppt. Jensen of Truck 78 produced Petry in court and an examination was held in private in the Magistrate's office.

Fireman Petry told of finding the jewelry near the cemetery shortly after daybreak yesterday and of turning them over to Detective Antonio Capone. The inquiry lasted for about two hours and Magistrate Miller then rendered a decision exonerating Petry. The gems were later returned to Mrs. Cantoni.

BLACKMAIL CHARGED.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Francis R. Arnold, whose name has become familiar since the disappearance of his daughter Dorothy in December, 1910, and who has since received threatening letters, believes that at last his most persistent annoyer is under arrest. The girl whom he accuses is Bessie Green, a negress, 23 years old, who lives at No. 14 West 133rd Street. She was arrested to-day in the District Attorney's office by Detectives Russo and Flood, and was taken before Magistrate Barlow in the West Side Court, who held her in $5,000 bail for examination tomorrow on affidavit charging attempted blackmail.

Within the last year Mr. Arnold has received about three dozen threatening letters. Beginning on June 2nd a series of letters, apparently written by the same hand, began to come to the Arnold house. The letters were generally short, the longest not taking up more than two pages.

They made demands for sums varying from $1,000 to $8,000 and threatened in case the demnads were not complied with, that either Mr. Arnold would be shot on sight by the writer or that a family scandal would be disclosed.

KILLED IN HUSBAND'S AUTO.

Philadelphia Woman a Victim of Collision With a Street Car.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 22.—Mrs. W. M. Pilchard, wife of a local produce merchant, was killed this morning in a collision between her husband's automobile and a street car, the latter being thrown from the tracks, half way across the street, against a trolley pole.

Mr. Pilchard was driving out of the Parkway at Twenty-second street and put on speed to pass the car. The motorman increased his speed at the same time, and the automobile struck the car. Mrs. Pilchard was sitting on the front seat with her husband. The front of the machine was crushed in, leaving Pilchard unscathed, but fatally injuring Mrs. Pilchard.

Mr. Pilchard was arrested charged with reckless driving.

When Taken Suddenly Ill— Here is a Common-Sense Safeguard

Big, strong man is as a helpless infant when he is suddenly ill.

The sturdiest chap in town usually loses his self control, and is utterly unable to regard his condition with the common sense that characterizes his every-day actions.

For example: He comes home tired eats a heavy dinner and sits down to read and smoke a away a quiet evening.

Suddenly he notices a weight on his stomach; then sharp pains around his heart, and a feeling of suffocation. Thoughts of "heart disease" rush over him, and in his agony he fears the worst.

His trouble was acute indigestion brought on by overloading his tired stomach.

A couple af Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets might have given him relief— might have saved him hours of suffering.

Carry a package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets in your vest pocket or keep them in your room. Take one after each heavy meal, and ward off indigestion.

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets relieve Stomach troubles by aiding nature to supply those elements, the absence of which in the gastric juices, causes indigestion and dyspepsia. They tend to aid the stomach to digest all kinds of food and to quickly convert it into rich red blood.

We know what Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are and what they will do. We guarantee them to relieve indigestion and dyspepsia. If they fail, we will refund your money.

Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Sold only at our stores or by mail. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. McKeown, Belleville.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —
JOHN MARCH
(AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

Meanwhile, Paul, having related the story of his unfortunate adventure to Lady Hargrave and Miss Primrose, and been efficiently cross-examined upon the minutest detail, went to his room tired and over-wrought.

On the toilet table lay a large square envelope, redolent of musk, and addressed to him in a thin pointed handwriting. He took it up, guessed the caligraphy, and tossed it back again. It fell upon the other side disclosing a large gold monogram of the initials R.W. fantastically interwoven.

"Come in," he said wearily, in answer to a sharp decided rap upon the door.

A neat maidservant entered and set a brass ewer of hot water on the washstand.

"I am Lucy," she said, curtseying and smiling, "Miss Judith's maid. She asked me to take a note to you, sir, so I thought I had better bring your hot water instead of Susan."

"Thank you," he said, holding out his hand for the missive.

"We heard in the kitchen, sir, that you had met with an accident to your face. I'm sure I hope it will be better in the morning," she added, moving away.

"Thank you, Lucy; good-night," he said, following and closing the door behind her.

He drew an easy chair to the small compact writing-table, and placing his elbows on the blotting-pad he rested his aching head upon his hands. After a while he sighed, reached for the paper-knife and opened Judith Hargrave's letter.

An impatient frown drew a perpendicular line between his brows as he bent to peruse the neat closely-written sheets. Ere long a dark red flush crept over his face and slowly mounted to his forehead. He bit his lips, unloosened his grasp on the arm of the chair, and resorted unconsciously to his old trick of stroking the back of his head when in uncertainty or agitation. A distressed smile succeeded the rush of hot blood to his face. He turned the fluttering pages, and commenced reading the letter—a second time.

"Please forgive me for writing to you," it ran. "I have tried several times to tell you how miserable I am, but whenever the opportunity came my nerve always failed me. To-night I knew you were gone to East Weyberne, so I went part of the way home with Agnes Fleming, and waited in the avenue, thinking it would be easier to speak in the dark. You didn't come. I knelt down on the dead bracken and asked God to send you to comfort me, because I knew that just the touch of your hand would ease the dreadful ache in my heart. I waited and watched until I grew frightened and sick and mad with suspense. I daresay you will think I am mad to write this, but Lucy says you are hurt, and I am frantic with fear. The uncertainty of not knowing whether you care is killing me. I can't read in your dear eyes what you feel towards me, but it seems to me that such a passion of love as fills my heart must compel some sort of return. I know I ought not to send you this, but if I do not to-night, I shall to-morrow, or the next day. I can't help myself; I am past caring for proprieties, past caring for anything. I am just mad—or drunk—with love of you. For God's sake send me one kind word to-night and forgive—Judith."

He paced up and down the room, the letter in his hand, a half-smile on his lips, and a troubled expression in his great dark eyes.

"Desperate diseases require desperate remedies," he muttered. Reseating himself and drawing a sheet of notepaper towards him, he wrote:

"Dear Miss Hargrave,—The truth in this instance is essential and may be brutal. I am sure you are too wise to fret at the inevitable, and have too much pride to allow any man to spoil your happiness. Be a sensible girl and marry that dear good fellow Anthony Pelham and I will forgive you, Miss Judith. I have a simple cut under my eye which will heal in a day or so.—Yours faithfully,

Paul Farley."

He took off his boots, thrust his feet into a pair of cloth slippers, and carefully let himself out of the room. He crept downstairs to the next landing, and slipped the note under Judith Hargrave's door, and returned as noiselessly as he had gone.

"Now, Mrs. Wycherly," he said, catching up the scented gold-emblazoned envelope, "I don't know what you can have to say to me, but I am too tired to answer any more letters to-night."

He cut it open and drew forth a thick gilt-edged invitation card, printed on a fine glossy surface.

"Requests the pleasure of my company at a Bal Masque on the tenth of next month. Thank you, madam, I will give the matter my special attention to-morrow. Mon Dieu! what an atrocious headache. I'll lie down a few minutes before I undress."

He stretched himself on the bed, drew the coverlet over him, shivered, and clasped his fingers across his smarting eyes.

Thus Paul Farley, bruised, harrassed, and over-wearied, fell asleep.

CHAPTER VI.

The Tryst in the Shrubbery

Judith Hargrave did not put in an appearance at the breakfast table. Sir Thomas refrained from commenting on her absence, but he cast covert glances at his secretary's dark, inscrutable face as he sat silent and preoccupied, trifling with his bacon and eggs.

"Finished, Farley?" he asked, as Paul, putting an end to his pretence at eating, rose and excused himself. "God bless my soul! You look seedy enough in all conscience: I should say an hour in the saddle before breakfast would put a little grit and stamina into you. I want to look at the foals, and at the second crop of grass down in the nine-acre meadow to-morrow morning. I can mount you very decently, Farley, if you care to go?"

"You are very good, sir," he answered, smiling a little, and gathering the untidy heap of correspondence beside Sir Thomas's plate into a semblance of order; "I was never across a horse in my life."

"That is no reason why you never should be," he returned, laughing; "a hack and a country lane serve as first principles, and they are both accessible."

"Thank you. I'll have the answers to these ready in half an hour, sir," he said, hurrying from the room with his bundle of letters, telegrams and circulars.

"I'll come with you," Sir Thomas called after him, gulping down his coffee and dusting his moustache with his serviette.

"There is no necessity to be plagued with the boys; let things slide to-day, Farley," he remarked, as he signed the last letter and threw down his pen. "Besides, I shall have to make a speech to-morrow at the Farmers' Association Meeting, and I want you to write me up something you consider adapted to an audience composed chiefly of tenant farmers, with a sprinkling of landlords and laborers." He lit a cigar, flung the spent match into the fireplace, and walked to the door. "By the way, Farley," he said, "just bear in mind that the majority of the audience have not matriculated, and that a sense of the ludicrous is latent in most people, and, as I haven't an itch for speaking, for heaven's sake don't make the affair too long."

"I understand," he answered readily; "I'll see to it at once."

He sat down there and then and wrote a concise, lucid oration on agricultural depression, the cause and effect of rural depopulation, interspersed with a few statistics. There were some clever hits at the Government's policy, and a telling, pithy story of an Irish landlord. He typed it and laid it in a conspicuous place on the writing-table, where it would catch the master's eye, and he could peruse and study it at his leisure.

He passed the rest of the morning lying full length on a garden bench with a cigarette and a French novel. After luncheon he played cricket in his shirt sleeves with Tom and Harry Hargraves, and eventually sipped a cup of tea in the library while he wrote an article for a London daily paper. Later, he dined alone with Lady Hargrave, and seeing she was absent-minded, and not in very good spirits, he laid himself out to win her attention and draw her thoughts away from domestic worries. He clothed his original ideas and views with an indescribable grace and witchery, and marshalled the conversation with such consummate skill that the kind soul was charmed out of herself, and for the first time in her life discovered she was a brilliant talker.

Lady Hargrave left him over his Canary wine in the dusk, and he sat musing until the starlight glimmered through the giant branches stretched across the window. At a quarter to eight he donned his tweed cap, buttoned a light overcoat over his evening clothes, and set out in the direction of the Manor.

Listless, Backward Children
Made Bright and Active
by Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

Many a growing boy or girl is set down as constitutionally slow, stupid or lazy when it is really a question of inactive bowels, lazy liver or sluggish kidneys.

The growing child, with a hearty appetite, certainly cannot long remain healthy and bright if the sewers of the body, the bowels and the kidneys, are choked up with impurities that should be thrown off promptly.

The muddy complexion, dragging limbs and dislike for mental or physical effort show plainly that the child needs Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills to stir up the liver and kidneys and regulate the bowels. Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills do this most effectively, cleansing the whole system, purifying the blood, aiding the digestion and giving plenty of life and activity. As upon the education obtained may depend the success in life of your boy or girl—see to it that the general health of the child is such that study is pleasure and not a hardship.

NOT A REVERSAL.

Hon. J. C. Doherty Discusses Charbonneau Decision.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—Hon. C. J. Doherty, Minister of Justice, was seen in reference to the judgment in the Hebert case and its effect in law, as well as on the Lancaster bill, and the reference of the whole matter to the Supreme Court and thence to the Privy Council.

The Minister said the judgment was not really a reversal of the judgment of Judge Laurendeau in the same case, but rather took its place, because it was a judgment by default, no defence being put in. If either party moves in opposition to such a judgment, the case will be reheard, and so this was practically a rehearing.

"Will this make any difference in the reference by this Government to the Supreme Court, decided on at the time of the vote on the Lancaster bill?"

"Not the slightest," replied the Minister. "If this were the decision of a final court it would, but as the case stands now, there are five judgments that such marriage is invalid and three that it is valid. Before to-day's judgment there were five one way and two the other. That's all."

"It makes no difference in the jurisprudence," concluded the Minister, "and will not in any way affect the policy of referring such questions to the Supreme Court of Canada."

Quebec Law Vindicated.

Montreal, Feb. 23.—G. V. Cousins and Arnold Wainwright, attorneys of Mrs. Hebert, said after the verdict:

"The judgment is the vindication of the law of the Province of Quebec—especially concerning this case and the ne temere decree."

L. J. Lefebvre, the attorney of Eugene Hebert, the plaintiff in the application for annulment of marriage, declared:

"I am not ready to state that I will appeal the judgment, because I must see my client first. Nevertheless, I believe there is good foundation for appeal, especially on the desistment.

"The case was proceeded with exparte, and now that the judgment is rendered against us, I do not see why we should not secure a leave to oppose it, just as Mrs. Hebert secured one to appeal against the decision rendered by Justice Laurendeau. When the case was proceeded with exparte we were not givn an opportunity of giving evidence. The case should have been inscribed on the regular roll of the Superior Court and proceeded with in the usual way. I think there is good ground for appeal."

Archbishop Bruchesi first heard the news after he had arrived at the palace from a parochial visit, and was eager to hear the result.

When told of the findings a look of disappointment came over his face.

"I cannot discuss it," said he. "You see my position in a matter of this kind. It is impossible for me to give out a statement."

Bishop Farthing says that the judgment is a most important one, but he is not prepared to offer any criticism on it until he has had an opportunity of carefully reading the full judgment.

Demoralized at Kingston.

Kingston, Feb. 23.—Kingston is in the grip of the worst storm in years. For the first time in ten years the noon express over the Kingston & Pembroke Railway for Renfrew had to be canceled, and all other trains were hours late.

A queer freak of the storm was that early yesterday morning there was hail and rain with thunder and lightning, and citizens were startled.

The street railway has been tied up all day and is not likely to get opened for a day or two. Business in the stores it at a standstill.

Belleville Snowbound.

Belleville, Feb. 23.—This city is in the grip of the worst storm in years. The wind blew a gale and the falling snow was piled up in great heaps.

The country roads leading into the city, especially those north and south, are filled. On the line of the Midland Railway, a branch of the G.T.R. here, all trains were canceled. An effort was made to take a light train to Peterboro with two engines, but it became stalled in the snow. All business during the day was at a standstill.

Wants Bigger Navy.

Washington, Feb. 23.—Representative Jefferson Levy of New York celebrated Washington's birthday by proposing a change in the two battleship a year program in the House. He introduced a bill empowering the President to build four battleships annually, each to cost less than $6,000,000, exclusive of armament.

Mr. Levy would have the ships carry "as heavy armor and as powerful armament as any vessel of their class, and to have the highest practicable speed and the greatest practicable radius of action." The bill would appropriate $20,000,000 to start the work. It was referred to the committee on naval affairs.

Home Rule Bill In Early March.

London, Feb. 23.—A circular announcing the Irish National banquet on St. Patricks Day, where John Redmond will preside, states:

"It is expected that the home rule bill, to which Irish Nationalists confidently look forward for realization of their country's hopes, will be introduced in the House of Commons shortly before the date of the banquet."

The circular bears the signatures of two Irish members of Parliament, Jerry McVeagh and Matthew Keating, and gives importance to the statement that the home rule bill will be introduced about the second week of March.

A project unique even in the annals of Western Canadian publicity, has recently been endorsed by the Board of Trade of Camrose, Alta., and if the recommendations of that body are acted upon by the town council, it should be carried into effect at no distant date. The project is to send a special car, fitted up with farm products, and in charge of twelve townsmen and farmers, to eastern points where members of the party are well known, with a view to obtaining land buyers, and settlers. Liberal use would be made of litearture while the travellers would naturally be well posted on all details as to farm properties in the district, as well as to the distributing facilities at Camrose, its industrial opportunities and coal development.

It is even contemplated following up the work with a special settlers' train leaving Toronto and other points on a fixed date, and running straight to Camrose.

It is understood that Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture for Alberta, has agreed to supply the entire exhibit for the car free of charge. Camrose is in the centre of a rich agricultural district on the Calgary-Edmonton branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway.

THE HEBERT CASE.

The judgment of Judge Charbonneau in the long-pending Hebert marriage case, of which a brief synopsis was given in The Intelligencer yesterday, is eminently satisfactory in more ways than one. The learned judge's finding that the "Ne Temere" decree has no civil effect in the Province of Quebec is not only entirely in accord with the views which have repeatedly been given expression to in these columns, but it will prove of material assistance to the court of last resort in arriving at a conclusion on the subject.

According to a despatch from Ottawa the Cabinet is considering the questions to be submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada respecting the marriage law as proposed in the Lancaster Bill. While there will be three or four points upon which a decision will be asked, the one of outstanding importance is whether it lies within the constitutional jurisdiction and competence of the Federal Parliament to enact a marriage law, having regard to the provisions of the British North America Act, relating to the form of marriage.

Heretofore, as a matter of custom, the prescription of the form of marriage has rested solely with the Provinces, hence the doubt as to the right of the Dominion Parliament to legislate.

Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., former Judge of the Supreme Court of Canada, will be the chief counsel for the Government in the case. It is probable that there will be others associated with him, but they have not yet been appointed.

Mr. Nesbitt's acceptance, however, has been received. The Government counsel it is understood, will not take sides, but will attend to the presentation of the case generally, outlining its history and the points upon which a pronouncement of the Court is sought, and in this respect the judgment of Judge Charbonneau will no doubt be of great assistance to him.

It is learned that the Provinces will be given the fullest opportunity of being represented by counsel in the argument if they choose to exercise that right. The wish, generally speaking, is that all aspects of the case be argued and all vital interests represented, in order that the issue may be conclusive in character.

Whatever the judgment of the Supreme Court, particularly if there is disagreement, the case will probably go to the Privy Council for final adjudication. The argument at Ottawa will not take place till towards the close of the term of the Supreme Court. It will likely be at the foot of the list, and this fact will afford opportunity for the requisite preparation.

POLITENESS.

Cleveland has chosen a woman as superintendent of her schools. She is said to be a woman of thirty-eight years' experience; of broad common sense and high educational attainments, and she takes her duties seriously. And if the stories of how she enters on them are true we can well believe that she will work something like a beneficent revolution among the young of Cleveland.

Miss Keeler proposes to teach the public school pupils politeness. And this is a teaching that is much needed. There is a general complaint that in many cases the public school pupils lack manners—are turned out educated savages. A United States exchange confesses that impoliteness is a national fault. Foreigners note it upon arrival, and are amazed at its general prevalence. It afflicts all classes and both sexes. It is observed on the streets and in public conveyances. Neither age nor physical condition is respected by man, woman or child. One may see in the street cars gray-haired women hanging to a strap over a seat occupied by another woman and her offspring probably 10 or 12 years of age. In a race for an unoccupied seat between an aged man or woman and a 15-year-old boy, the boy wins by reason of superior agility. The other day a girl of about eight boarded a street car carrying a child aged about two. She was permitted to stand before two women, trying to steady herself in the lurching car, with nothing to hold to in order to avoid falling, and neither of the women offered to give her a seat or relieve her of her burden. At the next stop a seat was vacated and an adult car hog in petticoats was about to appropriate it when a man blocked the way and pulled the child and her burden into the place. Conditions are not greatly different in Canadian cities. There are exceptions, of course, but politeness, consideration for others, respect for age, are all too little in evidence.

The fault is with the elders in the homes. The instruction is not set by example in the daily life. And it is a teaching which cannot be overlooked without wronging the child and injuring society. Text-book politeness alone will not supply the lack; but the public school can help. The personnel of the teacher counts in this matter, and the Cleveland superintendent's personality may count. A French author says: "It is truly the fragrant blossom of a gentle character. Rudeness thrives in coarse soil. The youth brought up to impoliteness is deserving of pity. So also is the community upon which he is inflicted, by his parents and teachers."

A bite of this and a taste of that, all day long, dulls the appetite and weakens the digestion.

DON'T LET THAT COUGH ROB YOU OF SLEEP

You probably know all too well how it goes. Just as you doze off, the tickling starts in your throat. A gentle cough, still asleep. A harder cough, and then another. First thing you know, you're wide awake, coughing your head off.

A few nights of that and you're so worn out and weakened that the cough takes a tight grip on you.

But why endure it?

Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne will soothe that exasperating tickling, loosen the phlegm and cure the inflammation of the mucous membrane. It not only stops the cough quickly, allowing you to get sound, refreshing sleep, but it goes to the root of the trouble and drives out the cold completely. Children willingly take Na-Dru-Co Syrup of Linseed, Licorice and Chlorodyne, because it tastes so good. Your Druggist has it or can quickly get it for you in 25c. and 50c. bottles. CURRENT COMMENT.

King Boreas abdicated during the night, but his icy breath and the ill effects of his mischievous mood remain as souvenirs of his reign.

"Did they have music at the entertainment?" asked William.

"No," replied Ethel, "just accordion playin'."

Quite a boomerang hit E. M. Macdonald (Lib.) when he made a patriotic outburst in favor of burning Canadian coal in the buildings at Ottawa, only to find that the reason it was not being used was that the contracts made by the late Government had to be carried out.—Guelph Herald.

A dogs' training college has been opened in the most fashionable quarter of Paris, where society women's pets are lodged, fed and educated for $30 a month, with a cheaper rate for day pupils. It has been suspected that some dogs are more intelligent than their owners. After a course in college any cause of doubt will in all likelihood be removed.—Montreal Gazette.

A new Massachusetts law forbids the use of a common drinking cup. Perryville, Mass., has a mill which is half in Massachusetts and half in Conecticut, and a dispatch tells how the employees cross to the Connecticut side when they wish a drink, as the water pail is kept there, where, presumably, any number of persons can use the same cup. This is funny, but there is not much to brag about in the evasion of uch a low.

The Grits have succeeded in retaining South Renfrew by about one-half of the majority which they obtained in the general election. That is not much of an achievement, in view of a serious division among the Conservatives of the constituency, some of whom, in pursuance of an agreement made at the time of the Ontario elections, voted for the candidate of the Liberal party.

Fines ranging from $50 to $500 were impoed in New York on Monday on dealers who had unfit poultry, meat and cake for sale. The largest fine was imposed on a corporation, the president of which tried to explain to the court that, while certain chickens were not of the best quality they were plenty good enough for cheap restaurants. For a long time New York courts have been dealing very severely with violators of the pure food law. That is the only way in which offences of this kind can be stopped.

The superintendent of the Long Island railroad has issued an order requiring conductors, trainmen and station agents to make every effort to ascertain the cause of any sudden interruption of train service and answer freely and courteously all questions asked by intending passengers or the public as to causes and probable duration of delays. This is a welcome innovation in railroad procedure, which heretofore has consisted in withholding all confidence from the public in such cases.

Any advances from the West Indies should be met in a spirit of generosity, of common brotherhood and of optimism. We should not repeat the mistake of many years ago when we might have had Newfoundland if we had not gone about the business in a haggling spirit. We are fast growing too big to count our pennies every time a big proposition is presented for our consideration. It is easy for a prosperous nation with plenty of empty land within its own boundaries to imagine that it will always be independent of the outside world, and will ask nothing of other peoples but to leave it alone. The Americans passed through that stage of development when they shunned "entangling allinnces" and would not build a fleet. But at last their splendid heritage began to show signs of exhaustion, and they quickly changed their mind. When we have eighty or ninety millions here, we may do the same thing. We are likely, indeed, to do it far sooner. But even then it may be too late if we have permitted the seedlings of Empire, which the dauntless navigators of Britain planted in the Spanish Main in the high days when courage counted and hearts were big, to drift away from us and find anchorage in the very harbor which is fated to be our greatest commercial and political rival.—Montreal Star.

Thin Frail Women With Pale Cheeks

NOW RAPIDLY LEARNING THE WAY TO HEALTH AND VIGOR BY THE USE OF DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

Thousands of half-dead, emaciated, worn-out women are dragging out their weary lives simply because they don't know what ails them. Nine times in ten it's indigestion, which directly leads to anaemia, poor circulation, and eventually invalidism.

The first step towards relief is to flush out all wastes and unhealthy matter. Loosen the bowels—stir up the liver—stimulate the kidneys. Once this is done, Dr. Hamilton's Pills will quickly manifest their health-restoring qualities.

"The best way to correct impaired digestion, to cure constipation, headache, liver trouble, and other ailments of the stomach and bowels," writes Mrs. Uriah Dempsey, from Woodstock, "is by the frequent use of Dr. Hamilton's Pills. I didn't know what it was to enjoy a good meal for months. My stomach was sour, I belched gas, was thin, tired, pale, and nervous. I simply housecleaned my system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills, and have been robust and vigorous ever since."

To keep the machinery of the body in active working order, no remedy is so efficient, so mild, so curative as Dr. Hamilton's Pills—good for men, women and children, 25c. per box, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Kingston, Ont.

BLACK HAND VENGEANCE.

New York Police Find Mutilated Body in Vacant Lot.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—In the finding to-day of the mutilated body of Joseph Bruno in a vacant lot in East New York, the police recognized another case of Black Hand vengeance. There were ten knife slashes in the face, ten terrible wounds in the body, and as a quietus, an eight-inch butcher knife was driven straight into the man's heart, where it still stuck when the body was found.

In addition, the murderers had cut part of Bruno's tongue away, evidence, the police say, that the killing was due to Bruno having talked more than his friends relished.

ARTIST HELD UP.

New York Man May Die as Result of an Attack.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—R. E. Shearer, a well-known artist, was the victim of three hold-up men who pounced upon him as he was passing the Hotel Albany at the corner of 40th St. and Broadway early to-day. He will probably die as the result of their attack.

Broadway, at the point where this latest hold-up occurred, is never deserted and always brilliantly lighted, but the three thugs accomplished their coup successfully and without attracting attention.

50,000 WOMEN SMOKERS IN CITY DECLARES AN INVESTIGATOR

Cigarette Habit the Worse, but Pipe, and Even Cigars, are Popular Amongst Members of Fair Sex—Movement Started to Segregate Incorrigible Pupils in Separate School

(From our own correspondent)

MONTREAL, Feb. 22.—Prompted by the statement of a man identified with the retail tobacco trade in this city for the past twenty years that from 40,000 to 50,000 women on the Island of Montreal smoke, agents of a philanthropic and educational society have made an investigation, only to find that the allegation was based on fact.

It was found that the cigarette habit prevailed widely among women, from the tenements of the poor to the mansions of the rich, and it was also made tolerably certain that this habit is on the increase. Fifty cigar stores were visited, in some of which sales to women ran as high as a hundred in a day. In only one were the average sales less than two daily, and that was in the little town of Ahuntsic, at the back of the island. One of the heaviest sales centres extends along St. Catherine St., in the uptown fashionable shopping district. The sales here are to the ladies of society, who buy boxes of 50, 100, and even 500 at a time. Men's cigarettes of the milder variety are most in demand, the "lady's specials" being called for only in hotels and restaurants, where the customers want to make a show. The women, as a rule, smoke because they like it. They have the habit, and in time may advance so rapidly in the accomplishment as to be able to smoke the more solid cigar and the pipe in competition with their brothers. Some of these women can drink a fair quantity of intoxicating liquor and bid fair to be the equal of men in that and other like qualities. The restless sex is advancing at a great rate in actively agitating for the parliamentary franchise.

On the continent of Europe and in England it is not uncommon for women to smoke, and recently the despatches told of a new Atlantic liner that had as one of its attractions a smoking room for ladies.

Of course as woman is the equal of man there is no real reason why she shouldn't go abroad puffing away like a blocked-up kitchen stove full of soft coal. But if she persists in adopting the villainous sex's special accomplishments she endangers her claims to special consideration and runs the risk of being rapped on the head and jabbed in the ribs by the police when she becomes obstreperous just as though she were her brother. And as the women reformers are trying to save men from the perils of tobacco, it is the duty of the men to come out and save their sisters who err along this line. But to be qualified to act they must drop their pipes and cigars.

TEACHING INCORRIGIBLES.

There is a campaign on here, as a direct result of the recent establishment of the Juvenile Court, to segregate incorrigible pupils in separate disciplinary schools. It appears that there are incorrigibles known as 'hard guys;' they shake fists at the teachers and consign them to warm climes; smoke, gamble, steal and drink; jab pins into other boys' legs, strike women teachers and their mothers, and threaten teachers with knives and other weapons. Many of the principals and teachers believe these pupils should not be allowed to associate with normal children in the class rooms, sepecially where women are in charge, as they are as a rule helpless in the face of violence on the part of an objectionable pupil. Corporal punishment is forbidden by the school rules and the bad pupils take advantage of the fact. It was not like this in the olden days, when the teacher was allowed to use a ruler, strap, or birch as his judgment dictated.

One male teacher gives an example of the effectiveness of the ancient method. He told of a boy who interfered with another, and, when ordered to desist, refused, swore at the teacher and said that his brother (who was a pugilist) would come around and avenge the insult to his relative. The teacher seized the young brave and there was a scuffle which ended when the boy was seated in a broken chair. He never gave the teacher trouble after his defeat and his pugilist brother did not call.

10c. ACCOUNT 40 YEARS OLD.

While as a general thing banks do not rejoice at the closing out of an account, particularly an old one against which no checks have ever been drawn, there was a unanimous sigh of relief and a general feeling of thankfulness at a nearby savings institution here when an account of just this sort which had its beginning forty years ago was withdrawn last week. The officers had cause for rejoicing, however, for since 1872 this account has been an ever-increasing source of trouble. It amounted to exactly one dime and was opened in 1872 by a boy of twelve who hoped to make it a nest egg of fortune. He never made another deposit and the matter soon slipped his mind until recalled by a boyhood friend a few days ago. But in the forty years the dime has been placed to the depositor's account it has figured in many balance sheets, and its worth has been consumed many times over in the ink, paper and time given it by clerks who had to keep track of it. In all trial balances that stubborn dime had to be reckoned and its withdrawal has ended an existence rare in banking annals. As no interest is allowed in savings banks on sums less than one dollar, the solitary coin in forty years in the bank did not increase.

A Boon to Stock-raisers

TO KNOW HOW TO CURE COLIC, DISTEMPER, COLDS, SWELLINGS, ETC., SAVES THOUSANDS EACH YEAR.

OF PRACTICAL INTEREST TO HORSEMEN.

It is a matter of vital importance to every farmer, horse-owner, and stock raiser to know exactly what to do when one of his animals is taken suddenly sick.

The letter of Mr. Frank G. Fullerton, which we print below gives information of inestimable value, and tells of his experience in curing ailing stock during the past thirty-eight years.

SAVED $1,000 BY NERVILINE

"Several years ago when my horse took colic I used to give them Cayene Pepper in hot milk, but in a few cases only did it help, and because I had no proper means at hand I lost several valuable animals. Some one told me of the success of Mr. Wendling, of Brockville, Ont., had in his racing stables with 'Nerviline,' so I laid in a supply. It wasn't very long before Nerviline saved the life of a very valuable stallion of mine, which was worth at least $1,000.00. This horse was taken with colic, and would have died had it not been for Nerviline. I have used Nerviline for reducing swellings, for taking out distemper lumps, and easing a bad cough, and always found it worked well. I recommend every man who owns horses or cattle to keep Nerviline on hand."

LORD STRATHCONA AND SIR C TUPPER BOTH MUCH BETTER

High Commissioner's Strehgth Maintained Sir Charles Now Taking Exercise.

LONDON, February 21.—Lord Strathcona's condition is much improved this morning. His strength is well maintained.

Sir Charles Tupper is now able to take carriage exercise. Despite the dangerous character of his recent illness his health is now in some important respects, better than for years past.

Sir Charles has been greatly gratified by kind messages from old-time Canadian opponents as well as friends.

BAPTISED IN BLOOD

By Andre Roche

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd.

Paolo Franzetti sat idle in his tent, his helmet and his sword beside him on a stool, and on a table before him a map and papers. Thin, sinewy, clean-shaven, it was only the few grey hairs among the black locks clustered round his brow that betrayed his age.

"A mercenary," he muttered. "She calls me that."

"A mercenary, bought by the largest purse, unheeding vows and oaths, breaking with old friends and old loves as easily as a common soldier."

Where he first came from none save himself knew. He had fought under Coleone for Venice, and had looked to succeed that general in command of the Republic's troops. The Council of Ten had passed over his claims, and he went by open daylight to Ferrara. There he had been the leader, general of all the forces, the close friend of the duke, the lover of the duchess.

Now he sat under Cremona's flag, a dukedom in prospect, a fortune in retrospect. And from Ferrara to Cremona he had gone over in this night; not for fear of what men should say, but for fear of a woman's tongue.

The morning was dull and grey, the bright tents with their fluttering pennons showed up clearly against the sky. The wide open space in front of the general's tent was full of soldiers, who surrounded two men upon horseback. They were strangers to all but Franzetti, and he knew them for captains in the suite of the Duke of Ferrara.

The two heralds approached, and the elder spoke:

"I came from Ferrara to deliver into the hands of Cremona's illustrious general, Paolo Franzetti, this packet and this message: 'This outcast brat I send to Franzetti, a gift worthy of his estate. For I have found no priest so honourless that he will baptise the foundling boy."

So saying, he handed to Franzetti a bundle of swaddling clothes, in the middle of which appeared the red face of a little baby.

His senior captains had clustered round Franzetti. He spoke a few words, gave a few orders, and the word passed quickly round from mouth to mouth.

"To San Luca! To San Luca!"

Silently and speedily four thousand of his force swung into the saddle and marshalled on either side of the great square in front of Franzetti's tent.

"Gentlemen," he said, coldly and politely, "you brought to me a child, unbaptised, and besought me to take charge of it. I will accept the charge on one condition: that you go with me to the baptism and stand sponsors for him. We have no water here, but over yonder by San Luca there is fire, and such a baptism were worthy of a no man's son."

San Luca's fortress was in sight, and to the right of Franzetti's little band were Ferrara's marauders, all but cut off from their camp.

The horsemen of Cremona broke into a shout, and on command from Franzetti spurred towards them, a compact, irresistible mass. They crashed through the wavering lines, cutting a lane of blood, and turning, ploughed their way back again.

"See, see, my son," cried Franzetti, holding the infant high above his head, "your cradle song, the shouts of dying men. Here I baptise thee, No Man's Son, and call thee Giovanni to honour of my mare Joan."

"Ferara and the Duchess Joan."

"What does it mean? What does it mean?" cried the general.

"The duches fights with them. I have seen her, on a black horse."

"God and the Madonna defend her!" exclaimed Franzetti; and lest his prayer should not be heard, he himself set off in search of her.

The defence had fallen back under the very walls of San Luca. Around a postern gate a little group fought steadily on. As Franzetti dashed into the midst of the group they broke and fled, hotly pursued by twenty. By the gate one stayed, a woman, tall, fair-haired, imperious of mien.

"You ride hard, my lord duke," she said, with bitter emphasis on the title.

"Madonna, you do me too much honour," he returned. "I am but Paolo Franzetti, general of Cremona's forces."

"A mercenary, a traitor, and a recreant," she added. "Good sir, in your modesty you forget half your titles." She leaned against the wall as though fatigued.

"Pardon, madonna, you have omitted one," he said after a pause. "I am also your son's father."

She laughed aloud, a bitter, mocking laugh.

"[illegible] the ruse succeeded," she cried. "You were deceived. Your simple vanity made you an easy prey. That village brat, brought into the camp two days since. Oh, Franzetti! your vanity has led you into strange beliefs. You—my son's father!"

Franzetti came nearer to her.

"Ay, madonna," he replied. "And my son is the son of a daughter of France, for Louis the King is brother to Joan of Ferrara."

He drew her to him, and, holding her close, kissed her passionately.

"Paolo, Paolo! Why did you ever leave me?" she asked, and her voice was faint. Her head dropped and her bright hair glistened on his shoulder against the blood-stained mail.

"Why did you not come with me, Joan?" he answered. "The chance is given you again. Throw off the yoke of Ferrara, as I threw it off, and join me now."

"It is too late, Paolo," she replied. She spoke slowly and with difficulty. "When your horsemen strike it is hard, and this one struck from behind."

It was true. Her left shoulder had been pierced; the steel had gone through gown and corsage and flesh.

"Paolo," she cried, "be good to him—the little one. He was my son, and yours, the son of a daughter of France."

Her lips sought his, and they took their last farewell.

And a weak head is easily influenced by a full stomach.

It's almost as easy to grow old as it is to grow fat.

Are the Fly and Mosquito Dangerous?

The fly, with spongy feet, collects the invisible germs of diseases, spreads them over our food and poisons us with typhoid and cholera. The mosquito with its bite injects into our veins malaria and yellow fever. The bacteria of consumption, or grip, are everywhere present for us to breathe into our lungs. The blood which flows through our veins and arteries is our protection. It should contain healthy red and white blood corpuscles—capable of warding off these disease germs. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is a blood medicine and alterative made entirely without alcohol, a pure glyceric extract of bloodroot, golden seal, Oregon grape root, queen's root, mandrake and stone root, which has enjoyed a good reputation for over forty years. The refreshing influence of this extract is like Nature's influence—the blood is bathed in the tonic which gives life to the blood—the vital fires of the body burn brighter and their increased activity consumes the tissue rubbish which has accumulated during the winter.

"About forty years ago while in Newark, New Jersey, I had chills and fever," writes MR. MICHAEL MAGUIRE, of National Military Home, Kans. "I went to Kansas City and in the spring of 1877 the chills and fever returned. Doctors and everything I tried failed to do me good. Finally I saw Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery advertised. I took one bottle of it and the chills vanished. In about a year afterward I felt them coming back so I got another bottle and have never had any symptoms of fever or ague since. That is all of twenty years ago, for I had the chills about twelve years before I started to take 'Golden Medical Discovery.'"

HE LOVED AND KILLED THE WIFE OF ANOTHER

Then Benjamin Freed, Real Estate Broker, Shoots Himself in Mrs. Silverman's Home—Trouble Started In a Flirtation—Young Wife Thought to Make Her Husband Jealous, Forgetting the Man on Whom She Smiled

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—Over the wineglasses at a table at Pabst's, where she, her husband, and a party of friends were celebrating on New Year's Eve, Mrs. Rea Silverman, the young wife of Meyer Silverman, a well-to-do electrical contractor living in the Gainsborough apartments at 120th Street and Fifth Avenue, smiled alluringly at Benjamin Freed, a real estate broker of 149 Broadway, to whom she had been introduced the first time that evening. Many days afterward she told her husband that she had flirted with Freed only in order to make her own husband jealous. She succeeded in doing that. But she herself was a woman of startling beauty—blonde, blue-eyed, and only 22 years old, and from the very beginning this little love game she had planned half in sport seized with deadly earnest on young Freed.

Thereafter he kept visiting her at her home and arranging to meet her when she and her husband called at the homes of friends. At first the young woman kept up the flirtation as in the beginning, gratified to see that her husband was really growing jealous. Then, suddenly, when Freed declared his love for her and urged her to elope with him, she saw that the game she had started had grown too big and serious for her, and she told her husband all that had happened and asked him to help her.

They had lived very happily together with their two year old boy, Jerome, in their handsome apartment overlooking Mount Morris Park, until Silvreman noticed the growing intimacy of his wife with Freed. Thereafter they had quarreled frequently, though Silverman said yesterday that he never at any time suspected his wife of any wrong-doing.

Now, though, when she came to him for advice, and he promised to see that Freed should no longer force his attentions upon her, the young wife replied that her jest had gone too far; that she knew Freed was insanely in love with her, and that no matter what were her intentions now, she felt it her duty not to desert him. She suggested that Silverman allow her to go away. He tried to argue with her.

"I told her she was a mere child," he said yesterday, "and she was a child as she sat there on the floor playing each day with our boy. She never realized what she was doing. I told her to forget all about the matter, and I would arrange quietly for Freed to go away."

Aaron A. Fineberg, of 28 Park Row a friend and attorney of Silverman, talked the matter over with Freed and obtained from him a promise that he would stay away from Mrs. Silverman and try to forget her. But a few days after making the promise, Freed called again at Mrs. Silverman's home, and thereafter went of his own accord to the lawyer's office to tell him how futile all his promises would be. Again Fineberg argued with him and again he went away, promising to try and forget.

But on Friday last Freed appeared again at the Silverman home while the husband was away, and pleaded with Mrs. Silverman to go away with him to Reno, or to go there alone and get a divorce. He spoke so loud that Silverman, fearing that the neighbors might overhear them, agreed to go out with them to a Harlem restaurant, and there talk the matter over with him. She told him there that she could not do what he asked, because she could not leave her boy or bring disgrace on him. And after he left her she telephoned at once to her husband's lawyer, telling him that Freed had called again.

Fineberg at once summoned Freed by telephone to his office, and there threatened that unless he would stop his visits to Mrs. Silverman legal action would be taken against him.

"I told him to brace up and be a man," said Mr. Fineberg yesterday, "and not bring disgrace on Mrs. Silverman and his own people as well. He finally promised to make one more effort to take his medicine, but before he left me he said:

"'From the very beginning I have never intended to wrong her. I was willing to settle $10,000 upon her, I told her, at any time, and to marry her as soon as she could get a divorce.'"

Freed went away that same afternoon to take a two weeks' vacation at Lakewood. Instead, however, he returned on Saturday. At Jersey City he stopped over to buy a revolver.

Yesterday morning, while Silverman was downtown, Freed appeared once more at the Silverman home. Hearing his voice Mrs. Silverman begged her maid, Anna Rasche, not to let him in. But Freed pushed his way into the dining room, where the young woman sat, her little boy in her arms. The maid, who was going to the roof with a basket of wash, left him there.

A few minutes later, while she was hanging the wash on the roof, she heard five shots and a scream from Mrs. Silverman. She rushed down. The door of the apartment was closed and locked. With the assistant of the superintendent of the building the girl managed to get into the apartment. Everything was quiet. In the dining room they found Mrs. Silverman unconscious upon the floor. The little boy was tugging at her arm and looked up frightened at them as they entered.

On a sofa close by, his head sunken on his chest, and his eyes staring dully at the child, sat Freed with a revolver still clutched in his hand. He was bleeding from a wound in his left chest, but was still conscious and kept murmuring:

"I could not help it. I did not want disgrace."

An ambulance surgeon removed Mrs. Silverman and Freed to the Harlem hospital. Mrs. Freed had been shot through the left temple, and a second bullet passing through her left eye, had buried itself in her brain. She died soon after entering the hospital. Freed had a bullet wound in his left chest, another in the abdomen and a third glancing wound in the forehead. He has a bare chance to recover.

On the way to the hospital Freed told Dr. Hobbes, the ambulance surgeon, that he had done what he did in order to save his mother and family from the disgrace which would have fallen upon them, as well as Mrs. Silverman and himself if legal action had been taken against him.

"I want all my property to go to my mother," he said. "She did not know the trouble I was in."

Silverman, upon learning of the shooting, hurried to his home. He took his little boy to the home of relatives and then hastened to the hospital, reaching there just before his wife died.

A charge of felonious assault was entered against Freed. On the death of Mrs. Silverman the charge was changed to murder.

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

JUDGE DECIDES THAT MARRIAGE WAS VALID

Judge Charbonneau Finds That the English Common Law Is Supreme—Any Qualified Officer Can Perform Marriage and the Ne Temere Decree Has No Civil Effect—Dame Clouatre Is Again a Wife.

Montreal, Feb. 23.—Judge Charbonneau delivered his finding yesterday on the motion made last December in connection with the case of Emma Clouatre, Dale River, Mass., and Eugene Hebert, of this city, two Roman Catholics, whose marriage by a Methodist minister in 1908 in Point St. Charles, Montreal, was annulled by Archbishop Bruchesi, head of the Catholic Heirarchy here, on the grounds that according to the ne temere decree of the church, Catholics could only be married by their parish priest or ordinary, which dissolution was afterwards ratified civilly by Judge Laurendeau in the High Court.

Mrs. Hebert sought to have it established by Judge Charbonneau that Judge Laurendeau was wrong when he found that the ecclesiastical law governed the civil marriage law, that the discontinuance of participation in the suit by Hebert when her application was made did not reverse the judge's finding, and her marriage was legal and her child legitimate according to the laws of the province.

The judge reversed Judge Laurendeau's decision, holding that any officer qualified by the state to perform marriages could marry couples of whatever faith, that the ne temere decree had no civil effect and was binding on the consciences of Roman Catholics only, and that therefore the marriage of Eugene Hebert and Emma Clouatre was valid and binding.

JUDGE CHARBONNEAU.

After a long review of the facts of the case Judge Charbonneau went into its merits and said that the plaintiff did not ask by his action that the marriage be annulled as to the marriage tie, but simply that the episcopal decree declaring the nullity be recognized by the court, and that consequently the marriage be annulled as to its civil effects. The learned judge then quoted articles of the code to show that as no bad faith on the part of the defendant had been established the marriage could not be annulled as to its civil effects. Commenting on the episcopal decree, which was maintained by the first judgment, his lordship said:

"It must be noted that the annulling of the marriage is the exercise of judicial power; whether such exercise be called a decree or a judgment, it is to the same effect; judicial power is a part of public authority and can be conferred only by the law, which entrusts the functions thereof to a certain class of citizens, acting ex officio and by the crown, according to certain laws enacted by the legislative power to that effect. This authority is not here given in the code, nor in the laws proceeding it so far back as the Conquest. As all judicial authority disappeared with the change of allegiance, it would be useless to go beyond the Cession to see what was the jurisdiction of the bishops in such matters or what was the officiality under the old French law."

After stating that this question is now hardly contested, and referring to judgments of the Court of Review rendered in the same sense, the learned judge quotes the following summary of the principles governing the matter as laid down by Justice Cozeau in a case of La Rue vs. Burgess:

"This marriage, or, if you prefer it, this contract, has no other existence but that given it by human law; civil justice adjudicates as to its validity. The action of the civil courts as to said marriage is perfectly independent of all other authorities, even religious authorities."

The learned judge then remarks as follows: "That decree has, therefore, no legal value whatever. It would not even be of any use as proof of one of the judicial facts needed to establish a case, not being in the form of a document to which the law gives any authentic value or in the form of evidence given under oath by an expert in the matter. We should, therefore, conclude that the first part of the Laurendeau judgment confirming the ecclesiastical decree was unfounded in law and that the second part, concerning the civil effect of the marriage, was unfounded as to facts, since there was no proof of that faith, and was also unfounded in law, since the marriage had not been annulled or declared null, either by the religious authority, which was not competent, or by the court to whom this had not been asked.

Then came the main point at issue, and the judge said: "The question in this case is to know whether two Catholics, presenting a license can validly be married before the minister of a Protestant sect, or must be united by the Cure of their parish after previous publication in said parish, or dispensation by the Catholic religious authorities, in a word, is there respected jurisdiction or concurrent jurisdiction of all officers authorized to keep the civil registers, and can the crown license dispense with the publication of banns for Catholics as well as the other religious denominations."

For more than an hour Judge Charbonneau read his judgment in French, in the presence of a large crowd, including many persons prominent in the church and in law, who hung on his words with intense interest. The judge, in delivering this, one of the most important judgments in the legal annals of Canada, preserved an impassive exterior.

The judgment covered nearly sixty typewritten folies, and is notable for its clearness, logic and strength. Reference to the code, the statutes and other authorities are given to guide or support his contentions.

That it will stand even an appeal to the Privy Council, should such be made, is probable, for his lordship—himself intended for the church before he took to law—has taken extraordinary care in the preparation of his decision, and his reputation is that no decision he has rendered has ever been upset by a reference to the supreme tribunal in London.

Counsel for Hebert—the latter a railway employe, of uncertain address—says that an appeal will be taken, but it is probably a matter for further consideration. It is not likely that the church authorities will—openly, at any rate—cause an appeal to be taken, because, so far as the church is concerned, the Hebert marriage continues annulled, no matter what the civil view is.

Judge Charbonneau said that the plaintiff (Hebert) did not ask by his action that the marriage be annulled as to the marriage tie, but simply that the episcopal decree declaring the nullity be recognized by the court, and that consequently the marriage be annulled as to its civil effects. The judge then quoted articles of the code to show that if no bad faith on the part of the defendant be established, the marriage could not be annulled as to its civil effects.

HAD A GOOD YEAR.

T. & N.O. Earnings Show an Increase of $157,022.38.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—Matters pertaining to agriculture were the principal items on the legislative bill-of-fare yesterday afternoon, with Hon. James Duff the centre of attraction.

Discussions, thick, fast and furious were held over such subjects as "The Noxious Weeds Act," "A tax on dogs and for the Protection of Sheep," and an act to prevent the spread of insect and fungus disease injurious to vegetation.

Mr. Rowell gives notice that he will ask for a return showing all correspondence between the Government or any official of the T. & N. O. Railway, and the officials of the Grand Trunk with regard to the acquisition of running rights for the G.T.R. over the T. & N.O. lines.

Mr. Rowell will also enquire of the Ministry as to whether Hon. I. B. Lucas has been appointed a commissioner to investigate the question of Government ownership of telephone lines in the province; how long has he been engaged in the investigation; has the Government received any report from him on the investigation; and, if not, when is his report expected.

T. Marshall (Monck) will enquire of the Ministry how much the Government paid for the lands on which the new Government House is to be erected, the estimated cost of clearing the grounds, the names of the contractors for this work, as well as what contracts have been let for the building, and the names of the architects and landscape gardeners.

That the total net earnings of the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway have increased by $157,022.38 over 1910 is shown by the annual report of the railway, which was presented to the Legislature yesterday afternoon. The total net earnings for the year amount to $593,152.69, as compared with $436,130.31 for 1910. There is also an increase of $16,637.27 in operating expenses over 1910, although there has been a decrease in the percentage form 73.2 to 66.4.

During the year the total revenue from transportation was $1,708,248.02; from sources other than transportation $72,715.81, making a total operating revenue of $1,780,964.83. The operating expenses were $1,181,983.63, as compared with $1,165,361.36 for 1910, making the net operating revenue $598,966.29 and $426,490.66 respectively, which, including ore royalties of $17,060.76 for 1911, as against $458,253.58 for 1910. A falling off of $20,702.36 is shown in ore royalties for the year. In respect of these earnings a check for $515,000 was paid to the Provincial Treasurer, while the 1910 payment was $420,000. The itemized pay roll of the railway for operation shows payments amounting to $748,522.65 and $34,696.24 for construction, which represents a total sum paid for labor of $783,218.89.

There is an attached report from Engineer Ellis, who conducted the James Bay survey, which points out that the line to Cochrane has already penetrated about one-half of the clay belt. To the north of this is the James Bay coastal plain, about 75 miles wide. Mr. Ellis states that the mouth of Moose River provides the only possible situation for a harbor, which has a depth over the bar at low tide of about six feet, and ventures the opinion that the cost of making the roadstead available for vessels of reasonable draught might not be prohibitive.

WILL DETERMINE LAW

Premier Borden Prepares Stated Case For the Courts.

Lancaster Bill Will Be Sent to the Supreme Court to See If the Canadian Parliament Has Power to Pass It—Questions Will Also Be Asked Regarding the Quebec Law—Argument Regarding Tariff Board.

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The Cabinet has prepared the stated questions which will be submitted to the courts to settle the jurisdiction of the Dominion and the Provincial Governments on marriage in Canada. The form of the questions was finally decided upon by the Cabinet yesterday and the order-in-council was signed by the Governor-General last night. The questions will be laid on the table of the House to-day and will be submitted immediately to the Supreme Court so that there can be no delay in arguing the case and a decision can be reached at the present sitting of the court.

When the Supreme Court decision is rendered it will be sent to the Imperial Privy Council and the Government hopes to have a definite decision within a year. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Toronto, will be the main counsel for the Government. The provinces will also have the right to be represented.

Mr. Nesbitt will not argue the case pro and con, but will point out the subject in the dispute the Dominion Government wished settled.

As was announced in the House by Premier Borden at the time of the debate on the bill introduced by E. A. Lancaster, his measure has been made part of the case. The courts are asked to decide whether Parliament has the right to enact the bill or not, and, if not the whole bill, which of the provisions. The questions are in regard to the validity of marriages contracted in Quebec.

The questions, as submitted to the Supreme Court, are as follows:

1. Has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact in whole or in part, bill No. 3 of the first session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada entitled "An act to amend the Marriage Act."

The bill provides as follows: 1. The Marriage Act, chapter 105 of the revised statutes, 1906, is amended by adding thereto the following section:

Every ceremony, or form of marriage, heretofore or hereafter performed by any person authorized to perform any ceremony of marriage by the laws of the place where it is performed, and duly performed according to such laws, shall everywhere within Canada be deemed to be a valid marriage, notwithstanding any differences in the religious faith of the persons so married and without regard to the religion of the person performing the ceremony.

2. "The rights and duties, as married people, of the respective persons married as aforesaid, and of the children of such marriage shall be absolute and complete, and no law or canonical decree or custom of or in any province of Canada, shall have any force or effect to invalidate or qualify any such marriage or any of the rights of the said persons or their children in any manner whatever.

(b) If the provisions of the said bill are not all within the authority of the Parliament of Canada to enact, which, if any, of the provisions are within such authority?

3. Does the law of the Province of Quebec render null and void, unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest, a marriage that would otherwise be legally binding, which takes place in such province?

(a) Between persons who are both Roman Catholics, or (b) between persons one of whom, only, is a Roman Catholic.

4. If either (a) or (b) of the last preceding question is answered in the affirmative, or if both of them are answered in the affirmative, has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact that all such marriages whether, (a) heretofore solemnized, or (b) hereafter to be solemnized, shall be legal and binding.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley appeared in the role of a peacemaker yesterday afternoon.

The House was in committee on the tariff commission bill.

Geo. W. Kyte (Richmond, N.S.) introduced a "mandatory" amendment compelling that body "to hear the evidence of persons who appear before them for the purpose of making a voluntary statement and who have not been so summoned."

Hon. W. T. White said that to take up their work intelligently, the commission must control their own procedure.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley had an amendment which he thought would satisfy all parties: "The commissioners shall also give reasonable opportunity to persons who may not have been so summoned to appear before them and give evidence on any matter under enquiry by the commission."

Hon. W. T. White made an amendment on similar lines, and it carried.

Hon. Mr. Pugsley later introduced the following amendment which was voted down by 24 to 50.

"The said commissioners shall submit all the information, including the evidence which was taken, to the Minister of Finance, who shall lay it before Parliament within ten days after the opening of the next ensuing session."

Brockville Cut Off.

Brockville, Feb. 23.—This section has just passed through the worst blizzard of many years. There was an unusually heavy snow fall, accompanied by a stiff gale, piling up drifts which have completely blocked the roads.

Communication with the rural section has been practically cut off and for 24 hours not a train has moved on the B., W. & N.W. Railway.

A plow sent out from here became stalled in drifts 15 feet deep west of Lyn and had to be dug out.

It is thought that nearly all the cuts will have to be cleared by shovelers before the service can be resumed. The blockade is one of the worst the company ever experienced.

MALONEY IS DEFEATED

Compact Tied Hands of Leading Renfrew Conservatives.

Hon. George P. Graham Is Again a Member of the House of Commons by Majority of 293 With Five Polls to Hear From—One of the Most Bitterly Fought Elections In the History of the Dominion.

Renfrew, Feb. 23.—The agreement which has all through the past month's strenuous campaign for the representation of the seat in South Renfrew, left vacant by the resignation of T. A. Low, tied the hands of twenty-seven leading members of the Liberal-Conservative Association of the riding, has done its work. As a result of it, Hon. George P. Graham, late Minister of Railways in the Laurier Government, and a defeated candidate in Brockville, in the last election, is now able once more to write "M.P." after his name, and Dr. M. J. Maloney, his opponent, goes down to a second defeat.

All the Conservative party can show for a solid thirty days of strenuous work is a reduced Liberal majority estimated to be in the neighborhood of 300. Two hundred and ninety-three votes, with five polls to hear from, is Hon. Mr. Graham's majority.

One of the most fiercely fought bye-elections in recent political history was consummated when the returns, incomplete on account of the stormy conditions which prevailed all through the riding, announced that Hon. Mr. Graham, who was promised an unopposed election in South Renfrew in return for the unanimous return of T. W. McGarry to the Legislature, and then had to fight for it tooth and nail to obtain his seat after all.

Dr. Maloney did well in Arnprior, where he secured a lead of 122, but this was almost offset by Wilno, which gave Graham 111. At Renfrew the ex-Minister pulled out a lead of 128. Of 35 polling divisions heard from last night, 24 gave majorities to Graham. Divisions which gave majorities to Maloney were at Dacre, 21; Hyndford, 17; Kullaloe Station, 35; Sandpoint, 9; Mansfield, 12; School No. 9, 24; Palmer Rapid, 4; Arnprior, 122; Rockingham, 26; Eganville, 33; and Grattan, 86.

His supporters in Renfrew and, in fact, all through the riding, threw up their hats when they heard the news, and in speeches and brass band serenades their joy found outward expression. That they had won a notable victory of far more than local interest, they were by no means loath to state and they were equally ready to denounce the methods alleged to have been employed by their opponents.

The returns were, on account of the extent and widely separated nature of the constituency, necessarily very incomplte. In many cases only the majorities in the different polls could be secured, while five polling stations in outlying sections are still to be heard from. Mr. Graham's majority as at present indicated is 293, a figure which the remaining polls will substantially effect. The majority obtained for Mr. Low was 619.

TRANSPORTATION NEEDED.

Associated Boards of Trade Discuss Ontario's Problems.

Toronto, Feb. 23.—Realizing the necessity of better transportation, both by rail and water, and especially the latter, the Ontario Boards of Trade at a meeting in the City Hall yesterday afternoon passed a number of strong resolutions, condemning all that would in even the slightest degree be detrimental to trade, and advocated the immediate deepening of waterways in order that the ocean liners might make their way through the great lakes.

This is the second annual convention of the Associated Boards of Trade, the strength of which has greatly increased since its birth a year ago. All the important Boards of Trade in Ontario have representatives in the association, and as representatives from nearly every section of the province gathered together the needs of nearly every point in Ontario were made known to the association.

To-day the Welland Canal question will be brought up, and there is every indication of a big fight between the men of the north and those of south Ontario.

With the hope of lowering the freight rates from east to west and from west to eat the boards passed a resolution urging upon the Government the necessity of building a canal system which would permit the large ocean liners to sail inland. These canals, says the resolution, should not be less than thirty-two feet in depth.

That this system of canals would be of incalculable value to the tradesman and the country at large was shown by the fact that the freight rates in summer time, when the lake vessels are in commission are very much lower than in the winter when the railways have the transportation business in their own hands.

A clause in the resolution calls for an immediate investigation into the waterways question by the Dominion Government.

COULD NOT BEAR DISGRACE.

Russian Professor Convicted of Arson Suicides in Goal

ST. PETERSBURG, February 22.—Professor von Friederichs, formerly attached to Riga Polytechnia, has committed suicide, according to a despatch from Innsbruck.

Von Friederichs recently was sentenced to eight years' imprisonment at hard labor on charge of having set fire to a saw mill on his own estate, for the purpose of collecting the insurance money. He left a letter saying that he was unable to bear the disgrace.

GRIP IS DREADED

Because It Lowers Vitality—What to Do

It is not the disease itself, but the dangerous complications that follow it that people fear with such good reason: the lingering coughs, the terrible weakness, and the liability of being attacked by pleurisy, pneumonia or some other serious ill.

We say it is highly important to free the system of every trace of grip and nothing is so good for this as Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation which creates strength and builds up the body.

Mrs C. L. Edwards, Long Branch, N. J., says: "Last February I had a very bad attack of grip and it left me with a terrible cough. For fully six weeks I coughed a great deal, and nothing had any effect on it, until I tried Vinol which soon gave me relief and has since brought about a complete cure."

Can anything be more convincing than Vinol is just what you need to build you up and make you strong? We guarantee it most positively.—Red Cross Drug Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

THE TARIFF A MATTER OF GIVE, AND TAKE

How the Government Encourages the Most Important Industries—The Agricultural Industries Receive Special Consideration—All Must Work Together for the General Advantage

In approaching the proposal to renew the iron and steel bounties the fact cannot be overlooked that one of the largest prospective beneficiaries represents much reckless financing and some watered stock. On the other hand, the country over, more than $100,000,000 are invested in an industry which annually distributes $13,500,000 in wages to 22,000 employees. These men and their families are dependent upon the Canadian mills for their livelihood, and we are told that the cessation of the Fielding bounties seriously menaces the prosperity of these plants. The bounties were paid to eke out a scanty protection, and the problem now is whether or not they shall be temporarily continued.

The coal miners in the Canadian West are protesting against the importation of too much foreign fuel as prejudicial to their own interests. The iron and steel employees and most all other industrial workers in this country know by general experience the vital value to them and their households of the existing protective system. They realize that the National Policy has built up great Canadian industries, affording them steady employment at something like reasonable wages. The tariff protects them against the products of cheap foreign labor, and it has kept them prosperous for months past, while tens of thousands of United States workmen have been walking the streets.

The depression in the Republic has occurred simultaneously with agitations against the big business interests and for lower customs duties. Presumably the nation's commercial reverse has been precipitated largely by the attempt to discipline the trusts. These great combines have grown up under a system of government which is not responsive to the needs of the people. An ironbound constitution has made it very difficult for the public to obtain relief. The present attacks on the monopolies across the line are therefore a logical outcome of fundamental conditions. The Canadian tariff, being a moderate one, has promoted and stimulated domestic industries without giving the country into the hands of the mergers and monopolies. Our people are alert against the duplication of United States abuses on this side of the border. By pursuing a sane middle course they have secured the benefits of both protection and free trade without the injuries arising from either.

The Canadian iron and steel mills enjoy a very much lower protection than other industries. Their products being the raw materials of other industries, the late Government thought it wise to keep keep the duties down and to grant compensation in the way of cash bonuses. The system has worked out advantageously to the country and to thousands of workmen, and for the time being at any rate it should be continued. Farming communities cannot well object to a policy which enlarges their home market for agricultural produce by building up great industrial communities consuming the best grades of food at the highest price.

Moreover, the agriculturists themselves have been and still are being heavily bonused from the national treasury. The Western settlers have been presented with splendid farms free of charge, and hundreds of millions of dollars have been and are being poured out to furnish them with adequate railway facilities, while model farms, pure seed distributions, and a score of other institutions are maintained at the public expense on their behalf. Such considerations as these commend moderate protection to the agriculturist. He comes to regard the National Policy as a system of give and take in which all classes of the community work together for the advantage of all. The tariff may require alteration, down or up, but for Canadians as a united, mutually helpful people, it is right in principle.—Toronto News.

CITY MISSION OBSERVES THIRTIETH ANNIVERSARY

The thirtieth anniversary meeting of the City Mission was held in the mission rooms last evening, at which a good number were present, considering the inclement weather. The chair was occupied by Mr. Chas. S. Clapp, who spoke most encouragingly of the work since its inception, and the prospective conditions. Verbal reports of a very pleasing nature were given by several of the regular workers, who have been identified with the mission for years, and an address upon the work in general was delivered by Rev. A. M. Hubly, of Emmanuel Church, Mr. C. A. Macfarlane following with a brief sketch of mission work in the larger cities. Mrs. Schuster, who has stood at the helm of the mission since the death of her husband, was very much encouraged, and thanked those present and all who had contributed to the maintenance of the work. The purpose of the officials is to still continue along the lines that have proved so beneficial to attendants, and do their utmost to reach the non-church goers in that part of the city. A full report of the mission for the year just closed will appear in to-morrow's Intelligencer.

H. R. H. TO MAKE OFFICIAL TRIP TO STATES

Colonial Office Gets Highly Satisfactory Report on His Recent Reception.

NEW YORK, February 22.—A London cable says: "Although the Duke of Connaught's visit to the United States was unofficial, a full report has reached the Colonial Office from his Royal Highness.

The report contains a noteworthy tribute to the reception accorded to the Duke, the Duchess and Princess Patricia in New York, and the Duke alone in Washington.

The liviest hopes are entertained therefore that a formal official visit paid later in the year, will have equally gratifying results. The official visit will be primarily to Washington at the invatation of the British ambassador.

In any extension thereof every care will be taken to avoid the appearance of royal intervention in American society arrangements. The only drawback to the full enjoyment by the royal party of their recent stay in New York arose from the gossip surrounding the lists of those invited to meet them at various social functions they attended.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW'S ADVICE TO ORANGEMEN

Novel Contribution by Distinguished Dramatist to Home Rule Discussion.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The latest contributor to the home rule controversy is George Bernard Shaw, the famous dramatist, who suggests that what is wanted on both sides of the channel is a little more Protestantism. He says: This craven terror of the poor old Pope of Rome, who is less free personally than any atheist and less powerful than the nearest surgeon, is not Protestantism; it is cowardice. That is the invariable symptom and penalty of want of faith. There is one force, and one only, that the Church of Rome cannot face, and that force is democracy. There it has only one chance for priestly tyranny under home rule, and that is the chance of Protestants insisting that the Irish Parliament shall be denied the power to set the Roman house in order.

The most pressing need of Ireland to-day is the establishment of the Roman Catholic Church. At present the priests levy taxation without audit or responsibility, and their charges for their official services for marriages, funerals, etc., would make the English farmer gasp. This taxation should be levied by the Irish Parliament, which should pay the priests and regulate their charges.

Besides controlling ecclesiastical patronage, factory acts should be applied resolutely in convent workshops and the like, and the Inspector of Education should exact as high a standard from the convent school as from lay ones.

If Orangemen would open their minds to these contemporary facts and practical probabilities, and clear their imaginations of thumbscrews, stakes, fagots and nuns on the rack, we should have the Irish Protestants asking the Government to take the Roman Catholic Church establishment feature of the home rule bill, and the priesthood resisting the proposal and clinging with all its might to its present irresponsible power and riches.

The young man who asks a girl for a kiss seldom gets it. The bee doesn't ask the flower for its nectar, but it gets it just the same.

A theory may be all right so long as there is no occasion for converting it into an experiment.

THE STORM KING LEAVES A LEGACY

Many Country Roads are Impassable—Midland Railway Still Tied Up

The blizzard which struck this section of the Province on Wednesday and continued unabated until last night, played havoc with business and transportation. In some parts of the country the roads are in such a condition that they will be impassable for some time. In some parts of the city the "beautiful" is piled up in an indiscriminate manner. During last night some trains on the line of the G. T. R. were late in arriving both from the east and west, but to-day they were mostly on time. On the Midland division, which was completely blocked yesterday, an effort was made to-day to open the line for traffic. The storm was of such a nature that some stages which arrive here daily were cancelled. The Ivanhoe stage was unable to report here today. Last night it was learned that the stage had not yet reached Ivanhoe, although it left here before 6 o'clock on Wednesday evening. The storm had the effect of postponing a funeral, which was to have taken place yesterday, until to-day, namely, that of Mrs. Jeremiah Cole of Northport. It was found impossible to reach that place yesterday although every effort was made to do so.

PERIL IN THE GREAT LAKES

Careless Denudation of the Forests Has Made Situation Worse

The habit of American cities of emptying sewage into and drawing drinking water from the same body of water is suicide on a large scale, according to Dr. G. E. Fell, of Buffalo, who discusses the advisability of government control of the great lakes, in a recent article in the Journal of American Association. Commenting on the article, the publication says:

"Dr. Fell says that the excessive rapid growth of the population surrounding the great lakes demands the prevention of the befoulment of this great system of waterways, and the subject should immediately be considered. We are at a pressing initial stage in the proceedings needed to organize the methods of control. In the great cities of Detroit, Chicago, Cleveland and Buffalo, the instinctive need is felt of an intelligent answer as to how we shall best proceed to improve the present status and ward off impending disaster through the unwise sanitary methods now being followed.

"Chicago has made an attempt to solve the problem by digging its drainage canal, an attempt unwise probably, for the reason that the water taken from Lake Michigan at present is insufficient to take care of the sewage output of this great city. The drain of the waters of the great lakes, which has been going on for years, must be more carefully controlled. The conservation of the water is quite as important as the conservation of coal, lumber and other great commodities of life.

"The careless denudation of the forests of the lake region adds to the seriousness of this question. The low stage of water reported as now existing on the lakes teaches that natural laws must not be trifled with. Sanitarily, our present method is suicide on a great scale, which will increase apace as the population grows. The forethought of the nation has been sleeping instead of attacking vigorously one of the most important subjects for the welfare of the future millions of citizens of the states bordering on the great lakes.

"Need we ask whether there is need of a central medical body to study and control the conditions (urgent as they are) affecting this important subject! The mere discussion of this great subject strongly emphasizes strongly that it is an argument for the immediate organization of a national board of health.

"Let the several states take care of the matters of importance within their borders, such as the control of streams and rivers that properly come under state jurisdiction. When, however, the health factors of the great rivers of the country, the Mississippi, its tributaries, the Missouri and others intertwining among many states, are at issue, a national central medical controlling body, which will assist, guide and not conflict with state authorities.

BOONE ON THE TRAIL.

At the Griffin Opera House last evening Robert H. Harris' play of "Daniel Boone On the Trail" was presented. Owing to the severe storm the attendance was meagre. The play was well put on and many features were of especial interest. The first act showed the burning of Boone's house by the Indians and Boone utters vengeance against the red men, and with his faithful wife takes the trail against the red men. The great love between the two famous characters, the wonderful hardships endured, go to make the play a successful drama in every sense of the word. Manager Harris carries a band of Indians, a den of bears, a pack of Siberian wolves, and a pair of famous trailing dogs in order to give the play a complete production.

MADAME SHERRY.

In Madame Sherry, which comes to the Griffin Opera House, Friday, March 1st, there is a wise old uncle from abroad, who finds the nephew he has been sending money to for years for a musical education, associated with an actress in the management of a young ladies' dancing academy. The second and third acts are given aboard a yacht. When the back drop showing the serried brick and stone heights of lower Manhattan begins to move, all landlubbers yearn for smelling salts. The yacht, also the theatre, appears to be sliding merrily into the bay. In the final act the bright lights of Coney Island are stretched in a gleaming line across the horizon. The effects are unusually good. Seats on sale at Doyle's Drug Store, Monday, Feb. 26th. Prices 25c. to $1.50.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agent for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within 9 miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him, by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

Do Your Hands Chap?

ZAM-BUK WILL GIVE EASE IN ONE NIGHT.

For badly chapped hands, cold cracks, frost bite, etc., Zam-Buk is the best known balm. Wash the hands or part affected in water as hot as can be borne. Dry with a soft towel, and then smear the Zam-Buk well over the part. If it is the hands, wear a pair of old gloves overnight. By morning the pain will be gone. Then use Zam-Buk a few more times and the cracks will be healed. Mrs. A. F. Philips, of Ayers Cliff, Que., says: "I suffered terribly from chapped hands. At times my hands were so sore that I could almost have cried with the pain. I tried Zam-Buk and in a very short time my hands were cured."

Mrs. W. M. Ballient, of Port Hawkesbury, N.S., writes: "Some time ago my hands were very badly chapped. Ordinary ointments did no heal them, and I was advised to try Zam-Buk. To my great delight, it healed my hands completely."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for piles, ulcers, blood-poison, varicose sores, cuts, burns, bruises, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, upon receipt of price.

IN THE WORLD OF SCIENCE

ANIMAL AND RACIAL ODORS

The White Man Gives Off a Distinctive Natural Smell Same as the Negro.

That every human being and every animal possesses an individual odour we know, although generally our own sense of smell cannot distinguish one from another, for the more sensitive scent of the dog does this with ease from the slightest traces. That the personal odour of an entire race has a character of its own we also know. In most cases this odour is displeasing to members of different races. The odour of the negro is often spoken of by white races as offensive, but it will be news to most of us that the odour of Europeans is quite as objectionable to the Japanese. A Japanese physician, Dr. Burtaro Adacki, has recently published some remarkable observations on this subject.

"This physician states that 'it is certain that the Western peoples possess a natural odour which is not perceived by them, but which is clearly perceptible to the yellow race.' After a certain length of time, however, both Japanese and Chinese who have taken up their residence in Europe become habituated to this odour, it being the experience of these European residents that the odour of Europeans, which at first was intolerable, after several weeks' residence becomes supportable.

"Every living animal possesses in general a characteristic odour — horses, dogs, cats, etc., man himself having an emanation which is a part of the race and which may be individual and variable with age and condition of health. The sudoriferous glands produce the emanation perceived by the sense of smell, although it is true that the Chinese and Japanese have little or no odorous emanation. When these races perspire, their perspiration has no odour, a fact which is doubtless chiefly a question of race, although also probably one of alimentary regime. In the white races observers who possess an acute sense of smell can distinguish solely by this means those persons who follow a vegetarian regime and those who eat meat, at times the difference between these two classes of persons being very pronounced. The individuals who nourish themselves on meat exhale, under the influence of the fermentation of cutaneous secretions, a much stronger odour than vegetarians. Experimenters in ethnography know that there exist provincial odours, the odour of Brunswick being different from that of Bavaria, that of Savoy different from that of Normandy.

"The Japanese are chiefly vegetarians, and for this reason their skin exhales odours which are scarcely perceptible; but here clothing plays its role, for if we superimpose many layers of tissue closely around the body, perspiration is produced, and with it the odour of disassimilation.

How to Sleep.

Dr. Fischer, a physician practising in Paris, after a series of experiments has come to the conclusion that the orthodox way of sleeping is wrong and advocates a complete reversal of the existing order of things. You must have your head on a level with, or lower than, your feet. If pillows are to be used they must be under the feet instead of the head. The result, he claims, will be amazing, being a sure cure for insomnia, as well as a preventive for the nightmare. To prevent any inconvenience by too sudden a change, it is suggested that the pillows should be gradually reduced and finally placed under the feet.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

CURLING.

BELLEVILLE BEAT KINGSTON.

The two senior rinks from the local Curling Club which went to Kingston yesterday were victorious in their match with two senior teams of the Limestone City. The local curlers defeated their opponents by 9 shots. The Bellevillians were handsomely treated by the Kingston players.

NOTES OF THE RINKS.

Two junior rinks left this morning for Napanee and two for Kingston. At both places play will take place this evening.

Two senior rinks from Napanee will arrive here this evening to play with two senior rinks of the local club.

SCOTLAND'S GREAT BONSPIEL.

The Grand Match of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, between the curlers of the North and South of Scotland, was played at Carsbreck. There were 250 rinks and about 2,600 players competing, the meeting being one of the most successful held in many years. The ice was in splendid condition. Amongst those present were Lord Inverclyde, Lord Tullibardine and Lord Bruce, and there was one lady competitor, Mrs. McKenzie. As usual, the match between the President and Vice-President's rinks was played by northern curlers only, who, being more numerous than those from the south, had to be left out of the Grand Match. During the day Mr. Davidson Smith despatched the following cablegram to Col. Aikman, in command of the Scottish curlers now in Canada: "Two thousand curlers assembled at the Grand Match send hearty greetings to team and brother curlers in Canada and the States. Lovely day."

When the results were made up, it was found that the South were the victors by 419 shots. Scores—South, 3,477 shots; and North, 3,058 shots.

HOCKEY.

PROFESSIONALISM IN HOCKEY.

Will the Eatonias be admitted to the O.H.A. next winter?

According to rumors that have been going around, a motion will be made to refuse the Big Store team admittance, partly because of the commercial value of the name to the T. Eaton Company, and partly because of the fact that the Eatonia officers have been able to gather together a team of stars for the past two seasons. The latter objection is practically a charge of professionalism, and the officers of the champions are indignant that such an accusation should be made or even hinted at.—Kingston Standard.

The Eaton people's indignation is, under the circumstances, fully justified. Their team is made up of bona fide employees of the big firm, but how about the others? Outside of the colleges and schools, how many of the alleged amateur teams in the O.H.A. are not paid under some colorable pretence? It would be interesting were the testimony of all the managers taken under oath and published through the press.

GENERAL SPORTS.

The Manitoba Amateur Athletic Union has 7,000 members in affiliation.

Yale will spend $700,000 on an athletic field, with a stand accommodation of 60,000 people.

The Manitoba Curling Association will rule next year that no rink may take more than two of the open events.

The Scottish curlers were given a reception at Montreal on their way home. Most of them sailed from New York on Wednesday, the rest going by way of St John.

Abbie Wood, the great little Marathon runner, of Montreal, is the first one to get after Longboat since the latter's return from the old country. He will meet Longboat anywhere he likes and at any distance.

The Ottawa hockey club has decided to arrange a benefit game for Bruce Ridpath, who was struck and seriously injured by an automobile last fall. "Riddy" was the idol of the Ottawa fans while on the local team.

THE RING.

KILBANE IS NEW CHAMPION.

VERNON ARENA, Los Angeles, Feb. 22.—A new featherweight champion was proclaimed here to-day, when Johnny Kilbane of Cleveland, Ohio, clearly outfought, outgamed and outslugged Abe Attell, the hitherto invincible champion.

Kilbane's victory was clear-cut and decisive, and came as a surprise. As the fight began the odds were 40 to 4 on Attell, and little Kilbane money in sight. Johnny had the better of all the rounds, with the possible exception of two. He left the ring with one mark over his eye, where Attell butted him with his head. Attell was badly bruised.

Nearly 10,000 people saw the fight. Fully 5,000 others were turned away at the gates. It was the greatest crowd that ever witnessed a prize fight in Los Angeles. The receipts amounted to approximately $25,000. The men fought for a purse of $10,000, of which Attell was to receive $6,500, win, lose or draw, and Kilbane $3,500. Besides they agreed to divide evenly 50 per cent. of the moving picture privileges.

DID LANGFORD WIN?

Referee Baker's decision in connection with boxing day's big fight has been much discussed in Sydney and the whys and wherefores of it have been freely canvassed and criticised in sporting haunts, the general opinion being that Langford was the winner.

Tommy Burns, who was one of the most candid ringsiders, told an Evening News reporter that under no consideration would he agree to Snowy Baker being the referee for the contest on New Year's night between his protege, Jack Lester, and Dave Smith.

"The decision on boxing day was awful," asserted Burns. "Believe me, and I mean it, too, it was absolutely the worst decision it's been my lot to witness. Why! Langford won all the way. He was streets in front, and gee! he certainly should have got it. I had a good opinion of Snowy Baker's refereeing once, but it's all gone. He certainly won't referee a fight that I've got anything to do with. I won't have him on New Year's night. My friend, Mr. McIntosh, will have to provide somebody else."

MANTELL DEFEATED PAPKE.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 22.—Whatever claim Billy Papke, of Illinois, may have had to the middleweight championship of the world is now the undisputed property of Frank Mantell, of Pawtucket, R.I. Mantell so well earned a twenty round decision over Papke this afternoon that even Tom Jones, Papke's manager, was discouraged, and announced that he would have nothing more to do with the Illinois boy.

PALZER TO MEET WELLS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 22.—Al. Palzer, the young heavyweight who has announced himself as an aspirant for Johnson's title, and "Bombardier" Wells, the English champion, are to fight here in an open-air arena on July 4th, according to an announcement made by Promoter Eddie Graney. Palzer has signed the articles. Wells has accepted by cable.

BASEBALL.

REGARDED AS OUTLAWS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 21.—President Thomas J. Lynch, of the National League, declared last night that the proposed United States and Columbian Leagues, which are trying to break into the major league cities, will be regarded by the officials of organized baseball as nothing more than outlaws.

The remark was prompted by the reports from Cincinnati that August Herrman, chairman of the National Commission, had said that he did not regard the new leagues as outlaws and that if the Cincinnati team of which he was president had any surplus players which all the other major league teams would waive on, the independents were welcome to them.

Mr. Lynch declares he could not believe Mr. Herrman had said this, and that as far as he was concerned the new leagues would get no recognition from the National League.

POISONER KILLS EIGHT BABIES

Physicians of Brooklyn Infants' Hospital So Believe and Report Cases

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Eight bab s have died in the Brooklyn Nursery nd Infants' Hospital, 306 to 410 erkimer Street, within the last five ays, and four more are seriously ill. e physicians in charge of the hospi l, becoming satisfied yesterday that poisoner was at work, notified the oroner's office and the police. In ev y case death was unexpected and e symptoms were such that Coron 's Physician Charles Wuerst believes t some kind of irritant poison was d. One child died on Sunday, an er died early Monday morning, l three more during the day. On esday two more deaths were report at the hospital, and another died dnesday. The eighth died late yes day afternoon while the police re in the building making an in tigation.

he police are working on the the y that some insane person adminis red poison to the children in their ilk and that the poisoner is still in e hospital.

Coroner's Physician Wuerst per rmed an autopsy on two bodies yes day, and the organs were sent to aboratory to determine the nature he poison or other cause of death til this was done, it is said, it ld not be positively stated whether oxalic acid, the supposed cause of death had been given. One woman is under suspicion, and nearly all day yesterday was being questioned by the police. Though they cross questioned her for an hour at a time, they could obtain no admission of guilt.

TERMS OF STATED CASE ON THE MARRIAGE QUESTION

Supreme Court is Asked Whether Federal Power Has Jurisdiction to Validate all Marriages in Spite of Provincial Legislation and Canonical Decrees

OTTAWA, Feb. 23.—The following is the text of the stated case on the marriage question being submitted to the Supreme Court of Canada:

"The Committee of the Privy Council, on the recommendation of the Minister of Justice, advise that, pursuant to section 60 of the Supreme Court Act, the following questions be referred to the Supreme Court of Canada for hearing and consideration, namely: 1. (a) Has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact, in whole or in part, Bill No. 3 of the first session of the twelfth Parliament of Canada, entitled, 'An Act to Amend the Marriage Act.' The Bill provides as follows:

"1. The Marriage Act, chapter 105 of the Revised Statutes, 1906, is amended by adding thereto the following section: 3. Every ceremony or form of marriage heretofore or hereafter performed by any person authorized to perform any ceremony of marriage by the laws of the place where it is performed, and duly performed according to such laws, shall everywhere in Canada be deemed a valid marriage, notwithstanding any differences in the religious faith of the persons so married, and without regard to the religions of the person performing the ceremony:

"(2) The rights and duties, as married people of the respective persons married as aforesaid, and of the children of such marriage shall be absolute and complete, and no law or canonical decree or custom of or in any Province of Canada shall have any force or effect to invalidate or qualify any such marriage or any of the rights of the said persons or their children in ny manner whatsoever.

"(b) If the provisions of the said bill are not all within the authority of the Parliament of Canada to enact, which if any, of the provisions are within such authority?

"2. Does the law of the Province of Quebec render null and void unless contracted before a Roman Catholic priest a marriage that would otherwise be legally binding, which takes place in such Province?

"(a) Between persons who are both Roman Catholics, or (b) between persons one or whom, only, is a Roman Catholic.

"3. If either (a) or (b) of the last preceding question is answered in the affirmative, has the Parliament of Canada authority to enact that all such marriages whether (a) heretofore solemnized, or (b) hereafter to be solemnized, shall be legal and binding?"

NEW BANK TO BE ESTABLISHED HERE

Some days ago it was announced in these columns that the Molson's Bank had decided to locate an agency in Belleville, and this is confirmed by the Trenton Courier, which says:

The Molson's Bank, a branch of which has been established here for over thirty years, has decided to open an office in the neighboring City of Belleville, and has purchased the property of the Farmer's Bank on the Market Square. The Bank's many friends in and about Belleville, have repeatedly urged this move for years and it has been decided by the Directors of the Bank, that the future of Belleville and the surrounding district, fully warrants them in opening an office there.

Mr. Arthur Jones, late Accountant of the Trenton office of the bank, is to be the manager. This announcement will please the gun men of Belleville. No more ardent lover of "Gun and Rod" than Mr. Jones lives in the County of Hastings, and it is a great satisfaction to his many friends here that he is going away no further than our County Town.

Aside from being an ardent lover of out-door sports, Mr. Jones is, first and last, a most obliging bank official, as many of his friends in and about Trenton will testify. If he cannot make friends for his bank in Belleville, we will be very much surprised, in fact we predict for him a brilliant success. It will only be necessary for his old friends in Sidney to know that he is in charge of the office in Belleville, to assure him of an early call from them.

The Molson's Bank, aside from being one of the oldest, is one of the strongest banks in Canada, and has the reputation of being very liberal to its established clientele. It's paid up capital is $ 000,000 and its Reserved Fund $4,600,000 and the City of Belleville is to be congratulated upon getting such an acquisition to its banking circles.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

SPRING ASSIZES.

On Tuesday next the Spring Assizes will open here before Hon Justice Britton. There is at present only one non-jury case to be tried. In consequence the Grand and petty jurymen have been notified that their attendance at court is not necessary.

INQUEST ADJOURNED.

Owing to important witnesses from Peterborough and Lindsay not being able to reach the city yesterday, the Coroner's inquest upon the remain of G. T. R. brakesman J. J. Speeley, who was killed in the yard here has been adjourned until Friday afternoon next.

TRAFFIC ON C.N.O.R.

The Intelligencer learns that freight trains over the Canadian Northern Ontario Railway will be running in a week's time from Toronto and west to Deseronto. It is not anticipated that passenger trains will be running before the first of May. A considerable quantity of freight is arriving here daily.

CHURCH UNION.

A congregational meeting of the Tabernacle Church will be held on Monday evening, Feb. 26th. Reports for the year will be presented and the vote on church union will be taken. The League will serve light refreshments. Every attendant upon the services of the church, whether member or adherent, is included in the meeting.

NOT YET SETTLED

A deputation from the city, consisting of Mayor Vermilyea, Mr. W. B. Deacon, President of the Board of Trade, and Ald. Chown, who was in attendance at the Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association at Guelph, pressed the claims of this city for the convention here next year. Whilst Hamilton was favorably considered, the place is not definitely decided upon. The executive will decide the matter at a meeting to be held on Good Friday.

CLEARED THE TRACK.

A big gang of men with shovels and picks this morning cleared the Pinnacle Street line of the Grand Trunk, which had been tied up by the big storm.

THE RAILWAYS.

The work of opening a way for the iron horse through the snowdrifts on the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk and the Madoc branch was completed yesterday evening and two trains arrived between and 10 o'clock and two westbound trains left shortly afterwards. This morning trains were running on schedule time.

A NEW INDUSTRY.

Mr. J. W. Evans, President and Manager of the Tivani Electric Steel Company, has just returned from the Orton mine, where he has arranged for the shipment of 1,000 tons of ore to McDonald's Siding, to be used in the new steel plant in Belleville during the coming summer. Mr. Thomas Roberts has charge of the work at the mine.

A CURIOUS FIND.

One day last week while Mr. C. ard of McClure township and his ns were engaged in cutting logs in e woods they felled a large spruce e, and hanging on a limb, about y-five feet from the butt, they nd a man's rubber. It was in a ly good state of preservation, but evidently been exposed to the elements for some time. Now, will some indly explain how it got there?

FUNERAL POSTPONED.

funeral of the late Mrs. Jeremiahle, of Sophiasburg Township, Pr Edward County, was to have taken place Thursday afternoon, but had be postponed until yesterday afte owing to the snow blockade. Mar re present at the obsequies yeste . Rev. Mr. Lee, of Northport, lucted services at the house and emains were placed in the Belle cemetery vault. The bearers w essrs. J. Hazel, J. W. Roblin, W A. BURGOYNE GETS THREE YEARS.

Henry Burgoyne, convicted of having broken into the premises of Chapman Bros., Yonge Street, and stealing about $400 worth of jewelry, was sentenced to three years in Kingston Penitentiary, yesterday at Toronto. Burgoyne was formerly a resident of Belleville.

FINE ENTERTAINMENT

Mr. Wm. Battis of New York, was the entertainer last evening in connection with the Y. M. C. A. Star Course. The entertainment was given in the new Association building, the spacious auditorium being filled with an appreciative audience. Mr. Battis gave an excellent portrayal of Dickens' work.

HOLD UP.

Tuesday night shortly after nine o'clock another disgraceful hold up took place on West Street near the C. N.R. tracks, says the Trenton Courier. Teddy Dixon, 16 years old, was held up at the point of a revolver and robbed of his watch, a purse of money and keys. After having been robbed the robbers told the boy to skidoo home after shooting a revolver off. The party who did the robbing had a handkerchief over his mouth and nose, and was therefore hard to recognize. Another party was hidden in the bushes nearby, who came out afterwards.

A SERIOUS CHARGE.

Mr. and Mrs. John Mack, who reside in the township of Rawdon, are at present in the County jail on a serious charge. It appears that a few days ago Bailiff Jones of Marmora acting on proper instructions, went to Mack's place to make a seizure. His visit was evidently distasteful to Mack and his wife and the result was that Jones was so interfered with that he could not proceed with his duties. The accused were placed under arrest, and the charge preferred against them is interfering with a peace officer in the discharge of his duties. The case will be investigated on Monday afternoon before Judge Deroche.

WOMAN MURDERED EIGHT INFANTS

Horrible Crime by an Attendant in a Brooklyn, New York, Hospital

(Intelligencer Special.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—A formal charge of murder was to-day lodged against Winnifred Ankers, an attendant at the Brooklyn Infants' Hospital, who confessed last night to the murder of eight babies by putting oxalic acid in their milk. She says she only intended to make the children sick, and so cause trouble to nurses who were mean to her.

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 24.—The leaders of the Miners' Federation to-day decided, in the event of a strike, to detail sufficient men to keep the shafts in the mines in repair.

"SISTER CANDIDE" WAS HEAVILY FINED

PARIS, Feb. 22.—The woman known as Sister Candide, who was formerly Superior of the Order of St. Anne, and who was engaged for many years in elaborate schemes of charitable work, was sentenced to-day on a charge of embezzlement and abuse of confidence to eighteen months' imprisonment. Her sentence was suspended and she was fined $200, on the payment of which she will be relieved from serving her term in prison.

She was arrested on May 20, 1910, at the instance of a firm of jewelers from whom she had borrowed great quantities of jewelry, ostensibly to sell on commission. The jewelers became suspicious after finding in pawnshops of Paris and London much of their jewelry.

One of the woman's associates, Dr. Petit, hanged himself on the day she was arrested, leaving a note saying that he could not face the exposure, and charging her with the responsibility. She alleged to have embezzled $800,000.

Mlle. Forester, or "Sister Candide," began her public career more than twenty years ago, when she left the Convent of St. Anne to form a sanatorium for tuberculous children at Ormesson. A woman of the French peasant class, small of stature, with black, bead-like eyes, and a remarkably firm manner, she presented a striking figure in Paris, where for many a day she was most popular. It is said that she never took the orders of a nun, and was never entitled to wear the garb of the order which she assumed. From one venture to another she went on until she became a power in the philanthropic work among the poor children of France and especially of Paris. By personal gifts from the living and by legacies she accumulated vast sums of money. It has been estimated that she obtained altogether more than $5,000,000.

At Villiers-sur-Marne Sister Candide established a great medical dispensary. Both this establishment and the one at Ormesson are fine specimens of architecture surrounded by beautiful gardens. Again at Hyeres she established the sanatorium of Mont-des-Oiseaux, over which presided Dr. Leon Petit, who committed suicide at the time of her arrest.

Much of the money which she raised was secured by lotteries which were sanctioned by public opinion.

THE MARKET

Owing to the country roads being badly blocked, the attendance upon the market this morning was not as large as otherwise would have been the case. While considerable produce was offered for sale, the prices paid for some were high.

Fresh butter was quite plentiful and the ruling prices were 35c. to 38c. per pound, while in the early part of the market 40c. was obtained.

Fresh eggs are a scarce article and in consequence are dear. In a few cases lots were bought at 35c. per dozen. The price generally paid was 38c. per dozen, and in a few cases 40c. was obtained.

There are no changes to note in the prices of dressed fowls or meat.

The hog market remains firm. The past week $6.50 per hundred weight was paid for live porkers and dressed pork realized $9.00 to $9.10 per hundred.

TORONTO AND THE N. P.

The Belleville Intelligencer says that the progress of Toronto is due to the National Policy and the railways. What Toronto needs to bear in mind at present is that its progress is due largely to western expansion. The prosperity enjoyed by Toronto and by Canada in the early eighties was partly due to the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which led, to the expenditure of a large amount of capital in this country. When the railway was finished and the immigrants did not come in as rapidly as was expected, there was disapointment. Booms collapsed. Toronto had many vacant stores and dwellings. The National Policy alone could not save us from hard times.

But the phenomenal progress of Toronto dates from the time when the phenomenal progress of the West began. It is a common remark that the Toronto of today is an entirely different city from the Toronto of 1900. The tariff had not been increased, but reduced. So we cannot ascribe the new prosperity of Toronto to tariff increases. The West did it. Every new farm that was created, every new thousand bushels of wheat what was raised, every million dollars of capital borrowed for development, enriched Toronto.

Anyway, we need not quarrel about the tariff, because the tariff is not in danger. But the expansion of the West is in danger. The railways cannot carry the grain and at the same time make provision for developing new country. There is talk about western farmers building barns and adopting mixed farming. But the western farmer cannot in a season or two adopt the methods of southern Ontario. More land must be broken for wheat, more wheat must be raised, more outlets provided. The Grand Trunk Pacific must have its terminals and elevators at Fort William. The Canadian Pacific and Canadian Northern must add enormously to their equipment. This is a matter of great and urgent importance to Toronto and the East, as well as to the West.—Toronto Star.

Although, in the foregoing article, our contemporary does not advance any of its wooden-headed free trade theories, it, none the less, evidences its hostility to protection by ascribing the wonderful progress which has been made by the Queen City to any cause other than the N. P., which it hates consumedly.

The Star cannot, however, be allowed to dodge in this way the issue which it has raised.

While it is beyond question that, by the construction of railways into northern and western Ontario and into our western provinces, Toronto has benefited very greatly owing to the expansion thereby created, yet the chief factor in that prosperity has undoubtedly been the National Policy, which has not only made of Toronto a great manufacturing centre, but has also provided traffic for Canadian railways and lines of water transportation by preserving to Canadian manufacturers the trade of our own country, and has "scattered plenty o'er a smiling land"—a land which, lacking the potent agency of protection for home industries, would to-day have been a commercial vassal of the United States, as it was previous to the revision of the tariff in 1879.

That was the work of the Liberal Conservative party, and so, too, was the construction of the first railway across the continent, namely, the Canadian Pacific, which grand enterprise the Grit party was too small in its ideas to understand or appreciate and the building of which it did its utmost to prevent. Who that lived in the early seventies, when the great project was being discussed, and in the early eighties when the work of construction had been undertaken by Sir John A. Macdonald's Government, can fail to remember the carping criticisms of Blake, Mackenzie Cartwright and other leading Grits and their prophecies of disaster to the country as being sure to flow from the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railway? And certainly no one can forget how those prophets of evil were, by the logic of events, utterly and forever discredited as political leaders or prophets.

"The tariff is not in danger," says The Star, but that is not because that journal, The Globe and sundry other Grit newspapers and many of the Grit orators have not done their utmost to deprive the Dominion and its people of the benefits which have flowed in a constant stream from that wise enactment. Recent debates in Parliament, in the course of which certain prominent Liberals strenuously resisted the appointment of a permanent commission of experts whose duty it would be to report from time to time to the Government such alterations in matters of trade and commerce as might affect our tariff policy, on the ridiculous allegation that the commission was intended as a pretence for further increasing the tariff, demonstrate that the tariff would be "in danger" if those bitter enemies of a sane poicy of protection were given an opportunity of sacrificing it to their crudity of "economic thought." But the people of Canada are too wide awake to their own interests to allow the policy under which the country has prospered to an amazing degree to be reversed, or even tampered with.

Toronto, we repeat, owes its prosperity to the direct and indirect effects of the N. P., and so do many other cities, towns and villages in Ontario, Quebec and other provinces.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Of the 24,302 world's postage stamps, the British Empire has issued over seven thousand.

Hiram—Has old man Sampson made his will?

Hank—Gawsh, no. Hain't got nothin' ter leave 'cept the rheumatism.

New Zealand's postal revenue is larger in proportion to population than that of any other country. It exceeded $5,000,000 last year, or $5.00 for every inhabitant.

Canada is the principal consumer of the coal exported from the United States, being credited with $15,125,207 out of a total of $15,335,856 worth of anthracite, and $21,510,604 out of a total of $28,732,888 worth of bituminous coal exported in the ten months ending with October of the past year.

Energy from Niagara Falls, including operation on both sides of the river, is being used at the rate of 126,000 horse power for electro-chemical purposes, 56,200 horse power for railway service, 36,400 horse power for lighting and 54,540 horse power for industrial services, the total being 273,140 horse power. This is about 5 per cent. of the power available.

An illustration of the feasibility of using waste coal for power purposes has just been given in Hull, England, one of a new patent water-tube boiler installed in an oil mill. Coal-dust costing $1.25 a ton was burned and gave equal efficiency as compared with coal costing $2.50 a ton used with the old style of boiler. In 26 minutes a steam pressure of 180 pounds was obtained.

The Minister of Finance, whom the Smart Alec Ottawa correspondents of the Liberal papers sneer at as 'Young Mr. White,' appears to be finding his Parliamentary legs in good style. He tripped up Sir Wilfrid Laurier in the debate on the Tariff Commission by quoting the ex-Premier's own words in favor of it some years previous, and he has severely scorched the late Government in revealing its bungling incompetency in the financing of the National Transcontinental Railway. "Young Mr. White" is making a lot of ex-Ministers feel prematurely old just now.—Brockville Times.

Senator Derbyshire has a bill before the Senate which aims to make unlawful the operation of a boat which is propelled, wholly or partly, by gas, gasoline, or naphtha, unless it is provided with an underwater exhaust or muffler. Penalty for violation of this ordinance—when it becomes law—$25. Mr. Derbyshire lives in Brockville, where every fourth man owns a motor boat. The result is a noise in the evenings, along the harbor front which is very great. And it is also considerable in Belleville, and becoming greater rapidly.

It will be well if it turns out to be true that the British Parliament means to provide what harbor and railway accommodation would be required to make Galway a suitable terminus for a fast Atlantic ferry, with Halifax at the other end of the line. If it is really possible to make the crossing in less than three days by this route, it is very certain that some time the experiment will be made and that when it is made it will be supported. Making all allowances for the difference in the way people look at things, granting that some people would prefer to spend their time on the ship rather than on the train, that some prefer the New York route and others the long fresh water trip by the St. Lawrence before the heaving sea is reached, that some like luxurious slow boats rather than fast ones, it is still the fact that for the average traveller the discomforts of the sea are such as to make a day or two saved in the actual ocean voyage a matter of the highest personal interest. For the most rapid route there will always be traffic. If the British Government will do what is needed for the Galway end, the Canadian Government and the Canadian transcontinental railways ought to join in together to do what is necessary at the Halifax end. The opportunity is there; by all means let it be improved.—Montreal Herald.

ANNUAL REPORT.

Successful Year.

The strength and reliability of an institution depends on its ability to do what it promises to do and what is expected of it. The Sun and Hastings Savings and Loan Company of Ontario, Toronto, paid its stockholders six per cent. dividend for 1911 and paid interest at the rate of four and a half to five per cent. on debentures issued, four per cent. on deposits, carried to reserve $20.00 and had about $14,000 surplus at the end of the year. Any doubtful securities existing were written down so that all securities stand as good, sure assets. This, with a reserve of $165,000, gives to stockholders, debenture-holders and depositors a security absolutely safe. The stock of this company is now a vauable asset and the company's debentures issued are an exceptionally safe investment. (See extract from the annual report in this issue.) This report states that interest and principal payments on mortgages have been promptly met. The demand for money has been very large, and the rate secured very good. With the bright business outlook in Canada for the present year an exceptionally good business year is looked for by this company.

SUMMING UP BEGUN IN THE CAMORRA TRIAL

VITERBO, Feb. 22.—The summing up has at last begun in the trial of the group of Camorrists charged with the murder of Cuoccolo and his wife in 1906.

Formal proceedings in the case were begun more than eleven months ago, and the last witness, it was announced, was heard to-day. He is an engraver, Argenio by name, who engraved Cuoccolo's initials on the ring which, it is alleged, was found by Carabineers hidden in a mattress in the house occupied by Guiseppie Salvi and which had been one of the important exhibits in the case. Argenio denied emphatically having declared, as the defence maintained, that the engraving was done after Cuoccolo's murder.

Signor Salomono, one of the lawyers, said later that proceedings would be taken later against Argenio for perjury.

Alesandro Lloy, counsel for the defence, asked if it were true that the informer, Abbatemaggio, had sent his photograph to Capt. Fabroni of the Carabineers with his autograph. Abbatemaggio replied:

"I do not have to answer, but wishing to please Signor Lloy, I may say that I sent one photograph to Capt. Fabroni and another to Signor Romualdi, who is taking part in the prosecution."

Romualdi exhibited the photograph, which represented Abbatemaggio undergoing an examination by the alienists. Signor Rota then began the preliminary summing up by the prosecution. His address occupied the entire afternoon. He pointed out that the celebrity of the case did not depend on the fact that two criminals had been murdered, but because the case represented the study of a great social evil by a people desirous of shaking off a criminal yoke.

Arraignment March 12.

Indianapolis, Feb. 24.—Arrangements were completed by the Government yesterday for the arraignment on March 12 of the men indicted in the dynamite conspiracy cases.

District Attorney Miller announced that about 18 of the 54 defendants would go before Federal Judge Anderson here and enter please in answer to the 32 indictments. The McNamaras, Ortie McManigal, and probably several of the defendants who are also indicted on the Pacific coast probably will not appear, and John J. McCray, formerly of Wheeling, Va., has not yet been apprehended.

Ford Magneto built into the motor

Here's a Ford Model T Touring Car

$850

Handsome—Foredoors—roomy—up-to-the-minute in desired details, strong, simple and backed with a record of five years' satisfaction—giving results in all parts of the world to more than 100,000 users. This beautiful motor car completely equipped for only $850 f. o. b. Walkerville.

FACTS from FORD

There are no "glittering generalities" in FORD advertising.—It gives you the established Facts—we appeal to your judgment through Facts, not with claims—and you know it's more profitable to live with a Fact than to nurse a family of "claims."

There's this about FORD advertising that makes it particularly distinctive and that is its positive harmony with Facts. It is just like FORD Model T—reliable, positive.

We tell you FORD Model T is the lowest priced quality car and immediately follow with the Facts.

Entire mechanical construction of Vanadium Steel, scientifically heat-treated—the very best as well as the most expensive steel made.

The only motor car with the Magneto built into the flywheel as a part of the motor; the only motor car in which there are neither dry cells nor batteries. This is also a FORD Magneto—built entirely in our own shops.

The lightest weight 4-Cylinder motor car in the world, size, power and capacity considered—60 pounds to the horsepower.

The cheapest 4-Cylinder motor car in maintenance, 25 to 30 miles on one gallon of gasoline and 5,000 to 8,000 miles on one set of tires.

The simplest motor car in design, anybody of ordinary intelligence quickly understands its every mechanical detail.

A durable car is best evidenced by there being in active operation to-day more than 100,000 Model FORD cars; the most widely-known motor car, as it is seen in every part of the civilized world, it is the Universal Car.

The FORD Model T has the lowest purchase price and running cost per mile per passenger of any motor car in the world.

FACTS from FORD

The high quality and the low price of Model T FORD'S are possible because of:

1st: The extreme simplicity and accurately scientific design—the creation of the marvelous inventive genius of Henry Ford.

2nd: The scientifically heat-treated Vanadium Steel material. We emphasize this because it is vitally important that you should know the sort of materials used in the construction of the motor car you buy.

3rd: The most efficient automobile factories in the world, where the workmen are employed during the entire year building only this ONE WONDERFUL CAR.

4th: The large production—75,000 FORD Model T cars in one year.

5th: The Ford Motor Company devotes all its energy to the production of only one car; it finances the entire business itself, and this is a mighty force in manufacture; no borrowed money, no interest-bearing bond issues, no mortgages, but everything bought and paid for with spot cash, and sold the same way.

There is intense significance in the fact that every third car sold in Canada last year was a FORD Model T. This significance increases when you know that every second car made in Canada this year will be a FORD Model T.

FORD Model T cars would not be made in such quantities if established merit had not produced the demand. If the Model T had not satisfied its thousands and thousands of users.

FORD Model T car is in largest demand because of its all-round utility; it meets the motor want of everybody, from the man of leisure to the busy worker, from the doctor and professional man to the banker and farmer.

Remember all FORD cars are sold fully equipped—we specify the equipment article by article. When you buy a FORD Model T you buy a complete car.

In addition to FORD Model T Touring Car we have for prompt delivery:

Ford Model T Torpedo, fully equipped, f.o.b. Walkerville..........	$775

meets every Sunday afternoon at 2.30 in the auditorium of Bridge Street Methodist Church. Mr. Geo. F. Stewart has kindly consented to deliver one of his interesting addresses. Musical programme: Solo, "I'm a Pilgrim," Miss Helen Ketcheson; Quartette, "Be a Hero."

"Subscriber" writes: Would it not be a good idea if, while the city officials were notifying residents to comply with the snow ordinance, and to keep their sidewalks cleared, they would also do the same with the city property and remove some of the snow from the crossings, and also to see that the sidewalks are cleared in front of the vacant lots. Perhaps they are waiting for the spring rains, which will change the "beautiful" into the widely known Belleville mud."

TAKES RESPONSIBILITY

Sir James Well Satisfied With Boundary Negotiations.

Mr. Rowell Makes a Desperate Attempt to Force the Government to Pass a Resolution Claiming a Share of the Northland, But the Premier Says the Whole Matter Is In Good Hands.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—Sir James Whitney postponed discussion of the Manitoba boundary question yesterday in the Legislature despite the urging of Mr. Rowell.

The latter wanted to know if the discussion over this boundary question was not going to proceed.

"Oh, not this afternoon," replied Sir James Whitney.

"Well, when might we expect to continue it?" asked Mr. Rowell. "The situation is this, that the matter is at present before the Dominion Government, and a resolution of this Legislature should be obtained before the Dominion Government has passed upon the matter. The expression of this House might affect the result."

"But what would be the effect if this House defeats the motion?" interjected Sir James.

"Then we think the people of the province would have the right to judge the action of the Government in rejecting such a motion. Perhaps, then, we can go on with the discussion of the Judicature Act," suggested Mr. Rowell.

"No; I move that the House adjourn," replied Sir James, "and I may say that nobody who has occupied the seat I do, has endeavored more than I to accomodate members of the Opposition as regards discussions and everything else. I will leave it to the judgment of this House if the Government is not justified in taking any action it may see fit, when it assumes responsibility for the result of its action. I will even leave it to the hon. gentleman who sits next to the leader of the Opposition."

"There is only this about it," replied Hon. A. G. MacKay, "that the Ottawa correspondence indicates that the Ontario-Manitoba boundary bill is now before the Dominion House and the sooner we get a resolution from this House on the matter the more useful it would be in affecting the result of the deliberations at Ottawa."

An adjournment of the House, however, was agreed to.

J. A. Ellis (Ottawa West) was a busy man yesterday afternoon. He introduced three bills in the Legislature at the request of the Ontario Municipal Association. He wants to amend the Municipal Act by giving municipalities the right to remove dangerous fences, buildings or other structures. This is to prevent any accident such as occurred last year in Hamilton when a large water tank connected with a fire sprinkler collapsed.

Mr. Ellis also wants to amend the Municipal Act by providing that municipalities shall not be liable for accidents on streets, unless the municipality or one of its officials knew that the defect which caused the accident existed. This bill has in the previous session been approved by the municipal committee, but was defeated in the House.

A. A. Mahaffy wants to amend the Municipal Act affecting the licensing of moving picture shows. The law now contains the words "where vaudeville performances are introduced," and the result is that in the case of moving picture shows where vaudeville is not introduced, there is no power to impose licenses.

R. H. McElroy (Carleton) proposes an amendment to the Municipal Act, giving power to county councils after a good roads bylaw is passed in a county, to issue debentures yearly up to $20,000 in each year for building roads. At present county councils can only issue debentures up to $20,000 in one year without submitting to the people for vote. Where a county council has issued debentures up to $20,000 for some other purpose they cannot then issue other debentures for good road purposes without asking the people to vote on the proposition. Mr. McElroy's bill is to remedy this.

Mr. McElroy also has an amendment to the act for the improvement of public highways to provide for the issue of debentures for the expenditure of money in building them.

Hon. J. J. Foy says that $148,084 is approximately the amount of money it has cost the province for statute revision. This was in reply to a question by Wm. Proudfoot of Centre Huron as to the names of all persons to whom payments have been made in connection with the present revision of the statutes, and the total amount paid to each.

There is talk of a bill being introduced at the present session of the Legislature to abolish all property qualifications in municipal elections. The proposed bill is a radical change from the present act, and is intended to permit candidates to run for office who have neither a bank account nor real estate to their credit.

Prince Arthur Injured.

London, Feb. 24.—Prince Arthur of Connaught, son of the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, was yesterday thrown from his horse while fox hunting at Sinnington, in Yorkshire. It was first believed that he was seriously injured, but the surgeons who were called, after a thorough examination, declared that he had no serious hurt, although he was greatly shaken.

Col. Matheson Ill.

Toronto, Feb. 24—Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, who was removed to the Western Hospital on Thursday evening, suffering from what apparently was heart trouble, was feeling much better last night. He had planned to present his budget to the Legislature on Tuesday next, but his present illness may require these plans to be changed.

BLOCKS BETTER ROADS

Sir Wilfrid Leads Attack on Government Measure.

Vigorous Attempt Is Made to Hold Up the Promised Legislation on Behalf of the Farmer on Constitutional Grounds and Then In Detail—Ministry Will Keep Its Promises to the People at Once.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and the Opposition fought tooth and nail yesterday afternoon to block the Government from carrying out its policy of co-operation with the provinces in the improvement of highways, while professing to approve of the principle of Hon. Frank Cochrane's bill, which was up for second reading.

Sir Wilfrid attacked it on constitutional grounds, raising the point of order, which he backed up by extensive quotations of precedents, that the bill indirectly involved the appropriation of public money which, under section 54 of the British North American Act, could only be done by resolution introduced with the concurrence of the Governor-General and a money bill founded thereon.

Rt. Hon. R. L. Borden denied that the bill appropriated one dollar of the public revenue, it merely provided that, if Parliament should at some future time appropriate money for particular purposes, machinery was provided for the manner in which it should be expended. Before one dollar was expended, however, a resolution would have to be brought down in the manner provided in the B.N.A. Act. The speaker ruled against the objection to the bill.

Sir Wilfrid then dealt with the bill itself. The only exception, he said, which he took to it was that the expenditure contemplated should not be left to the caprice of the Government of the day, but should be made on a scale on a well defined principle laid down in the bill itself. Were the older and more wealthy provinces to pay for the improvement of the highways in the newer provinces, or how was it to work out?

He moved an amendment: "That, the bill be not now read a second time, but that it be resolved that, while this House is favorable to federal assistance to highways, it is of the opinion that such aid should be granted on a fixed basis similar to that provided in the B.N.A. Act in regard to the federal subsidy to the provinces." This was lost without division.

The Premier taunted Sir Wilfrid with having a short memory. The only objection he had raised to the bill had been one that had been raised by himself and answered by the Minister of Railways on the first reading of the bill. The Minister had distinctly stated then that the money would be expended either according to the population of the provinces or the amount of the provincial subsidies.

It was not left to the Governor-General-in-council to say what amount should go to one province or the other. The estimates when introduced to the House would provide for the division of the vote.

While the bill might not be complete, said the Premier, owing to the short time which the Government had to prepare its legislative program, and it might be found necessary to make more complete provision for the aid of highways next session. The Government had done its duty in implementing at the earliest possible moment a pledge that it had made to the electorate during the late election, and which had met with the unanimous approval of the people.

"I hope we shall be able to arrange with the Provincial Governments," said Hon. Frank Cochrane, "so that they will make a grant equal to the grant given by the Federal Government, so that we may be able to go on within a very short time and construct these roads. But if any Provincial Government does not wish to contribute I see no reason why we should not go on and do the work ourselves.

"But if they join in with us, so much the better. We will co-operate with them in making specifications. Evidently no specifications can be laid down in this bill. You cannot draw up specifications to cover all roads, because some might cost much more than others."

After the amendment had been lost without division and the bill given its second reading, it went to committee of whole.

Andrew Broder (Dundas) urged the adoption of a system of federal roads, such as obtained in France, where roads were divided into national departmental, municipal and rural.

Hon. Rodophe Lemieux spoke of the benefit of good roads in attracting tourists.

"Let us build trunk roads," said A. S. Goodeve (Kootenay), "and let the municipalities look after their own roads."

W. M. German (Welland) expressed his disapproval of trunk roads. What the farmer wanted was good roads leading from his farm to the railway station in his vicinity, not trunk roads for motorists.

G. H. Bradbury (Selkirk) agreed with Mr. German that local roads were the first need, as did E. W. Nesbitt (N. Oxford).

Messrs. A. K. MacLean, Sinclair, and McKenzie also spoke.

Senator Miller Is Dead.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Senator Miller of Nova Scotia, the last surviving member in the Upper House of those appointed by royal proclamation in 1867, passed away in Ottawa yesterday afternoon. He suffered a paralytic stroke some five weeks ago from which he never recovered.

He was born in Antigonish County in 1839 and was a Conservative in politics. His death leaves now three vacancies in the Senate, all from Nova Scotia. The other two were made vacant by the death of Senator Comeaux and Senator McKay.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Lower, Chicago Higher—Live Stock —Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—Serious complaints of damage to soft winter wheat made prices to-day finish with a bulge. Closing figures were 1-4c to 3-4c higher than 48 hours before. Corn showed a net gain of 3-8c to 5-8c and oats 1-8c to 3-8c. In provisions the outcome varied from the same as Wednesday night to 10c decline.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat, ⅛d to ⅝d lower, and corn ⅛d to ⅝d lower. Paris wheat closed ¼c to 1c lower. Berlin, ¾c lower and Budapest ⅛c lower than Wednesday.

Must Fight, Says Hebert.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—Eugene Hebert, the legally divorced and re-married principal of the famous suit decided Thursday, said yesterday that his legal advisers were considering the question of an appeal.

Asked how it was after dropping the case and pleading poverty, he was contemplating going on with the case, he said that if his wife could afford the litigation he would have to.

Mrs. Hebert could not be seen, but her lawyer, G. V. Cousins, said she was overjoyed by the result.

Strathcona Trust Roasted.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—There was considerable criticism of the scheme for the administration of the trust established by Lord Strathcona for the introduction of physical training in Canada, at yesterday's session of the convention of the American Physical Education Association, held in the medical building at McGill.

The physical instruction was to be given by drill sergeants, said a speaker, and was to be military in style. Thus immobility and precision in meaningless movements and exercises founded on unscientific motions were to be perpetuated.

What was wanted, it was claimed, was teaching by men and women, who had been trained in physiology.

Urges School Settlement.

Montreal, Feb. 24.—Le Devoir, the organ of Henri Bourassa, appeared yesterday with the following appeal spread in large type, seven columns wide, across its front page:

"In 1875, the Federal Parliament decreed that minorities in the west should enjoy complete educational liberty. The law was proposed by a Liberal; the Conservative (Miller) declared that it would forever protect minorities against the tyranny of majorities, at least as long as justice and British institutions prevailed in this country.

"Are justice and British institutions things of the past?"

Curesold Folks' Coughs

DOESN'T DISTURB THE STOMACH; EASES AT ONCE AND CURES THOROUGHLY.

"CATARRHOZONE" A BOON TO MANY THOUSANDS.

Because you are old is no reason for suffering with everlasting coughing—those terrible chest troubles and difficult breathing can be thoroughly cured with Catarrhozone. You simply breathe the healing vapor of Catarrhozone, and instantly its rich, balsamic fumes are carried by your breath into the tiniest recesses of the nose, throat, chest, bronchial tubes and lungs.

Just think of it,—a direct breathable medicine, full of soothing antiseptic pine essences that reaches every sore, congested membrane in two seconds. No drugs to take—nothing to harm or sicken the stomach, because Catarrhozone is the purest, safest cough, catarrh and cold remedy ever devised.

"For many years," writes Richard McCallum, Stirling, Ont., "I have suffered from Catarrh, and continually hawked and coughed, so that my throat was always in an inflamed, irritable condition.

"Doctors' medicine did not help me in the least, and all other remedies I used were quite useless. In one case it was time wasted in snuffing powder up the nose; in another using a greasy ointment, and so on. Not one of them was the least bit of good.

"I heard Catarrhozone favorably spoken of, and tried it. Really, it benefited me more in a few hours than years of treatment with doctors and other so-called remedies.

"Receiving such immense benefit, I continued with Catarrhozone, and in a few weeks I was completely cured of Catarrh and throat trouble."

Get Catarrhozone to-day. Large size costs $1.00, and lasts two months. Smaller sizes, 25c. and 50c. All dealers, or The Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Ont.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE CITY MISSION

THE SABBATH SCHOOL.

Perhaps the most important part of any congregational work is the Sabbath School, and with the City Mission this is no exception. The Sabbath School has always held a foremost place in connection with the work of our mission.

Hundreds of scholars have passed through the school since its organization and have received faithful Bible teaching by interested and devoted teachers.

We have an interesting school of about 60 members and nine teachers which meets regularly every Sabbath afternoon at 2.30 and we study the international series of lessons.

This year we have introduced a new system of giving marks to the scholars and we are finding it to be quite an incentive to more regular attendance, better order and more interest being generally manifested.

It may be of some public interest to know that five of our former teachers have been, and are engaged in mission work. We refer to Mrs. Bird, who labored in Central Africa for a number of years, Miss Dix, who is now engaged in the Forward Movement workk in Chicago; Miss Craig in China with the China Inland Mission; Miss Wright, actively engaged in church work in Tweed; Miss Curts died in India while actively engaged in missionary work there.

Since the beginning of the new year we are thankful to be able to say there is an improvement in every department of our mission work. Our Sunday morning meetings, conducted by Mr. C. Elvins, in which he has taken up the Sunday School lesson, are a real spiritual uplift. We have a good attendance and the interest is increasing. For Sunday evenings we have efficient helpers. We appreciate the services of the college students who take two meetings a month. They visit from house to house Sunday afternoon if weather permits them to do so.

The 'Y's' appointed Miss Nicholson to take charge of the Mothers' Meetings and Miss Reeves the Sewing School for girls, which is held Thursday afternoons.

The girls in the sewing school are doing well; a number of them are trying for a prize to be given by Mrs. John Williams when the school closes later on.

Miss Nicholson prepares the sewing for the mothers. After an hour is spent with the work, she gives a Bible talk. Then a plain tea is served before closing.

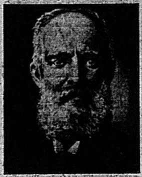
TORTURED FOR THIRTY FIVE YEARS

I really could not live without "Fruit-a-tives"

FENAGHVALE, ONT. Jan. 29th. 1910.

"For thirty-five years (and I am now a man over seventy) I have been a terrible sufferer from Constipation. No matter what remedy or physicians I employed, the result was always the same—impossible to get a cure. About two years ago, I read about 'Fruit-a-tives' and I decided to try them.

I have used 'Fruit-a-tives' ever since. They are the first and only medicine that suited my case. If it were not for 'Fruit-a-tives' I am satisfied that I could not life" JAMES PROUDFOOT.



The greatest remedy in the world for all forms of Indigestion and Dyspepsia, is "Fruit-a-tives". Doctors as well as hundreds of people proclaim it.

"Fruit-a-tives" cures all stomach troubles because it makes the liver active, strengthens the kidneys, purifies the blood and keeps the stomach sweet and clean. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only remedy made of fruit juices.

HOTEL STABLES WERE GUTTED

Hastings House Stables Destroyed for Third Time in Few Years

A few weeks ago an attempt was made to burn the stables in connection with the Hastings House, in this city, but it proved to be unsuccessful, as the blaze was detected too soon by the police. Last night, however, an attempt of like kind was successful. Shortly after the midnight hour the premises were discovered to be on fire and before the flames were extinguished the stables were gutted. When the stables were destroyed by fire some two years ago, they were rebuilt and sheeted with iron. It was no doubt owing to the sheeting and the large quantity of snow about that prevented the fire from extending beyound the premises in which it originated. The interior of the stable was gutted by the devouring element. Only one horse was in the building at the time, and fortunately it was rescued. Mr. John Bohan had recently taken charge of this hostelry and yesterday he had placed in the building a quantity of hay and grain which were destroyed.

The premises belong to the Murney estate. It is estimated that the loss will be in the vicinity of $1,000, which is covered by insurance.

These premises have been destroyed by fire three times within the past few years. The fire brigade were at work upon the scene until after two o'clock this morning and did excellent work by preventing the spread of the flames to adjacent buildings.

WAGON WAS FIRED.

At an early hour this morning when the fire at the stable was about extinguished, a covered vehicle belonging to Mrs. Jas. Wallace, which was in a shed in the rear of her store on Front Street, was discovered to be on fire. In the vehicle were some bags and these had been ignited. The blaze was fortunately discovered to avert what might have been a bad fire. The vehicle was in such a position and covered in such a manner that a spark from the adjacent building could not have caused the blaze. It was no doubt a deliberate attempt to burn not only the vehicle but the premises where it was placed.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

MADAME SHERRY.

Because everyone all over the country is humming, singing, or whistling some number of the score of the big sensational musical success "Madame Sherry," which will be at the Griffin Opera House, Friday, March 1st, the impression is current in some quarters that the production's charm is in the greater part musical. As a matter of fact, the mirth qualities of the play are no less engaging than its score. The love of a man for a maid under odd circumstances is the reigning spell of the production, according to report, but this love, this courtship is so beset on so many sides, and attended by so many misadventures, that while itself remaining an appealing interest, all its accessory situations arouse amusement. SAVE YOUR HAIR

While You Have Hair to Save, Use Newbro's Herpicide.

Every woman who is obliged to wear false hair or man, a toupee, feels that it is a misfortune. What makes the burden so doubly hard to bear is the knowledge that the loss of natural hair could in most instances, have been easily avoided.

The arch enemy of good hair is the dandruff germ. This is now a well established scientific fact. There is one remedy on the market which used regularly, will kill the germ and keep out every trace of dandruff.

This remedy is Newbro's Herpicide long known as the Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer. By keeping the scalp clean Herpicide not only prevents the hair from falling out but allows it to grow as nature intended. Begun in time and its use persisted in, this valuable remedy insures a nice healthy head of hair.

Herpicide imparts a life and luster to dull, dead, brittle hair making it light fluffy and beautiful.

Don't wait. Begin now to save your hair.

Herpicide is sold and guaranteed in one dollar size bottles by all druggists.

Applications may be procured at the better barber shops and hair dressers.

A nice sample and booklet on the care of the hair will be sent to anyone upon receipt of 10c. in postage or silver. Address The Herpicide Co., Dept. R. Detroit, Mich. Doyle's Drug Store Special Agency.

JUNIORS HAD AN OUTING

The Boys and Girls from Bridge Street E. L. Had a Gala Time Last Night

A hundred young voices made the welkin ring yesterday evening and gave abundant proof that the owners of them had sound lungs as they traversed the streets on the east side of the river, and cheered for everything in sight, in all kinds of sleighs. It was the annual drive of the Junior Epworth League of Bridge St. Methodist Church and was the "best ever."

That was an appetizer for the bountiful repast that followed, which was served by the officers of the League and other friends.

Then games followed causing considerable hilarity, and finally the following fine programme was enjoyed: Recitation, James Ketcheson; vocal solo, Mary Foster; recitation, Queena Kerr; piano selection, Marion Chapman; recitation, Jack Marshall; recitation, Kenneth Wensley; vocal trio, Little Fishers; recitation, Jack Deacon; piano selection, Vera Boyle; reading, Miss Sabra Bonisteel; piano duet, Miss Nellie McMechan and Miss Aileen Scantlebury; recitation, Maud Sine; dialogue, by four boys, "The Little Baker"; recitation, Mrs. Edwards; solo, Adelaide Rose; exercise by seven juniors.

In no uncertain way the audience testified their esteem for the President of the League, Miss Whitworth, especially when they were informed that she had been invited back to the church for another year. The Superintendent of the Sunday School was the happy chairman.

A True Friend

Would not give you a drug in your food.

But many persons, of their own accord, drink coffee or tea day after day—ignoring the fact that there is a drug, CAFFEINE, in every cup.

True, you may be able to stand it for a time, but the drug is there, and sooner or later is pretty sure to show in some annoying ailment.

There can be no relief until the cause is removed.

Simply leaving off coffee and tea will work wonders, but it is much easier if you shift to well-made

CURLING.

LOCAL CURLERS BEATEN.

Two junior rinks of curlers went to Napanee esterday and two proceeded to Kingston. The result was our boys were defeated at both places, at Napanee by 1 shot and at Kingston by 5 shots.

NAPANEE RINKS WON.

Two senior rinks from the neighboring town of Napanee last night visited this city for the purpose of playing a match with two local rinks. The game was one of a series for trophies given for supremacy in the Canada Central Curling Association. The result was a decisive victory for the visitors, who certainly played a fine game. The score upon the two rinks was 41 to 26 in favor of Napanee, a majority of 15 shots. On rink No. 1, of which F. Quick for Belleville and R. G. H. Travers, of Napanee, were the skips, the game was close and interesting. Belleville at the commencement took a decided lead, but this was soon overcome towards the latter part of the game by their opponents. Eighteen ends were played on both rinks. On rink No. 2 Mr. B. Iler was the skip for Belleville and Dr. Leonard for Napanee. The latter proved to be easy victors, securing 23 shots to Belleville's 9. During play the Napanee rink secured a 6 and a 5 end. A goodly number of spectators witnessed the game, including some ladies. At the conclusion of the match the visitors were entertained at the club house. The players and scores were as follows:—

BILLIARDS.

POGGENBURG GOING ABROAD.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—J. Ferdinand Poggenburg, of the Liederkranz Club of this city, who captured the title of international champion at 18.2 balk-line billiards at the international tournament recently concluded at the local club, will shortly sail for Paris with the French champion, Edouard Roudil, to participate in the European championship 18.2 balk-line tournament, which will be held in the French capital beginning March 15.

The trip to Europe was brought about by the victory of Poggenburg over Chas. E. Conklin, the National champion, in the playing off of the tie for first honors. The Liederkranz billiardist was offered the opportunity to compete abroad by his club provided he won the international match, and last night the arrangements were made for his entering the tournament.

The Paris tournament is promoted annually under the auspices of the French Federation of Amateur Billiardists, and always draws entries from Germany, England, Belgium and Holland. Poggenburg will not represent the New York club in competition, but will compete as the representative of the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players. It will be the first time that an American has taken part in the French tournament, although Nelson E. Fost, an American, played a match game under the same auspices some time ago.

Roudil, who will accompany the American, won the French tournament last year and in 1910, and finished in fourth place in the international event. The European tournament is open to all amateur billiardists of the world, and the number of games will be governed by the entry list and will be contested at the Automobile Club of Paris.

THE RING.

BROWN AND BALDWIN DRAW.

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—Matty Baldwin, of Boston, and Knockout Brown, of New York, fought ten rounds at the National Sporting Club here last night, and at the end of the bout neither man had decisively the better of it. The Boston lightweight landed at least ten right hooks flush on the New Yorker's chin, but they lacked sufficient force to harm him. One hard hook partly closed the local man's eye.

HOCKEY.

Kingston Frontenacs made a gallant struggle for the senior cup in the final on their home ice last night. They beat the Eatons 8—3, but as in the first game the Eatons stood ahead by 13 to 4, the final result was:—

Eatons 16
Frontenacs 12

TRAP SHOOTING.

Twelve members of the Belleville Gun Club yesterday afternoon participated in the weekly shoot at clay pigeons. Some good scores were made. Those competing and the scores were as follows:

A. Mott, 24; H. Day, 23; J. Davey, 21; J. Miller, 21; R. Day, 19; G. Bennett, 18; J. Thompson, 18; M. Sprague, 18; W. J. Andrews, 16; H. Howie, 16; E. B. Harris, 2[illegible]; J. Woodley, 12.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES.

Friday noon the Campaigners dined together. Teams sat together, compared notes and listened to pointed advice by the Field Secretary, Mr. Sheppard, and the indefatigable President, D. V. Sinclair. Yesterday morning over seven hundred dollars was raised. The next report will be Monday noon. The ladies of the Auxiliary are superintending the lunches.

Some of the teams have been strengthened. Messrs. P. C. McLaurin, L. H. Wilkes and Myers Gilbert have been added.

Everybody's help is needed. Don't wait until called upon. Don't let these men fail to meet the terms of securing Strathcona's $5,000. Every little bit helps.

Every man in town is invited to hear Shepard at the auditorium of the new building to-morrow at 4.15 when the Symphony Orchestra will furnish the music.

Among other things Shepard said yesterday:

The Young Men's Christian Association is one of the great movements of the present age. It is only about sixty years old but has grown by leaps and bounds until it now circles the globe with its thousands of organizations and numbers its members by the hundreds of thousands.

Its adaptability has made possible its introduction to cities and towns, to schools and colleges, to Occident and Orient, to country districts, to mining camps, lumber camps, to industrial camps, to sailors and soldiers, to men of high and low degree, and to men of all nations and all climes.

It is not a home, in the truest sense, but it supplements the home in providing dormitories, good fellowship and brotherly sympathy. It is not a school, but it is a centre for intellectual uplift and mental training. It is not the church, but it is the men of the church as a whole interesting themselves in the moral welfare of men and stimulating men to altruistic service for other men.

What the Association has meant in hundreds of other towns, the Belleville Association may now mean in its splendid new home, and with its modern equipment. It should be remembered, however that the Association is not the building but it is the men who, with the building as a centre, are uniting themselves for the all-round development of men and boys. The building will make possible the kind of work that will tell the most upon men and will attract to the membership the strongest and best manhood of the city, where they may unitedly work for the accomplishment of better and more far-reaching results than have been possible heretofore

The movement of its officers to successfully clean up the financial end of the building operations and to provide for the maintenance of the activities of the association for '912 is a worthy one and should meet with the heartiest support from every well wishing citizen of Belleville.

SETTLERS' EXCURSIONS TO CANADIAN NORTHWEST.

Commencing with the first Tuesday in March, and continuing on every Tuesday thereafter during March and April, the Canadian Pacific will run Settlers' Excursion trains to Winnipeg and West.

For the accommodation of settlers travelling with their live stock and effects; a colonist car will be attached to the settlers' effects train. This car will leave Toronto on regular train at 10.20 p. m.; arriving at West Toronto it will be cut off and attached to settlers' effects train as mentioned above.

For those not travelling with stock and effects, special Colonist Cars will be attached to regular train leaving Toronto at 10.20 p. m. and run through to Winnipeg without change. No charge is made for accommodation in Colonist Cars.

Tourist cars are also run on regular train leaving Toronto at 10.20 p. m. A small extra charge is made for accommodation in these cars. Apply to nearest C.P.R. agent for a "Settlers' Guide" and "Tourist Car" Pamphlet. S. Burrows, General Agent Belleville. d,F24—M3

"That friend of yours never comes around unless he has an axe to grind," said one politician.

"Worse than that," answered the other. "I not only have to turn the grindstone, but I have to lend him the axe."

"Whatever is the matter with Fido?"

"Oh, isn't it horrid? I gave him to the laundress to wash, and she starched him."

REMARKABLE TUBERCULIN TEST

Practicaly Every Person at Some Time Affected Say Paris Physcians.

Tuberculin tests on 1,226 children by three Paris physicians have led to the conclusion that tuberculosis (consumption) increases rapidly towards maturity, and that practicalyl every person is at some time infected, recovery being spontaneous without trace of the disease in three persons out of four. The sensitive test gave traces of tuberculosis in but few children of less than one year, while 90 per cent of those over 15 showed the disease could actually be discovered in only a third as many.—Chicago Tribune.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —

JOHN MARCH (AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

The moon had been slowly climbing overhead, and now shone out broadly across the turnpike, its soft effulgence embellishing the immediate vicinity, although the woods and plantations were thrown into greater obscurity. The silvery beams enhanced the weird aspect of the old Manor House, they chased the black shadows into the angles and crevices, and watched them lay silently brooding under the projecting roof. The Squire's garden was transfigured by the charm of romance, every shrub and every flower assumed an added beauty with the lapse of each moment.

Influenced by his sensitive imaginative temperament, Paul fancied a century's mysterious years must be whispering among the fruit trees in the shrubbery whenever the night wind stirred or rustled their leaves.

Expectant, and somewhat exhilarated by the solitary grandeur of his surroundings, he peeped between the gnarled twigs and saw the flicker of the moonlight on the dark floor as it fell through the foliage that thatched the summer-house. Shifting his position a little, he discerned a figure seated upon the worm-eaten circular bench, kept green and moist by the summer rains and the droppings of the roof.

"Shall I come in?" he asked, standing in the doorway smiling.

The figure started to her feet and stood motionless.

"Won't you really welcome me?" he inquired, amused at Agnes's attitude, smiling more broadly and holding out his hands.

"No? Oh, fie, you dear silly little prude!" He laughed as she shrunk back.

"Come," he said, striding across the stained floor, "I'll take the initiative, sweetheart, and that means I shall kiss you."

He caught her to him, pushed back the lace which partially concealed her face, and kissed her eyes, her mouth, each separate dimple, and under her rounded chin. He laid his cheek on the soft fluffy tendrils of her hair and held her to him with a firm fond pressure.

"You really love me then?" asked a muffled voice from his shoulder.

"Love you! With all my heart and soul. Why, Agnes, you are the only creature on earth whom I care for, or who cares for me."

A little hand stole up to his neck, and in the moonlight he saw the fire and flash of a large diamond. His heart stood still. The pressure on the slim waist gradually relaxed He bent closely over the head nestled coyly against his breast, and brushing aside the lace mantilla looked into the lovely, blushing face of Rowena Wycherly. He started as if stung, and staggered back on to the crazy damp-rotted bench.

"Pardon me, Mrs. Wycherly," he gasped. "I ask ten thousand pardons."

She gave a little, low, childish laugh with a joyous lilt in it, and her beautiful bosom heaved and gleamed like polished ivory under the black sequined net.

"I'll not pardon you for such kisses, Paul," she whispered, going to him and twining her arms about his neck. "Dear heart, I never dreamed of winning your love so soon."

"But I don't love you," he said, recklessly, unclasping her arms and holding her away from him; "it's a mistake, Mrs. Wycherly, a horrible, treacherous, ghastly mistake. I thought to meet—a friend, I expected to find—someone else."

They stood staring at one another in a tense, deathly silence. A little breeze swayed the branches of the pear trees, and the play of silvery light through the chinks and crevices of the summer-house fell across the widow's face. Paul could have sworn that the wide, wonderful hazel eyes were ablaze with a furious insensate rage. The next moment he thought his nerves and the moonlight had played him false, for Mrs. Wycherly lowered her long dewy eyelashes and gazed about her in distressed pathetic embarrassment.

"I hope, Mrs. Wycherly, you will accept my most humble apologies," he said, irritated and annoyed beyond expression at his foolish blunder.

"Can I do otherwise?" she asked, clasping her hands and looking at him with wet, innocent eyes. "As you say, we have both been the victims and sport of circumstances. I suppose it was to be, Mr. Farley, and we must make the best of an absurd situation. I do hope you won't allow this stupid mistake to spoil our friendship?"

He could see she was employing all her energies to subdue and control a powerful, almost overmastering excitement.

"I don't see why it should," he said, quietly, "we understand each other."

"Oh, yes, thoroughly," she responded, as if anxious to conciliate, "and I must admit, Mr. Farley, I am extremely mortified that you should have found me at this hour and uninvited on Mr. Fleming's premises. It must seem so very odd to you; perhaps you won't mind if I stay a few minutes just to explain? It was impossible to remain indoors on such a night; so, after dinner, I threw this lace hood over my hair and went into the garden. The scene was so still; so solemn, so enchanting, that a vague childish longing crept over me to wander away somewhere in the miles of fairyland that lay around me. I stole out on to the road, and became so enthralled with the mysterious elfin beauty that I scarcely realized I had left the Larches so far behind. When close to the Manor I heard the sound of wheels and a long peal of thrilling laughter, and, anxious to escape observation, I glided through the little wooden gate into Mr. Fleming's orchard. I passed round into the shrubbery, intending to go out that way on to the road again, and while I waited for the echo of the horse's hoofs to die away I spied this poor dingy hut, and thought if it were not too overrun with spiders and insects I would rest a moment. I had scarcely seated myself when you appeared in the doorway. I thought you must have seen and followed me. I had no reason to suppose that you cared for or came here to meet another woman."

Paul stood watching the varying expression of her lovely face, his head thrown slightly back, a scornful curl on his short upper lip.

"I am sorry," he said politely, "to have caused you a moment's uneasiness. I trust, Mrs. Wycherly, you will forgive and forget it."

"I will," she said, eagerly looking up at him with a frank ingenuous smile. "I don't mean to be a bit squeamish or prudish; I'll just forget everything save that we two are firmer and better friends even than we were before."

She drew the cloudy lace about her head and slipped her hand through his arm.

"You will walk back with me?" she said, persuasively; "it's very light and bright I know, but the road is lonely."

The statement was undeniable, and he considered it would be highly injudicious to refuse. He thought of Agnes, and felt convinced she would await his return, so he smiled, judging it wiser to end an awkward and disagreeable episode pleasantly if it were at all possible.

She clasped both her tiny jewelled hands on his arm, and laughed and chatted with bright girlish vivacity. She strove gracefully to erase any invidious impression and to infuse an entirely new set of ideas and thoughts, and accordingly he found it a difficult matter not to be influenced by her sweet womanly indescribable charm.

"I have not had any reply," she laughed, "but of course, you are coming to my ball?"

"As you are kind enough to make such a point of it, Mrs. Wycherly, I suppose I must come," he said, a little bewildered at being unable to fathom her intense desire for his presence. "Good-night; run in, the wind is chilly."

She laughed gleefully, gesticulating coquettishly with her little hands, and danced lightly backward over the shimmering grass. He watched her disappear with the Larches, then threw up his head as if inhaling a purer atmosphere, buttoned his coat more securely, and ran swiftly back to the summer-house.

Agnes was standing in the doorway of the summer-house, a shepherd's plaid around her shoulders.

"How long have you been here?" he panted.

"Not very long this time. I came before, but, hearing voices, I went back and waited."

He drew her down to the seat beside him.

"I have been acting like an imbecile," he said, breathing quickly and opening his coat, "I arrived here half an hour back and found a woman sitting just where you are now, Agnes. Of course, I idiotically took it for granted that it must be you, and—well, I kissed her and said she was the only person in the world I cared for."

"Who was it?" she asked, surprised and puzzled. "A lady or any nice-minded woman would have disclosed her identity and prevented a mortifying denouement."

"It was Mrs. Wycherly," he said, setting his patent leather boot on a large earwig.

"Oh, my dear, how unfortunate!" she exclaimed, gently touching the bruised and discolored cheek. "Felix told me about the East Weyberne incident."

"Who is Felix?"

"Why, my brother, Felix Fleming, the best and dearest, the most sensible and kindest-hearted man in the world! I am so glad he has asked you up to-morrow night."

"So am I; clandestine meetings are evidently too dangerous a game for you and me to play."

"Yes, I would rather it had been any other woman in the country than Mrs. Wycherly. I—oh, Paul, I nearly forgot it—we saw her last night, Rowena, I mean, hiding in the Hargrave's Avenue."

"And I also!" he said, pursing his lips as if he were about to whistle. "Mr. Fleming thought it was one of the servants just a little bit moonstruck."

"What business has she to creep and hide about other folks' premises?" she asked indignantly. "She has large, beautiful grounds of her own; why can't she keep there?"

"Perhaps she is tired of her own society, and is looking for—"

"Yours! I dare swear she is! My dear, pray be very careful and very cautious. Felix never says a word against anyone, but I have heard him anathematize Rowena Wycherly. He once said had she lived a hundred years ago she would have been burnt as a witch."

Paul laughed, and slipped his arm round her waist.

"You're a goose, Aggie! The woman can't do more than make love to me, and however aggravating that may prove, it can't surely hurt me."

"Ah, well," she said, nodding her head wisely, "when I think about it, I am afraid for you. I am positive you couldn't shake her off as you could—Judith Hargrave, for instance."

"What do you know about Judith?" he asked, flushing.

"Everything. She told me directly I came home. She told me she meant to marry you at all costs, in spite of what her family might say or do to the contrary. She also assured me she would not sleep again till in some way she had broken the ice between you."

"Miss Hargrave's creed teaches that the accident of birth and long descent admits of unique claims and privileges, that when a baronet's daughter stoops to woo lowly hearts a resilience is inevitable, a foregone conclusion."

"It's all very well to sneer and ridicule Judith," she said crossly, pushing him away. "I daresay she has been foolish, but it is terrible to witness the alteration in Anthony Pelham; he doesn't look as if he enjoyed the joke much."

"Nor I, Agnes," he said, the amused smile dying out of his face, "that is if Judith Hargrave's miserable infatuation constitutes a joke."

He rose and moved restlessly about within the narrow confines of the summer-house, his brows contracted, his glorious eyes luminous in the moonlight.

"You cannot feel more repugnance or be more troubled at the situation than I," he said, standing before her, his hands clasped behind him. "Still, conscientiously reviewing the events of the past few weeks, I fail to see that a particle of blame attaches to me. If it were in my power he should be put in possession of it to-night."

"It does rest with you," she said, vehemently. "There will never be happiness, good fortune, nor harmony at Weyberne Hall while you are there. Be advised, my dear, be persuaded before a foolish complication develops into a genuine calamity. No good, no success can result from a lie, however craftily uttered or well acted."

FRENCH POSTAL BANKS.

People of France More Provident than Anglo-Saxons.

The record of the postal savings bank system in France has been one of continued progress. In 1882, when this institution was established, the total number of postal banks in operation was 6024, with 211,580 deposit accounts remaining open at the close of the year. These accounts, including interest due to depositors, amounted to $9,187,116, the average sum of the deposits being $43.41. On December 31, 1909, the latest year for which complete statistics are available, the number of banks had increased by nearly 2,000, the deposit accounts numbered 5,542,882, and the deposits, including interest, represented an aggregate amount of $216,456,866, averaging $37.08.

The expenses of administration during 1909 amounted to $1,504,678 and the net profits to $526,786. It may be recalled that individual accounts are limited by law to 1500 francs ($289.50). When an account exceeds this the surplus is invested by the bank in national bonds. The total value of the bonds purchased in 1909 was $2,080,575. The withdrawals, including these purchases, amounted to $104,916,150.

Artificial Snails.

It is astonishing how often it is that one hears of strange and secret processes through what is virtually the vagaries of that blind goddess, Chance. An instance of this occurred in France a week or so ago, when a workman brought an action against his employer to recover damages for a finger that had been mutilated in one of the machines. Then in the examination that followed the fact came out that the factory in question was engaged in the manufacture of artificial snails. It appears that the shells are bought by the firm in question from the dustmen and rag-pickers, and, after being cleaned, are filled with "lights" or cats' meat, the soft flesh being cut into corkscrew form to fit the shell by a skilfully-designed machine. The top is then sealed with liquid fat, and the escargot is ready for the consumer. The artificial snails have a ready sale in Paris and other French towns, and are presumably sold as the genuine article. One wonders what the opinion of many epicures of this delicacy is now that they have discovered the method by which their favourite dish is sometimes manufactured.

A Prayer Containing 386 Letters Inscribed and Four Figures.

Prayers have been written and engraved on many very small objects, but only one person ever has been patient and painstaking enough to inscribe a complete prayer on a grain of wheat. One day Sir Moses Montefiore, the great Jewish financier of England, received a small tin box in the mail. On the cover of the box was written, "A prayer for Moses Montefiore, by Bauch Mordecai, son of Zebi Hirsch Scheinemann, of Jerusalem." The box contained a single grain of wheat, on which was inscribd, in characters so small that they could only be read with the aid of a powerful microscope, the 386 Hebrew letters of the prayer, and the date of the year (Hebrew reckoning), 5645. Sir Moses kept the prayer in his desk until he died, and it is now preserved with religious care by one of his friends.

MIGHTY MIRACLE IN STONE

Unearthing the Secrets of Egypt's Mighty Pyramids that have been Buried for Over Fifty Seven Centuries.

It slumbered for thirty-seven centuries before the coming of Christ—the Great Pyramid of Cheops, or Khufu. It still stands there, eight miles from Cairo, defying time, the elements, and the vandals, all working together, barely able to stretch its skin. An American, Dow Covington, has brought out the latest word from its mysterious depths; he has almost solved its secret.

After clearing every passage that can be found, he has discovered that certain winds make musical sounds in the passages, which he has rid of the debris of nearly fifty-seven centuries and he hopes yet to find another northern passage which will make quite a musical effect when the winds blow right. Best of all, he has cleared the single remaining course just above the sands of the desert, and revealed to the world that its outer sheath was of white limestone, which nobody knew before, because the great mass of stone had been used as a common quarry for thousands of years. The limestone sheathing makes many a mosque in Egypt to-day. When the tomb of Cheops was first reared it was as white as a marble mansion of our times. The technical work of those days was marvellous. The masonry is absolutely unrivalled; there is nothing better in all the world to-day. Monuments and palaces have come and have gone a hundred times since the Great Pyramid was built. They have perished; it remains.

For 20 years 100,000 men toiled at the stones. They built their great pile facing exactly north and south. They chose a base of nearly a seventh of a mile, 761 ft. to be exact. This was a plot covering nearly 13 acres. There were 210 perfect courses of stone, almost invisibly joined of Mokattem limestone blocks. At an angle of a little more than 51 degrees its four sides swept-up, tapering to the pointed apex, 481 ft. above the ground.

In it were 85,000,000 cubic feet of stone, put up by people who had no modern machinery. There are about 2,300,000 individual blocks.

It Flew 5600 Years Ago!

The debris removed, marvellous relics were unearthed. They had been left there almost before modern time began — objects of bronze and terra cotta, two mason's levels, breadplates and wine-flasks used by the workmen of other days. There were the bones of a sacred bird which flew its last flight at least 5,600 years ago.

He found the mysterious chamber below the ground — burrowed out of the living rock beneath the mighty pile above—"The stones of darkness and the shadow of death." What this chamber was for is not yet known.

Sixty-nine feet of debris obstructs the outer end of the channel that leads to the great chamber of the king — the great Cheops, or Khufu, himself, and when this has been cleared away there will be exposed for the first time in history the interior of this world wonder.

The Queen's Chamber

Beneath the King's chamber, in the heart of the pyramid, is the Queen's chamber, near the entrance to which there was found about forty years ago a number of rare relics, the most important of them being a small bracelet of iron, or perhaps it was a child's anklet. This was lying imbedded in the cement of the eighty-fourth course. It is the oldest iron object known to men. In 1837 a Mr. Hill, an engineer, found imbedded in the 103 course a flat piece of iron equally as old, which is now in the British Museum.

Masons to-day build no more beautifully than did those ancient men who toiled 5,600 years ago. They have left their own monument in the Queen's chamber which, apparently, was never used. It is superbly finished and jointed; yet, oddly enough, the entrances to this superb tomb was covered and concealed. Possibly it was intended for Mertitefe, Khufu's Queen, but she survived him and married his brother Chephren, who built the second pyramid in the great group which stands to-day as perpetual monuments just outside Cairo.

The Grand Gallery is considered the most mysterious part of this mighty miracle in stone, because if the pyramid were intended only as a tomb there was practically no use for this elaborate Grand Gallery, with its strange and remarkable features, except perhaps to temporarily accommodate the granite plugs which still close the lower end of the ascending passage, but which I find fit too tightly to have been slid into position. At an angle of about 26 degrees 8 minutes it slopes up for 155 feet, its height 28 feet, and its width above the ramps nearly 7 feet. Its great sides are clearly marked by seven overlapping layers of stone, while it is roofed by thirty-six slabs.

A limony.—The price of peace.

Laughing stock.—An amateur actor making an attempt at high tragedy.

Political rainbows—The kind usually seen just before the November deluge.

Human nature—Something to blame your excentricities on if you are not like other people.

Becoming pride—Setting a proper valuation on your own abilities and accomplishments — and never cutting prices.

When a man goes out to buy a collar he comes back with a collar and perhaps a necktie or two. When a woman starts out to buy a collar she returns exhausted with a new silk blouse, a pair of gloves, some skirt binding, a cake of soap, a paper of pins, some window curtains, a sewing machine, and a mangle.

THE VEIL OF FUTURITY

By Martin Lyon

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

Perfectly motionless lay the ship on the still water, awaiting the dawn to enter the harbor. In a deck-chair Leslie Cartwright stirred restlessly. It was late, and nearly all the other passengers had retired for the night; but he was in no mood for sleep.

In the dim light the man's face was gray with an unnatural pallor, scored blackly here and there, on the forehead and round the mouth, with short, hard lines. Every now and then his hands would clench nervously, and a quick, impatient sigh escaped his compressed lips. The light murmur from the bulwarks, where a late fellow-traveler and the first officer were chatting over a last cigar, came to him as an impertinence and an irritation. At length the voices died away as the speakers moved forward, and nothing broke the stillness save the long wash of the Australasian sea, and at intervals, with jarring suddenness, the striking of the ship's bell.

The man looked around to see if he was alone, and dropped back with an exclamation of satisfaction. By-and-by he began to murmur and fret once more. "What fools women are!" he growled. "They take an abstraction and make a god of it; they take a literature and make it a fetish. And what a fool I am to take so much notice of their chatter!"

He was silent for a time. Then he resumed his muttering. "Who said 'the Veil of Futurity is woven by the hand of Mercy'? Stuff! I should like to lift it, for one. Just as though there could possibly be any mercy in not letting a poor devil see what's ahead of him — and people have lifted it, too — what about the Eastern mystics — the sooth-sayers — the Chaldeans? — what about prophecy? The old prophets were more than the mere far-sighted statesmen as some would have us believe — wonderful — wonderful——"

His voice died away in a low, dreamy murmur; then he stirred again, and began to mutter once more.

"What about their wretched Western imitators! They are too grossly material to possess even a fraction of the occult power they presume to lay claim to. Centuries of European training have been quite enough to exterminate any force of the kind, even if it ever existed. Existed? — of course it did. Men have read the stars like an open book and seen their own fate in the signs of the wind and the wave — they have foretold war and famine and pestilence and the doom of nations ;but they were men of old — not the puerile would-be mystics of to-day.

"I do not believe the most spiritualized, sensitive Anglo-Saxon could look five minutes into the unknown."

As he spoke, his white face grew whiter, and an expression almost of fear came over it. He shivered for a moment, then braced himself, evidently with an effort. He laughed nervously.

"Something is wrong with me," he said savagely. "I hope I am not going to get fever. I had a feeling then that I could know the future, if I would — only — that it would be well for me if I did not will to know. It's horribly uncanny; I can't shake it off. Well — his voice rose in excited defiance — "I will test this power. I demand to see myself a year hence."

x x x

Then he was floating in a thick, heavy atmosphere; now dark — dark to blackness — now lightening into transparent blue; sometimes flashing into silver, and even blazing into a splendor of gorgeous golden freshness.

Around him, with him, and of him, were long, spherical gray shapes. He was conscious of a curious sense of dispersion — of separation in some indefinite, indefinable manner from himself; and yet he was perfectly capable of connected thought.

"Can this be an answer to my demand?" he questioned. "Bah! As vague as all prophecy! Well, we will ask eleven months." There was no change. "Well, then, ten — nine — eight — seven six!"

A look of horror seized him. Great drops of sweat sprang out on his brow. One might have seen the muscles start and stiffen in his hands as he gripped the arms of the chair. "Five — four — three — two — a month, yes, a month!" he spoke with agonized intensity.

The sense of uneasiness was with him still, but in a modified degree. He seemed more sentient, more living, more human. His voice rose to a shriek. "Take me back to this hour — to this minute." He was alive now, but oh! the agony of that revival! Ah, that fierce, deadly grip on his shoulder! A score of cruel, sharp points were entering his flesh and crushing his loins as in a steel trap! What was that awful wrenching tug at his foot? "Ah, mercy! mercy!"

x x x

The first officer reported to the captain:

"I had been talking to Mr. Chadwick till he finished his cigar. I noticed Mr. Cartwright — he was lying in a deck-chair, I thought asleep. Before turning in finally, I made the round of the decks, after Mr. Chadwick had gone. When I came back Mr. Cartwright was still there, and, as I thought he might get a chil if he slept in the open air, I was going to awake him.

"As I got close to him, I found that he was talking in his sleep very excitedly. I was just about to rouse him when he sprang out of his chair with a most dreadful shriek for mercy and before I could stop him he had rushed to the side and jumped overboard. I snatched up a coil of rope and ran to the place, but I was too late. It would almost seem as if the sharks had been waiting for him.

RECORDING EARTHQUAKES

Recently Introduced Instruments Can Record Earth Motions However Distant May Be the Earthquake.

In the new Magnetic Observatory at Eskdalemuir, Dumfriesshire, Scotland, there has recently been fitted up an instrument to record the motion of the earth produced by an earthquake, however distant the earthquake may be from the observatory. The inventor of the instrument is Prince Galitzin, the Russian scientist. The instrument consists of a horizontal pendulum suspended by wires, so that when the framework, which is attached to the earth by a pier, is moved the pendulum is forthwith set in motion. In the absence of friction, however, such a pendulum would vibrate too long, and this fault has been corrected in the Galitzin pendulum in an ingenious manner by allowing a copper plate attached to the pendulum to move between the poles of a strong magnet. The introduction of friction has one disadvantage: it reduces the sensitiveness of the apparatus, but by a second clever application of electro-magnetic theory, Prince Galitzin has overcome this trouble. Mr. G. W. Walker, the superintendent of the observatory, has invented an electrometer for the measurement of electrical forces. He has also devised an original construction for ascertaining the 'electric potential' of the atmosphere.

SIR GEORGE GARNEAU, Quebec.

AN INTERNATIONAL SCIENCE LANGUAGE.

The tendency towards a common tongue whereby people of various nationalities might be able to correspond and converse intelligibly with one another has been revived by Professor Donnan in a strong plea for an international language of science. He has collected and translated a series of essays written by the most celebrated luminaries of Europe upon this perplexing question, for in the development of science the need of a common comprehensive tongue is more essential than in any other ramification of human endeavour. Up to a few years ago, comparatively speaking, science was well supplied in this respect, for Latin was the vehicle for spoken and written communications in science; but the development of the latter brought about the abandonment of this practice. Efforts to the same end have been made by the creation of universal languages such as Esperanto and Volapuk, but these have now gone the way of all others, and are as dead as Greek. The failure of Esperanto and Volapuk is attributed by Professor Lorenz to 'want of rational development' and the fact that they contain too much arbitrariness.

Blood Stain Discoveries.

It does not appear from the reports in the daily press and the scanty statistics available, that the crime of murder is diminishing, notwithstanding the great social efforts that have been made, all the world over, to improve the race. However, what education and sanitation have failed to accomplish, the chemist and the physicist may yet effect, by rendering the detection of crime easier and the "game" less worth the candle than ever. Thus we have seen how criminals may be tracked by finger-print methods, and better still, of late the very blood of the victim is able to tell its tale, whereas previously this was a comparatively silent clue. In a recent murder case, however, great progress was shown in the utility of the biological serum test. Mr. Justice Darling, Eng., remarked on the value of a discovery which not only enabled the scientist to distinguish between human and other mammalian blood, but likewise could indicate the condition of the blood. The blood proved to be that of an anaemic person, and the murdered girl had been shown to have been treated for anaemia by a doctor.

Artificial Resuscitation

The resuscitation of a drowning person by means of artificial breathing is not only a laborious undertaking, but the motions must be correctly executed or the attempt will prove unsuccessful. A Swedish physician has constructed an exceptionally simple and effective apparatus, which lightens the task materially and adds immensely to the chances of success. It consists of a short board on which the patient is placed, two levers to which the arms are fastened, attached to the board, and a wide belt or girdle fastened to the levers and passing over the patient's breast. When the levers are pushed backward, the arms follow and the chest is inflated; and when the levers are pushed forward and down the girdle presses the air out of the lungs.

THE ORIGIN OF MAN

Recent Research is Held to Support Theory that the Human Race had Tail-Less Ape Ancestors.

Since Darwin first suggested the theory of evolution, scientists galore have been studying along the same lines, and man's origin is being gradually pushed further and further into the remote ages. Reviewing the remarkable discoveries of the last ten years in Western Europe, Professor McCurdy shows that it is being gradually proved that the human race is as old as any of the tailless apes, and probably had the same ancestors. The oldest undisputed flint implements date from the Upper Miocene period of geology; the oldest human bone, the jaw of "Homo heidelbergensis, from near the beginning of the Quarternary. Primitive man, therefore, must have lived in Western Europe during the entire Glacial period, and developed into "Homo primigenius," low in stature and robust, with short, stout arms and legs — much like the Eskimo of today. A more intellectual race, probably from the East, appeared in the Upper Quarternary, or at least 30,000 years ago. This people, "Homo aurignacensis," sculptured and frescoed the walls of the caverns and their own implements, and their descendants, who must have flourished more than 10,000 years ago, introduced the rudiments of writing. The negroid people probably, came into Western Europe soon after. Professor Klaatsch finds "Home primigenius" to be closely related to the gorilla of Africa, and "Homo aurignacensis" to resemble more nearly the chimpansee of Asia.

Concrete Fence Posts

The increasing cost of timber has resulted in more spirited search for efficient substitutes. One inventor, realising the growing popularity of ferro-concrete, has turned his endeavours into this channel with a view to effecting the desired result, and has achieved distinct success. The posts made from this material are stated to be extremely durable and far superior to those of wood. The cost averages about forty cents per yard; but in this connection it is as well to point out that the cost is governed by geographical situation, inasmuch as the transportation charges for posts of this description, or for manufacturing them on the spot after the materials have been brought in, are heavier than for those of wood under certain conditions. At the same time, if the materials are obtainable on the spot the fence can be built exceedingly cheaply; and when it is pointed out that the durability of a ferro-concrete post is from five to ten times that of timber, according as the wood is preserved with creosote or otherwise, it will be seen that the former has overwhelming advantages in those districts where wood is not readily obtainable. Three of the great British railway companies have erected fence-posts of this material, and are stated to be eminently satisfied with the same; while it has also been used for gradient-posts and gate-posts to crossings.

Teletypographing

Great activity is being evinced by numerous inventors in the field of telegraphic science for the purpose of increasing the advantages of this system of communication, a result no doubt due to the powerful competition that has been offered by the widespread use of the telephone. A Continental inventor has perfected an appliance which he describes as the 'teletypograph.' The idea is to enable messages to be telegraphed to an addressee and immediately written down, a kind of typewriter being employed for the purpose. The inventor has submitted his apparatus to the French Government postal officials, who have expressed a desire to see the invention in actual operation, and who propose to introduce it on lines of lesser importance at first where the telegraph operators are not very expert in handling the Morse code. Should the system prove commercially successful under these conditions its application will be extended to first-class lines, and possibly adopted throughout the whole French telegraphic system.

WOMAN'S MOST SUCCESSFUL MEDICINE

Known All Over The World —Known Only For The Good It Has Done.

We know of no other medicine which has been so successful in relieving the suffering of women, or received so many genuine testimonials, as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

In nearly every community you will find women who have been restored to health by this famous medicine. Almost every woman you meet knows of the great good it has been doing among suffering women for the past 30 years.

Fox Creek, N. B.—"I have always had pains in the abdomen and a weakness there and often after meals a soreness in my stomach. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me much good. I am stronger, digestion is better and I can work with ambition. I have encouraged many mothers of families to take it as it is the best remedy in the world. You can publish this in the papers."—Mrs. WILLIAM S. BOURQUE, Fox Creek, N. B.

In the Pinkham Laboratory at Lynn, Mass., are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health, in which many openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, many of whom state that it has saved them from surgical operations.

THE MASTER-KILLER

By Brent Brabazon

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd.

El Delgado Terrible — so he had been dubbed — was a tiger, a small Campeche tiger of south-eastern Mexico. In all the lumber and chicli camps, the rubber and cane plantations, and little villages that were sprinkled throughout the wide, vast expanse of jungle, he was known and hated and feared; this animal that seemed supernatural, so great was his prowess — The Terrible One — truly.

Never before had the district been visited by a tiger whose methods were so peculiar, so inexplicable, so phenomenal, for always was his prey the same — a steer, a bull, a cow—never anything smaller, never the favourite flesh of his kind, a young calf. One day he would kill at a certain place, and the next day he would be heard from some forty or fifty miles distant.

Heywood swore that he would have that beast — alive, and got busy.

Then he went to work; at the watering holes, the tiger's own little intricate paths, around the cattle corrals, he set steel traps, cunningly placed and hidden by his master hand. But all to no avail.

By and bye he located the animal's lair, a small hole in the base of a rocky cliff with a couple of fuzzy little cubs rolling around in front. Trap after trap of many kinds were fixed in vain and at length Heywood packed a month's food and established himself in a hollow giant mahogany close by the water hole. Early morning of the sixth day his eyes caught a huge black-gray boar waddling slowly, majestically along, and Heywood knew that a jungle tragedy was at hand. And he saw something he never could forget.

From an intricate tangle of dense vine work a form shot out — a long, thin serpentine, tawny form — front paws outstretched, tail rigidly poised, and the cruel, sardonic mouth open. For twenty feet it passed through the air like a well-hurled dart, and then the tiger landed on the enemy's back. As the tiger struck the boar, the bristles that ran along the back-bone under the short, woolly hair, rose in a formidable mane; the thick lips curled up and showed all of the two long, dangerous tusks and sharpened teeth. It roared angrily, heaved itself up on its short massive hind legs, and with all its force flung itself backward. At the same instant, the tiger withdrew his two hind claws from his opponent's haunches; took a firmer grip with his fore claws; sank his punishing teeth and jaws into the back of the boar's neck, and with marvellous rapidity, coupled with all his strength, he whirled his body around in a circle.

Again the boar rose up; the tiger crouched, the grey beast jumped forward, hoping to crush the other beneath his hoofs, but the black and yellow bunch of steely muscles sprang to meet him, and they struck with terrible impetus. There was the gnashing of teeth on teeth, a firework display of swinging feet, each one trying to rip the other open.

Following on some severe and bloody tackling on both sides, in course of which the tiger had his throat slit, the big boar became antagonised and goaded to such a state that he was rendered almost crazy. His foaming lips screwed up in a snarl; his blazing eyes almost closed, and like some huge, awkward monster, he bounded wildly forward, grunting and bellowing his rage. But as he came on the elusive tiger side stepped, and just as the boar struck the ground, he sprang and twined his limbs about the hairy body. The boar toppled over and for a moment lay kicking on his back.

The Terrible One had been waiting for this moment. Every muscle in his body seemed tingling and twitching; his cruel, long mouth was open wide, and his eyes glinted red and green. Like a fearfully powerful piston-rod his serpentine form shot forth. He struck the boar squarely and pinned him down to earth. Deep—deep he buried his teeth in the gory throat and swayed his body from side to side. And then sounded a muffled shriek of satisfied longing; once more the tiger threw his body free from his opponent, and another life had gone out.

Heywood in his hollow tree trunk, relaxed his tense, clasped fingers and firmly compressed lips. It was the greatest, bravest battle he had ever seen.

And now, with eyes of respectful homage, he watched the tiger, standing silent, trembling a bit with weakness from his loss of blood, red fluid dripping from his mouth and sides, and the gashes on his neck and belly.

Heywood saw him walk painfully and softly forward in the direction of the watering hole — the trap surrounded water. For the fraction of a second the man deliberated, then his heart flew to his throat and he stepped forth, his mind made up. "Back," he yelled, pointing his arm at the tiger. "I don't want yu now — no — yu can live. Yu're the grandest thing I ever seen. Back!"

The weakened, battered tiger moved not an inch. He raized his stooping head and stared haughtily, scornfully, at the man.

Heywood's heart went out. At that moment he loved him as he would have loved a brother of whom he was vastly proud. He walked forward and spoke as if to a human being. "Back, boy, I tell yu there's traps there, back."

The tiger moved his eyes and gazed stonily at the spring. He seemed to understand. Heywood sprang to within five feet of the animal. He stretched his arm at the brazen face and broke out excitedly, "I tell yu, boy, there's traps there. Get back — get back to yu're mate an' young and let 'em fix yu up. Yu're game — the gamest thing I ever seen, an' by God, I ain't agoin' to hunt yu."

Once again the proud, fearless head was raised with kingly grace, the brazen, cunning eyes seemed to pierce the man through, and slowly, gracefully, arrogantly, El Delgado Terrible—the master killer of the bush—strode off through the thick, black jungle.

Diner—Yes. The trouble is, it wasn't cooked soon enough.

That alleged war in Tripoli is still dragging its weary length along.

AN EPISODE IN ITALY

"It isn't you who decide what you are going to do in Italy," said the woman.

"It's the cabby.

"I thought I was going to leave Naples that morning. In fact, I had my valises with me as I stood at the door while the porter whistled for a cab, seven of which rushed out of the shimmering sunlight around the corner at me. A handsome young cabby grabbed the valises, put them in the cab, helped me in, and started off.

"'I want to go to the station,' I told him as we went along. 'I'm going home.'

"He slowed up, rested his left hand on the back of the seat, turned half way around and said smilingly in French:

"'You want to go to Pompeii?'

"'No!' I cried. 'I want to go to the station. I am starting for home, for America, for home!'

"'I'll take you to Pompeii,' he offered graciously, 'for 8 lire.'

"I braced myself for the conflict.

"'I want to go home,' I declared. If I went to Pompeii, I wouldn't go over that old road anyway, I'd go by train. That's the same road you take to Vesuvius. I was over it the day before yesterday. It is full of beggars and ruts.'

"My driver paid no the slightest attention. Instead he pointed proudly to a passing cabby.

"'That's my brother,' he grinned, adding softly, 'I'll take you to Pompeii for 7 lire.'

"'A handsome fellow,' I said, 'and if you paid me 7 lire I wouldn't go to Pompeii to-day. I'm going home.'

"He drove awhile, then turned and smiled at me again.

"'This road takes you to the station,' he said, 'and to Pompeii, too. I'll take you to Pompeii for 6 lire. A whole long day, a handsome driver, a fine carriage, and all to yourself for 6 lire,' he summed up, flashing a triumphant face full upon me.

"'If you gave me the cab and the harness and the horse thrown in,' I wailed, 'I wouldn't go. You couldn't pay me to go, I know that old road. Besides, I want to start for home Amerike! Home!'

"He drove and drove. I got absorbed in the things we passed. In the doorways, back of which was invariably the single room of the family, the one large bed, the three chairs at the foot of it, the table, and in the rear the altar, before which burned the little lamp to the Blessed Virgin and in her humble worshippers, who lived, it seemed, on the door steps, there being only one room inside.

"There played the children, the little ragged girls of 5 and 6 holding the bambino done up in swaddling clothes, tossing it between them as they would toss an overgrown doll, and the boys more ragged yet, if that were possible. There were the dogs, cats, the chickens, and now and then a proud turkey, ignominiously tied, far from barnyards and its kind, by a string to a post.

"I didn't know which I pitied most, the babies in training for cripples swaddled so, their tiny limbs so unnaturally bound, the unwashed cats and dogs, or the turkeys in chains.

"I recalled my destination with a start.

"'Where are we?' I demanded to know.

"'The station is about a mile back yonder,' my handsome driver said stolidly, 'and you'll be too late for your train. I'm taking you to Pompeii now for 5 lire.'

"I could have wept, but what was the use? I was now too late for my train.

"'Anyway,' I petitioned, 'you'll rescue me from the beggars. Won't you? When you get to them drive fast.'

"To my amazement he complied. We sped past the man with the withered arm, the cripple tangled up with the donkey, and passed another cab. The driver flung a bright look at me.

"'Do you see that man?' he asked.

"'Yes,' I answered.

"'Well, he's my brother,' gloated he.

He seemed to have an oversupply of brothers, but he endeavored to compensate for bringing me out of my way for five lire by showing me the sights.

"He pointed out all the pictures of the saints by the roadside, the crucifixes on the walls, the Holy Virgins at the corners of the lead-colored houses, until at last the wide sweep of level country where the dust and ashes of the buried city were began to show.

"Arrived there, a babbling guide hurried me through with the velocity of a whirlwind, showed me broken columns, old fountains, Madusa heads with the faces worn away by hands long since ashes, the buried dog, its mouth in the attitude of barking, prints of chariot wheels, gray walls through the apertures of which the smoky peak of the mountain that had done all the harm glowed purple, and hurried me out again through the gate to my cab.

"My cabby stood there smiling, a man beside him who was even handsomer than he.

"'My brother,' said he.

"I smiled and bowed, and we started over the long gray road of the poor to Naples.

"The sight saddened me. I wished I had started for America, for home! As we bumped over the terrible slags of the Naples streets my resentment grew. It was not lessened by the behavior of my guide. Three times more he had pointed out brothers. Now he leaned over to me, smiled, and pointed out another before we drove up to my door.

"Some acquaintances ran out, amazed at seeing me.

"'I thought,' they cried, 'that your started for home this morning.'

"'I thought so, too,' said I, 'but my cabby thought differently.'"

OLD NICK'S COURTING

By Leo. Throgmorton

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd.

"It was the fair time, and Jess Babberton was for the fair. 'I'm going to get a sweetheart,' she says. 'I can't do wantin' a sweetheart no more. I'm tired o' life, I be,' she says, 'wantin' a sweetheart.'

"'Hark,' says her mother, 'you don't get a sweetheart just with saying that. When the right man comes, he comes.'

"But Jess was short-tempered then. 'I tell 'e I'm going to get a husband at the fair — if it's Old Nick himself,' says Jess."

Jess went to the fair, but no one requested her company to see apples or cheese, or fat lady or thin gentleman, or any of the lucrative abortions. And to go and look at a double-headed boy all alone is hardly what one could call amusing.

So Jess left the flare of naphtha lamps behind and started homeward, but when a youth appeared from a side road and asked her if he might keep her company on the way she did not fling herself at him. She drew erect and said:

"I don't know you. Where do you come from? I don't mind your face. Where do you live?"

"I come," said he, "from walking up and down in the earth."

At the gate: "Can I see you some other night?" asked the youth.

Jess looked in his face freely — the face that she had been seeing so much in pale profile — and something prompted her then to say "No." So she said "Yes" with a sigh in her voice and a sickening leap at her heart.

"And did you meet your boy at the fair?" the mother asked. "I'm glad you didn't come back with Old Nick as you spoke of," said the mother, laughing to cover any sign of anxiety and watchfulness.

Jess Babbicombe had got a lover; she went out walking with him once a week to begin with. Later she went twice a week, for her boy waited for her after evening church, as well as once in mid-week, and they strayed through the lanes, and sat on the banks under the whisper of leaves in the trees.

But curiously, though Jess had often enough met friends when "walking out" with her boy, no one ever mentioned him to her, and that was a strange circumstance, for in our part of the world it is usual to say pleasant things to lovers, and the lovers, indeed, rather like such comments, and crave them when they are not offered.

Jess noticed this lack at length.

Jess's boy met her with great warmth. They kissed and clung a moment, and then turned to walk; but she caught him about the neck, and, said she: "Oh, I love you more every time I see you. But I grow afraid."

"Why are you afraid?"

"Tell me," she said, "tell me—are you true to me—in the name of heaven?" she added with intensity.

"Don't say that!" he cried.

"Why not?" she said. "Why can't you answer me? Why should you fear the name of——" But he writhed from her.

"I am true to you," he said, and then he composed himself and, said he, in a hard voice: "I swear it!" And he kissed her on the cheek.

But it chanced that the vicar had been passing as Jess spoke to her lover so, and he went on his way with a heavy heart, and next day he made a point of calling at the Babbicombes' farm, managing to see Jess alone at her work. He spoke to her like a father—for she had no father—and asked her about the young man.

And the vicar was so kind that she told him all. And he questioned more and found out how she had said that she would get a sweetheart were it Old Nick himself at the fair. So the vicar stood thinking some time, and then formed a scheme and laid it before Jess very solemnly. And as they schemed, so they acted.

Next time "the boy" came up the lane, Jess welcomed him and took him indoors and gave him the pleasure, dear to the male heart when it is in love, of seeing his sweetheart laying table for tea, poking up the fire, preparing the kettle.

Then there came a knock on the door and the vicar entered.

"Young man," said the vicar, "I am glad I happen to meet you here to-night, for I have seen you with my young friend Jess, and wished to meet you."

The young man frowned.

"I am no enemy to youth's love," said the vicar, "and I am glad to see you here as a friend."

"Thank you, sir," said "the boy." "Jess has just been and promised me her hand, and it's like we'll be needing your kind services soon."

"I shall be pleased to unite any happy pair in holy wedlock," said the vicar, "and," he added, staring hard, "to bless you in the name of the Father and of——"

"The boy" blanched and squirmed in his chair as with a seizure.

And the resolute vicar concluded the blessing in the orthodox church way, which no evil spirit can withstand.

And on that "the boy" gave a cry hardly human and rose to his feet. Said he wildly, his face transformed beyond all resemblance to that of the farm help he had been a moment before: "A blight on you!" And then he pointed to among the candles.

"I give till that candle burns out, and then," he said, "I shall snatch away this maiden for ever."

The vicar stepped to the candle, snuffed it out, and put it in his coat pocket, keeping a hand on it there, and then, raising his other hand, he said:

"Get thee hence, Satan!"

And the plough-boy, or whoever he was, rose and slouched from the place. And Jess was left without her lover.

And years after, when the masons were repairing the old church they found a hollowed stone in the wall, and in the hollow was a deed box with that old vicar's name on it, and in the deed box was a stump of candle.

Plenty of snow nowadays, and plenty of la grippe.

THE "PRODIGAL"

By Isabel Fairley.

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

It was the first night in their suburban house.

The furniture van had left the door, the children and the two maid servants were in bed, and John and Mary Bedgrave sat resting after their labours before a cheerful fire in the parlour.

"How the wind does whistle," said Mary.

"A corner house, you know. But it is an exceptionally windy night. Tired, dear?"

"Only pleasantly tired. How nice it feels just to sit down, and isn't it a good thing to be in a house of our very own at last? We have never had that since we were married, only rented ones, with landlords."

"Landlords ought to be shot!"

"Yes, unless they immediately gratify all the tenant's demands, especially if that tenant be John Bedgrave of 'The Echo.'"

They both laughed, but Mary's laugh ended in a shiver.

"Wh-e-e! How that wind does howl! Will it always howl like this here?"

"Nonsense, no! Of course not."

He lifted his chair across the hearth, and sitting close to his wife put his arm protectingly round her.

"Feel all right now, little woman?"

She rested her head on his shoulder.

"Of course I do. I don't care now how the wind howls!"

"Hallo! What's that?"

They started up.

Some one had opened the outer hall door. Almost immediately the outer door was closed again, and John, hurrying to see what was the matter, came face to face with the intruder at the parlour door.

"Hallo! Who are you?" he demanded.

The stranger started, his eyes blinking in the light. He appeared to be a man of about 30, and he had a clean shaven, handsome face, and carried a portmanteau.

"I—I beg your pardon," he began in a gentlemanly voice that had something particularly winning about it. "This is number 64. Do not Mr and Mrs Horningstone live here?"

"No. They used to, I believe. Old Mr. Horningstone died a few weeks ago."

"Ah..!" The stranger shrank back. "I have come too late, then," he said, wearily passing his hand across his brow. "But Mrs Horningstone, my—my mother? Tell me, she is still alive?"

John shook his head.

"Horningstone was a widower. I know it for a fact," he said, not unkindly, but brusquely, with a man's wish to tell an unpleasant thing to another man quickly and get it over. "I cannot tell you how long ago his wife died."

"Ah...!" the stranger repeated, and leant wearily with one hand upon the edge of the door and bowed his head as if in abject misery.

"Won't you come in?" begged Mary over her husband's shoulder, speaking for the first time her sweet voice broken with womanly sympathy.

"Yes, come in," echoed her husband.

They installed him in the one armchair the room yet boasted of.

"Have you come a long journey. And did no one tell you about — the house — nor anything?" asked Mary gently.

His lips twitched.

"I have come straight from Australia and I have been away for nine years, and all that time have heard nothing from them. I was — I might as well tell you — I was a prodigal. Nine years ago my father disowned me, forbade me his house, and from that day to this I have never come back. I have been successful—enough in a worldly way to have pleased even him — and — I have repented — but it is too late.

"I am sure of it," said Mary, tears glistening in her eyes. "Mothers always forgive."

He gave her a grateful look.

"There is a room upstairs, the one above this one, that she used often, and called her 'sewing-room.'

"You may certainly see the room," began John, making as if he would conduct him there immediately, when Mary intercepted him.

"So you must stay," she entreated.

After a little hesitation he consented, and Mary went off to see first about food and then about sheets and blankets.

It was a little after midnight before they conducted their visitor to the room above the parlour and bade him good night.

. . . .

The to-morrow came and turned into to-day, as to-morrow always do, but this one brought a shock to John and Mary Bedgrave.

They found their spare room empty. The bed had not been slept in. The "prodigal" was not to be found, neither was his portmanteau, neither was a quantity of their silver and several things belonging to them. The bird had flown indeed.

Though comparatively, little was their loss compared to what it might have been had everything been unpacked; great was their indignation.

Putting the matter in the hands of the police, their "prodigal" was found to be a noted swindler, who had cleverly eluded them for several years. He still continued to do so.

Upon inquiry they found that the old gentleman, Mr. Horningstone, who had lived in number 64 before had been married, but had never had a son, and his wife had predeceased him 10 years.

Neither John nor Mary Bedgrave—especially Mary — care to talk to others of their first night in the house that has now been their home for many years, but as holiday time draws near they always think about it.

John, with a twinkle in his eye, says:—

"I wonder if the 'prodigal' will come again to-night?"

"Don't! John!" and Mary blushes scarlet.

Then, through a whiff of smoke, she catches her husband's eye, and they both laugh.

Outside the wind still blows cold and whistles shrilly.

The prodigal — alas! where is he?

With wireless politics, many politicians would be unable to connect.

SWALLOWS' NEST OF BANK-NOTES

Also How a Mouse Stole $40 Worth of Notes to Make a Home.

A pair of swallows of Fiberbrunn, in the Tyrol, have stolen a number of ten-kronen bank-notes to line their nest.

The parent birds discovered that the new notes were just the shade of blue to match their eggs, the tissue being tough but flexible, and exactly the material they needed. The nest and the missing notes were only discovered when the swallows had abandoned it and it fell to the ground.

This feat has been equalled by that of an enterprising mouse in Dornbirn, which abstracted a number of twenty-kronen notes to the value of $40, of a delicate reddish brown shade, from the cash drawer of a butcher, and, tearing them to pieces, adapted them to the purpose of making a nest for her family of seven. The butcher in his search for the notes suspected and traced the mouse, and found the nest under the boarding. He carefully picked up the remains of the notes and returned them to the bank, where they were pieced together. The butcher recovered $37.50, the bank claiming $2.50 for "material loss" caused by the mouse's teeth.

THE HOUSE FLY.

The Most Filthy Insect Known.

This fly, called "Typhoid Fly," on account of its being known as a carrier of typhoid germs, is one of the filthiest insects with which we have to contend. It also carries the germs of tuberculosis and other diseases, and is a menace to the health of the family.

It breeds in fresh horse-manure and other filth, hence, when the stable is near the house, flies are apt to be more numerous. Use screens on the windows; resort to the use of sticky fly paper; keep garbage pails and privy vaults securely closed; if possible, keep stable manure covered.

Some farmers' wives hang stiky fly paper, sticky side out, on the outside of their screen doors, at the top; which, in warm weather, catches flies which gather there.

Flies are attracted and can be killed by the following solution: Place in a room two teaspoonfuls of formaldehyde (formalin) in a pint of water. Flies drink this and shortly die. This not only kills the fly, but serves to disinfect the insect after death.

Intestinal discharges from patients suffering from typhoid, or any other fever, should be sterilized before being emptied into the cesspool.

Traffic on the Lakes.

Canada's Soo Canal traffic, 1909, season of eight months, 57,985,149 tons; Suez Canal, all of 1909, 15,407,527 tons.

Canada's canals traffic, 1910, 45,-over 1909.

The "Midland Prince" broke all records in grain cargoes on July 7th, 1910, by sailing from Fort William with 523,251 bushels of oats.

There are 111 vessels in the Lake Superior trade over 500 feet in length, and 157 between 400 and 500 feet in length.

There were carried down the lakes during 1909, 113,253,561 bushels of wheat, and over 46,500,000, bushels of grain other than wheat.

Dairying in Ontario.

Ontario's dairy industry was valued in 1909 at $31,000,000, with 97 creameries and 1,777 cheese factories, and 25 Government dairy institutions.

Three-quarters of the dairy product of Canada comes from Ontario.

Milk deliverd at cheese factories, 1,661,039,751 lbs.; cheese production therefrom, 120,624,436 lbs.; value of cheese, $13,106,919. Butter made at creameries, 9,895,109 lbs.; value of butter, $2,355,170. Value of milk and butter made on farms, over $10,000,000.

Average value of Ontario dairy products for the past 5 years is at least $30,000,000, and in two or three banner years, $35,000.

Railroad Ticket Printed While You Wait.

The Lancashire and Yorkshire Railway Company have installed a remarkable automatic machine at Sandhills Station, Liverpool, by which, on dropping a penny in a slot, a ticket is printed, dated and cut. The machine is worked electrically, the power being supplied from the live rail. When the supply of cardboard is running short, the clerks in the office are warned by the ringing of a bell.

Cannot Export Feathers.

Plumage skins or eggs of native birds of Australia and New Guinea car no longer be exported, this having been prohibited by the Australian Commonwealth Government.

Average value in farm crops and fruits in Canada, 1901, $10.33 per acre; United States (including subtropical products), $9.41.

Canada's Fishing Fleet.

Canada has a fishing fleet of 1,723 vessels, and 41,170 boats, manned by 68,663 men. 21,694 employed on shore. Total, 90,357.

A Big Investment.

Capital mployed in manufacturing industries, 1900, $446,916,487; 1905, $486,585,023; 1911, estimated at $1,000,000,000.

IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

A QUICK FREIGHT HANDLER

Easy and Inexpensive Method of Handling Goods to and from Storage Flats.

Some more expeditious means of handling goods in warehouses, whether they be crates, boxes, bales, or what not, has long been necessary to supplant the slow, antiquated methods of doing this by manual labour, especially in regard to transit between building and street. This has been found in a new type of simple conveyer that has recently been devised, and which is now in successful operation. It comprises a number of trestles supporting a continuous series of wheels or rollers, carried on two rails like a light, narrow-gauge railway. The wheels are employed when boxes have to be handled, and the rollers for bales and crates. The system works entirely by gravitation, a fall of about thirty inches in one hundred feet being advocated. Demonstrations with this simple appliance have sufficed to prove that goods can be expeditiously and safely transported by this means, and that sharp curves can be negotiated successfully. In a lofty building where goods have to be discharged from different levels the same system is adopted spirally, the gradient being so arranged that the descending goods do not acquire an unnecessary downward impetus. The conveyer has been adopted on one of the wharves of Thames-side, and another larger installation is in operation at a Belfast factory, this latter plant handling packages weighing up to five hundredweight. The system is stated to be far cheaper and more efficient than the ordinary belt conveyer, the cost of installation being very low.

THE GLOW-WORM'S LIGHT

Learned Men Differ in Opinoin as to the Source and Nature of the Light.

French entomologists have been just lately devoting much attention to the study of the glow-worm, particularly with reference to the source and nature of its light. It is found that both male and female are luminous, although in the former the light is much feebler. Even the eggs and larvae are faintly luminous. The light is produced on the last three segments of the abdomen. It may perhaps be worth pointing out that the glow-worm is not a worm, but an insect belonging to the great order of beetles the Coleoptera. Luminosity among insects indeed is chiefly found in the beetle order. The Mexican fireflies Pyrophorus, for example, are bettles. Some of them give out sufficient light to read by. Waterton sometimes used them in this way to write up his diary when wandering in the South American forests.

In adult life the glow-worm is a vegetarian, feeding on tender leaves of plants, but while a grub it is carnivorous, feeding on snails and slugs. The light of the glow-worm and fireflies has been called phosphorescent and attributed to phosphorus. Jousset de Bellesme has stated his conviction that it is phosphoretted hydrogen gas stored up in the cellular tissues and in communication with the nervous and respiratory systems.

Fabre finds that phosphorus does not enter into the composition of the luminous substance of the glow-worm. Under the microscope it is seen to be a sort of white plaster covering the epidermis and full of branching tubes.

The Manchurian Bean.

The "Japan Herald" has drawn attention to the fact that Manchurian beans were formerly used only to make tofu, miso, and soy. About fifty years ago Chinese near Tiehling and Kaiyuan first produced oil from them by a process similar to that employed for sesame and linseed. This oil was used for fuel and for cooking, and the residual for bean-cake fodder. In the winter of 1908 it began to be exported into Europe, where it was found to be better than cottonseed for fuel, soap-making, and feeding cattle. This success has marvellously increased the area devoted to the growing of the beans, and has caused the farmers in the north of Manchuria to give up wheat-raising. The Shantung farmers discovered that bean-cake was a first-rate fertiliser, and after the war with China this bean-cake was largely exported to Japan. The oil is used in Manchuria for lighting, lubricating, and cooking, and in south China in making waterproof cloth, paper umbrellas, and lanterns, and is often mixed with lacquer for making varnish and printing-ink. The Chinese hit upon the principle of rotation of leguminous with cereal crops quite accidentally, without knowing anything of the scientific explanation.

Vibration-Proof Electric Lamp

One of the drawbacks to the metallic filament incandescent electric lamp is the extreme fragility of the filament. The average lamp, if submitted to a jar or vibration such as occurs in a large manufactory where machinery is running, is apt to break down. This disadvantage counteracts the many attractive features which the lamp possesses. A recent invention seeks to obviate this defect. In this case the strands of the filament, instead of being looped over hooks, as is the usual practice, are passed through small rings which are carried on the hooks, but in such a manner as to have a little free-play. By this arrangement the filaments are not held so rigidly, and the effect of vibration is not so forcibly conveyed thereto. It may be pointed out that a lamp which suddenly gives out can often be given a little longer life by turning on the switch and giving the bulb a few taps to cause the broken ends to come together or fall across another strand, when, immediately lighting up and becoming incandescent, they fuse together.

The young man who asks a girl for a kiss seldom gets it. The bee doesn't ask the flower for its nectar, but it gets it just the same.

SAVED BY A PORTRAIT

By Gracie Grant

"It is like her; I think it will do."

Carberry stood back from the easel, and, not without satisfaction, scanned the painting. His face was earnest, his eyes absorbed. The painting was to him, for the moment, the only thing that existed. Each of his works in turn had been as much to him. Probably the fact explained his extraordinary success as an artist, and more especially as a portrait-painter.

Presently Carberry went back to the picture, and lifted his brush. Just a touch there — should he give it? He stood hesitating. At that moment a step sounded on the stair. As the artist gave the touch he had hesitated over, the door of the studio opened and another man entered.

George Strong was older than Carberry, but looked younger.

"Well, I'm glad it is done. Imogen will like to know that her mother will have it as soon as she is gone.

Carberry assented. He said meditatively, "I sometimes wonder whether it would not have been even better had I painted her looking up."

Strong said carelessly, "It is a pity we are going so far away, and are unlikely to return. Had we been living here, you might have painted her again, in a hundred poses, had you liked."

"Yes, of course, you are not returning. I had hardly realised that."

When the other man was gone he left his chair hastily and took one or two turns up and down the room. With a horrible persistency his mind turned to that blank place.

Carberry said aloud, "She will not return." There was an odd, numbed desolation in the words.

He wondered again whether he would have done better to paint her looking up—with that little appealing glance she had, and that quiver of her lips.

He seated himself by the table near the window, lifted a pencil that lay there, and on the back of a loose cardboard began to sketch. "Looking up, her hair would fall like this—"

There was a timid tap at the door, the artist did not hear it. There came another, and he said impatiently, "Come in."

Then Imogen entered.

Carberry turned, looked at her in a half-frightened, half-patient fashion. Why had she come? Her coming emphasised the fact that she must go.

Something harsh in his manner reached her. The girl paused halfway toward him. She looked at him timidly. "I believe I am disturbing you. I—I thought I should like to see the portrait if it were finished."

He breathed more freely, came over and took her hand. He said evenly, "You do not disturb me. Yes, it is finished. I hope to send it to your mother — to-morrow. She will have it when you are gone."

A deep note, something unknown, in his voice arrested her. She gave him a little eager glance, then she said, "Is anything the matter?"

He replied laughing, as if to himself, "I shall feel it quite a wrench—to part with the portrait. So much of oneself goes into one's work: by the time a painting is finished it is a part of oneself, and to lose it is like losing a limb."

Imogen shrank back a little. She said, "You will soon start upon another painting, and the portrait will be forgotten."

The girl moved close to the portrait, then she moved back. Carberry returned to the table by the window, and turning the sketch that lay there face downwards he stood looking at the blank side of the cardboard, then he turned it again. He called her. "Come and look at this."

When she came, he said, "I wondered afterwards whether this pose would have been better. What do you think?"

The bride looked at the sketch with a whitening face. Had she, indeed, betrayed herself like that! had she looked like that — appealing, wistful, yearning, giving her secret away?

She said shakily, "I think perhaps the other is better, but——"

Carberry knew that she went to the window, and without turning he could see her bend to lift the dropped chrysanthemums from the floor. She stood for a moment with them in her hands, as if she had forgotten them; then, instead of returning them to the vase, put them into the band of her dress.

He said unthinkingly, "They must be faded."

She coloured, and replied, "I always feel sorry for fading things."

"I will give you some of the others," said Carberry.

She asked him suddenly, "Mr. Carberry, do you ever make mistakes? What would you do if you made a big mistake?"

He did not say, as she expected, "I would try to remedy it"; but, "I would try to bear the consequences without whining."

Looking at him blankly, her despair giving her courage, "I—I wonder were you ever in love——"

Carberry laid his hand gently on her arm, and led her to the mantelshelf above the cavernous grate. There was a portrait there, small, ill-painted, faded. He said, "That is the only girl I have ever loved — will ever love."

All the colour went out of the bride's face. She said bravely, "I suppose she died." When he did not reply, she said, "I am sorry," and stumbled over the words.

He pretended not to see the tears in her eyes when she went away. She forgot to shake hands and say good-bye, and he seemed not to notice.

He muttered to himself as the door closed, "Strong is a good fellow, and she will soon forget."

He had left his pipe on the mantelshelf. As he searched for it his eyes met those of the little faded painting. He thought, "Dear little sister, you got me out of many a scrape in the old days. You have saved me from dishonour now."

"What is an ultimate consumer?"
"Oh, the ultimate consumer, my boy, is the one that gets the hash."

And a weak head is easily influenced by a full stomach.

It's almost as easy to grow old as it is to grow fat.

To Protect the Beauty That is Yours

and to enchance it, if that be possible, is a duty none the less binding because it has been made so agreeable. That duty centres in Beauty's chief expression, the skin.

12 Tumors Removed Without An Operation

Silver Lake, Ont., Sept. 20, 1909.

Dear Mrs. Currah.—I am enjoying better health than I have for eight years, and I think I am entirely cured. I have none of the old symptoms. I am very grateful for my present health, and think Orange Lily is the greatest treatment for women the world knows. Its use in my case caused 12 tumors or growths of some sort to be expelled. Some were as large as a hen's egg, and others smaller, down to the size of a walnut. You may use my case in your advertisement, for it is the solid truth, and pen cannot describe all the good it has done for me. Mrs. Louise E. Bolteridge.

This letter gives an indication of the positive benefits that always follow the use of Orange Lily. It is an applied treatment and comes in direct contact with the suffering organs. It produces results from the start in all cases of women's disorders, including painful periods, falling of womb, irregularities, leucorrhoea, etc.

I will send a sample box containing 10 days' treatment absolutely free to any suffering woman who has not yet tried it if she will send me her address. Enclose 3 stamps and address MRS. FRANCES E. CURRAH, Windsor, Ont. 4

Dr. JAMES W. ROBERTSON

Ottawa.

Dr. James W. Robertson, Chairman of the Royal Commission on Technical Education, and General Consulting Counsel for All Canada on matters of organization and social progress.

That is his present phase: to those who know the man, the fact that he is busy with this subject now, in itself is sufficient evidence that he was not busy with it two years ago, and will not be busy with it two years hence. Not that he is volatile; not that he lacks perseverance; but this — that he is a man at once dowered with a singular gift for observation and organization, and possessed with a fierce restless energy. He is a beginner, not an administrator. Caneda is strewed with prosperous institutions which he started, and which he left for others to carry on.

Consider his career for a moment: for part of the significance of what is to follow depends on that career. In the beginning this serious-faced young Scot, with a North British burr on his tongue and a gift of speech which could talk a bird off a bush, managed a cheese factory; two or three chese factories in fact, with a famous brand of his own. His family business had led him into that. His explosive energy and gift for expressing his ideas drew attention, and the early eighties saw him acquired by the Guelph Agricultural College as professor in dairying. Soon Guelph was too small to hold him, and in the early nineties, somewhile before the Conservative Administration went out of office, he was taken possession of by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

Growth of Wealth in Prussia.

Some interesting statistics have just been published showing the increase of wealth in Prussia. In 1903 there were only 80,000 people in Prussia incomes of over $7,000; while in 1910 there were 104,000. In 1903 1,500,000 people owned property worth $225,000,000. There are 8,200 millionaires in Prussia, and their wealth has increased from $2,500,000,000 to $3,500,000,000 within the last fourteen years. Of course it must be remembered that a German "millionaire" is only worth $250,000 — a million marks.

Growth of Population in Sweden.

The increase of population in Sweden during the year 1910 was greater than during any of the last ten years, amounting to 51,837, or 9.65 per thousand. As usual the increase has been greater in the large cities than in the provinces. But the growth of population in the smaller industrial centres was not so great as formerly, on account of the crisis of 1907-09 which greatly handicapped both manufacturing and commercial interests.

Thuh Americans Dont Care for Pantomine.

A story from the Folies Bergere has to do with Sig. Curti, the imported ballet master, who spent half an hour trying to drill into the walnut head of a chorus man a bit of pantomine. At last the chorus man said: "Aw, what's the odds? Thuh Americans don't care for Pantomine, anyhow." "It makes me think," said Curti, "of the old tenor. Broke, down and out, he had been sleeping in the livery stable for three months, when he suddenly got a chance to sing the role in which he had once been famous. La Scala at Milan was packed that night. He sang — most painfully — before that vast audience. At the end the audience hissed with drilled unanimity. 'Ahh!' said the old teror, in the wings. 'Ees eet not painful? Zee Italian people, zey no longer care for Verdi.'"

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS IN SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

The Baptism and Temptation of Jesus. Mark i:8-13; Matt. iv:1-11.

Golden Text—For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted Heb. ii:18.

1.—Verse 9—Why was Jesus baptized by John?

2.—Repentance was a condition of John's baptism. Did Jesus need to repent? Give your reason.

3.—Verses 10-11—What were the supernatural attending circumstances in connection with the baptism of Jesus?

4.—Give your reasons for your opinion as to whether others than Jesus saw, heard or understood the opening heavens, the spirit or the voice.

5.—Verses 12-13—What "spirit" was it that drove Jesus into the wilderness?

6.—What or who were the angels that ministered unto Jesus, and what form did their ministry probably take?

7.—Matt. iv:1.—Why was Jesus led into the wilderness to be tempted?

8.—Why was it necessary or not for Jesus to be tempted?

9.—Why is it that temptation is a necessary part of God's educational process for all of us.

10.—How much virtue is there in doing right if there is neither temptation nor opportunity to do wrong? (This is one of the questions which may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

11.—Verse 2—Why did Jesus fast at all and especially so long a time as forty days?

12.—If Christians in these days were to fast what would be the probable spiritual results?

13.—Verse 3—How did the gospel writer learn of the temptation of Jesus and the details in connection therewith?

14.—To what part of the nature of Jesus did the Devil make his first appeal?

15.—Why would this first temptation naturally appeal to Jesus with force at this particular time?

16.—Verse 4.—What would have been the moral quality of the act it Jesus had made bread out of the stones?

17.—What did Jesus mean by saying "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God?"

18.—Verses 5-7—Did Jesus go bodily into the city, or only in imagination only?

19.—To what part of the nature of Jesus did the Devil urge this second temptation?

20.—Can you think of any circumstance in which a man of God will act contrary to God's established laws and expect God to reverse their natural consequences?

21.—If Jesus had done as the Devil requested, how would that have tempted the Lord God?

22.—Verses 8-11—What is this third temptation?

23.—In what way could the Devil

Woman's World

MEDICAL SERVICE FOR WOMEN.

Naturally, India of late has been much in the minds of the rest of the Empire, and a good deal has been written on different phases of various subjects. A doctor—a woman—pleads very earnestly in an English paper for the establishment of a well-managed medical service of women for the women of India, and which shall be under state supervision. Her aim is to have something similar to the Indian Medical Service with similar conditions and terms. She says that though the National Association, founded by Lady Dufferin for the benefit of the native women, does an excellent work, it is not in a position to offer the same inducements as would a Government medical service, which is, she believes, greatly needed. Those who know the feminine population of India can support her assertion, and Anglo-Indian women as well as native women of every degree would welcome a service composed of qualified women doctors. The women to fill the positions would not be found wanting. As a head the name is mentioned of Dr. Mary Scharlieb, the greatest English woman surgeon, who in spite of her advancing age, continues to perform with success the most difficult operations, and who for some years occupied a prominent position in India as lecturer in the Madras Medical College, where she received part of her medical education.

SHOPPING IN PERSIA.

One curious thing about the bazaars of Persia, writes Mrs. Mary A. C. Colquohon in the Los Angeles Times, is the fact that all the shops of one kind are grouped together, and so we speak of the cloth bazaar, the hat bazaar and the shoe bazaar. There are both wholesale and retail shops, but there are no department stores. Nor is there such a thing as a general grocery or dry goods store. One grocer keeps spices only, another tea, coffee, sugar, etc.; one dry goods merchant will sell you muslin, another broadcloth and another silk.

All the metal utensils used in the country are either brass or copper. These substances are hammered into shape; a stroll through the bazaar where this work is going on gives one the impression that pandemonium has broken loose.

Different kinds of bread are made in the bazaar. One kind which is especially liked by the people and which can be obtained fresh at almost every hour of the day is called 'non-i-sangak,' literally little stone bread. It is made by pouring the dough on very hot pebbles, which bake it quickly and give it a crisp crust. Of course it is thin, not more than a quarter of an inch in thickness. The sheet is about a foot and a half wide by two and a half long.

Near the bazaar where this bread is baked you will usually find a place where mutton chops are being cooked on skewers over a charcoal fire. Any one desiring a lunch will buy from the baker a sheet of the thin, crisp bread, then a few 'kabobs,' as the chops are called. Wrapping the chops in the bread he will proceed on his way, munching his lunch as he goes.

As you walk through the bazaars or stand to examine or purchase goods—especially if you are a foreigner—only by crowds of curious pedestrians but also by caravans of horses and donkeys and even vicious camels.

Foreigners usually go to the bazaars not to purchase things, but to see Oriental life, and in the bazaars are to be seen many interesting phases of it. When you really wish to buy anything you will find the peddler your best friend. He will bring to your door anything that you wish to see, and give you all the time you desire in which to examine it. You must needs be a haggler to deal with any merchant in Persia, but usually you can make a better bargain in the quiet of your own home than you can make in the bazaar.

MASSAGE FOR THE HAIR.

One factor in keeping the hair healthy is massage of the scalp. In its normal condition the scalp is only loosely attached to the bony structure underneath; when it adheres closely the hair follicles imbedded in the scalp do not get the needed nourishment and the hair shows its trouble by becoming dry and brittle, or falling out. The object of the massaging is to keep the scalp perfectly flexible upon its supporting framework, the skull, thus permitting free circulation in the minute blood vessels that feed the hair follicles. As in all massage, the rubbing also stimulates the circulation for the time being, and promotes the nourishment of the part massaged.

To massage one's own scalp may be somewhat tiresome to the arms, but it does not take long; it should be repeated regularly, say, when brushing the hair for the night. The thing to avoid is rubbing the hair instead of the scalp, doing no good, but rather breaking the hairs. First take all the hair pins out and shake the hair loose. Place the finger tips on the scalp at the forehead and work them with a circular motion, first lightly on the surface where the follicles lie, then more deeply to move the scalp itself. Work backwards towards the crown, and contiue until the entire scalp has gone over. Take care not to drag the fingers through the hair, which may resent such pulling by coming out, but lift the fingers from one spot to the next.

Under certain conditions, a tonic or an astringent lotion may also be necessary, but massage is a means of helping the scalp to help itself. Along with the massage treatment should go ventilation, lifting the hair with the hands to let the air circulate through to the scalp.

A FEW FASHION NOTES.

A popular style of hair dressing has the hair parted at the side and drawn in loose waves over the ears into a small 'chignon' at the back. A fringe is often worn over the forehead, but it must not be thick; in fact, only a suggestion of a fringe is required.

Two shades for trimming the new hats are old rose and amber. A brush-like feather mount either in white or the color of the hat is the only trimming required for the hat to be worn with the plain or tailored suit.

Since the much puffed, exaggerated coiffure and the correspondingly large crowned hat have gone out of fashion, there is no longer any excuse for long hat pins. The hat pin head is not supposed to be a feature of the decoration as it was a while ago.

NOTHING LIKE PURE BRED POULTRY

The reason that scrub poultry always proves unsatisfactory may be understood by considering the relation which they bear to certain laws of breeding. These laws hold good whether with plants or animals, whether with birds or beasts. The law of inheritance that "like begets like" means that certain of the characteristics of a parent are inherited by the offspring and the apparently contradictory law, the law of variation, that "like begets unlike" means that every offspring differs from its parent to some extent. If a variety of fowl has been bred pure for a great number of generations and in every generation only those allowed to live which conform to a certain type, the resulting offspring are very likely to possess a uniformity of type and characteristics similar to that in the birds which have been used for breeding through the previous generations. A bird resulting from such a line of breeding is prepotent, which implies that it has the power to imprint its own likeness upon its offspring.

Encourage Courting

A novel plan is that of the pastor of a Methodist church in Illinois to induce young sweethearting couples to do their courting in the church pews, instead of repairing elsewhere. He will allow young people to stay late, with a big room and piano in part of the church, and a hundred pews in which they can sit at their

Buy PURITY—the high-class flour and do your duty to your cooking-ability

WITHOUT a high-class flour like PURITY you cannot do your duty to your cooking-ability.

A cheaper, weaker, ordinary flour cramps and puts a limit on your efficiency.

On the other hand, PURITY FLOUR broadens your scope; provides you with unlimited opportunities to do ample justice to the cooking-ability of which you are so rightly proud.

PURITY FLOUR responds nobly to the skill of the cook. It yields the daintiest and most delicate cakes. And pies so creamy, so delicious, your husband will vote you a wonder.

And such golden-brown biscuits, such griddle cakes, such buns, and such bread you have never before succeeded in making, no matter how earnestly you've tried.

And the reason is not hard to discover. PURITY FLOUR consists exclusively of the high-grade portions of the best Western hard wheat berries.

Unlike ordinary flour, PURITY FLOUR contains no low-grade portions, nor is it weakened by mixing soft wheat flour with it.

PURITY FLOUR will cost you slightly more, because it costs us more to make. But it's worth the difference.

PURITY FLOUR

"More bread and better bread"

Reminder: Because of the extra strength and extra quality of PURITY FLOUR it requires more shortening when making pastry and more water when making bread.

Add PURITY FLOUR to your grocery list right now.

Helps Keep Him [illegible]

In Japan it is not wise for a young man to neglect the maid he is courting.

When a Japanese girl has been slighted by her lover she revenges herself according to the following quaint custom. In the dawn of the early morning she rises, and puts on a white robe and white clogs. Round her neck she hangs a small mirror, which falls to her breast, and on her head she puts a metal crown with three points each point bearing a lighted candle.

In her left hand she carries a small figure of straw or rags — supposed to represent her unfaithful lover — and this she nails to one of the sacred trees surrounding the family shrine. She then prays for the death of the man, vowing that if this comes to pass, she will pull out the nails which are hurting the sacred tree, and make offerings to comfort her family god.

Every night she comes to the shrine, strikes in two more nails, and makes the same prayer, her idea being that the god to save his tree from further injury will kill her lover.

Bottled Gooseberries

Cold Water Method.—Put in glass jars well washed gooseberries, or cut up rhubarb, fill the glass jars as full of water as they can hold, fastening on the lids under water Gooseberries rhubarb, huckleberries can be canned under water, not taking the jars out until rubber and cap are in place and fastened down tightly. They will be in perfect state until time gooseberries will come again — in other words will keep a year.

THE COAL STRIKE HAS COMMENCED

Men in a Derbyshire Pit Struck Today—Many Will Follow their Lead Tomorrow

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 26.—To-day saw the actual beginning of the threatened national coal strike, the men of the Alfrestor pits in Derbyshire having quit work this morning. Tens of thousands of others in Yorkshire and elsewhere will follow their lead tomorrow, and by midnight on Thursday, if the Government does not in the meantime find some means of preventing the disaster, about 600,000 federated miners will have gone out. The public generally is confident the Government yet will bring about a settlement.

PRINCESS VICTORIA ILL

LONDON, Feb. 26.—Princess Victoria, the only daughter of the King and Queen, is ill with influenza.

OLD AGE PENSIONS

(Intelligencer Special.)

OTTAWA, Feb. 26.—J. H. Burnham, M.P. for East Peterborough, chairman of the old age pensions committee, is receiving many letters from trades and labor councils and other bodies throughout Canada heartily endorsing the scheme.

DON'T WANT BEER

(Intelligencer Special.)

BRAMPTON, Ont., Feb. 26.—The temperance people of Brampton, which is a local option town, are up in arms against the proposed establishment here of a storage warehouse by a brewery company of Berlin. An appeal will be made to the Government to prevent the step being taken.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON MEETING AT Y. M. C. A

Able Address of Competent Speakers—All Who Attended Were Highly Pleased With Proceedings.

Those in attendance at the Y.M.C.A. men's meeting Sunday afternoon were well repaid for their effort of being there. The meeting was addressed by William Sterling Battis, who so ably entertained the patrons of the star course Friday evening; by F. S. Shepard, of Toronto, Field Secretary of the Provincial Y.M.C.A., and by D. V. Sinclair, President of the local Association. Mr. Battis spoke of the Association's work in safeguarding young men, as he had seen its operations in his travels. Mr. Shepard spoke of its practical working, and Mr. Sinclair spoke of the financial effort now being made to clear off all financial obligations incurred by the erection of the building, its furnishings and the current expense for its maintenance for 1912.

Mr. Shepard said in part: "Hundreds of young men are seeking in their social, physical, intellectual lives such help as is provided in a modern Young Men's Christain Association building, and it is to enable the Association to better serve them that a campaign has been planned for raising the funds necessary to put it on a sound financial basis and remove all indebtedness on the new building.

"The business judgment of the country is that the Young Men's Christian Association is the most effective agency for the betterment of good citizenship among young men extant to-day.

"No argument is necessary to substantiate this fact. Its adaptability to every situation, its forcefulness, its skilful supervision, its business management, its sixty years history in North America, its continuous growth make the statement obvious.

"The Y.M.C.A. is not a charity. It is a great philanthropy in that it helps young men to help themselves.

"There are 3,000 young men and boys in Belleville. The Association represents the best interests of the city in safeguarding them. There are a large number of these young men in boarding houses who need its benefits and influences; others seek it for advantages that the home cannot give.

"Belleville is a progressive, growing city and should not be behind other communities in seeing that its model Association building is freed from debt and fully equipped for the best kind of work for her young men and boys."

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

WILL FURNISH A ROOM.

The Business Men's Bible Class which meets in Bridge Street Church have unanimously decided to furnish a room in the new Y.M.C.A. building.

INFANT DEAD.

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John R. Garbutt, Front of Thurlow, died yesterday. The little one had been ill for a few days.

WERE KNOCKED DOWN.

A woman and a little girl were knocked down on a Front Street walk this morning by a sleigh which was being driven out of a gangway. Their injuries were slight.

COASTING COLLISION.

A hand-sleigh on which were two big boys ran into a young man who was going down an icy walk on the east side of Church Street, south of Dundas Street. The boys had the worst of it as the sleigh swerved, with the result that it collided with a tree, which the head of one boy struck, and the other was partially buried in the snow.

WHERE IS JOHN CARR?

The local police have received a communication from Wales, asking for the whereabouts of one John Carr who is supposed to be in this vicinity. Mr. Carr is an old army man, and if he can be located it will probably be for his benefit.

DESERTER CAUGHT.

On Friday the 16th inst. John Kelley and Charles Nelson, two young men, were arrested on the G.T.R. property here. They were sent to jail for ten days. It transpires that Nelson, who is 23 years of age, is a deserter from "B" Battery at Kingston. Today he was re-arrested, on being liberated from the jail, and a charge of desertion preferred against him. Nelson enlisted in the battery under the name of Timothy Murphy. The officials at the barracks have been notified of his detention here.

MR. KENNY HAPPILY GREETED.

Large congregations welcomed Rev. H B. Kenny to his former pulpit at the Tabernacle Church yesterday morning and evening, at which he preached powerful and convincing sermons, the evening subject to young men bringing out many thoughts that might wel be followed by those who heard him. The occasion being the first anniversary of the re-opening of the church, following an extensive remodelization, a special collection was taken for the purpose of placing the current expenses upon a sound basis, which was most heartiy responded to. The church, with a present membership of 500, is in a most prosperous condition, brimming with religious vim, and the pastor, Rev. W. G. Clarke, who is so warmly supported in his earnest work, is much cheered by the goodfellowship manifested on every hand.

DONATION TO FIREMEN.

Chief Campbell of the Fire Department has received a cheque for $15 from Mr. S. Burrows for the members of the department for services rendered in connection with the fire which occurred some time ago in the Union Bank premises.

WIFE BEATING.

A woman reported to the police on Saturday night that her husband had assaulted her, and she also complained that he did not properly support her. She was advised to lay an information against her husband charging him with assault and non-support.

HAVE THEY SKIPPED?

A man and woman named Gardner who had been in the city but a short time, are alleged to have skipped out, and we are informed some parties here are mourning their sudden departure. It is alleged that they not only owed for board, but were also indebted to a local merchant for a few dollars for articles procured. The whereabouts at present of the couple is not known.

GOOD ROADS.

A deputation from the County Council, consisting of Messrs. T. H. Thompson, J. A. Moore, W. Nugent, N. Vermilyea, A. S. White, J. Gunter, W. E. Tummon and D. Hanley, Warden, went to Toronto to-day. They will attend the Good Roads Association, which meets in the Queen City, and will also interview the Government in regard to Hastings County's claim in regard to grants for good roads.

GOOD PROGRESS.

At luncheon at noon to-day at the Y.M.C.A. building, the members of the various teams who are canvassing for subscriptions, reported, and the reports were of an encouraging nature. Of the 11 teams, including the boys' team, one did not report. The amount reported subscribed since Saturday was $1,426.50, and the total since Friday, when the campaign was commenced, is $2,212.50.

ST. MICHAEL'S.

Yesterday afternoon Rev. Father McPhail conducted a special service for men, and gave some sound practical advice to the four or five hundred who attended. In the evening the mission closed with a grand sermon by Father McPhail. The church was packed to the doors. Never before has such a large congregation been seen at St. Michael's. Before saying farewell to the people Father McPhail bestowed the Apostolic Benediction. During the mission the following ladies and gentlemen gave very excellent solos: Mrs. Grant—Millard's "Ave Verum"; Miss Bawden—Holden's "O Salutaris"; Mr. John Fahey—"Calvary"; Mr. C. St. Charles—"Fear Ye Not, O Israel."

PAID ALL HIS DEBTS.

Bankrupt Man Met All Obligations and Paid Costs.

CLAYTON, Feb. 26.—A dividend of 100 per cent. was declared, yesterday afternoon in the case of Frank W. Currier, a bankrupt railroad freight conductor, of this city. The matter was held before Referee F. J. DeLaFleur, yesterday afternoon. Currier went into bankruptcy when creditors pressed him through a Watertown attorney. The bankrupt had liabilities of $402, and in the course of the bankruptcy proceedings learned that he had a half interest in a farm in Jefferson county, the interest being subject to the use by his father. His interest sold for $570, and he not only paid 100 per cent. on his debts, but paid for the costs of the proceedings. The case was closed, yesterday afternoon. L. H. Ford, of Clayton, appearing for the trustee.

EIGHT YEARS FOR CURSING.

Prisoner Who Turns on Judge Has Sentence Increased.

BROOKFIELD, MO., Feb. 26.—After Woolridge Golden was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary here last night for assault with intent to kill, he cursed Judge Lamb and other court officers and his sentence was increased to five years.

Further incensed, Golden turned to the judge and said:

"I don't give a —— if you make it ten judge."

"Mr. Clerk," said the court turning to the circuit clerk, "I sentence the prisoner to ten years in the penitentiary."

When it comes to getting something for nothing, his Satanic majesty is at the top of the heap.

SERIOUS CHARGE IN COURT TODAY

Bailiff Alleges Serious Assault by Rawdon Couple When Discharging Duty

Before Judge Deroche this afternoon John Mack and his wife were arraigned, charged with assaulting and interfering with a bailiff in the discharge of his duties. The parties reside in the township of Rawdon.

The begining of the trouble dates back some time when in an action for slander Mr. Redcliffe, of Rawdon, was given judgment for damages against the accused. The parties refusing payment, O. R. Jones, bailiff, was instructed to seize chattels sufficient to cover the judgment. This he undertook to do on Thursday last, but the accused offered such strenuous opposition that Mr. Jones returned home and wired to Belleville for instructions. He was told to take a posse of constables with him and on Friday Messrs. Jones, H. Gillen, P. J. Scrimshaw and Green, went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mack. Mr. Mack attacked them with a pitchfork, sticking it into the leg of one of the party. The fork was taken from him by force and then Mrs. Mack came running up with an axe. Constable Jones then ordered the arrest of both of them and they were arrested and committed to jail here for trial.

NEW STATION OF THE CANADIAN NORTHERN

An Up-to-Date Structure in Every Respect—What it is and How it Looks

An up-to-date building in every respect and one that is imposing in appearance in the locality in which it is situated, is the new Canadian Northern Ontario Railway station. It is located on the line of the railway between Church and South John streets. The building is two stories in height and has an exceptionally high pitch to the roof. The foundation of the structure is cement, which also forms a base about 3 feet above the level of the ground. Brick of the best quality was used in the construction and the framework was built of the best wood obtainable. The station, exterior and interior, is of the Queen Anne style, as will be all the important stations on the new line of the road. Mr. J. Montgomery, of Toronto, architect of the company, designed the building, and superintended its construction, as he will all important stations on the line. Mr. Robertson, of Toronto, had the contract for constructing the building and carried out his contract in a most satisfactory manner. Mr. Thomas Manley, of this city, did the foundation and bricklaying on the building.

The interior of the spacious and well appointed structure is indeed a thing of beauty and is designed not only for the convenience of the employees, but the wants of the travelling public have not been overlooked. The floor of the main waiting room is what is known as Tyrassa flooring, having the appearance of spotted marble, and is very pretty in design. This work was done by the Italian Mosaic Company, of Buffalo, N.Y. At the eastern extremity of the spacious waiting room is the ladies' apartment which will be appropriately furnished as soon as possible. Here every convenience for the ladies has been looked after. Lavatories and a wash room, exquisitely fitted up, have been provided. The men's waiting room will also provide comfort for those who will patronize the line. Off from their part of the waiting room a smoking room has been provided, and from off the latter is a lavatory and wash room with up-to-date furnishings. The decorations of the waiting room, and in fact that of all the rooms, is of the Colonial Empire style, the conventional design being entwined roses, and the ceiling stucco in design. McCausland & Son, of Toronto, were the decorators.

The ticket and operators' offices are convenient to the main waiting room. It is a large and airy room, well apportioned. From off the waiting room is a room where valises and parcels can be checked and stored.

At the west end of the building the baggage and express rooms are located. They are commodious and well appointed. Upstairs offices will be fitted up. The woodwork in the waiting and other rooms is all of Georgia pine. Throughout it is a building that has been well constructed and reflects credit not only upon the railway, but upon those who had the work in hand.

The genial station agent is Mr. L. W. Buller and he is exceedingly anxious that the citizens of Belleville should visit the new station and minutey inspect it. He will be only too pleased to conduct visitors through the building.

WED SIXTEEN TOGETHER.

Single Ceremony for Eight Pairs in Church Nuptials.

PITTSBURG, Feb. 26.—Cupid scored heavily at St. Stanislaus Polish Catholic church, Twenty-first and Smalinian streets, when eight pairs were married at one ceremony. All were foreigners. Some of the contracting parties arrived in taxicabs, others in carriages, and several in street cars.

So unusual was the sight of the eight pairs, all of the brides wearing long white veils and white dresses, that a number of the employees and owners of produce houses in the district took a vacation from their work to witness the merged ceremony. When it was concluded the eight pairs found an impromptu reception awaiting them outside the church.

HAVE BEEN WEDDED SEVENTY-NINE YEARS.

NEW YORK, Feb. 24.—Mr. and Mrs Mathias Shalek, 99 and 96 years old, today celebrated 79 years of wedded life. Mr. Shalek smokes three cigars a day and sometimes take "a little nip of liquor."

Waters' Drug Store

The Parker Pen Store

An old bachelor says it is time for a man to think of marrying when he hasn't anything else to worry him.

A GREAT LAWYER SAID

"If I had my way" a famous lawyer once said "I would make good health as contagious as measles."

Just think of it—suppose you could catch good health as easily as you catch cold—this would be a poor world for doctors and druggists.

Mrs. T. A. Trapp who lives in Arlington, N. J., has found the next best thing to catching good health. She says "A few weeks ago I contracted a cough which annoyed me a great deal as I was badly run down at the time. It kept me awake at night and distressed me greatly. After two weeks of this I began to take Vinol and one bottle not only caused my cough to disappear but I feel much better in every way and can sleep well again.

If you can't literally catch good health you can at least recover it and build yourself up by taking our delicious cod liver and iron remedy, Vinol. It makes weak folks strong, and we guarantee it to give perfect satisfaction. Your money back if it does not.—Red Cross Drug Store—J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

DEATH ROLL.

PETER CALLAGHAN.

As the result of lung trouble Peter Callaghan, son of Mr. Thomas Callaghan, died yesterday at the residence of his uncle, Mr. Peter Cody, of this city. Deceased, who was but 16 years of age, was born in this city and had lived here all his life. He was a bright young fellow, beloved by all who knew him. Deceased was a member of St. Michael's Church. He was very much interested in sailing and for the past two years had during the summer season spent his time with his uncle, Mr. Peter Callaghan. His demise is sincerely regretted by his many companions.

SPECIAL RATES TO CONGRESS.

Canadian Pacific Railway Makes One-Way Fare in Canada for Round Trip to Dry-Farming Meeting At Lethbridge.

LETHBRIDGE, Alberta, Feb. 19.—A special passenger tariff concession has been made by the Canadian Pacific Railway for the Seventh International Dry-Farming Congress at Lethbridge, Alberta, Oct. 21-26, of a single fare from all points on its lines in Canada for a round trip ticket.

C. E. E. Ussher, passenger traffic manager, has telegraphed E. A. Cunningham, vice-chairman of the Board of Control and President of the Board of Trade, who has been negotiating with the railroads for low transportation, that the C.P.R. will make the lowest convention rate known, namely: one fare for going and returning, upon the certificate plan.

The rates heretofore granted conventions held in the northwest and west have been one and one-quarter or one and one-half fare for a round trip, and this reduction from a single fare from all points in Canada may be followed by the transcontinental roads in the United States, assuring a very large attendance at the Congress and Exposition here next October.

Dates of sales of tickets and other details will be announced later on by the Canadian Pacific, and it is anticipated that the American roads will shortly make known their rates.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

THE DANGER DANCE.

A Terpsichorean Novelty in "Madame Sherry"

"The Danger Dance" is the latest musical comedy terpsichorean sensation. The dance was first introduced as a feature of "Madame Sherry" and came to America by way of Paris, where it was performed in the original French version of this international musical comedy success. The dance is a logical issue of one of the sensations in the piece, as will be seen at the Griffin Opera House Friday March 1st.

"The Danger Dance" is performed to the entrancing measures of "The Mad Madrid", one of the musical gems of "Madame Sherry" Seats are going fast. Hurry and get yours.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead who never to himself has said: "How much easier I could bear my neighbor's burden than my own.

NOTES FROM THE HIGH SCHOOL

The Seniors Favor a Technical High School—Its Advantages Forcibly Stated

The decision of the Board of Education regarding a new High School is arousing lively discussions among the younger citizens of Belleville, and several keen debates have taken place in the senior forms of the High School. By sweeping majorities the students have decided in favor of a Technical High School on the Bridge Street grounds. Some of the arguments for and against, which were most ably presented were; for:—

1.—The expense of remodelling as compared with building a new one would be: For remodelling—architect's estimate, $35,000; filling in of ravine, $1500; purchasing the Taylor and Bogart property to make the grounds necessary size, $10,000; total, $46,500. A large thoroughly equipped building could be put on the Bridge Street grounds for $71,000. The present building and site could be sold for a handsome sum, which could go to the building fund.

2.—Belleville is the best centre for a Technical High School this side of Toronto. Our present system gives only a general education and prepares students for the various professions. If Belleville is to grow, the commercial and industrial interests should be served by our High School.

3.—Much larger Provincial and County grants would be given to a Technical High School than to a Collegiate Institute, with the strong probability of Dominion Government assistance. The Provincial Government would pay 20 per cent. of the cost of equipment for five years and a large proportion of the new teachers' salaries.

4.—A big income would come to the city through outside pupils boarding and buying supplies here, and from County grants to the school.

5.—At present some $15,000 yearly goes to American correspondence schools, most of which could be kept in Belleville.

6.—The assessment of Belleville was raised half a million dollars last year. If the Board of Education get their fair share of this the present tax rate need not be raised at all.

7.—The present site is not satisfactory for a permanent building on account of the quicksand.

8.—Belleville is growing so rapidly that a street car line will soon be running and make the Bridge Street site easily accessible to all.

The negative arguments were:

1.—The distance of the Bridge Street grounds.

2.—The heavy tax on city real estate would discourage building.

3.—Remodelling would be cheaper.

4.—A properly equipped Collegiate Institute would draw a Provincial grant of $2,400 instead of the $1,200 which we receive now, and this would be good enough for Belleville's present needs.

The debaters were: Form III. Jr.—affirmative, Horace Yeomans, Miss Storey; Form III., Sr.—George Howard, Miss Milne; Form IV.—Laurie Mallory, Miss Morden. Negatives: Form III. Jr.—H. Ingram, Miss Faugher; Form III., Sr.—R. McCreary, Miss Warren; Form IV.—V. Clarke, Miss Simpkin.

A MOTHER'S CARE DESTRUCTIVE TO HEALTH

ANAEMIA, BAD BLOOD HEADACHES, AND LASSITUDE VERY COMMON.

MRS. WILKINSON'S LETTER GIVES ADVICE THAT EVERY MOTHER CAN WELL FOLLOW.

From her home in Newton where she resides with her large family, Mrs. Wilkinson writes: "For years I was pale, anaemic and lacking in vitality. I was a constant sufferer from indigestion and the distress and pain it caused me, coupled with the ever-increasing anaemia, made me weaker day by day. Constant headaches, specks before the eyes and attacks of dizziness made me feel as if life were not worth living. My constitution was completely undermined and the constant pallor and dullness in my eyes showed what a sick woman I was. I began to take Dr. Hamilton's Pills and the improvement, although slow, was sure.

"I gradually got back my strength and my appetite grew much stronger, and I enjoyed my meals thoroughly. I felt happier and more contented, and the sickly pallor of my face was replaced by a bright, rosy color, which proved that a strong medicine was at work. In a few months Dr. Hamilton's pills brought me from a condition of deathly pallor to robust health."

You can obtain the same results by using Dr. Hamilton's Pills—beware of the substitutor that offers you anything except Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —
JOHN MARCH
(AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

She went to him in her agitation, and laid both hands on his shoulders, gazing up at him with imploring eyes.

"You don't know what you are asking, Agnes. You don't realize the magnitude of your demands," he said gravely. "There is another key to the tune, and in your eagerness to strike a right note, you lose sight of the part I should play in your programme. If, as you suggest, I leave Weyberne I am without employment, without friends or means. Sir Thomas accepted the account I gave of myself unbacked by credentials, but I cannot expect to meet his like a second time. The demon Self is a tremendous force which has to be reckoned with, Agnes, and in spite of adverse circumstances I must stay on here until I have won my spurs, that is, until I have earned some sort of reputation, however flimsy. Few men or women have the boldness to take the axe in their hand and cut out a new and original path for themselves, but I, after years of steady, quiet thought, patient work, and ambitious dreams, have lifted the axe, and now no power, whether it be good or evil, shall wrest it from me. The consequences may be disastrous or unprecedented success; my life may be a noble one, crowded with high aspirations and honeycombed with splendid opportunity for the betterment of humanity, or it may be one long tissue of lies, a merry, rollicking sport of the devil. Nevertheless, whether it brings phenomenal good, or its own peculiar Nemesis, I shall abide by it."

She looked into the marvellous eyes, liquid with emotion, laid her head on his shoulder, and without any sort of warning burst into a flood of tears.

With one arm he encircled her, stroked her cheek and smoothed her ruffled hair very tenderly.

"Don't fret about it, Agnes," he said brokenly, "I have just flashed meteor-like across your path, only for a moment. I shall be gone directly. Don't let us turn a corner on purpose to meet trouble; half the calamities we see coming towards us pass us by. The six months will be gone in no time, and then it will rest with you as to whether we ever meet, or hear of one another again."

"You have never told me yet how you got on alone in London," she sobbed.

He smiled, though the troubled expression remained in his eyes.

"Fairly well. During the first few days the sense of freedom and the knowledge that I was my own monitor was simply delicious. The novelty, of course, soon wore off. I sold the vions, and took up my abode at a small private hotel in Southampton Row, and kept myself out of mischief by studying the advertisement sheets of all the London dailies and replenishing my wardrobe. One morning I came across Sir Thomas Hargrave's advertisement and answered it. I told him I was an American and had lately flown to England to try my wings. I made it quite clear that testimonials, references or recommendations, the usual registered avenues to social salvation, were closed to me, and awaited his reply with some trepidation. He answered in person. In his jovial, rough and ready way he marched into my room and said, 'I thought I should like to see the kind of fellow who wrote that letter.' I satisfied him regarding my respectability, packed my traps, and went down to Weyberne Hall with him that night."

He took out his watch and showed it her.

"The die is cast, Agnes," he said in a lighter tone, "the worst is over. I have launched myself to find the sea not nearly so rough as I anticipated. I have succeeded beyond my most sanguine expectations. I can't look into Judith Hargrave's eyes without knowing I have surpassed my wildest hopes of creating a strong, striking, potential personality. I don't attribute the secret of my success so much to my native ability as I do to the intense feeling I throw into the part I play. My identity is submerged in that of Paul Farley; I am he in every act, desire, and thought. We are wedded, welded, soldered together by a rocky cement, a powerful will and a vivid imagination. The last post is in, and I may be wanted. Don't fret, and don't let Mr. Fleming see your red eyes, sweet."

And with a long kiss on her lips that had a heart throb in it, he left her.

CHAPTER VII.

A Contrite Heart

The Hargrave family had dined at an earlier hour in order to enable Sir Thomas to discuss his favorite meal in peace, and afterwards to drive leisurely away to the agricultural meeting at East Weyberne.

Paul Farley, a light coat over his evening dress, his cap in his hand, ready to sally forth and keep his appointment at the Manor House, stood by the library window endeavoring to decipher a letter in the failing light. He was so engrossed with his difficult task that he neither heard nor saw the opening and shutting of the library door.

A soft rustle, a faint scent of Parma violets, a weird feeling that he was not alone in the room, at length compelled him to raise his head and his eyes fell upon Judith standing on the opposum-rug, in a long trailing gown of turquoise blue silk. Something cold, like an icy hand, gripped his heart as he beheld the swift subtle change in this young rosebud of a girl. She was very white, but composed, and appeared older, with all the piquancy and rich coloring gone from her pretty face. The violet eyes, the shade of a purple iris, were re-rimmed, bloodshot, and swollen.

"Will you give me back my letter, Mr. Farley?" she asked, advancing and blushing deeply under his gaze.

"It is destroyed, Miss Hargrave. No man would keep a letter like that."

"I came to ask your pardon," she said. "I am sorry, I, oh, Mr. Farley, no other moment in my life can hold so much shame as this."

She covered her face with her trembling hands, and stood crushed and shrinking. He went to her and laid his hand on her shoulder.

"Miss Hargrave," he said, in his low slow voice, "it hurts me beyond expression to see you so humiliated. Whatever shame or blame you feel called upon to bear, remember that I too share it. Your letter came to me in something the nature of a shock, and laboring under its influence I answered it. I ask your pardon, Miss Hargrave, and your forgiveness."

"You are very generous," she said, "but—"

"Just look at me, Miss Judith," he said, trying gently to draw away the hands from the tear-stained face; "I can't have you afraid to meet my eyes. I want you to trust me, and let me give you a helping hand through this dark passage in your life. Once again in the sunlight we can drop hands, and go our separate ways. What did you say?" he asked, bending his ear to her quivering lips, "there will never be any more sunlight? Oh, Miss Judith! When the sun is even now peering over the shadow's shoulder. You won't be able to see it today or to-morrow, perhaps, with those misty eyes, but the future is warm and beautiful, flooded with golden sunlight. "I think," he resumed after a brief, unbroken pause, "I think you have magnified this trouble out of all proportion. We must get it into proper perspective, and look at it, if we can, in a disinterested light. You see, Miss Judith, you had the temerity to deprive a man of a great treasure, a treasure which practically constituted the sum and substance of his whole existence, and you offered it to another who was powerless to accept it and also incapable of estimating its value."

"Yes," she said, "I know, but now, what now?"

"Why, now we must take our courage in both hands and remedy the mistake."

"How?" she asked in a frightened whisper.

"By giving back the treasure to its rightful owner. I am going to ask you to go to that fellow, to go to Pelham; to just creep into his arms and beg of him to forget all these past weeks of unrest and heartbreaking misery. Tell him your life will be insufferable, almost intolerable, without his love, that you need his forgiveness, that you want him to comfort you now that the pain is past."

"Oh, I can't do that; I can't," she said passionately, a bright red spot burning on each cheek "I told him I hated him; I said he had been a plague and a nuisance to me all my life, and I wished he were dead."

He dropped her hands suddenly, and crossed to the window.

"I didn't mean it, of course, I really did not mean it," she said piteously, "I was wretched, I did not care what I said, if only I could make him feel something of my heartache."

"But the poor fellow had a heartache of his own," he said, returning to her with a melancholy smile.

"Had he? He threw up his head and laughed, and said he would never trouble me again."

"Then, Miss Judith," he said, laying an impressive hand on her arm, "you must trouble him."

"I will not do that, I cannot," she said, somewhat defiantly.

"Why not?" he asked.

"Because by this time he may have become, like you, utterly indifferent."

"I venture to think the comparison is not synonymous," he replied stiffly 'one is the substance, the other the shadow. I never loved you, I never should; but he did, and does. His heart is under your beaded shoe; you can mar his prospects and ruin his young life. Let us forget the inevitable, and think only of Pelham."

Her color deepened, but she did not speak.

"It seems to me," he continued, "it has always struck me in my thoughtful moments, that some sort of opportunity is given to us poor mortals to redeem or to lessen the consequences of our blind and manifold mistakes. I think, Miss Judith, that probably your life's opportunity has come. I would recognize and use it were I you."

MEDICAL INSPECTORS.

There is a very strong argument on behalf of medical inspection of our schools. Thousands of boys and girls are handicapped in their struggle for an education on account of some physical infirmity or ailment that medical care would help to remove.

Statistics show that there is very great need for medical inspection in schools, particularly in the populous centres of the country.

In Montreal, for example, the medical inspector of schools found that 51 per cent. of the children were ill with some form of disease; 2 per cent. had adenoids; 37 per cent. suffered from decayed teeth; 4 per cent. from vermin; 4 per cent. from some form of contagious disease; while 15 per cent. were unvaccinated. Applying these percentages to the school population of Ontario (508,563), it would appear that 269,000 of our school children were in ill health in 1910; 10,000 had adenoids; 189,000 had decayed teeth; 21,000 were verminous; 76,000 unvaccinated; and 21,000 had some contagious disease. Comparing the percentages in Montreal with some of those in Toronto, it is found that from 75 to 90 per cent. of the children in Toronto had decayed teeth 15 to 20 per cent. or even more are suffering from adenoids, and 10 per cent. from some form of eye disease. Assuming that the percentage of diseased children found in Toronto will fairly represent the percentage for the province (perhaps an unjustifiable assumption—no one knows), there will be 337,000 children in Ontario schools who are likely to be suffering from decayed teeth, 50,000 from defective eyesight, and 100,000 from adenoids.

The question of medical inspection of our schools is forcing itself more and more upon our educational leaders. An educational campaign continued for a time will be effective in convincing parents and trustees of the necessity of careful attention to the health of the school children Until such conviction is brought to the minds of the people, medical inspection cannot be successfully put into operation.

COST OF LIVING.

Protection is charged with the responsibility for the increased cost of living in Canada.

Great Britain, it is pointed out by the Toronto Telegram, is an example of how free trade has failed to avert an increased cost of living in that favored land.

Truth is a stranger to the free trade prosings of the Globe and Star. These organs suggest that if Canada were exempt from food duties Canada would also be exempt from increases in the price of food. The following figures show that the old country has not escaped a share of the universal increased cost of living.

	Retail prices of bread.	Retail prices of bacon.	Retail prices of sugar.
1900.	100.00	100.00	100.00
1910.	114.08	138.00	124.03

CANAL TRAFFIC.

In answer to a question by Mr White, of Renfrew, interesting statistics were brought down in Parliament regarding the freight carried through the Sault, Welland and St. Lawrence canals during 1911. The tonnage through the Sault was nearly 31,000,000, and much more than half was American. The Welland carried 2,300,000 tons, of which 755,000 was American. The St. Lawrence canals carried neary 4,000,000 tons, of which 820,000 was American. A supplementary statement showed that the freight carried from one American port to another through the Sault canal was nearly 26,000,000 tons, of a total of thirty millions; and through the Welland canal over 475,000 tons out of a total of over 2,500,000 tons. So far as the St. Lawrence canals were concerned, the carriage from one American port to another amounted to practically nothing. The total amount of purely Canadian traffic or of tonnage from Canadian to United States ports through the Sault canal, amounted to a little over 3,000,000 tons. Whereas the similar figures for the Welland canal amounted to only about 1,300,000 tons; and for the St. Lawrence canals over 2,000,000 tons.

CURRENT COMMENT.

Hamilton youths skated to Toronto over Lake Ontario ice, a distance of 40 miles recently, attracting almost as much attention as the airship men.

And his Lordship Judge Charbonneau has just declared invalid the marriage between church and state in Quebec.—Toronto Telegram.

True to their record of opposition for opposition's sake, Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his party are opposing the Borden Government's good roads policy. The public in general and farmers in particular will not forget this fact.

A childish bequest of 37 cents, made in 1895 by Ethel Shingle, just before her death, found its goal when the handsome Methodist Episcopal church of the Advocate, costing $105,000, was dedicated in Germantown. The little girl's gift was the beginning of a movement to raise the money necessary to construct the new edifice.

He—What are the names of the newly married couple in the next flat?

She—We haven't been able to find out yet. They still call each other 'Birdie' and 'Pet.'

He—Marie, suppose you and I were alone on a desert island, what is the first thing you would do?

She—Thank goodness that I know how to swim!

The Kingston Whig calls the election of Mr. Graham in Renfrew "the first blow dealt at Toryism." Our contemporary has saddled the wrong horse. If the reduction of the Liberal majority in that constituency from 619 to 300, and that, too, in face of a division in the Conservative party, was a "blow at Toryism," the Government can stand many such blows without feeling any ill effect from them. It is only, after all, the Whig that is "blowing."

Ottawa, Feb. 23.—The provinces will be given an opportunity to assert their jurisdiction in regard to marriage when the stated case, founded upon the Lancaster Bill, goes before the Supreme Court. It is expected that Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., counsel for the Dominion Government, will argue that it is within the power of Parliament to enact the Lancaster Bill and make it law. The provinces may send counsel to argue the other side of the question. If they do not, the Dominion Government will probably make such provision as is necessary for having a proper presentation of that side of the case.

The feeding of oxygen to hockey players in order that the utmost exertion may be obtained from them during the strenuous hour of a hockey game, is not a practice that will commend itself to Canada. Any such artificial device to excite temporary energy has its reaction, and must, in the long run prove injurious. When athletes reach a stage of fatigue where the administration of oxygen is necessary, then it is neither to their advantage nor to that of the sport in which they participate to continue playing. Sportsmanship and the oxygen treatment are miles apart. —Ottawa Journal.

URGING POSTPONEMENT

British Government Hopes to Hold Back Strike.

Only Chance Now of Averting Great Coal Mine Strike In England Lies In Getting the Mines to Delay Their Notices and Lloyd-George Will Urge That They Do This—Leaders' Dispute Brings Hope.

London, Feb. 26.—One of the largest mine owners in England, who has taken part in the conferences with the Government, expressed the opinion last night that the only hope of preventing a coal strike, which will involve more than 800,000 miners, is for the Government to persuade the men to postpone their notices.

James Haslam, the Labor member for Derbyshire, and the agent of the Derbyshire Miners' Association, has stated emphatically that this is impossible, as the miners have decided to stand together, and the Welshmen will persist in laying down their tools on Feb. 29 unless their demands are acceded to. Mr. Haslam added that the Derbyshire miners could settle the whole question in twenty-four hours, but they could not break away from their fellow-workers in other fields.

In other quarters a more optimistic feeling prevails, based on lack of harmony among the Welsh leaders which may lead to a postponement of the notices. It is understood that Premier Asquith and Chancellor Lloyd George will endeavor to induce the miners at Tuesday's conference to hold their notices in abeyance temporarily and the owners to deal with all questions which have arisen, except that relating to the minimum wage, at once, leaving the latter to be negotiated later. In the English districts, in case of a strike, the miners will be permitted to keep the mines clear.

Guests Bravely Rescued.

Galt, Ont., Feb. 26.—Fire broke out at 7.30 p.m., Saturday, in the Hotel Imperial and destroyed the eastern wings. The damage is $5,000, insured. The hotel is owned by A. J. Cardy, Niagara Falls. The blaze started in the lavatory.

The guests had a narrow escape with their lives. Miss Cowan and Mrs. Hounhan were bravely rescued, the former by James Harrocks, a boarder, and the latter by H. Rowley, a hotel porter.

Three guests descended by a rope ladder from a bedroom, Turner Virgin, Dr. Durran and James Hall. The first named made a thrilling escape from a third storey window. The Hotel Imperial is the oldest existing in Galt and is noted throughout Canada for its fine bowling green.

To Maintain Cat In Women's Ward.

St. Catharines, Feb. 26.—Hugh E. McSloy, treasurer of the General and Marine Hospital, on Saturday received a peculiar donation. It was a check from Miss Annie Norris, Ontario street, for $50. With the money was a stipulation that the sum is to be expended in maintaining a cat in the woman's ward of the hospital. The grant was accepted and a cat will at once be installed and fed upon the $50.

Republicans on Way to Tell Him He Is President.

Pekin, Feb. 26.—The Government is preparing an elaborate reception for the delegation of Republicans who are coming here under the leadership of Tang Shao Yi from Nanking, to notify Yuan Shi Kai of his election as President of the Republic. The people, however, seem to be indifferent respecting the momentous visit. Telegrams have been received from various sections of the country, embodying various proposals with respect to the future. It is believed that Yuan Shi Kai is secretly inspiring this with the object of dividing the south on the matter of location of the capital.

While Yuan Shi Kai realizes the imperativeness of uniting the country, he is proceeding confidently in the knowledge that he possesses the means of averting or politically defeating his opponents. Apparently the country is very strongly in favor of Yuan Shi Kai as President. Many soldiers who are not Republicans, have given their full adherence to the President-elect, and Yuan Shi Kai holds the confidence of both Manchus and Chinese, which probably indicates that the suspicions that he was double-dealing for the court's overthrow were unwarranted.

The new Government has decided that the country shall hereafter be officially styled the Great Republic of China, the word "Great" being intended to include Thibet, Turkestan, Mongolia and Manchuria. It has practically been decided to convert the Forbidden City into a Government enclosure, where all the offices will be situated. When the Empress Dowager and the Emperor depart the extensive grounds around the winter palace will be converted into a public park.

TRIED TO ESCAPE.

Prisoners In London Jail Nearly Break Away.

London, Feb. 26.—Patrick O'Brien, alias William Maloney, the notorious thug, who robbed two women recently in the city, shooting one of them, and Gordon Lamotte of Strathroy, held on a charge of highway robbery, made a desperate attempt to break jail shortly after seven o'clock Saturday morning.

Turnkey Sproule, who was in charge of the corridor where O'Brien and Lamotte were quartered, was on his rounds and shortly after seven o'clock decided to let them out of their cells. Turnkey Archie Graham was stationed at the door of the main corridor, as has been the custom since O'Brien and Lamotte have been incarcerated there.

Maloney was in the far east cell with Lamotte next and Charles Kennedy, a trusty, in the third. The latter, who helps in the kitchen, was liberated first. Then O'Brien's cell was opened, and later Lamotte's. Turnkey Sproule was bent over and just as the lock was liberated O'Brien, who is a powerful man, dealt Sproule a fearful blow in the back, knocking him down. They stole his keys and rushed to the main quarter. Here Graham held them at bay, and finding it impossible to get past him, the thugs ran into the south exercise yard. In the meantime the police had been telephoned for and they arrived just in time to prevent O'Brien and Lamotte breaking through the big door. They were placed in solitary confinement and will be closely guarded from this time on.

Washington, Feb. 26.—Another crisis in Cuban affairs apparently is at hand. Reports from the island indicate that the unrest temporarily quieted by U. S. Secretary of State Knox's recent note of warning, is about to break out anew as a result of the Cuban supreme court decision invalidating the law ousting office holders who were Spanish sympathizers during the revolution.

Developments are being awaited with keen interest in official circles here. It is believed that the situation will tax the resources of President Gomez to the utmost.

HE WILL RUN IF NAMED

Roosevelt Says He Is Ready to Represent Republicans.

The Long-Awaited Announcement Regarding the Former President's Position Is Delivered—Seven Governors Have Urged and Roosevelt Consents—Will Stand for Genuine Rule of the People.

New York, Feb. 26.—"I will accept the nomination if it is tendered me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference," is Col. Theodore Roosevelt's reply to the letter of seven Republican governors asking him to stand for nomination.

The much-awaited reply was given out last night at Col. Roosevelt's offices here during his absence on a trip to Boston. It was unexpectedly brief, but definite. It follows:

"Gentlemen:—I deeply appreciate your letter, and I realize to the full the heavy responsibility it puts on me, expressing as it does the carefully considered convictions of the men elected by popular vote to stand as the heads of government in their several states.

"I absolutely agree with you that this matter is not one to be decided with any reference to the personal preferences or interests of any man, but purely from the standpoint of the interests of the people as a whole. I will accept the nomination for President if it is tendered to me and I will adhere to this decision until the convention has expressed its preference. One of the chief principles for which I have stood and for which I now stand and which I have always endeavored and always shall endeavor to reduce to action, is the genuine rule of the people; and, therefore, I hope that as far as possible, the people may be given the chance through direct primaries, to express their preference as to who shall be the nominee of the Republican Presidential convention.

COL. ROOSEVELT.

"Very truly yours,
"Theodore Roosevelt."

The seven governors assembled at Chicago two weeks ago and drafted a letter to Col. Roosevelt asserting that there was a popular demand for him to be President again and urging him to declare himself as to whether he would accept the Republican nomination "if it came unsolicited and unsought." For two weeks Col. Roosevelt considered the letter, indicating plainly that he had no intention of making a hasty reply.

The governors who signed the letter were: William E. Gasscock of West Virginia, Chester H. Aldrich of Nebraska, Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire, Joseph M. Carey of Wyoming, Charles S. Osborne of Michigan, W. R. Stubbs of Kansas and Herbert S. Hadley of Missouri.

Efforts of Col. Roosevelt's friends to induce him to make an earlier declaration of his attitude on the Presidential question had been unavailing. His laconic remark to a friend in Cleveland last week that "My hat is in the ring—you will have my answer Monday," was the first real indication that he had in mind an affirmative answer to the governors' letter.

Upon promise that the reply would be given out last night a small army of newspaper men gathered at the colonel's offices early in the evening. Secretary Frank Harper met the reporters punctually and gave out the correspondence without comment. He said he was in no position to comment, and in view of the author's absence in Boston, where he will spend several days, it was impossible to get an elaboration of the statement made in the letter.

News Caused Sensation.

Boston, Feb. 26.—"I think I have made my position clear, I have no plans beyond this night. For to-morrow and afterwards, no one knows what is in store."

This was Col. Roosevelt's response to the appeals made to him last night for some word in regard to his statement. As he spoke, he smiled expansively. Then he added with a chuckle:

"I'm having a quiet literary evening. I havn't talked politics with anyone."

Col. Roosevelt was at the home of Judge Robert Grant, a Harvard classmate, with whom he spent the night. News of his decision spread around the city like wildfire last night and created a great deal of excitement. Judge Grant's home was besieged by a crowd of persons anxious to see the colonel, who was quietly discussing literature within. When at last he appeared at the doorway, he beamed upon his interviewers as though something had made him more than unusually happy.

Roosevelt Third Man?

New York, Feb. 26.—The Press on Saturday published a despatch from Washington. It said: "What is disturbing the Taft Republicans more than any other bit of information brought here is the statement that Col. Roosevelt will run for President even if defeated in the Chicago convention. Men of considerable importance are discussing this to-day."

The story is based upon the alleged conversation of a U. S. Senator with the former President in The Outlook office. Col. Roosevelt is represented as saying:

"The nomination in Chicago must be made by the open voice of the Republican party, and not by manufactured delegates. If the will of the people is not impressed upon that convention then there must be a third party with its own candidate."

SCOUTS' MEET.

The Masters Cannot Agree on Subject of Smoking.

Toronto, Feb. 26.—The first convention of the Ontario Scout Officers' Association was concluded by the Saturday afternoon session, at which papers were read on different points of interest to the movement, and a general discussion took place. The convention was voted a great success and it was decided to hold one annually in the future.

"Camp Sanitation" was the subject of a paper read by A. E. Mercer at the Ontario Scout Officers' conference. The speaker laid stress upon the necessity of taking every precaution to preserve the health of the boys while at camp. At the conclusion it was decided to have the paper printed.

A. Clark of Wycliffe College brought up the question as to whether a scout master should smoke. He was of the opinion that they should not. C. J. Atkinson endorsed this opinion. He thought that a scout master would have a greater influence if he would not use tobacco. The pros and cons of the question were discussed and opinion was pretty well divided.

The following are the officers for the ensuing year: Hon. President, Sir John Gibson; president, W. K. George; first vice-president, Lt.-Col. A. E. Gooderham; second vice-president, J. H. Collinson, Hamilton; Capt. R. S. Wilson, secretary-treasurer, commissioner for Ontario; H. G. Hammond, assistant commissioner and provincial secretary.

Executive, C. W. Henning, Hamilton; Lyons Woolverton, Grimsby; Lt.-Col. D. M. Robertson, Toronto; Noel Marshall, Sir Henry Pellatt, Sir Edmund Walker, Gen. Cotton, J. C. Eaton and James Scott.

St. Catharines Gives Up Hope of Having Another Railway.

St. Catharines, Feb. 26.—Since the visit to this city and district on Friday of Engineer Wicksteed of the Canadian Northern Railway Co., St. Catharines has practically abandoned hope of having the main line of the company diverted from Thorold to this vicinity. Wicksteed had interviews with representatives of most of the leading manufacturers in the city. He also looked over the surveyed route and the one suggested as an alternative, but finally declared that from this city it would be impossible to obtain a grade that would permit an engine to draw more than twenty-five cars, whereas the grade on the route surveyed will permit of the hauling of fifty cars in one train.

The route surveyed begins the ascent of the mountain this side of Grimsby. It rises near Jordan, then makes a detour towards St. John's, circles back to Decew's Falls within a few miles of his city, then passes on to Thorold, using the present bridges over both canals and continues on to Niagara Falls.

Mr. Wicksteed, however, threw out the suggestion that in all probability the company will begin at once on the construction of an electric spur from Niagara-on-the-Lake through this city to connect with the proposed main line at Jordan.

In such case, the present bridge across the old Welland Canal, now used by the Port Dalhousie division cars, would be used. General Managed Seixas is in Toronto conferring with Canadian Northern officials as to the work of the company in this district during the coming spring and summer.

Bruchesi Blames Minister.

Montreal, Feb 26.—His grace the Roman Catholic Archbishop of Montreal preached yesterday in the cathedral in order, no doubt, to meet the comments coming from Justice Charbonneau's judgment. His grace commented on the marriage question from the Catholic standpoint, saying that the people of Quebec always supposed that the civil law here confirmed automatically a judgment of the ordinary dissolving of a marriage when the minister is not a competent party. A judgment in the contrary sense had just been delivered and his grace hoped that final decision will be reached in the higher courts. He strongly condemned non-Catholic minister for marrying two Catholics, generally presenting themselves before him with what he called a civil permit. If these ministers had not done this, all this trouble and dissension would have been avoided, and, speaking for the Catholic clergy, Mgr. Bruchesi declared that no priest would marry two Protestants.

Referring to the future, his grace said: "Come what may, the Catholic marriage will always be a sacrament and can never be infringed upon by the civil law."

Brandt Witnesses Charged.

New York, Feb. 26—Police Commissioner Waldo Saturday preferred charges against Lieut. J. B. Wooldridge and Lieut. John Taylor, of the department, in connection with the Brandt case. Wooldridge is charged with making a false report and conduct unbecoming an officer. The two men will be tried on Feb. 29 at police headquarters.

Killed at Porcupine.

South Porcupine, Ont., Feb. 26.—James Reilly was killed and Matthew Ronan severely injured at West Dome Mine Saturday morning by an explosion, thought to have been caused by drilling into a hole where an old shot had missed fire.

MURDERED BY HIS SON

H. W. Wallace Has Relatives in Pilkington and Ponsonby— Son Committed Suicide After Killing His Father and Wounding Brother-in-law.

GUELPH, Feb. 23.—Mr. H. W. Wallace, the prominent banker who was murdered by his son, Rex, at St. Paul, Minn., was born in Ponsonby, Wellington county, and went west 32 years ago. Rex visited in this city about two years ago.

The murdered man was a brother of Mr. Wallace, Reeve of Pilkington township, and a brother-in-law of Mrs. Thacker, of Ponsonby. Besides shooting his father to death, young Wallace seriously injured his brother-in-law and then killed himself. The tragedy occurred in the bank of the elder Wallace. It is alleged that young Wallace had written a letter some weeks ago to his father threatening to kill him unless he fulfilled a promise to give him $25,000.

MR. JOHNSON'S SPEECH ON THE ADDRESS

A Pointed Utterance by the Member for West Hastings—He Approved Course of the Government and Touched the Opposition on the Raw

In the debate in the Legislature in reply to the Speech from the Throne, Mr. J. W. Johnson, member for West Hastings, followed the member for North Wentworth (Mr. McQueen), whose chief complaint against the Government was that in its agricultural policy it was not reaching the individual farmer. Speaking for the County of Hastings, Mr. Johnson said that the effect of the administration of the Department of Agriculture in Ontario, in its various branches, was being aided in a manner that is not equalled elsewhere on this continent, and that the individual farmer was, through the dairy instructors, the seed and stock judging instructions and the presence permanently in the county of a representative of the Department of Agriculture brought into closest touch with scientific development and systems of operation that produce marvellous results. He had but to point to the representation of the County of Hastings in this House to prove the confidence of the people in the Whitney Government. Here we are from the North of the County, from the East and from the West, returned by acclamation. Liberals were among his (Mr. Johnson's) strongest supporters, one of whom said: "Why should we wish a change when the Government is doing so much for agriculture and for the benefit of the rural localities?"

Referring to the lessons given by Sir James Whitney to the new Liberal members with respect to the proceedings of the House, Mr. Johnson advised them to remember that, "No chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous but grievous; nevertheless, afterward it yielded fruit." On reflection it would be a satisfaction for them to know that the lessons on Parliamentary procedure were given by an authority on Constitutional usage who ranks with Sir John Bourinot and Alpheus Todd. It may console them also to know that the chastening from the same source had not always been confined to their side of the House.

Mr. Johnson next referred to the Liberal platform propounded by the new leader during the recent election. He found in two paragraphs of the address the expression "necessity for social and moral reform" repeated three times within a few lines, the inference intended being, of course, that the Conservative party are destitute of these aspirations. Cant only invites ridicule. Of what avail are such platitudes in themselves? The sermonettes of the previous leader, which appeared daily in The Globe prior to the election of 1908, were futile; beating the air would have been as profitable, and the ethical essays of the present leader were no more effective. His zeal for moral reform comes eight years too late. The greatest reform ever effected in this Province was the defeat of the Ross Government, and among the chief defenders of that corrupt and rotten organization was the new leader of the Opposition. "By their works ye shall know them," not by their talk. Is there any higher standard in private life or in public life than truth and honesty? For seven years Sir James Whitney and his colleagues have been administering the affairs of the Province, and in all that time not a scandal, not the shadow of a scandal, has appeared. Whitney is trusted absolutely—therein lies his right to rule. Is there any better right than that? It is related in ancient history that a king named Augeas kept 3000 oxen for thirty years in stalls which were never cleaned. Hercules undertook to cleanse these stalls in a day and he accomplished the task by letting two rivers into them. The Conservative party, led by Sir James, cleansed the Augean stables of Ontario so that there is not even a smell left.

There is a subject noticeably absent from the new leader's address—one upon which The Globe, the lesser organs, and the Opposition in Parliament wrote and spoke volumes. He referred to the bonus of four thousand acres a mile granted to the Canadian Northern Railway, three sessions ago, to induce the company to build a railway from Port Arthur to Selwood Junction, through the great clay belt of Northern Ontario. To-day the promised road is being built rapidly from both ends, and the engineers report that they have found on the height of land, instead of rock, as they expected, a magnificent plateau or table-land covered with white pine of as fine quality as was ever known in the older portion of the Province and on soil of the richest quality. Along the line of the railway alone a population of two million people could become not only prosperus but could not only become prosperous but papers that speak for it denounced the bonus, but they are now silent in the face of the result. Governments of themselves cannot develop new territory. The history of the various American States and of the Canadian Provinces proves that Governments must form alliances with great railways in order to effect settlement and development of new territory. They must be given land (valueless without settlement and development) and then we see their successful efforts to dispose of the lands to the settlers whom they seek and find. It is to the C.P.R. that Canada owes the splendid development and settlement we witness in the Western Provinces, and it will be through similar means that the great hinterland of this province will be settled and developed.

An absurd proposal of the new leader of the Opposition is to subject the railway owned by the people of this province, the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway, to the control of the Dominion Railway Commission. That would be an invasion of Provincial rights, and an unwarranted interference with Provincial business, now so well managed by Mr. J. L. Englehart, the chairman of the Commission, and his colleagues.

Further evidence of the foolish padding with which the new leader's address is made to look formidable, in length, is the advocacy of what he calls "Civil Service Reform." There is no "Civil Service" in Ontario in the sense in which there exists such a body serving the Dominion. There are men and women employed in the Parliament buildings to do the work assigned to them, just as there are employees in business houses. This work is done under the eyes of Ministers and Deputy Ministers, and it is well done. The service needs no commission as suggested by Mr. Rowell, at a cost of $30,000.00 a year at least. "I have never," declared Mr. Johnson, "seen an idler or a loafer among the employees in the Parliament buildings, and their intercourse with members and the public is marked by efficiency, promptness and politeness." As for the outside service, see the absurdity of the proposal: We have sheriffs, registrars, clerks of court, and other officials. A man conceives the idea that he will endeavor to become a sheriff or a registrar, according to the new leader there would be a class of aspirants for such offices undergoing at intervals examinations from primary to final.

Mr. Johnson concluded as follows: The excellent results secured by allowing land to lie fallow for a longer or shorter period are recognized by the tiller of the soil. The farmer summer fallows the fields that have become foul and exhausted, and he thereby destroys noxious and injurious weeds, renders the land tender and mellow, restores the constituent elements that it had lost, and renews its virility and power of production. The Conservative party summer fallowed in Ontario for more than thirty years, and we already have evidence of restored vitality and power in its projected policies. It will be a benefit to the Liberal party to summer fallow for a time, a good long time, in both the Ontario and Dominion fields.

Watch Your Hair, Ladies

ETERNAL VIGILANCE IS THE PRICE OF LUXURIANT AND RADIANT HAIR.

If dandruff germs are devouring the nourishment that belongs to the hair it will soon begin to fall. Furthermore it will lose its life and lustre, and will become dull, faded, and even look slovenly.

If you have any signs of dandruff you ought to go right to your druggist to-day and get a bottle of PARISIAN SAGE. This delightful and refreshing hair tonic is guaranteed by J. V. Doyle to kill the dandruff germs clean the head of filthy dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp or money back. And it does just what it is guaranteed to do and that's why its sales are so enormous the country over. PARISIAN SAGE is the favorite of refined women. One bottle proves its superiority.

AMAZONS TRAINED AS GUARDS

Corps of Seventy Prepared for Rough and Tumble at Lloyd George's Meeting.

LONDON, February 22.—The non-militant suffragettes have arranged for seventy of their "stalwarts" to act as stewards for their meeting to-night at Albert Hall, when Mr. Lloyd-George will give an address.

These seventy athletic young women will be dressed in physical culture costumes, so as not to impede their movements and will maintain order and deal summarily with any persistent interrupter. Each one of the stewards is prepared and trained to give a good account of herself in a rough and tumble of resisted ejection of any militant sister who does not think Lloyd George is answering adequately some of the awkward questions to which Miss Christabel Pankhurst has asked him to reply.

So great has been the application for tickets for this meeting that Albert Hall, holding 10,000, could have been filled twice over.

Some seventy members of parliament will be present, and Lord Lytton M Fawcett, and Mrs. Phillip Snowden will speak.

When the anti-suffrage meeting takes place in this hall next Wednesday several members of both Houses of Parliament and their wives will be present on the platform. The speakers include Lord Cromer, Lord Curzon, and Lewis Harcourt. Each ticket holder promises not to interrupt the meeting.

WOMEN TAKE NOTICE!

A man cannot understand the torture and suffering many women endure uncomplainingly. If the majority of men suffered as much pain and endured with patience the weakening sicknesses that most women do, they would ask for immediate sympathy and look for a quick cure.

Many women have been saved from a life of misery and suffering by turning to the right remedy—Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—a remedy which is safe to take because containing no narcotics, alcohol or injurious ingredients. It is an alterative extract of roots, made with pure glycerin, and first given to the public by that famous specialist in the diseases of women—Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute of Buffalo, N. Y.

MRS. HESSHIMER.

MRS. LIZZIE M. HESSHIMER, of Lincoln, Neb., 539 "C" St., says: "I send a testimonial with much pleasure so that some suffering woman may know the true worth of your remedies. I was a great sufferer from female troubles but after taking one bottle of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, which a friend advised me to take, I found myself very much improved. After taking three more bottles, and using two boxes of Dr. Pierce's Lotion Tablets, I found myself on the road to recovery. I was in poor health for five years but now I am cured.

"I hope all women suffering from female weakness will give Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription a fair trial.

Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

TWO HUNDRED CONVICTS RUN TAXICABS IN NEW YORK

They Have Licenses Which Can Aid Them in Committing Crime, the Police Say—Machines Permit Escape—Not a Proper Business for Men with Jail Records, Police Official Declares

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—There are probably 200 licensed chauffeurs, every one of whom has a criminal record, operating taxicabs and other types of motor vehicles in the City of New York to-day. This is the substance of a statement made at Police Headquarters yesterday by one of the highest ranking officers of the department, who said that 200 was a very conservative estimate.

In an investigation into the murder of Adolph Stern, the clerk who was shot by thieves who had robbed the Jacobi jewelry store at Thirteenth Street and Sixth Avenue, the police found no less than twenty licensed

That the taxicab, as a means of "getaway," has made the detection of crimes, such as the hold-up of the East River National Bank messengers in which the thieves got away with $25,000 in cash, and the Stern murder case more difficult than ever before is the opinion of every man in the Police Department, as well as the heads of the various private detective agencies. The last report of William J. Burns to the American Bankers' Association, referring to the automobile as a means of escape, says that it has rendered the detection of crime so difficult as to furnish a subject worthy of the most careful consideration.

Within the last three weeks the police of New York have been called upon to run down the men responsible for three of the most daring hold-ups in the history of the city. The first was one in which several highwaymen held up Beckerman, the paymaster, and after robbing him of nearly $1000 in cash escaped in an automobile of the touring car type. The second was the East River National Bank case, in which the booty was $25,000, and the third the holding up of George W. Horth, the John Street jeweler, who was beaten and then robbed of $10,000, after which the highwaymen, according to Mr. Horth, jumped into a taxicab and speeded away.

When Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty said last Sunday night that the taxicab business should be rigidly supervised by the authorities, he had in mind the men with the criminal records who are now driving these cars about the city. The police know these men and their records, yet not one of them can be molested unless he is detected in the act of committing a crime, and as most of these 200 shady chauffeurs know the police, particularly those in the Detective Bureau, they are careful before committing any unlawful act to see that there are no detectives or police around.

The police officials are agreed that while a former convict has a right to try to make good in any legitimate business, he should at the same time be compelled, when his record justifies it, to engage in some business not so tempting to one of his former profession, as the taxicab business. They say that probably a few of the chauffeurs referred to are trying to be honest as taxicab drivers, but as for the rest they are convinced that they entered the business for no other purpose than to find an easy way to commit crimes and at the same time have a fairly good chance of escaping detection.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

FOR AGED PEOPLE

Old Folks Should Be Careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c. 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown Belleville.

BLANCHE RING GETS BACK $8,000 IN GEMS

Her Handbag Stolen Last October Though Her Press Agent Neve Said a Word—There was a Good Reason—Detectives Recover Jewels After Long Hunt—Purloined By Waiters from a Cafe Chair

NEW YORK, Feb. 22.—Here is a strange tale of a stage favorite and her jewels. The jewels are worth $8,000, and every one of them was stolen from her, from a string of pearls that went about the lady's tuneful throat, to a diamond-studded bracelet that fitted neatly on her arm.

And the amazing feature of the case is that there is no press agent either in the foreground or in the far distance, although in the jails of three cities there are locked up four persons charged with the theft of the jewels, and in the possession of the police of Scranton, Pittsburgh and Boston, are nearly, if not quite all, the missing gems.

The stage luminary who lost the jewels is Miss Blanche Ring. The persons arrested on the charge of taking them have confessed their guilt, according to advices received yesterday at the office of the Burns Detective Agency in this city. They are John Gillain, captain of waiters in the Casey Hotel in Scranton, Penn., and his wife, and Robert Conn, a waiter in the same hotel, and his wife. All are negroes. Conn and his wife were taken into custody in Pittsburgh, while Mrs. Gillain was arrested in Boston, where she had gone with the bulk of the looted gems, it is declared for the purpose of disposing of them. Her arrest occurred before she had accomplished her purpose, and the Burns agency announces that most of the jewelry was found upon her person. The rest was found in Pittsburgh and Scranton.

A Burns agency man, who, by way of allaying suspicions that a press agent might be involved, was willing to show a $1,000 check from Miss Ring, made out as a retaining fee last October, told of the loss of the precious jewels and the quest for them that ended yesterday in success.

"Last October," he said, "we received word that a handbag containing jewelry had been lifted from a chair in the rathskeller of the Hotel Casey, in Scranton, while Miss Blanche Ring was eating an after-theatre supper. The handbag was one in which she invariably carried her jewels, as she had made it a rule never to trust them to any maid, or leave them at any time out of her possession.

"Blanche Ring's husband, Frederick E. McKay, warned us not to let out anything about the story, because he said he was a newspaper man and he knew what the craft would say—he said he was ashamed to face them with such a story.

"We sent some men to Scranton. The job required negro operators. For one month, for two months we worked without a single clue. No waiter left his job and no waiter showed any sudden affluence. Then one day the captain of waiters quarreled with a waiter. The tongue of the waiter was loosened and he said he had seen the captain of waiters work a chair substitution game in which the wraps of Blanche Ring had been skilfully moved from one chair to another, leaving the handbag on the first chair.

"We began to watch the captain of waiters. Some of his women friends began to wear small diamonds which they said he had given them.

"Then we heard of another waiter who had also seen the substitution trick worked, and we found he was about to take a new job in Pittsburgh We covered him there, and his wife was found quite gorgeous with jewelry. He was sore; dead sore, at the captain of waiters, because the latter, he said, hadn't split even after his demand to be in on it, on account of seeing the trick worked.

"Simultaneous arrests were made in Scranton and Pittsburgh and in Boston, to which point we traced Mrs. Gillain. Conn, we found out, didn't know about that portion of the jewels that had been sent to Boston and were recovered there. They were the portion held out on him.

"In the saloon of Martin Burke, usually known as Pat Burke, in Fulton Street, Pittsburgh, we found a rope of pearls which had been pawned with him for $5. He suspected it was worth $50. It was actually worth $1,400.

"Conn confessed first, after we had told him about the big collection of jewels found up in Boston, and then it was only a matter of a little time until the captain of waiters confessed also. They had no idea they were making a rich haul when the chair-shifting trick was worked. They knew there was a handbag in sight, but expected they would capture only a little change, or maybe, a few bills of small denomination."

Cramps at Night Require Prompt Remedy

AGONIZING PAIN PREVENTED BY KEEPING NERVILINE HANDY ON THE SHELF.

A CASE IN POINT ILLUSTRATED.

Deadly cramps—the symptoms are not to be mistaken. Suddenly and without warning the patient experiences such agony in the stomach as to contort the countenance and cause him to cry aloud for help.

Then it is that the wonderful power of Nerviline can make itself felt—it cures so quickly.

"Last summer I was stricken with a frightful attack of cramps. I feared the pain in my stomach would kill me.

"My eyes bulged out and the veins in my forehead stood out like whipcord.

My cries attracted a neighbor, who came to my assistance, and in a moment or two handed me a teaspoonful of Nerviline in a little sweetened water.

"It seemed as if an angel had charmed away the pain. In ten seconds I was well. Nerviline has a wonderful name in this locality, and is considered the best for diarrhoea, flatulence, cramps, stomach and bowel disorders. I urge all my friends to use Nerviline.

"MANLEY M. LEGARDE,

MAN AND WIFE SENT TO PRISON

Rawdon Couple who Assaulted Bailiff and Constable were Heavily Punished

Yesterday afternoon, before Judge Fraleck, Mr. and Mrs. John Mack, of Rawdon Township, were arraigned on two serious charges, namely interfering with a bailiff in the discharge of his duties, also assaulting the bailiff and a constable who accompanied him. The evidence against the accused was such as, His Honor said, he could not do otherwise than find them both guilty. Bailiff Jones, of Marmora, was authorized to make a seizure of chattels belonging to Mack to cover a judgment, and while endeavoring to do so, with a County Constable, was assaulted. Mack used a pitchfork in endeavoring to drive the parties off his place, and when that was taken from him his wife came to his assistance with an axe and gave it to her husband. With this weapon he made an effort to strike, but was prevented. His Honor said, in giving judgment and sentence, that it was a painful duty, but he was compelled to do it. Mack and his wife gave testimony in their own behalf, denying they intended any harm. The sentence upon the woman was four months in jail and upon the man was six months at hard labor in the Central Prison. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown, the accused being undefended.

NEW ZEALAND BUTTER BROUGHT TO TORONTO

Importation is Because of the Shortage of Production in this Province—U. S. Prices Drop, Supply from there Now.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Is Toronto to experience a famine of butter as it did of coal?

Some idea of the local shortage may be gleaned from Mr. T. J. Medland's statement to The Star this morning that on Saturday last only a fraction of the orders placed could be filled. The demand exceeded the supply. For instance, where 50 pounds was ordered 10 pounds was delivered; where 10 pounds was ordered 5 pounds was supplied.

He attributed the shortage to the shortage of fodder. "The fields produced only 50 per cent. of the milk they usually do," was his way of putting it.

Mr. A. R. Willard, of Willard and Co., stated that the shortage was unprecedented, but he hoped by importation from the States to meet the demand without any further increase in prices. Butter has dropped in price from 5c. to 7c. per pound in the States, as there is an apparent surplus over there. Up to recently their prices have been prohibitive and as a result large shipments have been imported from New Zealand, he said.

From Wm. Ryan and Co., it was learned that for three or four weeks the storage butter supply has been exhausted, and that as the farmers within a 20-mile radius cannot supply 10 per cent. of Toronto's consumption at present in either butter or eggs, extensive importtaions are being made. The reduction in the price of American butter will probably shut off any further importations from New Zealand.

Mr. H. B. Clemes, of Gunns, Limited, said that concern last week received a large importation from New Zealand and this morning are in receipt of a car load of butter from Chicago, 28,000 lbs. Never before has there been such a prolonged pronounced shortage of butter. Locally, of course, there will be no relief before the latter part of April. However, the commission merchants do not anticipate any further fluctuation in price for some time to come.

WAGED $500 WAR OVER AN $8 HOG

The "Grunter" Has Passed away, but Lawyers kept up the Interest.

HAZARD, Ky., Feb. 26.—After years of litigation involving expenses aggregating a hundred times the value of the property at stake, the locally famous "Amis-Combs hog case" being a case in which two mountain neighbors agreed to submit their differences to a jury has resulted in a "dog fall" in the circuit court. The hog in the case was valued at $8 at the beginning of the suit, but is now deceased. The court costs amount to a trifle over $500, besides the attorneys' fees. Two verdicts have been awarded at different times and the last action was concerning the costs. The court decided that each side should bear its own.

MOTHER SAVED FOUR, THEN DIED IN FIRE

Went Back to Rescue Two Remaining Children When Floor Gave Way.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Feb. 26.—A woman named Mesea, who had made a heroic effort to save her six children was burned to death along with two of her offspring in Luzerne borough early to-day when their home was completely destroyed.

The mother was alone with the children. She rushed for help and entered the burning frame dwelling four times. On three of the trips she rescued four of the children. One child, a boy of six years, she threw from a second storey window, and his leg was broken. The fourth time the mother rushed back into the flames to bring out the two remaining children the floor gave way, and the woman and the two children were carried down in the debris.

FLAGS HELD TRAIN TO TRACK.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Feb. 26.—While Peter Bintzer, 60 years old, was pinned to a railroad track by a huge piece of ice, his son, a night operator at Perkasie, gave an express the open track, being ignorant of his father's danger, but as the train bore down upon his helpless parent, the latter managed to relight his lantern and flag the train.

The father is a watchman employed by the Philadelphia & Reading Railway. In the Perkasie tunnel he had been in the habit of cutting the ice from the walls when no train was due to pass over the tracks. He entered the tunnel just after midnight and worked at the ice until after two o'clock. He had reached the entrance of the tunnel to return to his watch house when a cake of ice weighing several hundred pounds fell from the ceiling, crushing him to the tracks.

A lantern which he carried was dashed to the ground and the flame extinguished. Alone in the darkness, he fought desperately to free himself, but could not move. As the time for the 3.20 train drew near, the man renewed his struggles, moving his body slightly until he was able to grasp the lantern. Then started another fight to get a match from his pocket. Finally he was successful, lighting the red lantern and placing it on the track as a warning just in time to flag the train. He was lifted from the tracks by the train crew and carried to his home in Perkasie, where he is suffering from serious internal injuries.

C. N. R. OTTAWA LINE TO BAY OF QUINTE

The Canadian Northern Toronto-Ottawa line, which is now in operation as far as Trenton, and to Belleville for freight, has been further completed to Deseronto, where connection has been made with the Bay of Quinte Railway. This latter road is now absorbed by the Canadian Northern system, and consequently Canadian Northern trains can run as far as Sydenham, the eastern terminus of the Bay of Quinte road.

A freight service from Toronto along the new road as far as Sydenham will be inaugurated on Wednesday next, and the C.N.R. is accepting freight to all Bay of Quinte parts This will be the first time that there has been competition for the freight service from Toronto to the Bay of Quinte Railway. The C.N.R. passenger service is not likely to be extended further than Trenton for a couple of months.

$10,000 GEMS IN SUIT CASE.

The police found a dress suit case this afternoon containing about $10,000 worth of stolen jewelry in a house at Fifteenth and Brown Streets, where it had been left by Frank Gallagher, a prisoner in Moyamensing, awaiting trial on a charge of shooting a man.

Gallagher was identified this morning by several residents of Germantown, who declared that they saw him in their neighborhood just before their homes had been broken into. Gallagher admitted that he was the man and said he had left the suit case in the care of a blind uncle.

The police have arrested Albert Mayer and charged him with being a member of the burglar's gang.

TOBACCO-GROWING IN PRINCE EDWARD CC

PICTON, Feb. 26.—Tobacco-growing has passed the experimental stage in Prince Edward county by long strides. To-day shipments of the leaf went out totalling fifty-two tons. The seven acres grown this year have realized $1 000. Buyers paid eleven and three-quarters to twelve and one-half cents per pound for the leaf. Land in the county that has become so well adapted to canning factory produce has proven excellent for tobacco. One man made $209 from a three-quarters-acre plant ing. The farmers say after the experiment they prefer the growing of tobacco to tomato growing, and that there is more money in it. A representative of the Imperial Tobacco Company, who was in town looking after the shipment says that Essex and Kent county farmers were paid $1,250,000, for this

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

INFANT DEAD.

Pearl Moy, three months old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Moy, of Ameliasburgh, died last night.

PETER CALLAGHAN BURIED.

Many were in attendance this morning at the funeral of the late Peter Callaghan, which took place from his uncle's residence, Mr. Peter Cody. Services were held at St. Michael's church, conducted by Rev. Father Killeen. Upon the casket were placed a number of mass cards. The remains were placed in the Belleville cemetery vault. The bearers were S. Lapalm, T. E. Whalen, R. Arnott, F. Goyer, E. Shortts and H. Blaind.

CHANGE IN PROGRAMME.

At a large meeting of the Committee of management, the faculty, and the students of Albert College, held at the College Monday afternoon, it was decided to make the conversazione this year on March 8th of an unusual character. It is expected that a number of prominent persons will be in attendance from out of the city. The mayor of the city, aldermen, the chairman and members of the School Board and many prominent citizens will be invited. It will be quite a unique event in connection with the College.

Y. M. C. A. CAMPAIGN.

A large number of the members of the teams who are canvassing for subscriptions for the new Y. M. C. A. building, partook of luncheon at noon to-day in the building. The reports presented were of an encouraging nature. The eleven teams reported that since noon yesterday subscriptions to the amount of $2,669.50 had been received. The amount thus far secured is over $4,000 and the prospects are that if $8,000 as required is not subscribed it will near that amount. The canvassers are by no means discouraged in their work, but on the contrary are full of vim and expectacy.

ALL IS QUIET.

In police circles everything is exceptionally quiet at present. The only occupants of the cells for the past few days have been tramps.

TAKEN TO KINGSTON.

Brigadier R. Coulson, of "B" Battery, Kingston, came to this city last evening and escorted deserter Chrales Nelson back to the barracks in the Limestone City.

ANOTHER TIE-UP

The railways are once more suffering from snow and gales. Yesterday's storm was much more severe west than it was here, and in consequence all freight trains on the Grand Trunk were cancelled last night. Passenger trains from the west were to-day behind time.

CONGREGATIONAL MEETING.

The Sunday School rooms of the Tabernacle Church last evening contained a happy and optimistic gathering. It was the occasion of the annual congregational meeting when the reports of the various departments of the work were presented for the information and consideration of the congregation. While the people were gathering in out of the severe storm the splendid orchestra created an atmosphere of welcome and good cheer by their inspiring music. The pastor called the meeting to orler and called for nominations to the chair. The Rev. Amos Campbell was the unanimous choice and presided in his own happy maner. Throughout the various reports the spirit of optimism prevailed. Vocal and instrumental numbers enlivened the programme. During the evening the vote on Church Union was taken. The result was practically unanimous for union. But as the total membership of some five hundred members are to vote on the question the figures will not be announced until all have voted. The League served refreshments.

UNIQUE EVENT IN HASTINGS' HISTORY

No Business for the High Court With Jury—Judge Did Not Put On His Gown

A circumstance, unique in the history of Hastings County, occurred today. This was the date set for the opening of the Spring Assizes and the judge was the Hon. Mr. Britton. Only two non-jury cases were entered upon the docket and these were laid over until another court.

The grand and petit jurors who were summoned were notified not to attend, as there was no business for them.

His Lordship signed a couple of documents which constituted the court's proceedings. No remarks were made by His Lordship.

The two non-jury cases laid over were as follows:

Emerson v. City of Belleville—An action for damages for injuries sustained while working for the city. Messrs. Porter & Carnew for plaintiff; W. C. Mikel, K.C., for defendants.

Rensley v. Cooley—An action about property. Mr. W. C. Mikel, K. C., for plaintiff; Mr. A. A. Abbott for defendant.

SAVAGELY ATTACKED LAWYER

MONTREAL, Feb. 25.—Maurice Alexander, a partner of Arnold Wainwright the young lawyer who acted for Mrs. Herbert in the recent suit, was assaulted by Abraham Lincoln Pacaud, who is now under arrest.

Pacaud was swearing out a warrant for the arrest of some prominent financiers, who, he said, had swindled him when Mr. Alexander entered the room in his lawyer's gown.

Pacaud made a savage attack on him and knocked him down. It took the combined efforts of five men to drag Pacaud off.

It is understood he thought Mr. Alexander was a judge. When placed in the cells Pacaud started to fight with the other prisoners.

JAMES BROWNLEE.

A telegram from Kenora yesterday says: "Mr. James Brownlee, Superintendent of this division of the C.P.R., passed away at his residence here after a week's illness. Mr. Brownlee had been in ill-health owing to throat trouble for some time, but had been able to continue his duties until a week ago. Mr. Brownlee, who was a native of Belleville, was transferred to this division about a year and a half ago from Moose Jaw, where he held a similar position." Mr. Brownlee was a brother of Mrs. Stephen A. Lazier, of this city, and was widely known and deservedly popular here. His many friends will learn with much regret of his untimely demise.

FOR AGED PEOPLE.

Old Folks should Be careful in Their Selection of Regulative Medicine

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Three sizes, 10c. 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown Belleville.

MEANS TROUBLE FOR THE BEAR

The Oddest Animal of Nature is the Porcupine and His Darts are the Most Deadly Fighting Weapons on Record.

Although the notion that the porcupine defends itself by shooting its quills to a distance — like arrows — was long ago exploded, few persons know how really dangerous and even fatal quite commonly are these same curious weapons with which one of the oldest of all the mammals is provided by Nature.

Anybody who takes the trouble to examine a dead porcupine will be surprised to find how slight is the attachment of the quills to the skin on the creature's back. They come away readily in the hand when a little pull is given; and this, indeed, as will presently be seen, is a very important feature of this peculiar defensive equipment namely the looseness and ready detachability thereof.

Though the porcupine is not able to throw its quills, it can inflict most deadly damage upon an adversary by the merest contact. It is a creature native to mountainous parts of the United States in northern latitudes and the foes it has to fear are chiefly bears, big cats and other such formidable carnivora.

Each individual quill borne by the porcupine — naturalists say that they are modified hairs — is not only as sharp as a needle at the point but formidably barbed. On this account, if one of them is stuck by chance into the flesh of a human being it cannot be withdrawn, but must be cut out — the only alternative being to push the quill clear through and pull it out on the other side if the wounded part be an arm or a leg.

Unfortunately a bear or a lynx has no surgical resort in an event of the kind; and consequently, if it carries off half a dozen quills in its hide as a memorial of an encounter with a porcupine, trouble soon follows.

With every movement of the animal the quills make their way into the flesh more deeply. If one of them happens in its progress to strike a bone it will turn up along the latter and pursue its course remorselessly. Eventually the quills may work their way out, but the chances are greater that they will reach a vital part and, after inflicting prolonged suffering, cause the death of the victim.

Men keep best in a cool dry atmosphere, if you will remember that fact it may save you some trouble in the years to come.

FRENCH POSTAL BANKS.

People of France More Provident than Anglo-Saxons.

The record of the postal savings bank system in France has been one of continued progress. In 1882, when this institution was established, the total number of postal banks in operation was 6024, with 211,580 deposit accounts remaining open at the close of the year. These accounts, including interest due to depositors, amounted to $9,187,116, the average sum of the deposits being $43.41. On December 31, 1909, the latest year for which complete statistics are available, the number of banks had increased by nearly 2,000, the deposit accounts numbered 5,642,882, and the deposits, including interest, represented an aggregate amount of $316,456,866, averaging $37.06.

The expenses of administration during 1909 amounted to $1,504,678 and the net profits to $526,786. It may be recalled that individual accounts are limited by law to 1500 francs ($289.50). When an account exceeds this the surplus is invested by the bank in national bonds. The total value of the bonds purchased in 1909 was $2,080,575. The withdrawals, including these purchases, amounted to $104,916,150.

CONNAUGHT WILL CONTINUE

One of the first public men to associate themselves with the Co-partnership in Housing Movement was Earl Grey, and it was at his request that Mr. Henry Vivian came to Canada last year to inaugurate a similar movement here. It is, therefore, appropriate that now he is returning to England the first public welcome should be that of the Co-partnership tenants. The returning Governor-General of Canada has promised to attend a dinner they are arranging in his honour at the Holborn Restaurant, London, early in November. The Duke of Connaught will continue his work for co-partnership in the Dominion. Viscount Howick, the son of Earl Grey, is also an enthusiast on housing reform.

School Boys' Murdered Master.

New York, Feb. 16.—A cable from Dublin say: Eight school boys were arrested yesterday charged with the murder of John Kelly, assistant master of an industrial school in County Meath.

The boys, it is alleged, waylaid Kelly while he was making his rounds Monday night and beat him to death with sticks.

NOTICE.

The report has been circulated that the LONDON MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE CO. will in future act as a tariff company. We wish to contradict this statement and advise the public that the business assets of the LONDON MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE CO., have been incorporated with the MIDLAND and TEXTILE INSURANCE CO., of London, England. The name of the LONDON MUTUAL FIRE INSURANCE CO., will not be changed in any way, or the present organization or Policy of the Company interfered with, and the LONDON MUTUAL will continue to do "Mutual" business and act as a non-tariff Company at the same rates as hitherto. This new connection will add to the already large assets of the London Mutual, and will give still greater security to its many policyholders in this district, where this Company has been doing business for 53 years.

ELECTRICITY MAKES CHICKENS GROW

Remarkable Results of Recent Experiments in England.

Electricity applied to agriculture is no new thing, but an ingenious Englishman recently conceived the idea of applying it to the cultivation of chickens, and the results, he asserts, are remarkable.

It is a scientist of reputation that made this experiment—T. Thorne Baker, The Daily Mirror's scientific expert, who not long ago visited the United States. He has been experimenting with twenty-four young chickens, all of which were exactly the same weight when they came under his care.

Twelve of the birds he placed in a Hearson "foster-mother" and these were allowed to grow in the ordinary way. The other twelve were placed in a "foster-mother" in which the perches are wires, and through these wires 5,000 volts of electricity are passed every day. So powerful is the current which passes to the electric "foster-mother" that sparks fly out to one's finger when it is put near the perches.

Mr. Baker decided upon a test to prove which of the chickens had thriven the most. In appearance the twelve electric chickens were obviously larger and more healthy looking than the other twelve. Four birds from each "foster-mother" were taken out haphazard and carefully weighed. The reason given for the exceptionally light electric chicken (No. 2 in the following table) is that the bigger birds took away its food. Here are the figures:

Electric chickens—	Ounces
No. 1.	12.595
No. 2.	11.395
No. 3.	12.665
No. 4.	14.765

Average weight, 12.855 ounces.

Ordinary chickens	Ounces
No. 1.	8.770
No. 2.	14.275
No. 3.	11.045
No. 4.	10.415

Average weight, 11.129 ounces.

In other words, the "electric" chickens have grown over fifteen per cent. heavier than the ordinary birds. The heavy weight of the second non-electric chicken—14 ounces 8 gms.—is accounted for by the fact that Mr. Baker specially selected it from the brood as noticeably plumper than the rest. In weighing the birds a curious thing was noticed in the demeanor of the electric and non-electric chickens. Those which had been under the high-frequency treatment remained perfectly calm and sedate when Mr. Baker placed them on the scales. Not so the ordinary fowls. They squawked and kicked violently when taken out of their foster-mother, and when on the scales they blinked their eyes and opened their beaks in fright. The electric chickens, on the other hand, were quite placid and confident, and ready to peck anybody that interfered with them.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

MADAME SHERRY.

The programme of "Madame Sherry," the latest Lederer musical attraction, produced by Lederer in partnership with A. H. Woods and H. H. Frazee, describes the piece as French Vaudeville, which means, as Lederer explains it, a form of musical play where all songs and all the comic business are direct issues from the story, and not, as in the common or garden variety of native musical comedy, mostly introduced matter, regardless of any assimilative qualities the introduction may possess. "Madame Sherry" will be played here by the New York New Amsterdam Theatre Company on Friday, March 1st, at Griffin's Opera House for one performance

Artificial Snails.

It is astonishing how often it is that one hears of strange and secret processes through what is virtually the vagaries of that blind goddess, Chance. An instance of this occurred in France a week or so ago, when a workman brought an action against his employer to recover damages for a finger that had been mutilated in one of the machines. Then in the examination that followed the fact came out that the factory in question was engaged in the manufacture of artificial snails. It appears that the shells are bought by the firm in question from the dustmen and rag-pickers, and, after being cleaned, are filled with "lights" or cats' meat, the soft flesh being cut into corkscrew form to fit the shell by a skilfully-designed machine. The top is then sealed with liquid fat, and the escargot is ready for the consumer. The artificial snails have a ready sale in Paris and other French towns, and are presumably sold as the genuine article. One wonders what the opinion of many epicures of this delicacy is now that they have discovered the method by which their favourite dish is sometimes manufactured.

Hebrews Excluded.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—The private bills committee yesterday agreed that, in divorcing Queen's University from the Presbyterian Church, and making it a national institution, Christianity should be the religious test. In so doing, the committee set aside the objections of numerous Hebrew bodies who claimed the clause was calculated to exclude their race from professorships, though the university is declared to be national.

President Gordon told the committee that Queen's had always been Christian, but now was becoming non-denominational. Judicial judgments in England, in the United States and in Ontario upheld Christianity as of the common law of the country.

Edmund Bristol declared that the principle of the bill was to graft on to a state university a religious test eliminated a hundred years ago from Oxford and Cambridge. The trustees did not want it nor did anyone save a few theological professors.

The amendment by Mr. Robb (Huntingdon), to remove the religious test, but to retain the distinctive Christianity definition, was defeated and the claused passed unamended.

New Railway Planned.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—A new railway project was introduced to Parliament through the Senate yesterday. The company has a transcontinental name, but only a Montreal to James Bay route.

Senator Beigue introduced a bill to incorporate the Montreal Transcontinental Railway Co. with a capital of $3,000,000, head offices in Montreal, and authority to build from Montreal northerly or northwesterly through the Counties of Hochelaga, Maisonneuve, Laval, Terrebonne, Two Mountains, Argenteuil, Montcalm, Labelle, Wright or Pontiac and to connect with the National Transcontinental or the Grand Trunk Pacific at or near Grand Lake, in Quebec.

Boiled for Preference.

French poulterers belive in boiling the grain. It is put in a pan of water and boiled until soft enough to be easily bruised between the fingers. It is claimed that four pints of oats boiled will fill a pint measure 10 times, four pints of buckwheat boiled will fill a pint measure 14 times four pints of corn (maize) boiled will fill a pint measure 15 times, four pints of wheat boiled will a pint measure 10 times, and four points of rye boiled will fill a pint measure 15 times.

Toronto Girl In Suit.

New York, Feb. 27.—While three instances of misconduct with two other women are alleged in the complaint of Mrs. Breen, the chief co-respondent named is Maude Diehl, a telephone operator of a Toronto hotel.

A detective testified concerning two cases of alleged misconduct on the part of Breen, one at Cobourg, Ont., and the other at Peterboro, Ont. Breen was also charged with having been with Miss Diehl in a Toronto hotel.

Miss Diehl admitted the truth of the detective's testimony concerning her having dined with Breen and gone to his room. She said that there was no impropriety.

Mrs. Helen Lockrie, wife of another detective, testified that the next day Breen said to her:

"It's pretty bad. I expected to get a bunch of money from those people (meaning the Crokers), but I guess it's all off now."

The case goes on to-day.

Married as a Joke.

Winnipeg, Feb. 27.—It developed yesterday that the seventeen-year-old girl who, under the name of Ida Belle Russell, married George E. Watson, a well-to-do bachelor of Winnipeg, last week and left him within an hour, was Miss Dorothy Rogers, of 600 Corrydon avenue. Her father is a well-known civil engineer and did not suspect his daughter was the girl whose curious wedding has filled the local papers.

The girl claims she did it as a joke, corresponding with Watson as the result of a matrimonial advertisement. She left him in a department store en route from the minister's place. As the girl is under age, an effort will be made to have the marriage nullified.

Lunatic In British Commons.

London, Feb. 27.—A sensation was caused among the members of the House of Commons last evening by an individual dressed in clerical garb who called himself the "Messiah," discharging several shots from a revolver toward the ceiling in the lobby.

The stranger was sitting in the outer lobby, when he suddenly opened fire, causing a stampede among the members.

The man was arrested and removed, shouting, "Hands off the Messiah."

Train Struck Sleigh.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 27.—A sleigh driven by Joseph White was struck by a Michigan Central passenger train at Erie avenue crossing yesterday. The driver escaped by jumping.

Brantford, Feb. 27.—"Good-bye, dont' worry, John," is the message which John Drake of Arthur street is said to have received from his wife who disappeared from her home on Saturday last.

Drake has asked the police to search for her, and it is alleged an elopement has taken place with an Ingersoll man who was a boarder at the Drake house for some time.

Drake left for that town yesterday in an endeavor to locate his wife.

"Yes," said Diogenes, "I've quit looking for an honest man. I'm hunting a fountain pen that won't ink your fingers."

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —
JOHN MARCH
(AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

He spoke with the energy of a man who believed implicitly in what he said, and she was touched by the sincerity of his every tone and gesture, and the earnest appeal in his great dark eyes.

"You think that, however much it goes against the grain, I ought to go to Anthony and tell him I am willing to be engaged to him?"

"I am quite certain you ought. It's the only road by which you will ever travel to happiness."

She laid her arm on the chimney-piece, and let her forehead rest on it.

"It's not a pleasant thing to do," she whispered.

"Life is not always pleasant with its thousand pressing claims and duties; we cannot have the crown without the cross; we cannot expect to enter even Paradise without a shudder. Don't dwell on the cold breathless plunge, but rather the tranquil floating on the sun-kissed waves."

"I won't," she said, looking up at him through unshed, penitent tears. "I'll do as you wish. I'll tell Anthony that I shall be—thankful for his love."

He caught her hands and kissed them.

"Thank you," he said, a glad light in his eyes, "you have lifted a burden from my heart. All along I have felt more or less responsible for the happiness of you both, and at times the weight has been only what I could just manage to carry."

"I am sorry, dreadfully sorry. I'm a sinful, selfish girl, and you've been so kind, so patient and generous."

"Not at all," he said, stepping over the shiny folds of her gown to open the door.

"Do you think Anthony will refuse me?" she asked, suddenly turning back.

"'Tis possible," he answered gravely looking askant at her, and then, breaking into a soft laugh, he shook his forefinger at her and whispered—"Oh, woman, thy name is vanity!"

CHAPTER VIII.
A Tragedy

The Manor parlor was a low, studded room panelled with dark wood, having a large, high chimney-piece artistically set round with Dutch tiles. The carpet, originally of rich texture and coloring, was now so worn that the once brilliant pattern had faded to an almost indistinguishable hue.

In one corner stood an old harpsichord, a treasured relic, belonging in bygone years to Squire Fleming's grandmother when a girl in her teens. Sometimes in the Squire's solitary evenings his fancy had planted a slim figure on the spindle-legged stool, and out of the gloom would grow a bunch of powdered ringlets, a low-necked, short-waisted frock, with twinkling feet in sandaled shoes, and as often as not sweet, quaint, melancholy music thrilled and vibrated along the low-ceiled passage ways. The dusk was looming upward in the corners of the room, casting a dark, grey shade over the oil paintings of dead and gone Flemings. The tall furniture and the old spinet had already lost the distinctness of their outline; they were slowly vanishing ghost-like into oblivion. Felix Fleming was sitting by the open glass doors leaning forward in an upholstered wicker chair with one foot in the room and the other on the stone steps leading to the garden, watching the twilight deepen and the shadows gather about the fruit trees.

"What a good world we live in!" he exclaimed, taking his briar pipe from between his lips and combing his moustache with its amber mouthpiece; "what a good and beautiful world! I never watched the coming of a more glorious evening! Look at the icy-blue starlight through the pear trees, Mr. Farley, and that flush of crimson yonder from the west!"

Paul leaned forward, his elbows on his knees, a cigarette held daintily between a finger and thumb, and let his dark eyes feast upon the handsome face opposite to him, paled and etherealized by the last rays of lingering daylight—a strong face full of wise thought, of innate love for all things pure and of good report.

"I never felt so near happiness as I do at this moment," he continued, plucking one of the pale blush roses clustering about the window and giving it to Agnes, who stood behind his chair with one hand on his broad shoulder. "Here's something smaller and suitable for a button-hole," he added, tossing a half-open bud across to his friend.

For all after-time the faint delicate perfume of a pale pink autumn rose brought to Paul Farley's mind a sudden vivid picture of the quaint dusty parlor, of Agnes in her white dress and coronet of bronze gold hair, and the handsome manly figure of Felix smoking peacefully in the twilight.

"This dewy freshness, this juvenescence in the atmosphere, seems to moisten my heart," he said, with a quiet laugh. "I had almost forgotten how youthful I am still."

"You are young," Paul said, emitting thin blue rings of smoke which circled and curled above his head: "the first flush of youth has passed into early prime, the most perfect portion of a man's life."

"Our first youth is no value," he answered; "we are not conscious of it until it is gone."

"I believe that," Paul said. "I believe a later period, what one might term our second youth, is happier, deeper and richer by far."

"I suspect a second youth, a real aftermath, only comes with some great heart-joy such as a late autumn love, or—perhaps to crown some other grand festival in one's life."

"Yes, and the gods will envy a woman crowned by such an aftermath."

"Heaven and all its angels bless the woman who thinks the same," Felix said, knocking the ashes from his pipe. "Agnes child," he added suddenly, "don't you think it's time we had a light?"

She touched the bell-pull, and Rose Pilgrim entered with a lamp and set it on a massive black walnut [illegible] in the centre of the room. Involuntarily Paul's great searching eyes went across to her. He felt a certain interest in the girl on account of her association with the Larches and little Guy Wycherly. She was not, he discovered, particularly young looking, but comely enough in a fair red-and-white plump way. Their eyes met and Rose blushed a deep red, which suffused her whole face from brow to chin, then slowly receding left her exceedingly pale.

"Rose is all confusion at being brought unexpectedly face to face with her sweetheart's handiwork," Felix laughed in answer to his puzzled questioning look when the door had closed behind the woman.

"I don't quite understand," he said.

"Why, Denham is courting Rose Pilgrim, and Rose is a friend of Mrs. Radler at the Popinjay."

"Mon Dieu!" he said in consternation. "You don't mean that a nice-looking, respectable person like Rose will deliberately, of her own free will, tie herself to that drunken blackguard"

"Yes, I do," Felix said, "and very pleased and thankful she'll be. A man and a cottage is the goal of these country girls' aspirations. A young woman in a poor cottage with half a dozen children down with diphtheria, and a violent brute of a husband spending most of his earnings in drink, would deem herself lucky to have eluded a few years of solid, respectable service. Such is the calibre of the bucolic mind!"

"Don't you think," Paul asked, looking at the glowing end of his cigarette, "that the reason women more especially those of the vast middle-class, are compelled to look on marriage as a means of livelihood, a sort of life insurance, because of the cheap stamp placed upon their work? Men never are, never can be fair judges of a woman's capabilities; they smile or sneer, each according to his individual cheerful or splenetic temperament, while the world at large, absorbed in its stereotyped cut-and-dried definition of things, never dreams of taking them or their doings seriously."

"A man," Felix said smiling, "can rarely disassociate the magnetism of sex and the personal charm of the worker from the quality of work done. There have been and are I will own, a few exceptional women who have competed for some sort of success or fame in the world's arena and come away with a laurel wreath. Still, Farley, taking the race, I honestly believe the woman to be man's inferior both mentally and physically. She is the weaker vessel, an after thought, designed for a helpmate, not a bread-winner; she was formed for the domesticity, not the publicity of life; she was constitutionally created to be in subjection to man, and therefore her modesty, her deportment, and her color of mind should match the divine intention."

"But look at the thousands of women, sir, who are, whom adverse circumstances have compelled to be, bread-winners."

"God, help them! Yes, there are millions, but, Farley, I am not saying a woman cannot or should not work. Both Adam and Eve toiled, but he delved and she span. She did not filch the spade. We have it on good authority that she worked, and was useful in her day and generation, but within the limits the Creator set when he moulded her."

"Have you ever met a really clever up-to-date University woman?" Paul asked.

"No, I have not," he returned with a laugh, "and I very much doubt whether I want to."

"Why?" he asked, "would you be jealous of the virility of that little grey mass of matter commonly called the brain?"

(To be Continued.)

Hundreds of such letters from mothers expressing their gratitude for what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished for their daughters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company, Lynn, Mass.

PUBLIC IN THE DARK

No News Yet of Result of Intervention in Coal Strike.

The British Government Has Secured the Consent of the Miners' Executive to Be Present at a Conference But Already the Strike Has Begun In Several Places — Owners Persuaded to Yield, Says Rumor.

London, Feb. 27.—On the eve of the resumption of the conference between Premier Asquith and other Cabinet Ministers and the miners' representatives, which marked the most critical stage of the Government's efforts to avert a coal strike throughout the United Kingdom, the nation is kept actually in the dark as to what has been accomplished in the direction of securing peace since the negotiations opened on Feb. 22. On that date the miners' delegates informed the Premier that they were powerless to agree to anything, or to assume any responsibility, until authorization had been obtained from the miners' federation, which meets to-day in London. As a consequence, the subsequent conferences have been with the coal owners alone.

It was announced last night, however, that the executive of the miners' federation had decided to recommend to the conference the acceptance of the Premier's invitation to meet him and his colleagues and discuss the situation. This invitation was extended to the miners' representatives on Feb. 22, by the Premier, who asked that a committee be appointed from the national federation to hear the whole subject of the controversy, with the Cabinet Ministers.

The conference yesterday lasted two hours, but, conforming to the rule, which has been rigidly observed, with respect to all previous meetings, the official report given out contained not the slightest hint as to what transpired. In the meantime, the strike was actually begun.

A few thousand miners employed in the Derbyshire district ceased work at noon. To-day several thousand more notices expire, and it is not likely that the miners will consent to work until Thursday night, the date fixed for the general strike. On Wednesday 100,000 miners can desert the pits on notices already handed in.

A hopeful feature of the crisis is the absence of incitement to violence on the part of the leaders of the men. No objections have been raised to the employers securing the necessary labor to keep the pits open during the strike. Even in South Wales, where the controversy has been the bitterest, this arrangement has been made and the South Wales' Miners' Federation issued an appeal last night to the men not to go to the colliery premises and to abstain from doing damage in event of a strike.

Unless the owners agree to concede a minimum wage, on which the miners of all sections are inflexible, a national strike would seem inevitable, but there is undoubtedly an optimistic feeling abroad that the Government practically has succeeded in persuading the owners to yield for a few months at least. It is believed in some quarters that the Government has undertaken to reimburse them, if yielding on this important point results in any loss, but it is all a matter of surmise.

The Liberal morning papers anticipate a speedy settlement and an avoidance of a coal strike. The Chronicle believes that the trouble will be settled by Friday. The Daily News hints that unless the owners consent to the principle of a minimum wage the Government will quickly pass a minimum wage bill through Parliament.

THE BEEHIVE CHARLES N. SULMAN

Four Suspects Arrested.

New York, Feb. 27.—Edward Kinsman, alias Collins, who described himself as a prizefighter and a restaurant waiter, was locked up in the Tombs last night, charged with being the principal in the recent robbery of two East River National Bank messengers of $25,000 on the afternoon of Feb. 15. The robbery occurred in the heart of the financial district, while the bank messengers were traveling in a taxicab with $25,000 cash from the Planters' Exchange Bank. Five men participated in the hold-up.

Kinsman, the alleged principal, another man and two women, were arrested at the Grand Central Station late yesterday afternoon as they were about to board a train for Chicago.

Jail Warden Dismissed.

Ottawa, Feb. 24.—Oscar Beauchamp, warden of St. Vincent de Paul Penitentiary for many years, has been dismissed for alleged lax administration.

G. S. Malepart, accountant at the penitentiary, will become warden.

The Utilisation of 'Air-Gas.'

During the past few years the utilisation of air-gas for lighting, heating, and other domestic purposes has advanced considerably. Air-gas, it may be explained, is an inflammable mixture formed by the addition in very small proportions of the vapour of a highly volatile spirit such as petrol with the air. Several disadvantages of the system have developed in its use, the most noteworthy being the condensation of moisture in the pipes, which impedes the flow of the gas and produces a disconcerting flicker in the light. This drawback, however, has now been overcome by previously passing the air to be associated with the volatilised spirit over a moisture-absorbing medium such as calcium chloride. That the system in the main is reliable and efficient is proved by the increasing establishment of small installations for the lighting of the houses in small communities from a central point. Worked on such a principle, it enables the smallest and most remote village to secure the same illuminating and other conveniences as are possible to large towns with an elaborate coal-gas generating station, and at a much smaller proportionate expenditure.

Don't Talk Too Much.

When we are in the company of sensible men, we ought to be doubly cautious of talking too much, lest we lose two good things — their good opinion and our own improvement; for what we have to say we know, but what they have to say we know not.

BOUNDARY DISPUTE.

Ontario has six Cabinet Ministers in the Borden Government, but in the settlement of the boundary question Hon. Bob Rogers, from Manitoba, exercises more influence than the whole caboodle of them. He captures Port Nelson nad laughs at the idea that Ontario should have an outlet on Hudson Bay.

So says the vitriolic Hamilton Times. As a matter of fact the decision of the Government had not, up to time of writing, been announced; but it has been stated, and that, too, must be within The Times' knowledge, that the present Government have arrived at the same conclusion as did their predecessors as to delimiting the boundaries of Ontario and Manitoba.

If such be the case, our contemporary has barked up the wrong tree and vented its spleen to the confusion of its political friends; for it is evident that, if Mr. Rogers has been more influential than the six Ontario members of the Borden Government, he must either have possessed more influence with the Laurier Government than had the six members who are supposed to have represented Ontario in that organization or the gentlemen in question were traitors to the interests of Ontario. The Times has the choice of impaling itself on either horn of the dilemma.

The Ministers who, taking The Times' dictum for it, misrepresented Ontario in the Laurier Government when the boundary question was considered by them, were: Sir Richard Cartwright, Mr. Charles Murphy, Sir Allen B. Aylesworth, Mr. George P. Graham, Mr. Wm. Paterson and Mr. W. L. M. King. They, if any one, are those with whom The Times must settle accounts.

U. S. CRIMINAL JUSTICE

Complaint against the lax manner in which criminal justice is administered in the United States has been made these many years, and certainly not without cause.

There was one murder on an average every 34 hours last year in New York city, or 257 murders in all. In 70 of the larger cities in the United States there were 1,250 murders in 1911, and, taking the country as a whole, there were in the neighborhood of 9,000 murders in the twelve month.

In proportion to the population there were five times as many murders in the United States as in Italy, eight times as many as in Great Britain and 15 times as many as in Germany.

Last year New York secured one conviction in every nine murder trials; Chicago had the same percentage; Boston one in four, and San Francisco one in two. These percentages are contrasted with London's average of seven convictions out of eight [illegible]. Not only is punishment for murder rare in the United States but when inflicted it is long delayed. Of the murders in 60 of the large cities in 1911 not one was executed in the year that the crime was committed. In all the 70 cities under review there were only six murderers dealt with within the same year that they committed their crime.

These statistics sufficiently explain the movement that is now gaining headway in the United States, a movement for the reform of the courts and the overhauling of the whole system of administering justice.

THE WORLD'S WORK DEPENDS ON THE WORLD'S DIGESTION

From the captain of industry to the hod carrier—from milady in the auto to the woman with the scrubbing brush—the accomplishments of every one of us depend absolutely on the accomplishments of our stomachs. Backed by a good digestion, a man can give the best that is in him. When his stomach fails, he becomes a weakling.

To this loss of power no one need submit. Right habits of eating, drinking, sleeping and exercise, aided by Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, will restore and maintain the full efficiency of the human mind and body.

Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets contain the active principles needed for the digestion of every kind of food. They go to the assistance of the weakened stomach, and enable the sufferer, right from the start, to assimilate and get the benefit of the food eaten. With this assistance, the digestive organs regain their tone, and soon the use of the tablets is no longer necessary.

If your stomach is not working properly, try Na-Dru-Co Dyspepsia Tablets, 50c. at your druggist's. National Drug and Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Montreal. 145

AND

Cold-Sores

Are your hands chapped, cracked or sore? Have you "cold cracks" which open and bleed when the skin is drawn tight? Have you a cold sore, frost bite, chilblains, or a "raw" place, which at times makes it agony for you to go about your household duties? If so, Zam-Buk will give you relief, and will heal the frost-damaged skin. Anoint the sore places at night, Zam-Buk's rich healing essences will sink into the wounds, end the smarting, and will heal quickly.

Mrs. Yellen, of Portland, says: "My hands were so sore and cracked that it was agony to put them near water. When I did so they would smart and burn as if I had scalded them. I seemed quite unable to get relief from anything I put on them until I tried Zam-Buk, and it succeeded when all else had failed. It closed the big cracks, gave me ease, soothed the inflammation, and in a very short time healed my hands."

Zam-Buk also cures chafing, rashes, winter eczema, piles, ulcers, festering sores, sore heads and backs, abscesses, pimples, ring-worm, etc., cuts, burns, bruises, scalds, sprains. Of all druggists and stores, or post free from the Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Price 50c a box.

THE EMPIRE IN FIGURES.

A comprehensive idea of the extent and wealth of the British Empire is given in a statistical abstract recently issued by the Board of Trade of the United Kingdom. The growth of population in the Empire beyond the British Isles is shown by the census returns to be as follows:

Year.	Population.
1891	307,474,000
1901	343,789,000
1911	371,102,000

The bulk of the population (314,955,000) is in India. Here are the figures for the Dominions:—

Canada	7,323,000
South Africa	5,958,000
Australia	4,449,000
New Zealand	1,008,000

Pages are also devoted to the value of imports from and exports to British India, the self-governing Dominions, Crown Colonies, possessions and protectorates. Summarizing the totals, it is found that in 1910 these several parts of the Empire imported, with bullion and specie:

From—
United Kingdom	£183,868,000
British possessions	64,968,000
Foreign countries	177 224,000
Total	£426,060,000

In the same year, incuding bullion and specie, they exported:

To—
United Kingdom	£198,003,000
British possessions	60,497,000
Foreign countries	185,977,000
Total	£444,477,000

Considerably more than half the trade consisted, therefore, of interchange between the different parts of the Empire itself. Trade with the United Kingdom exceeded that with all foreign countries combined.

Tables showing the acres under wheat and the yield in bushels, are also of special value. The following figures are for a year ending in 1910, except those for the Union of South Africa, which have not been brought down later than 1909:

	Acres.	Bushels.
India	29,794,000	371,645,000
Australia	7,371,000	95,262,000
New Zealand	321,000	8,273,000
Canada	9,257,000	125,991,000
South Africa	553,000	3,574,000

The Transvaal is by far the greatest gold-producing part of the Empire. The vaue of its output in 1910 was no less than £31,973,000. Western Australia came net with £6,246,000. Following next were: Southern Rhodesia, £2,568,000; Victoria, £2,422,000; Canada, £2,101,787; and Queensland, £1,875,000.

$537.82 is the record made by J. C. Bulmer, a Renfrew Country farmer, from a ten-acre clover field. This field produced 20 tons of hay at $9.50, and 1,581 pounds of clover seed at 22c. They must have had more rain in Renfrew than fell in this vicinity, otherwise Mr. Bulmer would not have had such a crop.

The high cost of living is affecting some of Ontario's charitable institutions. This is a bit of unwelcome news with an almost personal note, seeing that if the prices continue to go up some of us must eventually take up our quarters in these same institutions.—Ottawa Citizen.

That ten million dollars lost to the country on the Grand Trunk Pacific guarantee because the company's lawyers understood a contract better than those of the Laurier Government is being lightly alluded to by newspapers which supported the defeated Ministers. Their position seems to be summed up in the question: What is ten millions, when the country pays?—Montreal Gazette.

The churches are asking why men do not go to church. They have an answer in part in this matter of dress. The poor man with a large family is hopelessly out of the race if recognition in the church is based upon the ability to wear good clothes. What have the churches to say? Are the professing Christian members of the church careful that they place no stumbling block in the way of the brother or sister less fortunate in a material sense?—London Free Press.

The wide scope of the proposed commission's powers and the thoroughness of the enquiries that are to be made under it will receive the approbation of every sincere advocate of measures to lower the cost of living. What the measures are to be for that purpose cannot be known until the cost of living has been analyzed and its constituent elements have been shown in their several ratios. The Tariff Commission will collect a mass of detailed information that will underlie much important future legislation in the public interest.—Mail and Empire.

That cattle are sylvan rather than prairie animals is proved by their fondness for the forest, to which they resort at every opportunity. Ontario is capable of producing an abundant supply of beef cattle for her own people and also an indefinitely extensive supply for exportation. For good beef cattle there is now, and there always will be an insatiable market. Beef cattle are scarce now, but there is no reason to doubt that within two or at most three years this province might have an ample supply. Everything depends on the Ontario farmer.—Toronto Globe.

The zeal of a life-long temperance man outran the discretion of the politician when Joseph Gibson & Co., approached N. W. Rowell, K.C., with the request that he should declare the Opposition's policy. "It was magnificent, but it was not politics," for Mr. Rowell to inebriate the deputationists with words to the effect that regardless of consequences he was prepared to take a few weeks to discover what his principles were and let them know later.—Toronto Telegram.

Hon. William Miller is dead. He had for some years been the last of the senators appointed at the time of Confederation. He had long service to the country to his credit. He claimed to have been chiefly instrumental in bringing Sir John Thompson from Nova Scotia to the public life of Canada. For that most men will give him praise. Sir John Thompson was not long enough at Ottawa to create a great tradition. He was long enough there to enable people who watched to understand what an able and high-minded man in public life could be. To have helped to give him to Canada was something to be satisfied over.—Montreal Gazette.

WOMAN CONFESSES KILLING EIGHT BABES BY POISON

Winnifrid Ankers, Woman of All Work in Brooklyn Hospital, Pu Oxalic Acid in Milk—Wanted Revenge on Nurses—Didn't Mean to Kill the Little Ones, She Moans, but Only to Make Work Hard—Thought Insane

NEW YORK, Feb, 26.—Breaking down under the constant fire of questions by detectives, Winnifred Ankers the young woman of all work in the Infants' Hospital of the Brooklyn Nursery at 404 Herkimer Street, confessed last night that it was she who had put oxalic acid in the milk of the babies and caused the leath of eight of them in that institution. The young woman clasped her own baby as she told the group of detectives, who have been watching her incessantly, with tears running down her face, that she had poisoned the milk. "Oh God! Oh God!" she moaned, time and again, "I didn't mean to kill them." It was all in revenge for fancied wrongs, and when she got through with the terrible recital she was a nervous wreck.

Just how near she came to wiping out every patient in the hospital, and there are thirty infants in the wards, the authorities learned from her own lips for the first time. She was engaged in putting the acid in the milk when somewhere down the hall a door slammed and she fancied someone was coming. That alone saved the lives of the other infants for she intended to put acid in every one of the milk bottles in the kitchen ice box.

At 9.30 p. m. Acting Capt. Coughlin of the Brooklyn Bureau and Lieuts. McKurdy, Thompson and Connors were taking a turn at the endless enquiry. McKurdy, who has been watching the suspected woman constantly since the discovery of the crime, repeated many questions, but she protested her innocence until her mother love was touched, and then the confession was wrung from her pallid lips. The baby has been her lodestone toward a better life, and upon him she lavished a wealth of affection.

McKurdy had noticed this love for her child and her refusal to be separated from him.

"We know you put the poison in the milk," he said, "and we are going to arrest you now and take the baby away from you."

In a flash the woman leaped from her chair, white of face and with flashing eyes.

"I will kill you if you separate me from my baby," she cried with outstretched arms leaping forward.

"She was restrained and suddenly the fire died out of her eyes and she wilted so that she had to be supported.

"Don't take my baby," she pleaded, and then excitedly she said, "I will tell you all about it. I did put the oxalic acid in the babies' milk, but I did not intend to kill them. Indeed I didn't."

Then she began the recital of her crime. Time after time she was shaken with sobs, and the police had to wait for her to continue.

"On last Saturday night I went into the kitchen. It was nearly midnight and just after the milk had been made up for the babies' food. The place was deserted, and no one saw me enter the place. I walked quietly to the iceboox and just inside were the bottles all ready for feeding time. I took the bottle of oxalic acid and then pulled the absorbent cotton out of a bottle and poured some of the acid in. Then I took the stopper out of another bottle and put in the acid. I think I did this to ten or twelve bottles. I had my hand on another stopper when I heard a noise down the hall, as though a door had been opened or shut, and I was afraid to do anything else. I put the icebox top down, and, holding the bottle of acid tightly in my hand and concealing it in my dress I walked out and went to my room."

She was asked if it had not been her intention to put the acid in every one of the bottles, and a storm of sobs shook her as she confessed that she had so intended, and that all that prevented her from poisoning every baby in the place was the fancy that some one was coming.

"God knows I did not want to kill them, and I did not think the acid would have that effect," she continued. "I wanted to get square with some of the nurses and people in this place. They have not acted right, and they have not treated me and the baby right. I simply wanted to make the babies ill so that the nurses and the others would have plenty of work to do. I wanted to see them working hard. They have snubbed me and talked about me, and I wanted to get square with them. I had nothing against the babies, and, indeed, I did not want them to die."

After saying this she almost collapsed. "You won't take my baby away?" she cried in a frenzy.

After hearing her confession, the detectives sent for Assistant District Attorney Warbasse. When he came the woman was told of her rights and that what she said could be used against her. "I know that," she said in tears, "but I have always known that the truth must come out sooner or later."

Miss Ankers was placed under arrest. Because of her condition and the fact that she is nursing a very young baby it was deemed best not to take her to the police station, but to keep her under surveillance at the hospital.

Ever since the coming of the police into the case, and since suspicion pointed to her as the poisoner, she has been under surveillance, and a uniformed policeman from the Schenectady Avenue Station has stood at her door. Precautions were taken last night to prevent her doing harm either to herself or to her baby. This morning she will be brought into the Gates Avenue Police Court and arraigned on a charge of homicide.

It is believed that the young woman is insane, and she will be examined by alienists. Dr. W. H. Aten, of 100 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, an alienist who is one of the consulting physicians of the hospital, was to have examined Miss Ankers to-day, for the authorities had already suspected that she was mentally deranged.

Winifred Ankers is about 21 years old. She is of medium height, with just enough flesh to save her from being classed as thin. Her features are regular, her face is colorless, and her straw-colored hair is parted in the middle and brought down on each side so as to cover her ears. Her mouth, which runs in a sharp straight line, gives her rather a severe look which is partly dispelled when she talks. Her eyes are blue.

Suspicion fell upon her first because she bought the oxalic acid which she told the head nurse, Miss Louise Howard, she wanted to clean the operating tables, and the sinks. She was employed about the place to do the rougher sort of work and the acid was needed in this work.

Liquid Cough Mixturies Can't Cure Bronchitis

BUT THE HEALING FUMES OF CATARRHOZONE, WHICH ARE BREATHED TO THE FURTHEST RECESSES OF THE BRONCHIAL TUBES, BRING QUICK RELIEF AND SURE CURE.

Every sufferer from coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and chest ailments needs a soothing, healing, medicine which goes direct to the breathing organs in the chest and lungs, attacks the trouble at the source, disperses the germs of disease, and cures the aiment thoroughly. And this medicine is "Catarrhozone."

The germ-killing balsamic vapor mixes with the breath, descends through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, and finally reaches the deepest air cells in the lungs. All parts are soothed with rich, pure, medicinal essences, whereas with a syrup the affected parts could not be reached, and harm would result through benumbing the stomach with drugs.

"I have been a chronic sufferer from Catarrh in the nose and throat for over eight years. I think I have spent four hundred dollars trying to get relief. I have spent but six dollars on Catarrhozone, and have been completely cured, and, in fact, have been well for some time. Catarrhozone is the only medicine I have been able to find that would not only give temporary relief, but will always cure permanently. Yours sincerely, (Signed, WILLIAM RAGAN, Brockville, Ont.

For absolute, permanent cure use Catarrhozone. Two months' outfit, costs $1.00; smaller size, 50c., at all dealers, or the Catarrhozone Company, Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

FOUR-DAY BOATS TO CROSS OCEAN.

London Times Confirms Story of Fast Atlantic Service.

LONDON, Feb. 22.—The announcement from Montreal that a company, supported by a powerful group of British capitalists and Canadian railroad men, had been formed to operate a line of four-day boats between Great Britin and Halifax was received here with patriotic joy.

The London Times confirms the report that six 24-knot vessels will be built for the purpose of sending western American and Asiatic traffic via Canada instead of the United States. It is expected the vessels will be subsidized by the Government, and will be armed for self-defence and for defence of Atlantic trade routes in time of war.

HOW "SPIES" ARE TRAPPED; METHODS OF GERMANY

Extraordinary Story of Dubious Course Into Which the Spy Mania Has Led German Officialdom—Some Concrete Cases Given

PARIS, Feb. 25.—Although the British Government is known to be rapidly arranging its diplomatic lines in a way that shall be attractive to Wilhelmstrasse as a basis for negotiations, which shall bring about some sort of entente between the two Governments, there is a widespread sympathy in France for Bertrand Stewart, the English barrister, who was recently convicted at Leipsic for espionage and sentenced to three years and a half imprisonment.

It is believed here that the same methods were employed in the case of Mr. Stewart as those which lured Capt. Lux into a trap, from the meshes of which, however, he managed to escape after his imprisonment had begun. Of course Capt. Lux is not allowed to talk for publication, but the opinions of a French attache of the General Staff, who is his intimate friend, may be taking as representing the captain's views:

"We in France, if we wished, could arrest a hundred German 'spies' a year—so could Britain—and find convictions, too, without going outside of the rules of evidence proctised at Leipsic. We happen to know that there is a central office in Hamburg, which pays for information sent by German hotel guides in regard to French or British tourists who, it is thought, may become victims of this obnoxious system.

"The exact method by which Capt. Lux was trapped has never before been revealed. It was this:

"Capt. Lux was and is still attached to the Intelligence Department at Belfort. It was his business to receive reports when such were brought to him. One day he received a message which took him to Switzerland for the purpose of obtaining certain information. He went there and obtained it. This information was a blind, directed from the bureau in Hamburg. The man who had enticed Lux to Switzerland was in the German service. He pretended to be an Alsatian, and added quite casually that a military aviation meeting was just about to take place over the frontier in Germany and suggested that Lux go and see it. Lux went. Thousands saw it. Among the crowd there were also foreigners in uniform. There was nothing private about it. But Lux was not in uniform. He was arrested as he stepped off the boat.

"His trial at Leipsic was a comedy—a farce. The only evidence against him was a letter written by one of his subordinates to a man whom the Germans believed to be a French spy.

"Now, take the case of Mlle. Thirion. She was entrapped in a still more disgraceful way. In her case a German officer made love to her, had letters written to her by an accomplice in Paris asking her to spy, and on the evidence of this officer was arrested, sentenced and imprisoned.

ACCIDENTS IN AVIATION.

Mostly Due to Breakdown in Human Machine

All who walk the earth in safety and apparently in a normal condition of health are not physically qualified to be aviators. This is demonstrated by Dr. R. Moulinier who writes as follows

"The rapid ascent to great altitudes exposes the body to conditions different from any terrestral ones. Mountain climbing offers some analogy, but it is different in the fact that the transition from the high atmospheric transition of the sea level to a low pressure takes place much more slowly. The author has reported some interesting observations on the blood pressure of aviators who have ascended to high altituds. On alighting after ascending to a height of 1200 to 2000 meters the aviator presents cyanosis of the extremities, probably from the low temperature of the high regions of the atmosphere.'

This means that the extremities turn a dusky blue color. Often there is congestion of the inner surface of the eyes. The pulse is quickened, but there is no irregularity of the heart's action, nor bleeding from the nose. There is often slight headache and ringing in the ears. Sometimes there is a tendency to sleep, and this may be felt even during flight. Rising to a great height and coming down again always increases th blood pressure, as the writer explains.

Power From Sea Waves.

At the recent meeting of the British Association the question of economical production of power from tides and winds was again under discussion, and it has been taken up widely by scientific journals in Europe. "La Revue Scientifique" calls attention to a system of utiling the power of sea waves to actuate a dynamo which has been employed during the last six months at the mouth of the river Gironde. An air chamber is connected with a well, which communicates with the sea at a depth below the level of the lowest tides. By the advance and recession of the waves changes of pressure are produced in the air chamber, and a system of valves enables the resulting air currents to be applied to rotating a kind of turbine. It is said that the apparatus works equally well in calm and in stormy weather.

"From the vulgarity of notoriety good Lord deliver us," should be your morning and evening prayer.

It is a wise woman who refrains from inducing her husband to bring the atmosphere of his club home with him.

To Destroy Caterp'llars.

Caterpillars are one of the greatest sources of annoyance to gardeners, both professional and amateur, and the following is a capital method of getting rid of them. The method is simplicity itself. If your garden is infested by caterpillars just catch a few of them and feed them on some lettuce that has been soaking in water for four days. After they have eaten their fill of the lettuce turn the caterpillars loose again, and they will soon do the rest. Entomologists have recently discovered that the consumption of watered lettuce leaves induces a violent and fatal attack of cholera amongst caterpillars. One caterpillar so infected quickly spreads the disease amongst its fellows, and so quickly rid the garden or orchard of the pest that has so long been the despair of farmers and the like. A caterpillar suffering from the caterpillar cholera soon stops eating. It becomes weak, and has no inclination to move; usually crawling up the trunk of a tree, fence, wall, or other vertical surface, where it remains without motion. In a few hours there drops from its mouth a blackish liquid; the caterpillar becomes more and more flaccid, one leg after another loses its support, and finally the creature, reduced to a black skin, hangs dead, still holding on with one or two of its false feet. There is no danger of caterpillar cholera spreading to human beings or animals. It is a variety of disease quite distinct in its way, and only infectious as regards caterpillars.

IT WAS STONE IN THE BLADDER

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of the Bladder—intense pains in the back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which, became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once, and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me". JOHN HERMAN, Hamilton, Ont.

BEIRUT IS BOMBARDED

Syrian City Shelled by Italians and 60 Are Killed.

Sensation Is Created In Europe by Reports of the Attack on City—Turkish Gunboats Were Lying In the Harbor and Were Promptly Destroyed — Italians Deny Firing Any Shells at the Citizens.

Beirut, Syria, Feb. 26.—A flotilla of Italian warships Saturday morning bombarded this city, killing sixty peaceful inhabitants and wounding a large number of others. They also sank a number of small Turkish gunboats anchored in the port.

Appearing suddenly off the port, the commanders of the Italian gunboat Volturno and the armored cruiser Guiseppe Garibaldi sent to the authorities a peremptory demand for the surrender of the Turkish gunboats in the harbor.

Before the provincial governor could deliver his reply to the Italian commanders or ask for time to negotiate, the cruisers opened a devastating fire.

In a short time the Turkish gunboats in the harbor was disabled and in a sinking condition. The custom house was greatly damaged and other buildings also suffered severely.

Three torpedoes finally destroyed the Turkish vessels. The Turks fought bravely but were at a great disadvantage, as they were unable to manoeuvre their vessels and their guns were of small calibre.

During the fighting in the harbor a mob looted the Government arsenal and seized rifles and ammunition. One shell burst close to an American building, but injured no one. All the Americans in the city are safe.

Italian Commander's Version.

Rome, Feb. 26.—The first official statement of the destruction of two Turkish warships Saturday in Beirut harbor was received yesterday from Admiral Faverelli, commanding the squadron, to which the cruisers, Guiseppe Garibaldi and Francesco Ferrucio, the attacking vessels, are attached.

The admiral sent the following despatch:

"I surprised the Turkish gunboat Avnillah and the torpedo boat Angora at daybreak in the port of Beirut. These ships were ordered to surrender, the time limit being fixed at nine o'clock. My decision was communicated to the governor and consular authorities through the Turkish officer who came aboard.

"At nine o'clock a signal demanding surrender was again hoisted. As no answer was given, fire was opened on the gunboat, which replied energetically. At 9.20 the gunboat was silenced, fire having broken out on board. Having suspended fire, I proceeded aboard the Guiseppe Garibaldi to the mouth of the harbor, where an action ensued with the Angora, which was badly damaged. Her destruction was completed with a torpedo.

"The report that the town of Beirut was bombarded is absolutely false. The squadron then departed."

Admiral Faverelli received a despatch from Admiral Direvel, who returned to Beirut in the afternoon aboard the Francesco Ferrucio, to ascertain if the Turkish vessels were entirely out of action. He found one of them still afloat and accordingly opened fire and sunk her with a few shots.

British Cruiser Leaves for Beirut.

Malta, Feb. 26.—British armored cruiser Lancaster left here yesterday under sealed orders, presumably to protect British interests at Beirut.

Expell Italians From Syria.

London, Feb. 26.—Turkey has decided upon the expulsion of all Italians in Syria, according to a special despatch from Constantinople. The order will go into effect immediately, but fifteen days' grace are allowed.

Sensation In Paris.

Paris, Feb. 26.—The Italian action at Beirut has caused somewhat of a sensation here, for France, like other European countries, has important commercial interests and religious and educational establishments in that city. An outbreak of fanaticism, which the bombardment of Beirut is calculated to provoke, is feared, and to prevent as far as possible the natural consequences of such an outbreak, the French Government has ordered the armored cruiser Admiral Charner, which is now at Suda Bay, to proceed to Beirut without delay.

Alarm In Vienna.

Vienna, Feb. 26.—The bombardment of Beirut by Italian warships occasions serious misgivings here. The Vienna papers indulge in sarcastic comments on "Italy's war prowess." Die Zeit urges the powers to take action to prevent Italy from repeating such attacks.

Senator Miller Buried.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—A great many friends of the late Hon. William Miller, P.C., K.C., of Arichat, N.S., who died in Ottawa on Friday, paid their last marks of respect to the deceased by attending the funeral, which was held yesterday afternoon from the Senator's late residence. The funeral was marked by a large representation of Senators and members, while there were also a number of personal friends and prominent citizens of Ottawa.

The late Senator expressed the desire in his will that if he died in Ottawa, his remains be interred in this city.

Used Third Degree.

New York, Feb. 26.—Winnifred Ankers, an attendant at the Brooklyn Nursery and Infants' Hospital, was arraigned Saturday in magistrates court in Brooklyn charged with homicide in connection with the death of eight infants at the Hospital since last Sunday.

The woman's confession came after a grilling examination, during which she broke down when told that they would take her baby away from her if she did not tell the truth. The Ankers woman then told how the babies had been poisoned.

In her confession to the police the Ankers woman said that she put two or three drops of oxalic acid in the bottles of milk prepared for the babies. She said she removed the stoppers of about 14 and dropped the acid in. There were 30 bottles of milk in the ice box and she was still dropping the acid in when she heard some one coming. She stopped for fear of detection.

The Ankers woman is only 24 years of age and has been an attendant in the hospital for the last ten months, since her baby was born. She is an orphan and was adopted by a family named Ankers. Of recent years she is said to have lived a life of uncertain habits.

Potato Prices Soar.

Ottawa, Feb. 26.—Potatoes soared to the record price of $2.75 per bag on the Ottawa market on Saturday. Quotations ranged from $2.40 to $2.75, a number of sales being made at the higher figure.

THE CASE OF GEORGE I. HAM NOW IMPRISONED IN MEXICO

The following statement of the case of Mr. George I. Ham, formerly of Napanee, who is well known here, and who has been for about a year imprisoned in Mexico, by his legal adviser, Mr. W. S. Herrington, K.C., will be read with interest:

To the Editor of The Globe: My attention has been called to an editorial in The Globe of the 5th instant, with Sr. Lic. Tejada, the Procureur-General of Mexico, appearing in the Mexican Herald, in relation to the case of George I. Ham. I recently returned from the city of Mexico, where I spent nearly three months investigating this case, and had more than one interview with Sr. Lic. Tejada, and I can frankly say that I never met a man of any professional standing possessing so few qualifications for a public office carrying with it any responsibility. He is narrow-minded, prejudiced, and has exhibited a malice towards Mr. Ham that he is unable to conceal. I enclose you herewith a photograph of the copy of his own interview which he says was sent to him conveying an intimation of a bribe of 25,000 pesos. The bribe consists of the typewritten words "twenty-five thousand pesos?" at the upper part of the article and $25,000? B. M." a little lower down. Upon no other data than this he takes it upon himself to insult Mr. Ham and his friends by declaring that this is an offer of a bribe on behalf of the defence, and seizes upon this opportunity to parade his purity before the public. What would the Canadian public think of our Attorney-General if he appeared in print with a declaration that he had asked a trial Judge whose movements he largely controlled to give him a sentence of thirteen years to a prisoner undergoing trial before him, and would follow it up with a statement that he felt confident that prison sentence would be given. He also announces his intention of printing an account of the case.

He told me that he intended to print it in English and circulate it fully throughout Canada and the United States. I have read his so-called brief. It is a most venomous and malicious attack upon Mr. Ham The evidence is distorted or overlooked, the law misquoted and misapplied, and no abusive epithet appears to have escaped him in his reference to Mr. Ham, and his avowed purpose of circulating this libellous production throughout the United States and Canada is another gratuitous insult to Mr. Ham. In it he makes no mention that Mr. Ham was dragged from a sick bed in an insane asylum, taken before a judge and subjected to an examination when he was quite unable to stand alone and required the presence of two physicians to administer stimulants. The answers tortured from him under these conditions are now used in evidence against him. Senor Tejada does not deem it worthy of comment that the only two physicians who testified that Ham was responsible for the alleged crimes with which he is charged were called after the case was closed and made a lengthy and adverse report, although they never examined him, nor knew anything about him, and that five experienced doctors, including Mr. Ham's two family physicians and the head of the sanitarium in which he was confined expressed the opinion that he was non compos mentis. He deems it of no consequence that so far as these charges are concerned, he is now being tried upon evidence admitted under a decree dealing with or supposed to deal with an entirely different set of charges. Before the papers were laid before the trial Judge they were reviewed in his office. The code allows him fifteen days for the purpose. He had exceeded this limit at the time of my first call upon him, and with much courtesying and profuse regrets he apologized for the delay and said his report was complete, that his stenographer was then copying the last two pages and it would be ready in ten minutes. It was four weeks from that day that he delivered it to the Judge, yet he says the trial is proceeding as speedily as possible. For upwards of a year, although the limitation of time is six months, witnesses were called from time to time to give their testimony upon one or two charges. No attempt was made to classify the evidence, but it was given in the most general way, leaving it to the prosecution to apportion such parts as he saw fit to any one or more of thirteen charges.

Neither Mr. Ham nor his attorney was present during the admission of this testimony, and no witnesses were cross-examined. The case was formally closed on February 15th, 1911, and no evidence was admissable after that date, yet in violation of the provisions of the code the evidence of two physicians, as above stated, was admitted against the prisoner. During this protracted proceeding the trial Judge has been twice changed, one being summarily dismissed upon the complaint of Mr. Ham's attorney. The Judge now in charge of the case has a reputation for uprightness and impartiality, but unfortunately is more or less subject to the orders of Senor Tejada and labors under the serious disadvantage of not having seen any of the witnesses or having had any voice in the admissibility of of the evidence.

In justice to Mr. Ham, I ask you to print the foregoing in order that Mr. Ham's Canadian friends may know to what extent he is having a fair and speedy trial.

W. S. HERRINGTON.

DON'T BE UNREASONABLE

If You Neglect the Care of the Scalp You Should Not Expect Beautiful Hair

The hair is more exposed and hence more liable to accumulate dust and dirt than any other portion of the body.

In spite of this the hair receives, as a rule, the least attention and no real effort is made to keep it healthy.

If the dandruff germ is allowed to work unmolested and the scalp becomes crusted with dirt accumulations, one may expect the hair to die and fall out. There is no cause for surprise in this phenomenon; it is natural and happens in every instance where the care of the hair and scalp is overlooked.

The one sure remedy which prevents the loss of hair and permits a healthy luxuriant growth is found in Newbro's Herpicide.

The dandruff germ cannot live on a head to which Herpicide is regularly applied. The germ dies. The hair ceases to fall. The terrible itching stops almost instantly.

That is what Newbro's Herpicide does.

Boards of Trade Urge Broad Development Scheme.

Busy Session of Ontario Business Men Results In the Passing of Many Important Resolutions—Fight Over Georgian Bay Canal Fails to Materialize — Protest Against Mail Order Houses.

Toronto, Feb. 24.—The expected didn't happen at the concluding session of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade yesterday. The bitter fight between the north and the south over the Georgian Bay Canal proposition lapsed into something similar to a meeting of Quakers, and a resolution advocating the immediate construction of the proposed waterway for the benefit of the eastern portion of New Ontario, was shoved through the session, accompanied by optimistic platitudes and honeyed words, with no dissension whatever.

When the proposition was broached there was an expectation that a warm verbal argument would ensue. It did, for a moment or two, and then it calmed down, when a man from the north arose and spoke in a vein likened to this: "Let's hog the whole thing, Welland Canal, Georgian Bay Canal and any other undertaking of value lying loose!" And with that the resolution with a few additional suggestions was given entirely smooth passage.

What a Georgian Bay Canal would be to the north country was explained in glowing rhetoric by delegates from that province. One thing, it would cheapen coal. At present North Bay, Sault Ste. Marie and all points of any importance are absolutely shy of this fuel, because of inadequate transportation facilities. Besides advocating the much-discussed canal, a resolution with regard to improving French River was passed, and will be forwarded to the Government.

It was with perfect unanimity that the delegates came to a conclusion with regard to the proper colonization of the north country. A resolution was passed urging the Government to take immediate action with regard to expending the appropriation of five million dollars and doing something to bring about rapid settlement of the new land by an English-speaking community. R. Home Smith moved the resolution, which was seconded by C. T. Young of North Bay.

Sir James Whitney was congratulated upon his announcement of an appropriation of $5,000,000 for New Ontario development and the resolution suggested the appointment of a commission, with one salaried resident commissioner, to investigate conditions and prepare a report for submission to the Government on the means of improvement.

The bonusing of industries by municipalities came in for much criticism, which culminated in a resolution of condemnation and a request to be sent to the Government to prohibit the pratcice. The resolution, which was introduced by Col. Raymond of Welland and seconded by L. W. Lyon of Guelph, said: "That granting bonuses to manufacturers, except by way of fixed assessment or freedom from taxation, should be prohibited and that a committee be appointed with a view to having an enactment of legislation." When this was put to a vote only one delegate showed his disapproval.

Responsibility for outbreaks of typhoid fever and general unsanitary conditions in New Ontario towns was laid at the feet of the Government by Delegate Pipe of Cobalt, who presented a resolution on behalf of the northern boards urging that the Government institute some plan of control of townsites before incorporation.

"Taxation of Mail-Order Houses" was the topic of a resolution placed on the menu by the Goderich Board of Trade. However, it savored of something a little bit too bitter for the convention. R. Home Smith suggested that it be given a hoist, and the executive committee be allowed to consider it and submit it to the next meeting. He said that it could not be given proper consideration as the convention had been depleted in numbers by the fact that a large percentage had gone home. Seemingly, the chief objection to the mail-order business was that it did serious injury to the trade of the rural merchants.

The resolution, in part, said: That this board is satisfied that the large departmental stores and others which carry on business by the system known as the retail mail order and catalogue system, are doing a serious injury to the merchants throughout the province, and as they contribute nothing toward the up-keep of the various municipalities, an effort should be made to remedy or to mitigate this evil. It was suggested that the Legislature pass an act making it compulsory for a house carrying on the mail order business to pay a fixed annual fee to each municipality in which goods are sold and delivered, or pay an assessment on the value of all goods sold and delivered in each municipality other than the one where the place of business was situated.

Kingston Blockade Being Lifted.

Kingston, Feb. 24.—The city has recovered somewhat from the blizzard, but the country roads are still blocked and no mail has been received from the country side or Cape Vincent, N.Y. The Kingston and Pembroke Railway was able to send out its first train yesterday afternoon, but the Bay of Quinte line is still blocked.

Supplementary Estimates Tabled in Legislature.

Proposed Expenditures Up to Oct. 31, 1912, Are Brought Into the Local House By the Premier — They Amount to $4,077,454.18, Bringing the Total Up to Eight Millions—Public Buildings.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—Supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31, 1912, were presented to the Legislature yesterday by Sir James Whitney, in the absence of Hon. A. J. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, who is ill. Including a grant for the extension of the line through Huron Grey and Bruce, and $2,000,000 to the Hydro-Electric Commission, the supplementaries total $4,077,454.18. The main estimates, presented during the last session of the Legislature, called for an expenditure of $8,090,911.66, so so that the total estimated expenditure for the current fiscal year is $12,168,365.84. In addition to this sum, further supplementary estimates will be presented during the session, bringing the amount up to several hundred thousand dollars more.

Most of the sums contained in the volume presented yesterday are increases in salaries for civil servants. A new position is created, at a salary of $1,800. It is the intention of the Provincial Government to appoint a parole officer, who will visit prisoners parolled from the Central Prison farm at Guelph, and assist them in obtaining employment after their discharge. Increases of $100 a year are given to all the Deputy Ministers and to several chief clerks and accountants.

For constitutional questions $20,000 additional is set apart. A new registry office will be erected at Kenora at a cost of $8,000, and the completion of the new court house will cost $3,300. Other expenditures at Kenora bring the total up to $26,298.

Large amounts will be spent on the public buildings and improvements, including $200,000 for the purchase of farm land, erection and equipment of the new hospital for insane, to be erected at Whitby. A similar amount is included for the erection of buildings for the provincial prison at Guelph. This amount may be subdivided and charged to capital and maintenance by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-council. Additional buildings and farm land equipment for the hospital for the insane at Brockville will require $50,000, of which $15,680 is a re-vote. A new dormitory building for the institution of the blind at Brantford will cost $65,000, and a similar amount will be spent on the deaf and dumb institute at Belleville.

To replace the kitchen and amusement hall at the London Hospital for the Insane, which was destroyed by fire, there is an item of $25,000. Additional buildings at the Orillia Hospital for Feeble-Minded will cost $20,000. A new residence for the medical superintendent at Woodstock institution calls for $6,500. For electric wiring in the hospital at Mimico $10,000 is provided, of which $9,800 is a re-vote. For repairs to the Hamilton asylum, made necessary by fire, $18,653 will be needed.

On the Parliament and the Departmental buildings $12,219 will be spent this year, including increases in salaries to various employes, and $5,150 to provide salaries for additional watchmen and two boiler inspectors, yet to be appointed.

For the completion of the north wing of Osgoode Hall $21,800 is set aside, containing a re-vote of $13,668. For the new Government House $50,000 is needed, and for the completion of the reconstruction and fireproofing of the west wing of the Parliament Buildings, the new north wing, furnishings, Hydro-Electric equipment, and library fittings, $310,000 is necessary.

New land will be purchased as an additional experimental plot at the O. A. C., Guelph, at a cost of $18,500. Electrical plant will cost $10,000, part of which is a re-vote. The new dining hall will cost $75,000, new dairy stables $15,000, new building for field husbandry and experimental department, an amount to be decided upon later.

The reconstruction of the Ontario Government building in London, in the interests of colonization and immigration, calls for an expenditure of $15,000 this year, more than one-third of which is a re-vote.

For technical education in the province the sum of $34,500 is set apart, of which $3,500 is for the salary of the director, $25,000 for day industrial classes and $6,000 for agricultural training in high schools.

For public and separate school education more than $117,000 will be voted, including $20,000 for rural, public and separate schools in counties, $29,000 for examiners for departmental examinations, $10,500 for continuation schools, $19,000 for public and separate schools in new districts, and other miscellaneous grants.

To provide for a farm director $2,500 is placed in the amounts to be voted. The director has yet to be appointed.

As a result of numerous deputations asking for grants, several special amounts have been placed in the estimates for charitable purposes, as follows:

For institutions mentioned in the statutes, $7,100; sanatoria for consumptives, $11,871.45; industrial schools, $9,825.46; children's aid work, $1,241.23; Alexandra industrial schools, $7,000; industrial refuge for women (addition to provide for feeble-minded), $5,000; building of infants' home, $5,000; total hospitals and charities, $47,038.14.

"Peace" Bridge at Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 27.—Every municipal city along the American and Niagara frontier will have a delegation in Albany to-day attending the assembly hearing of the bill to appropriate a half-million dollars for the peace celebration in 1915. Ontario will be asked to contribute to the fund for the erection of a peace bridge over the Niagara River.

MAY BOYCOTT BISLEY

Col. Hughes Condemns British Association's Actions.

Minister of Militia and E. M. Macdonald Vigorously Protest Against Treatment of Canadian Riflemen Because of Their Use of the Ross Rifle—English Gunmakers Are to Blame, Says Col. Hughes.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—If Canada is to be represented at the next Bisley meet, the National Rifle Association will have to mend its ways.

This was the direct challenge issued by Hon. Sam Hughes, Minister of Militia, when E. M. Macdonald (Pictou), on the orders of the day being called, moved the adjournment of the House to discuss the policy of "pin pricking" shown by the N.R.A. in the treatment of Canadian marksmen in connection with the use of the Ross rifle.

"If this sort of thing is continued," said the Minister, "in the first place I doubt if the association (the D.R.A.) will send them, and in the second place I doubt if the men would go."

"It does not rest with the National Rifle Association to define for the Dominion of Canada, what form of rifle or what form of sight we shall use."

He intimated that the Canadian Government had offered to loan them 5,000 to 10,000 long Ross rifles in order to place British and other competitors "on an equality with our boys." So far, however, the association has not seen fit to avail themselves of the offer.

Mr. Macdonald reviewed the history of the trouble, which he ascribed to the hostility of British rifle makers and the fact that the Canadians, through the use of the Ross-rifle, had incurred the ill-will of the N.R.A. by winning too much prize money.

He read a couple of letters showing that the average winnings of Canadians had jumped from £420 to £825 when the new rifle was adopted.

The latest regulation, adopted in the autumn of 1911, prescribed that the back sight had to be attached in the same way as it was on the British army rifle. This was a mere pretext to bar the Ross rifle, as it was impossible to attach the sight to it in this manner.

He charged that the N.R.A. were not acting in good faith and asked the Minister of Militia to take the matter up.

In this connection, he read an extract from The Pall Mall Gazette, which compared the new British service rifle with the Ross rifle, to the great disadvantage of the former, which it declared would be obsolete before the force was armed with it.

He also read the sworn statement of Pte. Clifford, the winner of the King's Prize at the last Bisley meet, and referred to the affidavits of five other Canadian competitors, as to the persistent and unwarranted interference of range officers, and particularly Major Silverthorne, with Canadian marksmen.

"This must be stopped," he declared. "If it is not, let Canadians not go over, and let the whole empire know why they do not go over."

The Minister of Militia corroborated Mr. Macdonald on every point, and backed the allegations up with a few emphatic remarks of his own.

There was not the slightest doubt in his mind as to the cause of the animus displayed by the N.R.A. The rifle manufacturers of Britain were behind it, and since the signal success of the Canadians three years ago, when the weapon was first introduced at Bisley, had caused the cancellation of orders for 5,000 Ross rifles. They evidently realized that something had to be done to stop the sale of the Ross rifle to the marksmen of the empire. This regulation as to sights capped the climax. The N.R.A. would have been more straight forward if they had said outright that no Ross rifles, or that only Lee-Enfield rifles could be used.

As to the treatment of Private Clifford, Col. Hughes declared that the "Clifford position," with the butt resting on the ground, had been commended by Lord Kitchener and Lord Roberts.

The Ross rifle, he declared to be "the best military rifle in the world to-day."

On a visit to Washington a year ago, the Minister said he had been given by the U. S. military authorities full details of the new British service rifle. He had obtained the same information from the German military authorities last summer, but when he tried to get it from the British authorities there was nothing doing. It was a "deep impenetrable mystery."

"This is a strange way," he commented, "to treat those of us in the colonies who are interested in Imperial affairs."

W. B. Northrup (Hastings) asked how many of the long-barrelled Ross rifles were in use by the Canadian militia at the time Sir Frederick Borden certified that it was the arm of the service. He questioned the correctness of this certificate, and thought the bottom of the interference complained of was the want of confidence in the rifle the Canadians were using at Bisley doing the real service Ross rifle.

Cities Escape Expense.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—"In Ontario one-half of the total assessment, or $500,000,000, is on cities alone which maintain their few miles of road; the other half, $500,000,000, is on the towns, villages and townships, which have to maintain 50,000 miles of roadways. Thus it may readily be seen that it is only fair that the cities, as well as the Governments, should help in the good roads movement."

These statements were made yesterday morning by Major T. L. Kennedy of Dixie, Peel County, at the opening of the tenth annual convention of the Ontario Good Roads Association in the York county building on Adelaide street. About one hundred and sixty delegates are registered.

ANOTHER BLIZZARD.

Second Bad Storm Causes Widespread Suffering.

Toronto, Feb. 27.—The people of many places in Ontario in their struggles against the blizzard of yesterday are wondering if it is a return of last week's tornado.

Locally the storm caused much discomfort on the streets and interfered greatly with the railway traffic.

The blizzard from the southwestern part of the States had its origin in the same place as the storm of last week. The first disturbance was noticed in Utah and gradually gained force and spread to Texas and thence to Oklahoma, where ten lives are reported lost and twenty-five persons injured. Indiana and Illinois also got a goodly share of the snow and high winds.

Southern Ontario, extending from Lake Michigan to Quebec, is under the rage of the storm which is prophesied to last until to-day, turning into sleet and rain in many localities and passing off the upper lakes.

In the west the weather is extremely cold, being 18 below at Winnipeg. Alberta and Saskatchewan are only moderately cold as also are the Maritime Provinces. The wind was going at the rate of 48 miles an hour yesterday.

Kingston Again Blockaded.

Kingston, Feb. 27.—The Bay of Quinte trains were running yesterday for the first time since last Wednesday on account of the big storms. Last night another big storm set in and it looks as if the line will be blocked again. The street car service was put out of business again.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

The roof of the Goderich Wheel Rigs works was blown off during yesterday's storm.

The Princess Mary, only daughter of the King and Queen, is suffering from influenza.

Over twelve hundred partridges were seized in a raid on a game warehouse in Montreal.

Archbishop and Mrs. Hamilton of Ottawa received congratulations on their golden wedding anniversary.

The British Columbia Legislature will prorogue on Thursday, and a new election will be held on March 28.

The railways are looking for fifty thousand men to carry out their construction program in the west this summer.

Fred. J. Todd of Toronto, who fainted and fell against a wall in the streets three weeks ago, died at Grace Hospital yesterday.

W. M. Dack, registrar for Bruce and former representative of the Centre riding in the Legislature, died at Walkerton yesterday.

Twelve street cars were wrecked or burned in riots at Kingston, Jamaica. The company, which is a Canadian one, has imposed increased fares.

The Russian Emperor has confirmed the new Admiralty regulation under which a commander is compelled to destroy his warship instead of surrendering it to the enemy.

William Dwight, 177 Munro street, Toronto, was instantly killed last night on the east side of the Don when his horse backed over the bank and fell on its unfortunate driver.

The South Africa Government commission on trades and industries has submitted its report, in which it recommends an adequate, but not prohibitive, tariff for agriculture and industries.

C. A. Nodmarcu, an engineer engaged erecting the new waterworks system at Welland by the Canadian Bovine Co., Toronto, was instantly killed by a Michigan Central train early yesterday morning, near the depot there.

Justice Charbonneau's decision has apparently nipped in the bud several incipient suits similar to that of Hebert. Two lawyers announced yesterday that they had advised clients not to proceed with suits, in view of the Hebert judgment.

Japan Creeping Ahead.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Japan by 1916 will have wrested the position of third naval power from the United States, and this country will have difficulty in maintaining itself in fourth place unless it builds two battleships a year.

Secretary Meyer declared this to be a fact in his testimony before the House naval affairs committee. The Secretary urged greater liberality by Congress in dealing with the naval establishment.

The committee is pledged to economy, and although appropriations for battleships have not been acted upon, many members are inclined not to support the Democratic caucus resolution against a two-battleship program. The suggestion for a wireless, however, is not likely, to be entertained.

An Italian Dewey.

Rome, Feb. 27.—Admiral Cattolica, Minister of Marine, amid prolonged cheers in the Senate Chamber yesterday, read despatches describing the action at Beirut and the sinking of Turkish warships in the harbor by Italian cruisers.

According to the despatches, the operation was difficult, owing to the limited extent of the harbor and the danger of damaging neutral shipping and buildings along the water front. It was carried out, however, with moderation, but energetically and resolutely.

The greatest credit, the Minister added, was due to the officers and men for their brilliant conduct.

Meteorite Almost Struck Liner.

Boston, Feb. 27.—A narrow escape from being struck by a meteorite was experienced by the Leyland Line steamer Bostonian, which arrived yesterday from Manchester, England.

At five o'clock Saturday morning, Captain Perry reported he saw the meteorite, flashing brilliantly, falling to the southwest of the vessel. There was a loud hissing sound as it approached the water and then with a loud report it fell into the ocean a few ship's lengths from the bow of the steamer. So great a disturbance did it cause in the sea that water was dashed over the decks of the steamer.

THE MARKETS.

Liverpool Wheat Futures Close Higher, Chicago Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Heavy stocks of wheat pulled down prices to-day again and again, each successive advance being met by increased selling. The close was steady, but 1-8c to 3-8c lower than 48 hours ago. Corn finished 1-8c up to 1-8c to 1-4c down, oats off 1-4c to 3-8c and hog products with a gain of 5c to 15c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day on wheat ¼d to ⅜d higher than Saturday, and corn unchanged. Paris wheat closed ½c to ¾c lower, Antwerp ⅜c lower, Berlin unchanged, and Budapest ½c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—Business in grain over the cable continues very quiet, there being no improvement in the demand from foreign buyers. The local trade in oats is fairly active at firm prices, but the demand for other lines of coarse grains was quiet. There was some demand from foreign buyers for winter wheat flour and Leith bid 26 fr. for 90 per cents, which is 6d to 1s per sack out of line. In spring wheat grades business is quiet for export, but the local and country demand is good. A fair trade is passing in rolled oats. Demand for butter is good. Eggs firm and if it was not for the American stock coming forward prices would be much higher, as receipts of Canadian are very light. Dressed hogs in good demand at an advance of 25c.

Corn—American No. 2 yellow, 75c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 53½c to 54c; Canadian western No. 3, 51½c to 52c; extra No. 1 feed, 52½c to 53c; No. 2 local white, 51c to 51½c; No. 3 local white, 50c to 50½c; No. 4 local white, 49c to 49½c.

Barley—Malting, $1.05 to $1.10.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 72c to 73c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.60; seconds, $5.10; strong bakers', $4.90; winter patents, choice, $5.10 to $5.25; straight rollers, $4.65 to $4.75; do. bags, $2.15 to $2.25.

Rolled oats—Barrels, $5.05; bags, 90 lbs., $2.40.

Hay—No. 2 per ton car lots, $15 to $15.50.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 15½c to 15¾c; finest easterns, 14½c to 15c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 33c to 34c; seconds, 32c to 32½c.

Eggs—Fresh, 28c to 40c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.70 to $1.80.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Feb. 26.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 36 carloads, comprising 563 cattle, 313 hogs, 410 sheep and lambs, 12 calves and 5 horses.

Butchers.

Best heavy steers, $6.65 to $6.87½; prime butchers, $6.25 to $6.50; loads of good, $6 to $6.25; medium, $5.50 to $5.75; common, $5 to $5.25; inferior, $4.50 to $5; cows, $3 to $5.25; bulls, $4 to $5.50.

Milkers and Springers.

The market for milkers and springers was unchanged at $40 to $72 each, but only one brought the latter figure.

Veal Calves.

Few veal calves were on sale, and the market was steady at $4 to $8 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Sheep, ewes, $4 to $5; rams and culls, $3 to $4; lambs, $6 to $7.25, with selected lots at $7.50.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston quoted $6.85 for selects, fed and watered at the market, and $6.50 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 26.—At the Montreal stock yards, West End Market, the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 24 were 1050 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 1780 hogs, and 275 calves. The offerings on the market this morning for sale amounted to 400 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 650 hogs, and 75 calves.

The gathering of buyers was fairly large, including some from Quebec, and considering that the Lenten season is now in full force, there was a good demand, but as the quality of the stock offered did not suit buyers in all cases, they limited their purchases. Good quality steers sold at $7 and full loads of steers and heifers, weighing 900 pounds each brought $6.10 to $6.25 per 100 pounds. Medium bulls were offered at from $4.50 to $5.50 per 100 pounds.

The supply of hogs was very short, and consequently a stronger feeling developed, prices advancing 15c to 25c per 100 pounds. The demand was good and sales of selected lots were made at $7.60 to $7.65 and in some cases as high as $7.75 was realized.

Sheep and lambs were quiet, the supply being limited. The demand for calves was good, and prices ruled higher on account of the small offerings.

Export cattle, bulls, $7 to $7.25; butchers' cattle, medium, $5.50 to $6.50; butchers' cattle, common, $3.50 to $5; canners, $2.75 to $3.25; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $5.25 to $5.75; butchers, cattle, medium, $3.75 to $4.75; butchers' cattle, bulls, $3.50 to $5.50; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; milkers, common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $30 to $45; sheep, ewes, $4.50 to $4.75; bucks and culls, $3.75 to $4.25; lambs, $6.50 to $7; hogs, f.o.b., $7.60 to $7.65; calves, $4 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 26.—Cattle—Receipts 1875 head; market active, 10 to 15c higher; prime steers, $7.50 to $8; butcher grades, $3.75 to $6.75; cows, $3.50 to $5.75.

Calves—Receipts 800 head; market active, steady; cull to choice, $6 to $11.50.

Sheep and lambs—Receipts 16,000; market active, firm; choice lambs, $7.25 to $7.50; cull to fair, $5.50 to $6.90; yearlings, $6 to $6.25; sheep, $2 to $5.25.

Hogs—Receipts 10,200; market active, firm; yorkers, $6.50 to $6.80; pigs, $6.40 to $6.50; mixed, $6.50 to $6.75; heavy, $6.85 to $6.75; roughs, $5.90 to $6.10; stags, $5 to $5.50.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 26.—Cattle—Receipts 21,000. Market strong. Beeves, $4.90 to $8.50; Texas steers, $4.60 to $5.75; western steers, $4.90 to $7; stockers and feeders, $3.90 to $6.25; cows and heifers, $2.10 to $6.50; calves, $5.50 to $7.25.

Hogs—Receipts 37,000. Market active, 5c higher. Light, $5.95 to $6.30; mixed, $6 to $6.30; heavy, $6.05 to $6.35; rough, $6.05 to $6.15; pigs, $4.20 to $6; bulk of sales, $6.20 to $6.30.

Sheep—Receipts 25,000. Market steady. Native, $3.30 to $4.90; western, $3.75 to $4.85; yearlings, $4.90 to $5.75; lambs, native, $4.40, to $7; westerns, $4.75 to $7.15.

ONTARIO TOO RADICAL.

Theodore Roosevelt Would Not Go So Far In Reform.

Boston, Feb. 17.—Standing in the assembly chamber of the Massachusetts capital yesterday, Theodore Roosevelt explained and emphasized his project for the recall of judicial decisions. Col. Roosevelt struck out boldly at those who have criticized his plan.

"Our system of government is a confessed failure," he said, "unless the people are to be trusted to govern themselves."

In discussing his plan for a recall of the decisions of the courts, Col. Roosevelt after pointing out that sovereignty belonged to the people alone, not to the Legislature, the executive or the judiciary, said:

"In the last resort the people after due deliberation are to be and must be the masters and their representatives their servants. I am not advocating the recall of judges, I am advocating a measure which, if adopted, will prevent the necessity of the recall of judges."

"My proposal applies only to the legislative acts which the courts declare unconstitutional. I refer specifically to laws passed in the collective interests of the whole community. If such a law is declared unconstitutional by the court, I ask that the people be given the right, if they choose, to exercise that right themselves to pass final judgment upon the proposition.

"To listen to the arguments of certain worthy individuals, you would think that the purpose was to substitute the gusty passion of a mob for the decision of a court. Just across the St. Lawrence and great lakes from the State of New York lies the great commonwealth of Ontario, part of Canada, a commonwealth with essentially, precisely the same kind of government as New York, precisely the same problems to face in that commonwealth as in every commonwealth of Australia and Canada, as in Great Britain, as in Germany, as in France, as in practically all other great civilized nations. In that commonwealth the court has no power whatever to declare a legislative act unconstitutional.

"Now, I do not want to go as far as that. I think it is better that we should give the courts equal power with the Legislature, but I want to keep the people as the judge between them, when they differ as to whether a given law is within the power and the right of the people to pass."

Boundaries Resolution.

Ottawa, Feb. 27.—Premier Borden gave notice of a resolution late last night to extend the boundaries of the Province of Quebec by taking in the whole of the hinterland, in accordance with the resolution proposed in 1908. The resolution provides for the adding to that province of the whole district of Ungava, composing about 480,000 square miles.

The Ontario boundaries, according to the resolution, will be the same as those proposed by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and agreed to by Parliament in 1908. The new boundary line will start from the northeast corner of Manitoba and round to the eastern end of Island Lake and in latitude 53' 36" and longitude 93' 40". Thence northeasterly in a straight line to a point where the 89th meridian of west longitude interests the shore of Hudson. Manitoba thus gets both ports, Port Nelson and Fort Churchill.

Ontario's shore line on Hudson Bay, according to the terms of the resolution, will only extend to within 50 miles from Port Nelson.

GIRL DANCES TO HER DEATH.

Heart Fails After Finishing a Night's Programme of Twenty Numbers.

PASSAIC, N.J., Feb. 26.—"Please play a few more dances," pleaded Catherine Jarchone, eighteen years old, to the leader of the orchestra at a dance on the east side early this morning. "The ball has passed too quickly. I hardly know I've been dancing."

Miss Jarchone had danced the twenty or more dances on the regular programme, but seemed as fresh as when she started. The musicians would not accede to her request. The young woman went to her home and asked her mother to allow her to sleep until noon. Mrs. Jarchone went to the girl's room at noon and called her, but there was no response. She was dead.

A physician said the young woman's heart had been affected by excessive dancing.

KINGSTON COAL DEALERS GAVE SHORT WEIGHT

Policeman Made Inspection and Discovered Loads 50 to 75 Pounds Short.

KINGSTON, Feb. 26.—Several policemen went into the coal weighing business yesterday afternoon with a view of ascertaining whether the householders of the city were securing full weight for their money. The police weighed coal sent out by every dealer, and it is understood that only two were found to have given full weight.

The method pursued by the police was to spot a load of coal and escort it to the city's weigh scales. It is reported that the loads sent out by all the dealers except two were short in weight from 50 to 75 pounds. This shortness means considerable to a citizen who has placed a large order. For instance, a load which was 75 pounds short was one of ten which a resident had ordered. If the other nine loads were each 75 pounds short the purchaser was cheated out of 750 pounds or over one-third of a ton.

Will those dealers who have been giving short weight be prosecuted? That is what the outraged citizens will want to kno wand will demand an answer in the affirmative.

HICKS' WEATHER FORECASTS

A regular storm period will develop and run its regular course from the 3rd to the 7th inclusive. The full moon falls on the 3rd, and the centre of Mercury period on the 2nd. The Mars influence will extend to all the early part of March. Hence look for very low barometer, followed by heavy storms, on the 4th, 5th, 6th and 7th—first in the west, shifting regularly to eastward with possible thunder and ligtning and rain first, followed west by general damaging sleet, and possibly snow blockades. A cold wave will follow blizzardous storms from the northwest, calling for timely provisions against exposure and danger to man and beasts. A very decided seismic impulse will be felt in many places, within a period of seven days, central on the 3rd—watch telegrahic reports.

A reactionary storm period is central on the 10th, and 11th, involving the 9th and 12th. March the 11th, each year, is the central day of a four to six day period, in which the earth passes a maximum crisis of electric and magnetic unrest. Electrical storms, streams of solar magnetism, earth-currents, volcanic outbursts, auroral lights, telegraphic interruptions and seismic tremors are all quite common and natural at this crisis. Rain turning to sleet and snow, will return in force on and touching the 10th and 11th. Be prepared for this, and for the change to much colder, which will most likely follow, up to about the 14th.

A regular storm period covers the 14th to 19th, having its centre on the 16th. The barometer will begin falling in the west about the 14th, with cloudy and threatening conditions. By the 15th and 16th these conditions will bring rain areas, moving eastward, and on the 17th, 18th, and 19th a marked low barometer will pass the central Mississippi valley, attended by decided storms of rain and wind, with possibly tornadoes and hurricanes southward. Snow, rising barometer and change to much colder, will push the western flanks of these storms, leaving cold, fair weather over most parts for several days following storm. The new moon on the 18th, and on equator 1th, will hold the culmination of this period back until those dates. A seismic period is central on the 18th, covering the 15th to the 21st. Watch the world's record.

A reactionary storm period falls at the centre of earth's vernal equinox—on the 22nd, 23rd, and 24th. Should the barometer fall to very low readings, especially in the south coasts and gulf regions at this period, with high temperature and humid atmosphere, tornadic storms, or West India hurricanes should be apprehended. Rain, turning to snow, will visit many interior parts, followed from the northwest by rising barometer, cold wave and gales from the northwest. Cyclonic storms, likely to have their origin in the West Indies about the 18th, 19th and 20th, may reasonably be expected to reach the gulf regions with quickened energy, at this reactionary period. No harm to be on the watch. Vast danger and loss might result from neglect and indifference.

A regular storm period is central on the 28th, practically covering the last week in March. This does not mean that it will be storming everywhere all this time—only fools can so expect and so argue. Low barometer, cloudiness and storms of rain, turning to snow, will start in the west early in the period, will move eastward in successive days, preceded by falling barometer, fair and warmer weather, and followed from the westward by rising barometer, colder and clearing weather—all within the limits of, and days immediately following the storm period. Equinoctial storms are due at any storm period during this month and one or more such storms may be reckoned as a certainty. The barometer should be watched at the oncoming of every period, and its faithful monitions carefully noted and heeded. Such precautions would save life and property.

PLEASANT SUPRISE PARTY IN SIDNEY

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Blair Given Substantial Evidence of the Appreciation of Their Friends.

On the evening of Feb. 14th, the home of Mr. and Mrs. John M. Blair on the 2nd con. of Sidney was very pleasantly surprised, when between fifty and sixty of their friends and neighbors gathered to spend the evening with them previous to their departure for their new home.

Rev. E. E. Howard, pastor of Bayside appointment, acted as chairman and at the close of a few well chosen remarks, he called on Mrs. Jas. Donaldson to read the following address: Mr. and Mrs. Blair and family:

Dear Friends,—We, your neighbors and friends have met here tonight to spend a social hour or two with you before your removal to your new home. As you are moving quite a distance from us, we felt that we wished to take this opportunity of assuring you of our kindest wishes and good will. We, the people of White's Church, realise that by your departure we lose the kindest of neighbors, for your willing hands have always been ready to aid in every undertaking of our church and neighborhood, of which you have formed a part, but we feel that what is our loss will be others' gain.

We ask you to accept this side-board not for its intrinsic value but as a slight token of our valuation of your friendship and of the high esteem we hold for you. We pray that God's richest and choicest blessing may follow you and your family, not only to your new home, but all through life, as shall our kindest thoughts, for we are friends.

Signed on behalf of the people of White's Church—

Joseph Meggison,
Samuel Kincaid,
Jas. Donaldson,
David Parks.

After the presentation, which was a very beautiful piece of furniture, Mr. and Mrs. Blair and Miss Blair expressed their appreciation of the gift and the kind thoughts which came with it. This was followed by several speeches testifying to the esteem in which Mr. Blair and family are held, and also to the general regret at their departure. Refreshments were then served by the ladies The remainder of the evening was spent in music and social intercourse.

THE "SPANISH PRISONER" IS UNDER ARREST

A Rogue Who Has Been Operating for the Last Ten Years.

MADRID, Feb. 25.—With the arrest in Bilbao of a gang of swindlers and the capture of their complete paraphernalia, the Spanish police believe that they have at last succeeded in putting an end to the machinations of a rogue who for the last ten years has been known to the press of Europe and America as "The Spanish Prisoner." His agents at The Hague and in San Francisco have been operating extensively of late.

The agency at The Hague caused to be published in the English press notices of the demise of certain persons whose ancestors had fled to Holland during the religious persecution of the middle part of the sixteenth century and had died wealthy and without Dutch heirs. In these cases certain London solicitors became the unconscious agents of "The Spanish Prisoner," and actually transmitted the money necessary to present the claim to The Hague, where it was never heard of again.

In the house raided by the police in Bilbao were found a collection of photographs, letters and other documents, and long lists of Spanish, American and English names, with biographical notes attached, showing how it had been possible to conduct the business with so much plausibility.

Inquiry among the police here shows that several foerigners had from time to time arrived here, who had, fortunately, inquired of the police before looking up "The Spanish Prisoner," and had therefore been rescued from his machinations.

Some men get busy and tell their troubles for the purpose of getting into the game ahead of others who want to tell theirs.

A GROWING AND EFFICIENT AGENCY

That the Y.M.C.A. is a growing, efficient agency is shown by the following:

The new British Year Book will show 399 Young Men's Christian Associations in England, Ireland and Wales, a gain of 3; with 92,111 members, a gain of 63. These, with, the soldiers and other auxiliaries and associated unions, including Scotland, makes 1,248 centres in Britain with 146,866 members, a gain of 2,094. Their property value is $5,625,000. The Associations of the world show an increase from 7,681 centres to 8,056 and a membership growth from 820,643 to 859,621.

The recent summary of educational reports from Canada shows that 1,153 men are grouped in 40 different kinds of educational clubs for research and study; 92 paid teachers are giving instruction to nearly 1,600 employed men in class work; the educational expenses are $18,481, toward which the tuition receipts from students equal $12,891; and 110 international certificates have been won. There are 2,500 periodicals used in the reading rooms; 20,608 books have been drawn and read during the past year; 253 lectures and practical talks have been given, attended by 19,700 employed men and boys.

With its new equipment Belleville will be enabled to do a splendid work not only along educational lines but all other lines of association activity.

SYNOPSIS OF CANADIAN NORTHWEST LAND REGULATIONS.

ANY PERSON who is the sole head of a family or any male over 18 years old, may homestead a quarter section of available Dominion land in Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta. The applicant must appear in person at the Dominion Lands Agency or Sub-Agent for the district. Entry by proxy may be made at any agency on certain conditions, by father, mother son, daughter, brother or sister of intending homesteader.

Duties.—Six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each of three years. A homesteader may live within 9 miles of his homestead on a farm of at least 80 acres solely owned and occupied by him, by his father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister.—

In certain districts a homesteader in good standing may pre-empt a quarter section alongside his homestead. Price $3 per acre. Duties—Must reside upon the homestead or pre-emption six months in each of six years from date of homestead entry (including the time required to earn homestead patent) and cultivate fifty acres extra.

A homesteader who has exhausted his homestead right and cannot obtain a pre-emption may enter for a purchased homestead in certain districts. Price $3.00 per acre. Duties—Must reside six months in each of three years, cultivate fifty acres and erect a house worth $300.00.

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEY.

At the Arena to-night the Young Canadians and Albert College hockey teams will play. This match is one of the series for the senior championship of the city.

FRONTENACS TO TOUR.

The Frontenacs will probably go on tour in about two weeks' time. Arrangements are being completed for the team to visit New York and Boston, and as invitations have been received from Cleveland and Detroit these cities may also be visited. The trip depends on the ability of the players to get away from their work.

THE ALLAN CUP.

The next big event in hockey circles will be the fight for the Allan Cup, now in possession of the Victorias of Winnipeg. Secretary Hewitt, of the O.H.A., has forwarded to Secretary Northey, of the Allan Cup at Montreal, all credentials of the Eaton team, with a request for games for the Allan Cup with Winnipeg Victorias to be pulled off as early as possible. It is the desire of the O.H.A. authorities that the games be arranged for within two weeks. Eatons are ready to go to Winnipeg any time.

CAN'T SWIMS WON.

Last night, at the Arena, the return match between the Never-Sweats and the Can't-Swims was played, and the latter proved to be the best team by a big margin, the score being 7—3. The first game was won by the Never-Sweats, but last night the Can't-Swims were in fine form and played rings around their opponents.

The rubber will be played off very soon and should be a good game. Due notice will be given the public as to when it is going to be played.

Mr. "Gausie" Phillips referred in a most impartial manner.

The line-up was:—

Never-Sweats—		Cant-Swims—
Irsty Wallace	Goal	Bill Wallace
Bertie McCoy	Point	Herbie Deymar
Hank Elvins	C. Point	Beecher Wallace
Serbie Chown	Rover	Eddie Blaylock
Chue Wallace	Centre	Bas Taugher
Teddy Clarke	Wing	Lou Taugher
Phat Wallace	Wing	Thos. Manley

THEY'RE CHAMPIONS AGAIN.

PRESTON, Feb. 26.—Preston defeated Midland in a whirlwind game to-night by 6 to 4. Etherington started the game with a rush through Midland's defence to the goal where the puck was lost. For five minutes the puck never went out of Midland's territory and in six minutes of play Walker for Preston scored the first goal.

For seven minutes more the puck was kept in Midland's territory and the Preston boys were outplaying their rivals at every stage of the game. At fifteen minutes of play Midland made a grand dash through Preston's defense and shot their first goal. The puck was again carried into Midland's territory, but Midland carried through, and, after a hard fight in front of Preston's goal, made their second score on an easy stab by Chase. With two minutes to play Preston scored their second and the tally at half-time was 2 all. For the first minute of the second half Midland kept the puck close to the danger point in Preston's field, but the good work of Etherington and Bernhardt saved the day. From then on Preston had things ahead and at no stage of the game was in danger of losing. Rahn, with his head in bandages from injuries received at Midland, played the entire game. His work was wonderful on the ice, considering his condition.

At seven minutes of play in the second half, Gould, Midland's captain, went off on account of his lame knee, and Walker went off to even up. By this time Preston had scored two more points on fine team work. At nine minutes of play Midland made her third on a three-man combination, with two Preston men on the fence. Midland played like tigers to score again, but could not pass Bowman, who got the puck on a long shot and made the spectacular play of the game, carrying the puck through the entire field for Preston's fifth. One minute later, with five men playing, Preston scored the last goal. The play continued with from four to six men on a side until at five minutes Midland scored her fourth.

From then on the battle was terrific. Every man, with the possible exception of Etherington of the home team, played on pure nerve and excitement. Bernhardt was knocked out at one minute, and two Midland men went down and were hardly able to rise. Bowman of the home team dropped as the bell rang for final time, with the score Midland 4 and Preston 6. Preston had five shots at goal to Midland's one, but the Midland goalman was almost invulnerable. The teams:—

Midland—Scott, goal; Nichols, point; Gould, cover; Lavigne, rover; Chase, centre; W. Beatty, right wing; Hastings, left wing.

Referee—Gren Caldwell, Barrie.

BASEBALL.

EXHIBITION BALL GAMES.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Feb. 26.—Only the ruling of the National Baseball Commission prohibiting the worlds' championship club from playing exhibition games in its class, prevents the Philadelphia Americans and the New York Nationals repeating the world's series in Texas. Managers Mack and McGraw discussed the situation to-day and later may ask the National Commission to waive the rule this time because the training quarters of the two clubs are so near. If the series is arranged, half the games will be played here and the other half in Dallas. Even if the big fellows do not get together, it is expected the youngsters of the two aggregations will play several exhibition games.

ONLY A VAGABOND

By Jean Sigaud

Copyright by Publishers' Press Ltd

The court-crier rose, with seeming regret in his demeanour, and called in a mild tone of voice — "Antoine Jean, come forward!"

At that name a big fellow, wrapped from head to feet — in spite of the hot weather — in a trailing cloak of indefinable colour, a garment which must have been worn for many a year, pulled himself together and quietly obeyed.

"Your name?" said the presiding judge, in a weary voice.

"Antoine Jean."

"Your profession?"

"Independent gentleman."

"Well now, Antoine Jean, have you anything to say in your own behalf?"

"Nothing whatever to you, as a judge, but to thee, my old chum, Bouchard, I'll tell everything."

Those few words uttered by the vagabond suddenly brought back a new life to the whole court-room. The two associate judges sat bolt upright with indignant flashes in their eyes heavy from sleep.

"Bouchard, Bouchard, don't you remember my nickname, Rabelais?"

"Two months' imprisonment."

The jailor was smoking his pipe as he enjoyed the fresh air in front of the prison door.

"Perrin," said M. Bouchard, "I wish to examine this man at my own house. Please bring him yourself at five o'clock."

Perrin bowed, somewhat surprised at this complete derogation from all the ordinary usages of the prison.

At five o'clock the jailor brought the prisoner as desired.

"So you recognised me at last!" said the prisoner in his gentle voice, and without lowering his eyes before the sorrowful gaze of the judge, who brought a chair and made the vagabond sit close beside him, while he tried to read in that mysterious face the secret of so complete a downfall, and tried to find underneath that wretched mask the features of his old friend. "Yes; it's I myself, sure enough!" the vagabond answered.

"And to think," exclaimed M. Bouchard, "that I was obliged to sentence you — you, my poor Chabert, whom I always knew as such a good fellow, so [illegible] as, too much so, no doubt," the Judge added, with a penetrating look. "What a continual, cruel irony is life! Bouchard judging Chabert! Rabelais! Ah, my poor fellow."

The magistrate, looking searchingly into Chabert's eyes, asked him sadly, and in a very low tone:—"Was it a woman?"

"To be sure!" exclaimed the vagabond. "When a man falls as I have done, it is because he has leaned upon a woman's arm, and that arm has been suddenly withdrawn from him. A love-match," he continued, "without money is bound to come to grief. I adored my wife, but I could not support her decently, and she was unfaithful to me. When this happens, some men kill themselves. Others take to drink. Still other bury themselves in some kind of work. As for me, I suffered far less than these, for I became insane. Taking nothing with me, and without looking back, I tramped over the highways and over the footpaths in rain and sunshine thinking of nothing, seeing nothing, and only stopping at night when my swollen and bleeding feet would carry me no further. How far I tramped over those highways! My hat was full of holes, and my clothes could not have been at all creditable to me, for two policemen who saw me sitting on the opposite side of a ditch motioned me to come to them. The next morning Antoine Jean — for a remnant of sanity had made me conceal my true name — was committed for two months.

"What shall I say? Those two months must have been the beginning of a complete change in my whole physical and moral being. In the solitude of the prison my reason came back to me, and I meditated. And about what, do you suppose? About my wife's unfaithfulness and crime? No, about the happiness which she had brought me, my three years of earthly paradise while I lived with her! Her perfidy and my despair had disappeared; my thought did not rest upon them for a moment. That is the happiness which I owe to my prison life. When my two months were over, I took my staff and wallet like any self-respecting tramp — and I continued my tour of France. It has taken me ten years to find you. After two months I shall continue my journey."

The judge, looking him full in the face and grasping both hands, exclaimed passionately — "My dear Chabert, I want to save you!"

"To save me? From what?"

"From yourself, and in spite of yourself, if it must be so," said the judge, firmly. "As to the imprisonment for two months, I shall not permit you to endure it. I can arrange the matter. And, little by little, I want to see Jean Antoine disappear, and Chabert come to the front."

"Begin my life over again! Oh, no!" exclaimed the vagabond, as he rose from his seat. Then, taking the judge's hands in his own, he said—"My poor Bouchard, you are kind and good, and you love me; yet my cruelest enemy could not propose anything worse than you have done. I am speaking to you now with all my former cold sense, and I tell you that no place but the prison is gentle and pitiful to me. There only I can really live again, without thought of the present, without care for the future. And you would snatch this dream from me, and would kill me forever! Why, can't you see that my body is a mere rag, a thing which does not count at all, and which I no longer regard? What does it matter that this worn-out body should appear before sentenced, despised, branded! My dear old friend, call in the jailor who brought me here and let me go!"

"So be it!" said M. Bouchard in a sad tone. And the judge and the vagabond embraced each other fraternally. Then Chabert said, freeing himself and turning away—"Now, judge, do your duty."

MYSTERIOUS HUMAN RAYS.

The recent announcement from Paris that a Major Darget has discovered that the human body emits rays, which he has named "V"-rays is a reminder that confirmation has not yet been obtained of the mysterious rays which eight years ago M. Blondlot claimed to have seen. These rays, said M. Blondlot, were not only emitted by certain sources of light and heat, but also by the human body, and by animals such as frogs. They varied in their nature so much that a very thin sheet of aluminum was opaque to them when sent out from the brain or nervous system, but when originating in the muscles, the diaphragm, or the heart they easily passed through otherwise opaque screens. M. Blondlot named the rays the "N"-rays, after the town of Nancy, in the University of which he was a professor, but up to the present other investigators have utterly failed to discover their existence.

MAY TRY THE 54 TOGETHER

The Proceedings at Indianapolis Would be Unique—Sleuth Burns is Still Talking

INDIANAOPLIS, Ind., Feb. 27.—Trial of the fifty-four labor men against whom indictments were returned by the federal grand jury, for alleged participation in the dynamiting conspiracy promises to take its place as one of the greatest court hearings in history.

District Attorney Miller says that the Government will ask that all the men indicted be placed on trial at the same time. Judge Anderson wi'l probably rule on this question after the arraignment of the defendants in federal court March 12.

Probably never before have fifty or more defendants been placed on t ial in criminal procoeedings at the same time. The trial of the Camorrists in Italy is the only modern rival.

The statement of the district attorney is taken to mean that the Government will elect to try the indicted men first on the charge of conspiracy. Under conspiracy charges it is permissible to try a number of defendants at once. Three or four hundred witnesses are expected to testify.

Judge Anderson is expected to return from a trip to the south about March 1. It is possible that arguments on demurrers to indictments or other papers that may be filed will be heard by the court before the arraignment day.

That Clarence Darrow might be saved from the penitentiary was the reason given by Detective William J. Burns for the confession of the McNamara brothers before 400 members of the Knife and Fork Club at South Bend. It was a reply to the question, "How did the McNamaras come to confess?" Burns paused a moment after his startling statement. Then he added, "and if Darrow were not now under indictment, and about to be tried, I'd give you some more facts."

Burns was speaking on "Graft and Its Ramifications." He sketched the history of the San Francisco graft revelations and declared that labor was being exploited in exactly the same maner as San Francisco had been exploited by its own leaders.

Throughout his address he assailed President Samuel Gompers with the greatest severity and by name, and made it plain that he believed the head of the American Federation of Labor knew all about the matter.

"I believe in organized labor," he shouted, "but I want to say, that until organized labor stands its leaders up and puts them through the test and gets rid of those who cannot stand the test, it cannot hope to have the support of the people. But when it does do that it may rest assured that public opinion will give it the support it deserves and justice will be done."

PRIZE-FIGHTER CHARGED WITH MOTOR HOLD-UP

Arrest of Edward Kinsman, Alias Collins, For New York Robbery.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Edward Kinsman, alias Collins, who described himself as a prize fighter and a restaurant waiter, was locked up in the Tom[illegible]to-night charged with being the principal in the recent robbery of two East River National Bank messengers of $25,000 on the afternoon of February 15. The robbery occurred in the heart of the financial district while the bank messengers were travelling in a taxicab with $25,000 cash from the Planters' Exchange bank. Five men participated in the hold-up.

Kinsman, the principal, was arrested at the Grand Central Station late this afternoon as they were about to board a tarin for Chicago. The police were reticent as to their actions, and it was said other arrests were to be made. Police Commissioner Waldo said one thing that had not been esthalished was that the robbers did not use an automobile in escaping after the robbery, as they were first thought to have done, bst took an elevated train and later drove out of town in a taxicab.

Gene Montani, the chauffeur of the taxicab in which the bank messengers were held up, was brought to headquarters late in the afternoon for the purpose of identifying Kinsman as one of the robbers, and it is said that he identified the prisoner. The police have nothing to say of the women who were detained with Kinsman, except that one of them was well known in the tenderloin district.

(Intelligencer Special.)

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—A good roads deputation waited on Sir James Whitney this morning and asked that the Government devote part of its grant towards maintenance, instead of as, hitherto, spending the whole amount on the construction of roads. The municipalities, it was pointed out were feeling the burden of the upkeep and repairing. No definite answer was given on this point, but the Government promised the same grant for highway purposes as last year, with an additional $300 for the printing and distributing throughout the province of the good roads repotr.

PLUCKY ACT OF INGERSOLL GIRL

Holds Up Alleged House-breaker With Revolver—Thief Arrested

INGERSOLL, Ont., Feb. 27.—Armed with her father's heavy revolver, Miss Annie Bearss, the eighteen year old daughter of Constable Henry Bearss, was responsible for the capture of a man giving the name of Henry Watson, and who to-morrow morning will appear in the Police Court to answer to a charge of breaking and entering by day the dwelling of Mrs. Lillywhite, Charles Street east.

With unflinching nerve Miss Bearss covered the supposed burg'ar with the revolver, while her sister who had accompanied her to the Lillywhite home hurried to inform her father, who had been sleeping.

When the Bearss sisters approached the Lillywhite residence, Watson, it is said, went out by way of a back door. He was commanded to stop by the girl with the revolver. Watson at first ignored the command, but when a couple of bullets whizzed over his head he was very submissive. The girl kept him covered with the gun, until her father was in sight. Watson then made a dash, and the girl emptied the revolver in an endeavor to frighten him into surrendering. He was captured by Constable Bearss after a short chase.

Miss Bearss, it is said, saw Watson enter the house, and after notifying her father, who was in bed, as he is a night constable, hurried to take part in the exciting capture.

WIDOW'S BRAVE FIGHT.

Will Keep Family Together on Rugged Muskoka Farm.

The story of a brave fight to keep a home together for her nine children between five and twenty years of age was unfolded before Mr. Justice Clute at Osgoode Hall this morning. Mrs Benjamin Sopher asked for leave to occupy free of rent the farm left by her husband, who died without making a will. The farm is 60 acres in estate, but only 45 acres are capable of cultivation. The farm is valued at $2,500, and the chattels at $500. If the farm is sold by the administration there would not be enough to support the family.

"It's a very reasonable request," remarked Mr. Justice Clute in granting he order. The widow will have the use of the implements and undertakes to pay the taxes and interest as well as to support the family during the minority of the children.—Toronto Telegram.

A FATHER'S REMEMBRANCE.

Gives Million Apiece to His These Sons.

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—Henry Phipps, who for several years has been emulating the example of his old-time partner, Andrew Carnegie, in handing out gifts by the hundred thousand, half million, and million, has just now handed out another little present of $3,000,000.

He has given $1,000,000 apiece to his three sons, John S., Henry Carnegie and Howard. The gift is in the shape of Chicago real estate, and Mr. Phipps, the elder, presented it to his "boys" because he didn't want to be bothered with the annoying details of taking care of it.

Mr. Phipps is about seventy-three years of age and in excellent health and spirits.

43 DAYS IN A STORM AT SEA.

Schooner Dorothy Palmer Short of Food When Picked Up by a Cutter.

VINEYARD HAVEN, Mass., Feb. 27.—The story of a forty-three days' battle with a succession of gales was told by Capt. J. Clement Harding, of the five-masted schooner Dorothy Palmer, which was towed into port today by the revenue cutter Acushnet. The schooner left Portsmouth, N.H., for Norfolk on Jan. 13 and had not been reported until she anchored off the Nantucket Shoals Lightship yesterday short of food.

The storms began the day after the vessel left Portsmouth. A heavy gale swept the schooner well off shore until she reached the gulf stream, and from that time gale after gale was encountered. As the vessel was light and high out of water, she was an easy target for the wind and seas and was driven as far south as Bermuda. She scudded under bare poles most of the time, but still lost several sails and came into port with others in tatters.

Despite the Palmer's severe buffeting, her hull seems to have been undamaged, and only repairs to her windlas, which was broken, and replacement of her sails is needed before she resumes her voyage to Norfolk.

CANVASSERS ARE NEARING THE GOAL

Looks as if Y. M. C. A. Will Have That $8000 To-Night to Rejoice Over

There is no doubt but that the canvassers who have been actively engaged in the past three days soliciting for the new Y.M.C.A. building will be rewarded for their efforts in seeing the required sum raised. On Friday last it was stated that $52,000 was necessary to pay for the building furnishings, and running the Association for one year. Of this amount $30,000 had been previously subscribed; $5,000 each was given conditionally by Lord Strathcona and Mr. H. Corby, ex-M.P. of this city, leaving $12,000 yet to be provided for. Of this amount $4,000 was in sight, leaving still $8,000 to be raised. Eleven teams were organized, including a boys' team, to canvass for this amount, which will no doubt be realized.

At luncheon to-day a spirit of buoyancy prevailed amongst the canvassers, many of whom were present. Mr. D. V. Sinclair, President of the Association, presided, and the proceedings were enlivened by songs. When the various teams had reported it was ascertained that only $971 was required to be raised in order to reach the desired goal, and by eight o'clock to-night it is confidently expected that this amount will be realized. The amount collected up to noon to-day by the various teams was as follows:

Team 1—R. J. Graham . .	$1,201.00
Team 2—Geo. Woodley	557.00
Team 3—Ed. F. Dickens ..	594.50
Team 4—W. A. A. Chown	588.50
Team 5—M. H. Mowry ..	668.00
Team 6—Henry Pringle ..	661.00
Team 7—H. F. Ketcheson	250.00
Team 8—A. E. Bailey	387.00
Team 9—W. B. Deacon ..	444.00
Team 10—D. V. Sinclair	1,235.00
Boys—Russel McCreary ..	143.00
Total	$6729.00

TO DIVIDE PROVINCE INTO TEN DISTRICTS

The Governments' Bill to Reform the Health System of Ontario.

TORONTO, Feb. 27.—The legislative provision for the division of the province into health districts will probably came before the House this week. The necessary amending clause is being placed in the health act now in the hands of the statute revision commission.

The province will be divided into ten districts, each comprised of five or more counties. The amendment will not fix the boundaries of the districts, which will be determined later, probably according to population, with the counties in each district grouped along the railway lines to allow the inspectors to cover the ground easily.

The new provision will not apply to the larger cities possessing efficient health departments. Cities of over 70,000 population will probably be left out.

Hon. W. J. Hanna's reform in the health system has been commended by medical men generally, and it is expected that it will meet with the approval of the opposition.

MOST PATHETIC INCIDENT.

Jury Handed Over Their Fee to Mother of the Deceased.

KINGSTON, Feb. 27.—A most pathetic incident occurred in connection with the inquest conducted at Collins Bay, on Monday morning, by Dr. A. E. Ross, on the young man named Robert Barr, who was killed by being run over by a train, on Saturday afternoon. As stated in Monday's Whig, the evidence pointed to accidental death. The young man knew that the train was coming, but evidently walked on to the track while his mind was engaged on some other matter.

After all the evidence had been taken by Dr. Ross, and each man paid his fee of $1 for attendance on the jury, the foreman of the jury collected the amount given to each man and afterwards presented it to the mother of the deceased. The members of the jury felt very sorry for the bereaved and felt that they could not take the money under the circumstances, and so agreed to hand the amount over. It was not a large sum, just $12, but the incident showed that their hearts were in the right place. It was indeed a very knd and thoughtful act.

MADAME SHERRY.

Miss Ada Meade, who comes to the Griffin Opera House Friday, March 1st, as prima donna in Madame Sherry, has appeared in very few plays on tour previous to her engagement. Miss Meade in recent years appeared with Miss Fritzi Scheff and alternated with the latter. For two seasons she played prima donna roles with the Aborn Opera Co. She is under a three year contract with her present managers and later is to appear in a new play. Miss Meade devotes her spare time to study and has an offer to go in grand opera, which she will most likely accept at the termination of her present contract.

MYSTERIOUS HUMAN RAYS.

The recent announcement from Paris that a Major Darget has discovered that the human body emits rays, which he has named "V"-rays, is a reminder that confirmation has not yet been obtained of the mysterious rays which eight years ago M. Blondlot claimed to have seen. These rays, said M. Blondlot, were not only emitted by certain sources of light and heat, but also by the human body, and by animals such as frogs. They varied in their nature so much that a very thin sheet of aluminum was opaque to them when sent out from the brain or nervous system, but when originating in the muscles, the diaphragm, or the heart they easily passed through otherwise opaque screens. M. Blondlot named the rays the "N"-rays, after the town of Nancy, in the University of which he was a professor, but up to the present other investigators have utterly failed to discover their existence.

THE YAKUT EATS WOOD

Away Up North in Siberia the Natives Turn Down Fish and Fatten on Slabs of Wood with Snow-Brew.

Wood in a certain form is a common and constant article of food in all sections of Siberia where the Yakut lives.

North of Verchoyansk, except in a few sheltered valleys, there is little food, aside from that afforded by fish than that furnished by the larch. The natives eat it, however, because they like it. Even in sections where fish may be had, wood usually forms part of the native's evening meal, as the many clearly stripped larch logs near every hut testify.

The natives strip off the thick layers immediately under the bark of a larch log, and, chopping it fine, mix it with snow. It is then boiled in a kettle. Sometimes a bit of fish roe is added, and in the southern sections cow's milk or butter.

Not Gratifying.

Some one sent the manuscript of a story to a literary friend, with the request that he would criticise it. The friend returned it, with the following note:

"My dear Blank: Your book contains much that is both new and good; but what is new is not good, and what is good is not new."

It is wicked for us to go about with faces which indicate that life has been a disappointment to us instead of a glorious joy. It shows that we have missed the real object of living, that we have never caught a glimpse of the realities of life, but that we are living in the shadows, in the gloom instead of the sunshine of reality, of truth, of beauty. It indicates that we have not even caught a glimpse of the real glory of life.

Work for Women.

If the harem of Abdul Hamid finds itself out of employment because of the misfortunes of its imperial master, the ladies thereof will find plenty to do in this country where, thanks to a sudden famine in domestic servants, most of us are doing our own housework.

The worst of country society or for the matter of that the society of any community, is that every woman is eligible, but only a man here and there.

KING'S KINDNESS

There are many stories of the late King Edward's kindness of heart, and the following is a typical illustration of this:—

One of the most efficient and faithful officers on a certain Royal yacht was a captain of very moderate means. For some years he battled with the situation, but at last, worn-out and heart-sick, he determined to resign and enter the mercantile marine.

In some way or other King Edward heard of his resolve. Less than a couple of months after Captain E—— was surprised, and even alarmed, to receive a peremptory command from the King ordering him to report at Buckingham Palace forthwith. Although he knew that his papers were clean, he felt perturbed nevertheless. His reception by the late King, however, was one of the most cordial nature. After some preliminary remarks, His Majesty said:—

"I think you are entitled to a holiday in return for your many years' work on the ——, so you had better take this."

The astounded officer was handed an Admiralty order granting him a year's leave of absence on captain's full pay.

"You can renew that at the end of the year if you so desire," added His Majesty, with a significant laugh. "And, by the way, this may interest you."

The captain was then given a letter offering him the command of a superb and newly-built ocean liner. The letter was to the effect that the personal recommendation of the King was the cause of its being written. The overhelmed captain never quite remembered how he got out of the palace. But he became the monarch of the ocean liner.

The Cinematograph has just been utilized by the police of Prague in an original fashion. Henceforth all the shows in Bohemia will exhibit the portraits of criminals who are "wanted" by the police. The public will be invited to collaborate with the police in arresting malefactors.

Neglecting His Business.

A country doctor was recently called upon to visit a patient some distance away. Driving to where the invalid tied his horse to a tree and started to walk across the field. It happened that work was in progress on a new well, of which the doctor knew nothing until he found himself sinking into the earth. He fell just far enough to be unable to get out of the hole unassisted, and lustily yelled for help. When he was finally pulled up, the hired man remarked to him:—

"I say, doc, you had no business down there."

"No, I don't think I had," replied the doctor.

"Don't you know," continued the hired man, "you ought to leave the well alone and take care of the sick?"

French Language Used in England.

Though we are in the twentieth century the Norman French of Edward the Confessor is still, in a way, the legal voice of Parliament. Whenever a Bill has passed the British Commons, the Clerk, before he forwards it to the House of Lords, writes upon it according to ancient usage: "Soit baillé aux Seigneurs" (Let it be sent to the Lords). If it is sent from the Peers to the Commons, it bears the like endorsement: "Soit baille aux Communes" (Let it be sent to the Commons).

WEDDING BELLS.

BROUGH—POST.

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. R. Post at West Huntingdon on Wednesday evening, February 21st, 1912, when their eldest daughter, Tillie J., was united in marriage to Mr. A. Lorne Brough, of Fuller, son of Mrs. I. J. Brough. The bride entered the drawing room leaning on the arm of her father, to the strains of the "Bridal Chorus," which was ably rendered by Miss Bessie English, of Moira. The ceremony was performed under an arch of evergreens very beautifully decorated with white bells and pink and white carnations, by Rev. E. A. Tonkin, of West Huntingdon. The bride looked very charming in a dress of Swiss embroidery and tulle veil, carrying bride's roses and white carnations. The bride was unattended, with the exception of a flower girl, Miss Edna Rollins, who was dressed in white silk trimmed with Irish point lace and insertion, and carried a dainty basket of roses and lily-of-the-valley. After receiving the hearty congratulations of their friends, a bountiful repast was served to about sixty guests. The many beautiful and costly presents testified to the popularity of the young couple. The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome sable muff and to the flower girl a signet ring.

Among the guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. F. Goodman, Picton; Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Rollins, Tweed; Mr. and Mrs. H. Rollins, Cooper; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rollins, Sine; Mrs. Jas. Lucas, Toronto; Mr. W. Brough, Stirling; Messrs. Roy and Walter Post, Campbellford; Mr. Ed. Post, Marmora; Mr. Ben and Miss Bessie Post, Prince Edward Co.; Miss Ida M. Rollins, Madoc.

THE CONGO DWARFS

Pygmies Whose Mischievousness and Good Nature Seem to Have Inspired Legends of Goblins in Story Books.

In certain respects the great Congo forest of western Central Africa is the most wonderful region in the world. There are ape-like negroes and curious little Congo dwarfs. These dwarfs are less than five feet high, and their behavior is strangely like that of the brownies and goblins found in fairy stories. Their remarkable power of becoming invisible by adroit hiding behind herbage and rocks; their habit of making a home in holes and caverns; their mischievousness and good nature, all seem to suggest that it was some such race as this which inspired legendary stories of a little race having supernatural attributes.

These dwarfs are good or bad neighbors to the ordinary natives, according to the treatment they receive. If their depredations on the banana groves, or their occasional thefts of tobacco or maize are ignored, or even if small gifts of food are left where they may easily find them, they will leave, in their nightly visitations, return gifts of meat or skins, and ivory.

These pygmies live entirely by hunting, although they eat wild honey as well as meat. They live separately, in tiny huts four feet high.

Although they are in some respects quite near the apes in their physical characteristics, they are more clever than the larger negroes.

"CONSECRATED GROUND"

Moliere died while performing a part in one of his own plays. The Archbishop of Paris would not allow his body to be inhumed in consecrated ground. Therefore the king sent for the archbishop and expostulated with him, but he was obstinate and would not willingly comply with his majesty's request. The king desired to know how many feet deep the holy ground reached. The bishop replied, "About eight." "Well," replied the king, "I find there is no getting over your scruples; let his grave be dug twelve feet; that is four feet below your consecrated ground."

SPEAK UP AND SHUT UP

"If non-Christian races do not respond to the official efforts of missionary organizations the cause is to be sought, not in the superiority of other religions to Christianity, but in the inferiority of the adventurers, the colonists and the officials of Christian European powers, dho have, for generations, exploited the weaker races of mankind."

Manitoba Will Not Tax T. & N. O. Says Roblin.

Winnipeg, Feb. 28.—Premier Roblin, in his speech to the Legislature, covering Ontario's claims on Hudson Bay, said:

"In reference to the reports that the Province of Ontario is considering the expediency of extending their provincial railway to Hudson Bay, and using either the Nelson River or Churchill as their treminus, I am sure that I voice the sentiments not only of the members of this Legislature, but of the people of this province as a whole, when I say that Manitoba will do everything possible to assist her sister province in extending the provincial roads under terms and conditions that are as favorable as it is possible for this province to make them.

"The Hudson Bay Railway now being constructed by the Government of Canada will be exempt from taxation, and I am sure that this Legislature and province would naturally support exemption from taxation for all the properties and terminals of any Government-owned road that Ontario may, we hope, construct to Hudson Bay through Manitoba when we get an extension of boundaries.

"I would not confine any exemption by this Legislature from taxation to the road built by Ontario to Churchill or the Nelson River, but make it equally applicable to our sister province, Saskatchewan, to the west.

Brantford Priest Speaks Out.

Brantford, Feb. 28.—Rev. Dean Brady, parish priest of St. Basil's, made a somewhat spirited reply to some local views expressed relating to the ne temere decree yesterday.

He said that Brantford Catholics relied implicitly on the recent statement of the Bishop of Montreal, that the Catholic Church aimed to regulate the marriage of its own people and to guide its people's conscience. As for other denominations, they could do as they chose, which right was claimed by the Catholic Church. The civil law was of no concern.

Dean Brady objected to alleged efforts to create an enmity among peaceful citizens.

His remarks were made following a meeting of local Orangemen, addressed Monday night by Rev. J. M. Whitelaw, at which protests were entered against the ne temere decree and plans were made for a mass meeting which, it is stated, the Evangelical Alliance of Ontario will conduct.

Plants Breaking Up an Island.

The man in the street would scarcely associate great growth with so delicate and fragile a thing as maidenhair fern, yet if its roots have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms has been known to lift a large stone. Indeed, plants are on record as having broken the hardest rocks. The island of Aldabra, to the north-west of Madagascar, is now becoming smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps thus formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably reduce the island to pieces.

You can't expect a blind man to see the error of his way.

THE SECRET OF PAUL FARLEY

— BY —
JOHN MARCH
(AUTHOR OF "A CHILD OF MANY PRAYERS," ETC.).

Supplied Exclusively in Canada by The British & Colonial Press Service, Limited.

Felix Fleming threw himself back in his chair, crossed his legs, and broke into a loud, hearty laugh. "I—jealous of a woman—jealous of her hard-earned store of knowledge? Not I. With these two hands I could crush the little skull that held the lore of all the ages. A woman is welcome to all the learning she can pack her head with, provided she does not oust out her womanliness to make way for it."

"I should think a University woman could be a womanly woman," Agnes said, hovering like a month near the lamp in her white dress.

"No doubt you are right, sister mine," he said, holding his tobacco pouch between his knees and carefully filling his pipe, "I am simply an old-fashioned fellow, with old-fashioned ideas respecting women and their ways."

"I know exactly the kind of woman to suit Felix," Agnes said, taking a low seat between them. "To begin with she would have a well-educated, well-endowed healthy mind, small piquant features, a clear wholesome bloom with just a sprinkling of freckles—because she would be fond of being about in the open air with her husband—a little, light, elastic creature as graceful as a bird. Besides, of course, she would be domesticated, she would be just as accomplished in the drawing-room as practical in the kitchen, and whether in society or knitting, or scouring pots and pans, Mrs. Prim would wear a black silk apron, a wincey gown, neat linen collar and cuffs, and gild the homeliest duties with an atmosphere of loveliness and joy. I think in all probability she would thrum on the harpsichord walk a minuet, and work antique tapestry stitches on a sampler—a slightly modernized replica of Lucretia spinning in the midst of her maidens, if you remember, Mr. Farley?"

"Remember the croakings of the frogs in Egypt," Felix said sententiously.

"I expect that is an excellent word sketch of the future Mrs. Fleming," Paul said, smiling at her through his glittering glasses. "Do you think she would make a nice docile wife?"

"Yes, I think she would, but, oh, my gracious, what a paragon of a sister-in-law! Felix is a good sort, but I don't believe even he is virtuous enough to live up to her."

"Nothing ever charms me more than when I meet my superior," he remarked, calmly puffing away at his pipe, "one who makes me sincerely feel he is my superior."

"I don't think you will be likely to meet that man often," Paul remarked.

"Oh, come, Farley," he returned with a broad smile. "I can't digest flattery absolutely free of adulteration. I don't value a compliment, wrap it up as poetically and delicately as you may. I am plain, honest yeoman, and if I tried to flounder about in that artificial tomfoolery, I should soon be beyond my depth."

"Pardon me," he said, with a winning smile. "I spoke out the thought in my mind; it was not expedient, and has certainly a fulsome flavor coming from almost a stranger."

"Now, I'll compliment you both," Agnes said, shifting her ottoman nearer to Paul and treating him to a quizzing smile from her half-closed eyes, "a great, good, wise and handsome man stands the first of all created things!"

"That's a crib, Miss Fleming, and I ought to pinch you," he said, throwing away the end of his cigarette.

"Nothing of the kind you horrid wiseacre," she pouted, taking the rose from her bosom and hitting him with it. He took it from her after a skirmish and put it in his button hole with the half-open bud. Felix looked from one to the other with an indulgent smile. He was glad and content to see the easy bantering bonhomie the young people had rapidly established between themselves. It augured well for the long cosy winter evenings—the parlor ruddy with a cheerful fire, the light glimmering and dancing on the dark oak panelling, and the interesting, artistic figure of Paul Farley very much in the foreground.

"Tell me, Miss Fleming, are you going to the ball at the Larches?" asked Paul, holding out the rose.

"Yes, I am, Mr. Farley, and I shall expect you to sit out all the waltzes with me."

"Rather a large order, when nowadays every other dance on the programme is a waltz. Are you going, Mr. Fleming?" he asked.

"I am going to take Agnes," he said, "I think this affair will be a shade out of the ordinary dull routine. You see, there's precious little dissipation in the country, and I don't want the child to get hipped. I shall run up to town next week and get her a domino. What do you say, Farley, to a jaunt with me? How will the 'Cecil' suit you; a first-class recherché dinner, a theatre, and home next day?"

"Admirably!" he said, pushing his chair back into the shadow of the curtain, "that is if I could get away for a night, which I am sure is next to impossible."

"Pooh, nonsense."

"Now, Mr. Fleming, if you will purchase me a mask when buying for yourself I shall be much obliged."

"I will, with pleasure," he said cordially, "but, on my soul, I don't see why you should not come with me. There's no necessity to launch out too extravagantly; we could—"

"I can quite understand why Mr. Farley demurs," Agnes interposed; "he has been such a short time at the Hall; it would seem like taking advantage of Sir Thomas's good nature to ask leave of absence so soon."

"I would much prefer not to ask permission unless some very important and unavoidable business called me away," he said, with intense earnestness.

"Very well, Farley, don't bother," he said. "I'll run up for a few hours and take Agnes," a shade of disappointment on his brow.

"So you mean to face the music," he inquired after a pause, "and put in an appearance at the Widow Wycherly's?"

"I promised—"

The sharp report of a gun rang out on the still night air. Felix sprang to his feet, ran down the steps on to the grass, and stood searching the horizon with his keen grey eyes.

"What is it?" Paul asked, joining him.

"Someone after the pheasants in the plantation yonder. I think I'll slip down there, and find out who the rascal is. Are you in the mind for a chase?"

"Yes," he said, "I'm in very good trim just now."

"I suppose you are a crack shot?"

"Great Scot! I've never had a gun in my hand."

"I'll give you a day's shooting later. I don't think it will take much tuition to ensure your getting a rabbit. Agnes," he called, "fetch a couple of caps and the lead bludgeon from the keeping-room, and then run in, that thin dress is no protection when a heavy dew is falling."

Paul stopped and turned up his trousers at the ankle.

"You think that thing sufficient defence?" he asked, as they left the gravel and walked on the edge of the damp grass.

"Plenty," he said, swinging the ugly cudgel airily round. "If it's Denham and his kidney, they're the most cowardly scamps unhung."

"So Denham indulges in poaching as a pastime?"

"He gets a few rabbits, and snares a young leveret now and again, but the lout hasn't the hardihood to do much harm. He knows I'm wedded to my gun, and rarely ever off the land. He takes it I'm at East Weyberne meeting to-night, which accounts for yon stray shot."

They crossed the turnpike into a wield, kept along in the shadow of a fence, and then, leaving the open, clambered over huge clumps of prickly yellow gorse into the plantation. The moon was not so full as on the previous night, and stumbling among the tangled undergrowth, it seemed as if a double handful of darkness had been flung broadcast betwixt the aged and blackened trunks of the pine trees.

Suddenly, Felix stopped to listen, and Paul came plunging against him breathless, half-stupefied by the dark mass of luxuriant growth and foliage, and stared at him with a dazed glance of inquiry.

The Squire put his hand on Paul's arm and drew him close.

"What's the matter?" he whispered, bending down the better to discern his features; "you are all in a tremor!"

"It's terribly dark and oppressive here," he said "I should like if possible to keep beside you instead of tumbling aimlessly about behind. I have a vague indefinable feeling that we shall come upon something horrible directly."

An arm came around his shoulders, and Paul heard a sound similar to that of a stifled laugh.

"What are you waiting for?" he breathed.

He could feel the beating of the Squire's heart, and the throbbing of the pulse in the wrist around his neck, and the heavy bronze moustache tickled his ear.

"I can hear the sound of snapping twigs," he said, "or it may be only the dropping of fir-cones; still, I think there's life about, though not human, perhaps. What a bundle of nerves you are," he added, feeling in his vest pocket for his match-box, and resting his chin on the crown of Paul's head.

"This kind of recreation is rather novel, and I should say a trifle hazardous," he answered, "and I have a decided preference for a whole skin."

"We are running no risk at all, I assure you," Felix said. "Had I scented a possible danger I should have come alone and brought a pair of pistols with me I always keep loaded. I know everyone of Denham's pals by sight. They're a lot of crass, good-for-nothing loafers, who want to make a few shillings out of snared game at the nearest market town. I don't think the men are vicious or desperate enough to spill blood over the business."

"Denham has a grudge against you, though," Paul said, his mind all at once harking back to the scene opposite the "Popinjay." "I noticed an evil look in his small eyes the other night when you threatened to sack him if he didn't go quietly home."

"I've had dealings with Denham ever since I was a nipper of a lad. He's a good laborer, though nearly always in drink. I should be loth to think it more than a momentary anger at being pulled up short in the presence of an admiring and applauding audience."

It was a still night, and although the moon was hidden, the heavens above the dense blue-black plantation trees were studded with myriads of stars.

"The best thing we can do is to hug one another," Felix said, "until her Majesty comes out from behind that cloud, and—hello! what's this coming? By Jove, it's a dog, and he seems to know me, too!"

The animal cringed and sniffed, leaped and then fawned upon him. It ran a little way and returned, wagging not only its tail, but its whole body seemed in an ecstacy of delighted satisfaction at his timely find.

"He looks like one of the Weyberne Lodge dogs," Felix said, stooping and rubbing the collie's ears. "I wonder what he's after down here? I believe there is something wrong, Farley, and the intelligent creature has stopped the first human beings he has met to tell them in this dumb, dog fashion."

(To be Continued.)

But it takes a woman to keep a secret she doesn't know.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 27.—There was an improved demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat for nearby shipment, and the prices bid were 3d higher; but, notwithstanding this fact, there was very little business done on account of the scarcity of ocean room, and exporters generally being well sold out of near-at-hand grain. The demand for May-June shipment was dull. In sympathy with the weakness in the Winnipeg market for oats, prices on spot declined ½c per bushel. A good business was done in flour at steady prices. Millfeed is scarce and in good demand. Butter is firm and fairly active. Demand for eggs is good.

Corn—American No. 3 yellow, 75c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 52c to 52½c; do., No. 3, 51c to 52c; extra No. 1 feed, 52c to 52½c; No. 2 local white, 50½c to 51c; No. 3 local white, 49½c to 50c; No. 4 local white, 48½c to 49c.

Barley—Malting, $1.05 to $1.10.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 72c to 73c.

Washington, Feb. 27.—Japan by 1916 will have wrested the position of third naval power from the United States, and this country will have difficulty in maintaining itself in fourth place unless it builds two battleships a year.

Secretary Meyer declared this to be a fact in his testimony before the House naval affairs committee. The Secretary urged greater liberality by Congress in dealing with the naval establishment.

The committee is pledged to economy, and although appropriations for battleships have not been acted upon, many members are inclined not to support the Democratic caucus resolution against a two-battleship program. The suggestion for a wireless, however, is not likely, to be entertained.

RAILWAY STATISTICS.

The investment represented by the railway property of Canada reaches $1,528,689,201, and to this large sum must be added over $200,000,000 of the subsidies and loans by the Canadian Government; also the value of upwards of 55,000,000 acres of land granted by the Dominion or the Provinces in aid of the various enterprises. According to figures just issued, the four systems in Canada, viz., the C.P.R., the C.N.R., the G.T.R., and the I.C.R., represent four fifths of the whoel railways of the country, and the total earnings of the railways last year were $188,733,000, and the operating expenses 131,034,000. The former represents an increase over the previous year of $14,777,000, equal to 8.7 per cent., which is a better showing than has been made for years, and as the population of the country grows it is expected that the railway traffic will also increase.

U. S. POLITICS.

The sensation of the day in the political world in the United States is the announcement of ex-President Roosevelt that he is a candidate for the Republican nomination for the Presidency.

This declaration, in face of Mr. Roosevelt's record on the subject, is, to say the least, extraordinary, for on the night of his election as President in 1904 he made this emphatic declaration:—

> "On March 4th next I shall have served three and a half years, and this three and a half years constitute my first term. The wise custom which limits the President to two terms regards the substance and not the form, and under no circumstances will I be a candidate for or accept another nomination."

Mr. Roosevelt's present intention of being a candidate for a third term in the Presidential chair has aroused a political tempest of a fierceness seldom or never before experienced throughout the country and the press, Republican as well as Democratic, is virtually a unit in denouncing him. As a sample of the utterances of the Republican press we give the following article from the Buffalo Express, one of the most able and reputable journals which support the party:

> For the second time in the history of the United States a man who has held the office of President for two terms has become an avowed candidate for a third. Colonel Roosevelt's reply to the western Governors bears out the predictions of his most hostile critics, who have insisted that the various stages of development of the Roosevelt boom bore evidence of careful nursing which would have been impossible without the approval of the man chiefly concerned. Mr. Roosevelt has himself placed in the hands of his enemies the most effective weapon they could possibly have with which to destroy his influence in public affairs henceforth, if he should be defeated, and to assail and wreck his administration if he should be nominated and elected.
>
> All great men have their weak sides. Mr. Roosevelt's praticular weakness, as those familiar with his career have long known, is his proneness to listen to the voice of flattery. He has owed it more to good luck than to wisdom that this has not hitherto led him far astray. But those who have besieged him persistently on the question of a third term well knew where his armor was vulnerable, and they have penetrated it. He has chosen his position. Aut Caesar aut nullus.
>
> There might be a better excuse for Mr. Roosevelt's candidacy if he had any issue to represent aside from that of his own personality. But there is no such issue. He announces none in his letter to the Governors and neither he nor his friends have made any during the preliminary agitation which led to his declaration, for it can hardly be supposed that the fantastic idea advanced in his Ohio speech for a popular referendum on the decisions of the highest courts will ever be dignified into an issue. La Follette had certain definite propositions to stand on, but Roosevelt cannot run on the La Follette platform. All that was best in his two administrations has been taken up and carried forward by the Taft administration and is now a part of the Taft record. Moreover, it stands, not as academic theory, but as accomplished fact. To a great extent the opposition to Taft's renomination represents reaction from the doctrines which Roosevelt taught—a repudiation in practice of what appeared very attractive in public discussion. This makes Mr. Roosevelt's course in joining and leading the opposition to Taft the harder to understand, and it will add greatly to the difficulty of his friends in having his candidacy accepted by the people.
>
> But if Mr. Roosevelt has no issue but his personality on which to make himself a candidate, his entrance into the field creates an issue of the first importance against himself. Thirty-two years ago he considered this issue so important that he made his first plunge into politics in an attempt to organize an insurgent movement against the third-term candidacy of General Grant. The importance of the issue has not been lessened by the substitution of Roosevelt for Grant as the third-term aspirant. The breaking of the two-term precedent would remove all limitations on the re-election of a President. Even admitting that in Roosevelt's case there would be no danger in a third, a fourth or a fifth term, his successors for as long as the republic should last would need to be very strong men to resist the pressure to become candidates for third and fourth terms also. Perhaps, as the Outlook argues, that is no more to be dreaded than is the indefinite continuance in power of a British Premier. But there are a lot of Americans who don't like it, who think it safer to keep the door closed against too great extension of personal ambition, to permit no further temptations to demagogy than now exist in the nation's highest executive office. They learned in their school histories that it was by the process of continual re-election that Augustus established a family dynasty on the ruins of the last great republic which existed before our own was organized. This is the feeling and this is the issue which Mr. Roosebelt will have to fight. With what and for what is he going to fight it?

Canadians, as a people, who take a friendly interest in the affairs of their neighbors, will await with interest the outcome of the former President's attempt to secure his party's nomination and to oust from his high office the present President, whose election he largely aided.

When a Clapton, Eng., restaurant was burnt efforts were made to rescue a cat, but it ran into the blazing basement. It has now been found alive unhurt, but dumb. Dumb cats should sell high.

A Detroit woman has applied for a divorce, alleging that her husband has only taken her to three ten-cent picture shows in a year. This naturally made her look like thirty cents in the eyes of all her neighbors.

In the last parliament Sir Wilfrid Laurier and his followers were impatient to revise the rules of the House so as to enable the closure to be applied whenever the Government should decide that discussion had degenerated into obstruction. The latest charges of rebating preferred against railway managers in the United States sets up that the offence was committed in connection with the carriage about the country of theatrical companies and burlesque troupes. People who have seen some burlesque troupes going through what they called their stunts have wondered how they survived. Perhaps these prosecutions suggest a reason. Let justice be done..—Montreal Gazette.

Discussing the naval question the Toronto News says: "The obligation that rests upon the Canadian people upon the Canadian Parliament, upon the Federal Government is plain. The Borden Administration recognizes its duty, and with the advice of the British Admiralty, and the approval of the Canadian people, it will proceed to discharge that duty sanely and in no mean spirit."

The teacher had the letters c-a-t on the blackboard and was trying to teach little Pansy Peevish to pronounce the word, but Pansy couldn't come it. 'Think," said the teacher, "what it is that has some whiskers and comes up on the porch late at night when it is cold and begs to come into the house?"

"Oh, I know!" exclaimed little Pansy, a great light dawning; "it's papa!"

The fact that the Ontario Government, as announced in yesterday's Intelligencer, have made an appropriation of $65,000 for the erection of a new dormitory at the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb will be learned with great satisfaction by every one interested—as who is not?—in that great beneficent institution, and particularly by the people of this locality, who have a more intimate knowledge of the school and its operations than others at a distance possibly could have. We have reason to believe that Mr. Johnson, M.P.P., has used his utmost endeavors in that behalf and congratulate him and all concerned on the success of his efforts.

The Boy Scout movement is one of the greatest and most expanding influences of the new century. The real live small boy is a unity of pent up energy. In the past when that energy was properly directed, its possessor was a good little boy; if that pent up energy was misdirected he was a very bad little boy. The Boy Scout aims at furnishing a useful objective for this pent up energy by harnessing the force known as small boy and diverting it to a channel which will yield a dividend of entertainment to the small boy, and a dividend in useful citizenship to the state. As a result both sides will be the gainer.—Ottawa Citizen.

No two icebergs appear to be exactly alike in size and shape. Some look for all the world like Arabs' tents as they glide along and others like cliffs, castles, cathedrals, yachts, and occasionally they resemble some well known animal. Some of the pinnacles of a large berg rise nearly 1,000 feet above the water, while the base may occupy an area of ten or twelve acres. Seen through a powerful glass, one may detect waterfalls upon these islands of ice, and all kinds of Arctic birds, then perhaps a few seals. Then the colors are almost beyond description. The stately pinnacles glisten in the sun like powdered glass. At times the berg is pure white. At others it looks greenish.

The Grand Trunk plans for 1912 in connection with their hotels will be pushed as fast as possible. Work on Fort Garry Hotel in Winnipeg will be rushed and it is the intention of the company to complete a whole chain of hotels right across the continent. These magnificient structures will be on models similar to the Chateau Laurier in the Ottawa and the Fort Garry in Winnipeg. The plans for the hotel which is to be erected in Edmonton have been completed and contracts will be issued shortly. This hotel will be about 150 rooms and will cost about $750,000. A similar hotel will be built in Regina and plans are now being prepared. Plans have also been prepared and are being examined for the first of the mountain hotels at Miette Hot Springs. This will be a very complete building and will offer all that is to be desired to tourists and mountain travellers. Work is also being preceeded with on the plans for another large mountain hotel in the vicinity of Mount Robson, the highest mountain in the Canadian Rockies, and which towers about the Grand Fork Valley about 11,000 feet and is 13,700 feet above the sea level. This location will be the most beautiful and the most attractive mountain resort on the Continent of America. Plans have also been prepared and inspected for the new mammoth hotel at Prince Rupert, and work on it will be preceeded with shortly.

Parishioners of a Roman Catholic Church Resent Appointment of Father Montaussel—Cat Calls Greet Sermon—Police Summoned to Suppress Fighting and to Escort Newly Appointed Rector from Building

PASSAIC, N.J., Feb. 25.—Nearly half of the 10,000 members of the parish crowded into St. Joseph's Polish Catholic Church, in Monroe Street, this morning to hear the Rev. Father Julius Montaussel deliver his first sermon as rector of the church. Of the 4,000-odd persons who filled all the pews and over-flowed into the aisles more than half were women, and when Father Montaussel ascended to the pulpit a babel of noise arose, in which the shrill voices of the women predominated.

Father Montaussel was appointed by Bishop O'Conor to take the place of the Rev. Father Valentine Chelbowski, who recently died. News of his appointment was variously received by the different factions of the church. When he left two years ago, after having been curate under Father Chelbowski for years, to become pastor of a church in Newark, the entire congregation wept at his departure.

In the days of his absence, however, many of his former adherents transferred their allegiance to the Rev. Anton Kluczek, who took Father Montaussel's place, and when it became known that Father Kluczek was not to succeed to the pastorate, probably a quarter of the congregation championed his cause with a fervor that led them yesterday to shriek and shout at Father Montaussel, drowning out his voice and preventing him for some moments from making himself heard.

The rector stood silent in the pulpit after his first attempt to address the congregation, watching while men and women uttered catcalls and yells. The uproar continued for ten minutes or more, and then died down as suddenly as it had started. Father Montaussel seized the momentary silence to read aloud the communication from the Bishop appointing him to the church and the prophecy that in the near future the great size of the church would occasion a division.

The last statement was received with cheers, the supporters of Father Kluczek apparently assuming that a division of the church would provide a rectorship for him. When Father Montaussel attempted to open his sermon, however, the uproar began again. Hundreds of persons left the church, for threats that Father Monbut those that remained, except for a small number of his friends, tried to drown out his voice.

Father Montaussel persisted, with many interruptions, to the end of his sermon, and then left the church for the rectory next door under escort of half a dozen policemen. More than a dozen policemen were sent to the church, for threats taht Father Montaussel would not be well received were made openly by the friends of Father Kluczek.

Outside the church a mob of 2,000 or more awaited the rector. They gathered close around him and his bodyguard, hustling the little group toward the rectory, despite the threats of the policemen and their attempts to drive back the crowd. When Father Montaussel passed within the rectory the crowd settled down outside, apparently to await his reappearance. They passed the time in shouting and yelling, and at last Father Montaussel appeared on the steps and tried to quiet them. He was greeted with a bigger demonstration than before.

Three or four times Father Montaussel appeared on the steps and tried to quiet the throng. At last he seemed to relaize that his words only served to excite them. A dozen policemen were kept busy while the crowd waited outside, for fights started again and again between friends of Father Montaussel and Father Kluczek, frequently among the women. The police separated the combatants, but made no arrests, and after waiting about for an hour or more the crowd dispersed.

Father Montaussel said that he had expected the great love of the congregation for Father Kluczek might make his appointment unpopular, but he had not expected the kind of reception he received. "I shall preach every Sunday, nevertheless," he declared.

THE WEANING OF THE FOAL

Some Useful Advice on the Time and Method of Estranging Mares and Their Offspring.

Most of the brood mares in the country are required for the rush of fall work, and it is not fair to them to be expected to feed the foal while they are thus expending most of their energy tilling the soil. Both the mare and the colt will do better if the youngster is weaned, provided he is liberally fed and has been taught to eat previous to the time his dam is removed. Weaning does not offer any special difficulties, if the preliminaries of care and feeding have been properly attended to.

Two methods are practiced by horsemen, either of which will give fair results. By one method the colt is taken suddenly away from the dam, and is never again allowed to suck, while with the other the colt is allowed to suck at intervals, which are made more infrequent from day to day until the mare is nearly dry. There is very little to be gained by prolonging the separation, as is done in this latter method, and it has little to recommend it ,save that it lessens the danger of trouble with the mare's udder from the milk not having been drawn, but this can be averted by drawing a little of the milk by hand. At this time of year, when the grass is dry ,the mare, unless she be an exceptionally good milker, does not produce a very heavy flow, and the better plan is to take the colt away abruptly and not allow him to see or hear his mother until he has forgotten her. It is very important that the colt and the dam be kept seperated far enough so as not to be able to see or hear each other, because it will take much longer for them to forget if they are not kept well removed. The mare should be placed on dry feed, which, should only constitute a limited supply of hay. No grain should be fed, and if kept at work no trouble will result from the flow of milk, which will gradually diminish and soon cease. As soon as it has ceased the mare can and should be fed liberally.

Is the Show Ring Useless?

One of the most prominent gentlemen connected with racing affairs in the country being toast-master at a recent social function, saw proper, in the course of a lengthy speech, to use this language: "The thoroughbred is the essential oil, so to speak, of horse flesh. The show ring is useless as a method of selection and will ultimately go far astray with its theoretical requirements as to a conformation based upon what is deemed best for something the horse used to do. With all honor and respect due the bench show, we all know what havoc it has played with breeds of sporting dogs which have ceased to be used for the original purpose for which they had been developed by the sportsmen."

Lumbago Cured
Every Ache Gone

Thousands Still Suffering That Can Be Quickly Cured by "Nerviline"
The Case of Harold P. Bushy

"Three years ago I discovered that a man subject to lumbago might just as well be dead as alive." These words open the sincere, straightforward letter of H. P. Bushy, a well-known man in the plumbing and tinsmithing business.

"One attack came after another, and lumbago got to be a chronic thing with me. I could scarcely get in a day's work before that knifing, cruel pain would attack my back. I used a gallon of liniments; not one of them seemed penetrating enough to get at the core of the pain. I read in the Montreal Witness about Nerviline, and got five bottles. It is a wonderful medicine—I could feel its soothing, pain-relieving action every time it was applied. When I got the disease under control with Nerviline, I built up my strength and fortified my blood by taking Ferrozone at meals. This treatment cured me permanently and I urge everyone to give up the thick, white, oily liniments they are using, and try an up-to-date, penetrating pain-destroyer like Nerviline.

"Please publish my letter the world over. I want all to hear of Nerviline."

Artificial Resuscitation

The resuscitation of a drowning person by means of artificial breathing is not only a laborious undertaking ,but the motions must be correctly executed or the attempt will prove unsuccessful. A Swedish physician has constructed an exceptionally simple and effective apparatus, which lightens the task materially and adds immensely to the chances of success. It consists of a short board on which the patient is placed, two levers to which the arms are fastened, attached to the board, and a wide belt or girdle fastened to the levers and passing over the patient's breast. When the levers are pushed backward, the arms follow and the chest is inflated; and when the levers are pushed forward and down the girdle presses the air out of the lungs.

Something from his Pen.

A new editor on a country newspaper called on a successful farmer in his vicinity, and assured the latter that the paper would gladly pay for something from his pen. The farmer promised to see what he could do, and the following week an expressman called at the publication office with a young pig. "C.O.D., $10."

"THE HERRING"

By J. Nideroest.

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

"Really, Vladimir Auchelevitch, you must put some restraint upon your men. The prison has become the talk of the town. The papers openly hint at deeds of great brutality, and even the 'Novoie Vremia' has taken up the matter. I cannot go out without hearing it whispered abroad. Besides, you forget, we live in Christian Russia and not in heathen Persia."

"It is easy enough for you to talk," the Governor retorted to his wife. "We must have confessions, and these revolutionary vermin are such stubborn brutes. Unless some force is used they will not talk. However," he continued after a moment's reflection, "you are right in a way. Things have been a bit lively here, and I'll see what can be done."

Kardoff, the Governor's chief, assistant, could not see the force of the argument. He firmly believed in the persuasive power of nagaika and screw to loosen the tongues of his obstinate wards.

"Herrings, thirst, pepper eyes," he muttered to himself as he left the chief. "Bah, I set my faith upon our old ways. There is no secret on earth which they won't reveal. However, he has his orders and needs must obey."

In the small cell of the citadel a prisoner raised himself painfully from his plank bed. His limbs were aching, his head swam. Yet after awhile he would dimly recall the events of the last twenty-four hours; how he was dragged from his bed, how the police searched his room and found the papers. He recollected the blows he had been dealt by the brutal gendarmes, and the jolting of the cart over the pavements, then his arrival in this cell. He was so hungry.

He buried his face in his hands, when the door flew open and Kardoff, accompanied by a warder, appeared on the threshold.

"Well, prisoner, are you ready for your supper?" the former inquired. "Just tell me the names of your friends, and I'll promise you a meal which would be placed before any nobleman."

The prisoner made no reply, but turned his head against the wall. Kardoff's mouth was distorted in a mischievous grin. "All right, your excellency, just as you like. You may fast a little longer," and with a mocking laugh he went away, banging the door behind him.

The prisoner sat down, exhausted. For three days he had tasted nothing but water. He knew he would die—and he was only seventeen.

In the evening Kardoff appeared once more.

"My pretty bird," he commenced, "you're a stubborn customer; but we cannot allow you to starve. You must, however, be content with plain fare. Here, give him his supper."

The warder put down a dish containing a herring and a chunk of dry bread. The prisoner fell on it like a hungry wolf. The herring, it was true, was terribly salty, and the bread was dry, but it was food.

Kardoff watched him with gleaming eyes as he picked the bones, and then withdrew once more.

The prisoner sat down contented. The food had revived him, he already felt stronger. Now he was prepared for his tormentors. He would not betray his associate.

After a while he felt thirsty, and went towards the window recess to have a drink of water.

The jar had disappeared!

"A drink! A drink! For mercy's sake, one drop of water!"

As the night advanced his thirst became more unbearable. His throat was dry and sore, and his tongue stuck to his palate.

At eventide Kardoff came. He did not enter the cell, but looked through the trap in the door.

"Water!" the prisoner cried.

"Confess, and you shall drink."

"No!"

He leaped towards the door, but the trap was already closed, and as he walked off Kardoff chuckled. "A capital idea, indeed; and so artistic, too. Who would have thought it? But there, we live in a Christian country and not in heathen Persia!"

The prisoner shook with fever heat. His agony had become unbearable. He knocked and knocked, and feebly whispered "Water!" But all was silence around him.

In his despair, he climbed up to the window and pressed his tongue against the cold iron bars. The rough bars lacerated his lips and tongue, and he greedily swallowed the blood that flew from the wounds.

It was the third day since his meal. Kardoff cautiously opened the door. Behind him stood a warder carrying a bottle of beer. It was uncorked and the froth trickled down the side of the glass.

"Now, then, prisoner, if you confess, you will have this beer, and as much more as you like. Who is your accomplice?"

The prisoner looked at it with greedy eyes. Then with a sob he muttered:

"I will not!"

"Just as you like." To the warder: "Take that beer away!"

The warder obeyed. Now he crossed the threshold — now he had disappeared round the corner.

The prisoner uttered a cry of despair and then, as if automatically, his lips moved:

"Vladimir — Feodorovitch — Matlakoff—"

The next moment he had the beer to his lips. It was cool; it was refreshing; every drop seemed to bring new life into his body. But with his strength returned the consciousness of his deed.

He had betrayed his friend in the frenzy to save his own life — and the glass fell to the ground with a crash.

. . . .

"Well, now," the Governor said to the gleeful Kardoff, "you see that it worked, and, besides, it is ever so much more civilized. Indeed, indeed, we live in Christian Russia and not in heathen Persia! Don't you forget that, my friend."

FARM AND FIELD

HIGH COST OF LIVING

Improved Business Methods Would Help Run the Household at a More Economical Speed.

A plausible reason for the present high cost of living is the system in practice of paying accounts by check, and buying on credit in the village store. Early in the season a farmer gets leave of the storekeeper to run an account. This ties him up to one store, and obliterates competition. He visits the store once a week and places his order for groceries. It is safe to say that the price is not as carefully enquired into, nor is the weight as closely noted, as though a five-dollar bill lay softly between the fingers. Instead of staying by his job of ordering his needs he is not unapt to hand over to the clerk a slip made out by his wife before he left home, and go out to have an hour's fun with the boys, while the team is getting its evening meal of bot-flies on the sunny side of the street. Under these circumstances, which unfortunately are neither fanciful nor libelous, but a plain statement of observed fact, it is expecting a good deal of the clerk to look for sixteen ounces to the pound, and a dollar's worth of goods for a dollar's worth of coupons. The credit system may facilitate business, but, adds "The Farmers Advocate", it also facilitates the absence of business methods on the part of the man availing himself of its advantages.

How The Body Kills Germs.

Germs that get into the body are killed in two ways—by the white corpuscles of the blood, and by a germ-killing substance that is in the blood. Just what this substance is, we do not know. The blood of a healthy person always has some germ-killing substance in it to ward off the attack of disease. The fountain head of life is the stomach. A man who has a weak and impaired stomach and who does not properly digest his food will soon find that his blood has become weak and impoverished, and that his whole body is improperly and insufficiently nourished. To put the body in healthy condition, to feed the system on rich, red blood and throw out the poisons from the body, nothing in the past forty years has excelled Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, a pure glyceric extract (without alcohol), of bloodroot, golden seal and Oregon grape root, stone root, mandrake and queen's root with black cherrybark.

"My husband was a sufferer from stomach trouble and impure blood," writes Mrs. James H. Martin, of Frankfort, Ky. "He had a sore on his face that would form a scab which would dry and drop off in about a month, then another would immediately form. It continued this way for a long time. He tried every remedy that any one would suggest but found no relief. He then tried Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery which completely cured him. He has stayed cured now for two years and I recommend this valuable medicine for impurities of the blood."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate stomach, liver and bowels. Sugar-coated, tiny granules.

PICKING OUT THE BEST SHEEP

The shrewd shepherd has learned to sell off the culls from his crop of lambs, and also to get rid of inferior older individuals from his flock. Some prefer to keep at least some of these for the Christmas market, and perhaps some nice wethers until Easter, but generally speaking this season of the year, following the weaning of the lambs and preceding the breeding season, is considered a very opportune time to go through the flock and discard all those individuals which, because of age, sickness, faulty conformation, or other reasons, are not suitable to be used as breeders any longer. It is generally wise to turn over to the butcher all ewes which did not breed last season, if this has not already been done. All those ewes which have not brought forth a desirable class of lambs should also be culled out, as well as any whose teeth are so badly gone as to make keeping them over another season risky. Of course, with high-class, pure-bred breeding stock, a ewe that has proven herself an exceptional breeder is often profitable even after her teeth are very badly gone, but with sheep of indifferent breeding and uncertain value as breeders, it is very seldom advisable to take any chances on defective specimens.

If the lambs have been weaned early, which should always be practiced, the ewes will pick up in flesh rapidly, and they are soon in good condition to be disposed of to the butcher. Besides their being in good condition, the fact that mutton is usually a fair price at this time, is also an advantage to be gained by disposing of the undesirable breeders just now. Not only should the old ewes be turned off, but very often there are shearlings in the flock which are scrubby individuals of defective conformation, which, if used as breeders, would be a detriment, rather than an improvement to the flock, and all such individuals should be disposed of. One sometimes hesitates to part with a young ewe, but if she does not give promise of becoming a good breeder, the sooner she is removed from the flock, the better. Many two-year-old ewes which have produced scrawny lambs should go with the other poor ones. Nothing but the best type of strong, healthy ewe should ever be kept for breeding purposes; and, to bring the flock up to the highest possible condition, and keep it there, requires severe yearly culling. Few other seasons offer as good an opportunity for this as does the time just previous to the breeding season in the fall.

Dogs.

Dogs were formerly indigenous to the indigent, but, since the advent of dog licenses, whereby a dog, without a maid or a valet, is presumed to be guilty until it is proved innocent or shot, they have been grafted on family trees, with their own separate heraldry as substitutes for children, thereby furnishing considerable consolation for race suicide.

Dogs are divided into two great classes — pedigreed and verdigreed. Verdigreed are of two kinds — mad dogs and dogs. Pedigreed are of several kinds, chief among which are watch dogs and sheep-dogs. Watch-dogs are so called because they are small enough, and usually cranky enough, to be carried around in the place of watches by people who have plenty of time. Sheep-dogs are so called because they are led around by sheepish-looking people.

Those dogs are considered the handsomest by connoisseurs which look the ugliest to other people.

BRAINY WORKERS

Working Shoemakers, Chimney Sweepers, Tramcar Men, and Seamstresses Are Amongst the Most Learned.

Genius like murder, will out, and the history of modern literature provides us with some striking examples of men and women who, although humbly born and denied by circumstances any educational advantages, have given to the world some remarkable literary works. At the present time, for instance, the compilers of the great Oxford English Dictionary are deriving much help in their work from a Concordance of the words of Thomas Kyd, a learned literary man and dramatist of the sixteenth century, which has been compiled by Mr. Charles Crawford, a London railway clerk.

Mr. Crawford is a great authority on Elizabethan English and published his Concordance five years ago. His knowledge of words has been acquired through close study, and is certainly extraordinary; for often when experts have stated, without investigation, that such and such a word or phrase occurs only in certain writers, or does not appear in certain authors, Mr. Crawford has produced abundant evidence showing the statement to be incorrect.

The Shoemaker Historian

An even more remarkable work than Mr. Crawford's Concordance, however, was that compiled by John Mackintosh, LL.D., who died at Aberdeen four years ago. Although Mackintosh was a shoemaker by trade, he was one of the most notable personalities that the North Country has of recent times produced, and his "History of Civilization in Scotland," in four big volumes, has been described as one of the most complete histories of Scotland ever written.

Chimney Sweep and Author.

It is only a few weeks ago that the University Extension Board appointed Mr. Walter Hunt lecturer on sociology. Mr. Hunt has had an amazing career. He started life as a sailor, spent some time in the fire brigade, and then set up as a chimney sweep at Streatham. He then decided to attend the Robert Browning Settlement in Walworth, and in time was led to write a thoughtful little book wherein he discusses the question, "Are we a declining race?" which attracted much attention among critics. Mr. Hunt's successful writings on race deterioration, involving as they did an immense amount of research work, are the more remarkable when one considers that his calling took him out at four o'clock in the morning. Most of his study was done at night time, and he confided in an interview a little while ago that he found no time to read anything but works on science and history. "Life is too short to waste time in reading fiction," he said.

It might be mentioned that London also possesses a linguistic tramwayman in the person of Mr. Richard Hobdell, of London, who is employed by the London County Council as a pointsman on the car system. Mr. Hobdell has a perfect knowledge of Arabic and Sanskrit, and has just finished translating a book from Sanskrit into English. Hobdell, who was with Lord Roberts on the famous march from Kabul to Kandahar, has devoted much of his leisure time since leaving the Army to the study of languages — a study of which he has always been very fond.

The literary sensation of last year was a book, "Marie Claire," written by a Parisian seamstress, Marguerite Audoux, who worked as a dressmaker in one small room on the sixth floor of a house in Paris. The story won a prize of $1000 and royalties — a prize given every year by what is know as the Goncourt Academy for the best novel of the year. It took the seamstress ten years to write her book. "I did not write it to be published," she said, during the course of an interview, as she sat in her little workroom; "it is just my life." And it is because Marguerite Audoux told the story of her life in plain, simple language that she scored such a literary success.

PEDESTRIANISM

A good performance was accomplished by C. Harris when beating Pat White for the 10 miles Irish professional running championship recently. The event was decided at Dublin, and as rain fell in torrents during the race, the track was very heavy. In spite of this handicap, Harris covered the journey in 53 mins. 53 secs., winning by 500 yards, a very smart bit of running on the part of the ex-amateur.

The times accomplished in the series of sprint races between A. B. Postle and J. Donaldson, at Melbourne, make interesting reading. The course was grass, but a good turf track is quite as fast as cinders. Postle's 7 4-5 secs. for 80 yards, and Donaldson's 9 3-5 secs. for 100 yards, are both splendid, but Donaldson's 10 4-5 secs. for 100 yards does not strike one as remarkable. On the 100 yards' time, Donaldson ought to have shown 10 1-2 secs. at least, though possibly Postle failed to push him. There can be little doubt that the winner is a wonderful sprinter, and the writer can testify from personal experience that Donaldson is very modest about his great ability.

KING'S TASTER

An Important Appointment Held by a Man Whose Knowledge of Vintages and Special Wine Was Keen.

Very few people are aware of the fact that during the lifetime of King Edward a private appointment was held by a gentleman whose sole duty it was to "sample" wines intended for the Royal cellars. The responsibilities of this office were far heavier than may be imagined, for its holder had not only to be a judge and an expert in vintages and brands, but a shrewd business man, capable of dealing with the heads of great wine-growing districts and the countless representatives of firms of many nationalities soliciting the honour of a Royal order.

It was no uncommon thing for the King's taster to be confronted in a single day by an array of bottles which would have stocked a wine merchant's shop, while there were always correspondents whose letters conveyed inner news from the wine centres, or information regarding the discovery of bricked-up cellars holding priceless ports and sherries. And these could not be neglected, as it was always possible that they might lead to a real "find," rich and rare.

Samples had, of course, to be dealt with in a thoroughly systematic manner, and a large number of them were set aside unopened. Like most experts of great experience, the King's taster seldom put his lips to wines which were under consideration, and still more rarely swallowed them. The sense of smell is always the first and becomes the final test. A few drops of a wine rubbed in the palms of the hands reveal the quality and aroma of the vintage with a certainty which the most delicate palate cannot surpass.

It need hardly be said that no official in London was subject to more temptations and cajolery than the man who had the power of making a comparatively unknown brand of champagne famous by putting it on the King's table. But to a great extent the identity of this important personage was left unrevealed. Especially was this the case when periodical visits were made to France, Germany, Spain, and Italy during the grape seasons. Very often growers who received orders from an English buyer were quite unaware that they were dealing with the private representative of the King of England.

The man who sampled for King Edward had no place in the Royal household, and figured in no official list of those who had duties under the Sovereign. His salary, which was an excellent one, was paid out of His Majesty's private purse, and the post of wine-taster to the King was abolished altogether before King George came to the Throne.

The Emperor Gorges Himself.

The "Hoel Pao" says that an American doctor recently visited the palace at Peking to examine the baby Emperor, who, it was found, had gorged himself with a meal of swallows' nests (a sort of glutinous material), and thus provoked a raging thirst. The indisposition yielded easily to the doctor's treatment. The Emperor sleeps in a gigantic bed, big enough for six people! he rises at six, at once has a meal of rice-gruel or rice, and then goes to pay his respects to the Dowager Lung-yu.

A sculptor recently produced the likeness of a celebrated personage in whose biography it was mentioned that he regarded architecture as a very secondary art. The son of this personage visited the artist's studio for the purpose of examining the bust, when, after considering it with the air of a connoisseur, he inquired, "Could you not express more clearly his contempt for architecture?"

BACK FULL OF ACHES HEADACHES AND DEPRESSION

MUCH OF WOMEN'S SUFFERING IS NEEDLESS AND CAN BE PREVENTED BY THE USE OF DR. HAMILTON'S PILLS.

THAT STAB-LIKE PAIN IN THE BACK IS SURE INDICATION OF KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Mrs. Anna Rodriguez writes as follows from her home in Valencia: "For a long time I suffered with failing strength and nagging headaches. My condition grew steadily worse, my limbs became bloated and shaky, I was sallow and thin, felt rheumatic pains, dizziness and chills. Unfortunately didn't suspect my kidneys, and was nearly dead when I discovered the true cause of my sufferings. I read so much about the wonderful health and strength that comes to all who use Dr. Hamilton's Pills that I felt sure they would help me. Such blessings of health and comfort I got from Dr. Hamilton's Pills I can't describe. They speedily put me right and their steady use keeps me active, energetic, strong and happy. I strongly urge others to regulate and tone their system with Dr. Hamilton's Pills of Mandrake and Butternut."

No greater medicine exists than Dr. Hamilton's Pills for the cure of indigestion, constipation, flatulence, liver bladder and kidney trouble. Refuse substitutes for Dr. Hamilton's Pills, 25c. per box, or five boxes for $1.00, at all dealers or the Catarrhozone Company, Kingston, Ont.

THE VENOM OF LOVE

By L. A. Ruffman

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

"I can't meet you on Sunday. I'm not going to meet you any more."

Nettie leaned back among the fragrant Capebroom, jutting its golden spray through the fence, her eyes upon the ground, seeking refuge from the open avowal Sid's stupid obtuseness forced from her.

He stepped forward, his hand fell upon her shoulder, turning her roughly, compelling her to face the situation.

"I'm sick of you," she whimpered, "so there!"

"There's someone else?"

He was still dragging at her, forcing her eyes to his.

"Well, what if there is?" She faced him, a small fury. "Haven't I a right to please myself?"

"If there is——" He threw her off with such violence that she rebounded from the fence, and her bonnet was tossed over her eyes.

Nettie tore her hat off. "There is! There is!" she cried.

The girl caught herself up with a gasp. Sid was looking very ugly just then. In the eyes that stabbed her there was a vicious heat, his mouth was slightly open, the under jaw rigid.

"You little beast!" he said. He held her tightly. "It's Bodio." The pressure increased, bruising her soft, slim body. "It's Bodio."

"Yes, it is," she answered, defiantly.

"A Dago. A dirty Dago!" He pushed her away, his face full of disgust.

"He's lovely. I don't care what you think. I don't care what you say, he's lovely."

For over three weeks Sidney Wood saw nothing of Nettie, but he heard of her often, and always in association with Gian Bodio, the dapper, black-eyed Italian who speared oysters with amazing dexterity on the right side of Silvio Panzacchi's shop front, while Nettie Mulholland boxed sweets and bagged bananas behind her natty little counter on the left.

Sid was a commonplace youth in a commonplace world, suddenly thrust into a vortex of the emotions that make for tragedy.

One moonlight night, after following them like a blackmailer for an hour, creeping meanly from bush to bush, he saw Gian kiss Nettie good-night by the Cape-broom hedge, where he and she had so often parted. The Italian held her close in his arms, and kissed her again and again, with uncouth, noisy kisses. Suddenly Sid arose. He understood now what it all meant. He realized in a moment what the fury and the fever had prompted. Nettie must die. He would kill her.

No argument followed, no self-questioning. In his mind there were no doubts. He no longer cherished enmity towards Gian Bodio; his soul was absorbed in the killing of Nettie Mulholland.

Then he heard she was to be at the trade picnic with Gian Bodio, and that decided him. At the picnic, somewhere in the bush, before the eyes of her Dago, he would kill her.

None detected the smallest evidence of Sid's intention as they drove to the picnic. Gian Bodio sat on Nettie's left. Next her on the right, pressed very close, was Martin Sickert, big, black-haired, violet-eyed, handsome, a suburban Mephistopheles. He certainly enjoyed more of Nettie's attention than poor Bodio; yet Martin was nothing but lorryman for Sin Me, the banana king, with two guineas a week and the beer habit. Throughout the morning at Grass Creek, too, Nettie Mulholland flirted openly and impudently with Sickert, and Bodio sat with his back to a gum butt, and watched them, small and silent, no emotion in his pale face.

Nettie was conscious of Bodio, but gave no thought to Sidney, and he too was watching. It was not till after dinner, when Martin was too drunk to be companionable, that Nettie returned to the Italian. There were no reproaches. They sat together for half an hour and then went off through the trees and along the creek. Sid followed. He felt his moment was at hand. Near the camp they passed from view beyond a clump of saplings. He waited, but they did not reappear.

He stole forward, crept quietly to the saplings, arose, and pushed his way through, without a sound, his hand on the weapon, his soul hot with resolution.

He stopped. They were there. Nettie lay upon the grass, Bodio knelt upon her, his knee crushing her breast, his left hand gripped about her throat. In his right hand he held a knife, from the bright blade of which the sunlight flamed. His face was close to hers, his teeth bared, and he spat Roman oaths at her with something of the tiger, something of the snake. His face was contorted with abominable malice, hers wild with the horror of death.

For one tense moment Sidney Wood gazed down upon the lovers, and then a heart-burst filled him with blind rage. He hurled himself at Bodio.

A moment later the two men were on their feet fighting. Nettie, crouched down, backing under cover of the saplings, watched them, mad with fear.

Sid was sparring and punching with bare hands. The other slashed with his knife in a blind fury. Instinctively Wood's left shot for the face with every movement of the Italian. His arms were cut. He got the knife in his breast again, and then he saw Bodio's chin as through a mist, and swung his right with all the weight and power he could put into it. The Italian collapsed on himself, and went down, limp and lifeless. Sid staggered to his knees, and then fell, face foremost, across the body of his foe.

Nettie was running towards the picnic party, white and wild, shrieking "Murder! murder!"

The men found Gian Bodio on his knees, still dazed; but Sidney Wood lay prone, bleeding from a dozen wounds.

"Take care of Nettie," he whispered. "For God's sake, take care of Nettie. The Dago will kill her!"

As they lifted him a loaded revolver fell from the right-hand pocket of his coat.

MASTERING A LION

What trainers have to do to gain Control.

In illustration of the lengths to which owners of wild beasts will go in order to retain control of them, Frank C. Bostock, the famous animal trainer, tells the following story:

"Some years ago, when we were at the Hippodrome in Paris, I decided, as a special attraction, to go into the arena with Wallace, a huge African lion that all our trainers had despaired of. The house was crowded. We placed the lion in a cage sixteen feet square, and this was put inside a twenty-foot ring. Two assistants were stationed in the outer ring in case of accident. I had scarcely got inside when the beast leaped at me. It bit right through my left hand, and with one blow ripped the flesh off my back.

"'Clear out!' I shouted to the two men in the outer ring. 'I'm going to open the doors and let him into the big arena.'

"I was as furious as the lion. My pride as a trainer was wounded deeper than my back. I flung open the doors and the lion sprang out. The blood was pouring from my wounds, but in the excitement of the moment I felt no pain — only a mad desire to be master. I picked up a 'property' chair, and when the beast came again I struck it full across the muzzle; then, seizing my whip, I actually became the aggressor and drove him back to the cage.

"The audience was in something like a panic, and loud cries of 'Enough! Enough!' were raised. But I hadn't finished. In ten minutes I had subjugated Wallace to such an extent that he cowered like a dog. I got out of the cage and just fainted away. From that day to this no one has attempted to teach Wallace."

What the Farmer Needs

Perhaps one of the most urgent needs of the farmer at this season is a vacation, suggests a writer in the "Canadian Thresherman", not necessarily a trip abroad, but something to temporarily relieve the strain of long-continued farm labor. It may be hunting or visiting friends and relatives; anything which has the essence of a play spell is in the truest sense a recreation. The farmer who makes a practice of doing this is the one whom you may expect to keep young the longest, even if his business cares are ever so great.

To Preserve Vegetables

Vegetables properly prepared and stored in a good cellar can be kept as good as new far into the following summer. Potatoes and all roots will keep better if covered with dry earth. Cabbage and lettuce should be trimmed of rough leaves and roots, and packed head downwards. For celery, take all rough, worthless stalks and leaves off the roots, place close together on the cellar floor and fill in between the plants with fine sand to nicely cover the roots. If properly done the celery will keep until June. Onions, if well cured, can be kept in long boxes a foot deep, suspended two feet from the cellar ceiling. All stuff should be covered with cotton sheeting or old bags, to keep it from sudden changes of temperature by opening doors. The cellar should be kept at a forty to forty-five degrees temperature.

With just a little care and trouble fresh vegetables can be in use every day in the year.

Fighting the Hessian Fly

When fall wheat is attacked by the Hessian Fly sowing should be postponed as late as possible, that is to the end of September. By this means the young plants will escape the second or summer generation of flies and their eggs will not be deposited on the young wheat, as it will come up after the flies have disappeared. If care is taken in the preparation of

Pointers for Dairymen

A real good cow has large, prominent milk veins and a rich, velvety skin.

When the dairy farmers of a community begin buying pure bred bulls it augurs well for the dairy business in that section.

It's a mighty easy thing for one man to advise another to be kind to his cows so that they will give lots of milk. It is sometimes quite another thing to follow out such advice. He knows best who has tried to milk a kicking heifer on a hot evening in fly time. Of course there is nothing to prevent being kind to this heifer — nothing except human nature, and human nature always seems to find expression most easily under such circumstances.

A few minutes each day spent in cutting some green fodder and throwing it over the pasture fence for the cows, or better still, feeding it in the stable, is time well spent. It will result in larger cream checks right now and more economical feeding next fall and winter.

"ANYTHING that is produced in Canada from Canadian materials, by the application of Canadian brain and labor, will always have first call with me. And it's only good business on my part that it should."

LATE TELEGRAPHIC NEWS

BAY PORT IS GRANTED

Ontario Gets Access to Nelson in Boundaries Award.

Manitoba Extension Is Announced In the House of Commons and Gives Ontario a Five-Mile Strip to Port Nelson With the Privilege Also of Running Railway to Port Churchill If That Prove Desirable.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—Parliament has taken the plunge. Yesterday, Right Hon. R. L. Borden moved his resolution, which has been standing on the order paper for the past two weeks, in reference to the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba, and the financial settlement arrived at. He estimated the total increase in subsidy to the province at $1,349,345, to which $2,178,648 was to be added for arrears, as the settlement was to date back to 1908.

The most interesting statement came, not in committee of the resolution, but when the bill founded on the resolution was up for first reading, when the Premier announced the passage, on Feb. 20, of an order-in-council providing for the conveyance to Ontario for the use of the T. & N. O. Railway of a strip five miles wide from the new boundary of Manitoba to the Nelson River, with a 10-mile water front on that river and a right of way thence to a junction with the Hudson Bay Railway, with running rights over the latter.

The Opposition seemed to be entirely taken back by this announcement and all that Sir Wilfrid Laurier could do was to chaff the Premier on Ontario becoming subject to the jurisdiction of Manitoba.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley urged that complications might ensue with the other provinces. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick might demand compensation for the building of the original line of the I.C.R.

The Premier emphatically declared his intention of eventually restoring the public lands to the western provinces, according to his pre-election promise. In the meantime, it was thought well to place Manitoba on an equal footing with the two other prairie provinces.

The Premier confined his remarks to a short resume of the history of the question and a statement as to the financial terms agreed upon between Manitoba and the Dominion Government.

Reading the Laurier resolution of July 20, 1908, with regard to the extension of the boundaries of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan, in which the boundaries of Manitoba and Ontario were the same as set forth in the present resolution, he explained that, for some time after the question of financial terms between Manitoba and the Dominion had been discussed, but without definite result.

Shortly after the present administration came into power conferences had been had with the Premier of Manitoba and some of his colleagues, and a basis of agreement had been arrived at, as expressed in a letter sent to Mr. Roblin by Premier Borden. The principle here laid down had been worked out in the resolution now submitted to the committee.

Manitoba would, under the bill, receive an approximate subsidy of $1,349,345, made up as follows: Allowance for government and local purposes, $190,000; 80 cents per head on population, $364,491; indemnity for want of lands, $562,500—less swamp and university lands, $149,230—$413,270; net interest allowance for public debt, $381,584.

This he compared with the amount receivable by the prairie provinces, the totals of which were: Alberta, $1,260,105; Saskatchewan, $1,531,820.

All allowances, the Premier said, were to be dated from July 1, 1908. The Province of Manitoba had taken the ground that the extension of its territories should have taken place at the same time that the new Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan were constituted.

Under this condition, the following approximate arrearages would be payable to Manitoba should the proposed bill become law forthwith:

(a) Annual allowance, in lieu of debt, $381,584; annual allowance already received, $178,947; arrearages each year, $202,637; arrearages for four years (July 1, 1908, to June 30, 1912), $810,648.

(b) Annual allowance in lieu of lands, $562,500; swamp lands' reduction, average, $105,500; university lands' deduction, $15,000; already received, $100,000—$220,500.

Estimated arrearages each year, $342,000.

Estimated arrearages for four years, $1,368,000. Estimated total arrearages, $2,178,648.

The swamp lands to be reconveyed to the Dominion under the bill were estimated at 1,170,883 acres.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier claimed that the Government had not decided on the attitude they would take towards Ontario's claim that its boundaries should be extended to the Churchill River. This was the deduction he drew from the fact that the resolution did not state the precise point at which the boundary was to strike Hudson Bay.

The Premier explained that the boundaries in the resolution were the same as those set forth in the resolution of 1908, except that they had been set forth more explicitly by the chief geographer.

Hon. Wm. Pugsley claimed that the Government was proposing exceptional legislation in dealing with Manitoba, which was one of the old provinces of the Dominion. The idea of confederation was that the provincial subsidies should be on a fixed basis.

Nearly $140,000,000 for Army.

London, Feb. 28.—The estimates of expenditures for the British army for the financial year of 1912-13, including both effective and non-effective services, aggregate $139,300,000, or an increase of $850,000 over those of the year 1911-12.

MORE MINERS OUT.

Outlook In English Strike Is Now Very Grave.

London, Feb. 28.—No settlement of the coal dispute was reached at the various conferences, in which the Premier and members of his Cabinet and the representatives of the mine owners and miners participated yesterday. The official statement of the proceeding issued last night, which some predicted would report that an agreement had been reached, merely records the fact that various conferences occurred, but tells nothing of what was done or said at any of them. It concludes with the announcement that the conferences will be resumed today, from which all that can be deduced is that the Government is still striving to avert a stoppage of the gigantic industry on which the country's commercial supremacy is based.

Between 30,000 and 40,000 miners in Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire ceased work yesterday, in accordance with a notice previously given, and it is now quite evident that, as the time limit provided for in the notices expires, the men will lay down their tools and await the action of the miners' federation.

Until the owners are persuaded to concede the minimum wage principle it is obvious that nothing can be accomplished by bringing the disputants together. From the fact that this has not been done, it is inferred that the Cabinet has not succeeded in inducing the owners, Welsh as well as English, to make that concession.

That the sanguine expectations, widely held, of ultimate success, are not yet altogether justified, is shown by the answer given by James Haslam, member of Parliament and leader of the Derbyshire miners, who attended the conference, to interviewers, in reply to a question concerning the outlook. "There is no outlook at present," said Mr. Haslam. "The Government seems to have gone as far as it can go. The Ministers are very anxious, just as we are, but it is going to be a rum job."

In the view of morning newspapers likely to be well informed the coal difficulty presents a grave outlook, mainly owing to the obduracy of the Welsh mine owners who decline to grant a minimum wage on any terms whatever. Hints that the Government might force a minimum wage bill through Parliament seem to have had the effect of stiffening the backs of the mine owners generally who resent seeing their hands forced in this manner.

In Parliamentary circles, where, presumably, inside information has been obtained, there is an undeniable feeling of optimism, but if Government intervention fails by Friday morning, practically every colliery in the land will be shut down. Meanwhile many thousands are making ready to strike, and the time left to accomplish anything by negotiations is alarmingly short.

The negotiations continued until midnight. Premier had another conference at his official residence with the owners' committee at 9 o'clock, and neither the Premier, Chancellor Lloyd-George nor the president of the Board of Trade, Sydney Buxton, was able to appear in the House of Commons last night, because of the coal situation.

Many Schools Planned.

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Under the direction of the Methodist Church International S. S. Association, Missionary Education Movement and the Baptist Church, an organization of some 26 summer schools, is under way from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

The location of these have not as yet all been definitely decided, but it is understood that St. John's, Nfld., Sydney, C.B., Knowlton, Que., Pt. Iroquois, Wellington, P. E. County, Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby; Baptist College, Woodstock; Alma College, St. Thomas, Elora, Winoa, Kingsville, Rainy Lake District, in Ontario and Shoal Lake, Man., Rock Lake, Man., Oxbow, Sask., Lumsden Beach, Sask., three in Alberta, three in British Columbia, Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

The study during the months of July and August will consist of text books on the mission field of the world.

U. S. Retains Balance of Trade.

Washington, Feb. 28.—The balance of trade still remains with the United States, according to figures issued yesterday of the imports and exports of this country for January and the seven months of the fiscal year ending with last month.

The United States imported $582,000 more in January, 1911, but for the seven months it had decreased its purchases abroad by nearly ten million dollars.

In its export business the United States shipped out during the last month $5,374,000 worth of goods more than was shipped in January last year, and for the seven months ending with January 31 the export record was $49,400,000 above that of the corresponding months of the preceding fiscal year.

Life Imprisonment For Manslaughter.

London, Feb. 28.—Daniel Reynolds, who on Monday pleaded guilty to manslaughter in connection with the charge of murder laid against him through the death of Fred. Colver, whom he slashed with an axe following a row in the Hamilton Road Hotel, was given life imprisonment by Judge Falconbridge yesterday.

Patrick Maloney, alias O'Brien, of Detroit, held for shooting a woman whom he robbed, and who, on Saturday, made a sensational attempt to break jail, was given twenty years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Woman to Jail For Day.

London, Feb. 28.—Mrs. Deborah Jeffreys was sentenced yesterday by the London Court of Sessions at the Old Bailey to a day's imprisonment on a charge of contracting a bigamous marriage with Horace F. Marshall, the chairman of the Central London Tube Railway. The sentence meant her immediate discharge from custody.

The magistrate adopted the view that Mrs. Jeffreys had acted under the compulsion of her real husband, Herbert Jeffreys.

CHEAP POWER FOR ALL

Eastern Ontario Will Soon Have Splendid Service.

Hon. Adam Beck Makes Important Announcement In Legislature Regarding Expropriation Proceedings to Get Chats Falls — Commission Will Take Evidence and Suggestions For New Act.

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Hydro-electric power for the whole eastern section of the province is assured by the action of the Government in commencing expropriation proceedings to obtain possession of Chats Falls on the Ottawa River. Between 100,000 and 120,000 horsepower will be developed there. Ontario will soon have as much power in the eastern portion of Ontario as in the west, and the demands of Ottawa, Smith's Falls, Prescott and the whole district west of Kingston will be met.

Announcement to that effect was made yesterday by Hon. Adam Beck, who feels that the Government is entirely justified in its action. "The commission realizes," said he, "that it still has some difficulties to overcome. One of the principal obstacles it has to encounter is the exploitation of the property of the people of this province, and whatever the constitutional rights of the province may be, the commission intends that the people of Ontario shall know to what extent the heritage of the people has been granted or appreciated. It must for once and all be understood that the resources of this province and of every legitimate agency which the Government finds at its disposal, will be used to preserve or regain that heritage, and that in doing so we are not prepared to compensate anyone for gains made which are known to be unlawful or immoral. This is in order that the powers of eminent domain existing in the crown, as representing this province, will be exercised upon such a basis as to render nugatory any attempts at political brigandage or the baser methods of those who seek to prey upon a political party for the advantage of themselves, or of a corporation, no matter how gigantic, which they represent."

Chats Falls was transferred by the crown to Wm. Harty on June 3, 1883. It consists of about 65 acres. On July 29, 1902, Mr. Harty sold one-third of his share to Daniel O'Connor for $167, and on the same day sold another third to C. P. Brophy for $167. On April 22, 1910, Brophy returned to the Hon. Wm. Harty all his interest for the consideration of one dollar. On Oct. 17, 1911, the crown deeded to Mr. O'Connor the Government slide reserve rights for $1,471. This was about three weeks after the Dominion election. Mr. O'Connor thus secured all the control of all water and river bed covered by the slide.

Brophy is superintendent of waterways on the Ottawa River, for the Ottawa Government, and reported that the slide rights were no longer required for Government purposes, when he transferred them to O'Connor.

Previous to this transfer, the city of Ottawa made application to obtain possession of the slide, and the Hydro-Electric Commission co-operated with the city. Last Friday the Provincial Government passed an order-in-council authorizing the commission to expropriate all the properties covered by the foregoing deeds. The plan was prepared, forwarded to Ottawa and registered in the registry office of the County of Carleton on Monday last.

The Hydro-Electric Commission will hear all parties who are interested in the proposed act to amend the Power Commission Act, which was introduced in the Legislature last week by Hon. Adam Beck. The date set for the hearing is Tuesday, March 5, at 10 a. m.

Rink Roof Collapses.

Montreal, Feb. 28.—By seven o'clock last night fifteen inches of snow had fallen since seven o'clock Monday morning, and besides seriously delaying trains on all lines, the storm was responsible for the collapse of several structures in the city owing to the tremendous weight of snow on the roofs.

Eight feet of the wooden roof of the Forum Skating Rink collapsed yesterday afternoon while seven men were busy trying to clear away the snow. The accident was preceded by an ominous creaking and splintering of the beams and the men had time to escape, while the forty odd people skating inside also managed to stand from under before the roof came down.

The roof of one of the C.P.R. freight sheds also collapsed at noon yesterday, but fortunately all the men were at lunch at the time. Several engines were injured, and the loss will be some $50,000.

Bold Robber Caught.

New York, Feb. 28.—In the arrest in Memphis, Tenn., of Francis Ford, whose real name is declared to be Eugene Splain, the New York police believe that the man who engineered the recent sensational taxicab robbery here and appropriated the largest part of the proceeds, has been captured.

The police assert that Splain rehearsed the robbery in Central Park with his alleged confederates, of whom four are now under arrest here, and of whom three are declared to have confessed.

Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty said last night that he expected to connect Splain with other holdups of recent occurrence in New York.

Senate Accepts Bill.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—The declaration of the Government that the inquiries bill would be withdrawn if Senator Kerr's amendment were persisted in had its effect, yesterday and the amendments were dropped after some discussion. The bill was then taken in committee.

Tributes of respect to the memory of Senator Miller were paid by Hon. Mr. Lougheed, Sir Richard Cartwright, Senator MacDonald of British Columbia and Senator Power.

WANT A COMMISSION

Good Roads Men Want Dominion to Give $50,000.

Resolutions Passed at Convention Favor the Investigation of Whole Question of Highway Improvement —Drastic Measures Are Required and Large Part of $5,000,000 Grant Should Be Used.

Toronto, Feb. 28.—"That the Provincial Government be requested to appoint a commission to consider the whole question of road improvements in Ontario."

"That the Federal Government be asked to set aside $50,000 to assist in the improvement of highways."

"That a large proportion of the appropriation of $5,000,000 by the Ontario Government be expended for road improvements."

These were the resolutions passed at the Good Roads Convention last night, after much discussion. A number of recommendations relative to the improving of roadways were made and were supported by a deputation which called on Sir James Whitney this morning.

In order to keep highways in proper condition it was believed that drastic measures should be adopted by the Government. Taking the initiative themselves, the members drew up a resolution to the effect: "That after two years' notice, wagons without wide tires be not allowed to be manufactured, and that after seven years wagons without wide tires be not allowed on the highways."

Hon. Dr. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, told the convention yesterday morning that a stricter system of inspection, a more scientific construction of highways and the training of road specialists to act as supervisors, possibly by lectures to university students and at Guelph College, were topics receiving the consideration of the Government.

A series of resolutions were sent to the committee, to be reported upon at the night session.

In the afternoon, Geo. S. Henry, Oriole, spoke on the how, the why and the where of good roads. One of the most important results of good roads would be the betterment of those who remain on the land. Farmers are land poor in the sense that land is so cheap that only half as much is produced from it as would be the case if it cost twice as much.

"Get the money" is the solution of the good roads problem. "First educate the people and you can get the funds. And it is directly up to the Ontario Good Roads' Association to educate public opinion."

L. A. Hamilton, Lorne Park, said: "We have entered on a new era." Speaking from his personal observations, he spoke of the foreign road systems.

France held the premier position in roadmaking. It was taught at a special college to students nominated by the President of France to take a three years term. They study during the winter months and take part in overseeing roadmaking in the summer. France commenced her good roads one hundred years ago. She now expends six or seven million dollars annually in roadmaking. The millions Canada spent in military upkeep or for a navy could be better spent in roadmaking. If one was justifiable the other was eminently more so. France possessed 340,000 miles of magnificent roads, of which 300,000 were national roads. He had wheeled on his bicycle over 2,000 French roads and they were as smooth as asphalt.

Stone and gravel road construction was discussed by J. M. Young, Harriston; Charles Talbot, C.E., London; James L. Taylor, Hamilton; R. H. Jupp, Orillia; H. G. Blecker, Belleville, and E. A. James, C. E., Toronto.

James A. Bell, C.E., Thompson, spoke on bridge construction. He pointed out that permanent structures go hand-in-hand with roadmaking, as a means of crossing streams. No materials combined equal concrete and steel for such structures. Cheapness of construction should never be considered in comparison with the safety of the public.

Unless steel bridges were kept well painted they will rust through to the danger point. There are lots of bridges in Canada which are rusting through this cause. Rigid inspection is of urgent importance.

Can't Drain Sewage Into River.

Cornwall, Feb. 28.—The Cornwall Board of Health, the Cornwall Town Council and the citizens are up in arms against the regulations of the Ontario Provincial Board of Health, which practically prohibit the dumping or draining of sewage into lake, stream or body of water in Ontario.

Recently a couple of local debenture issues for sewers were rendered unsalable because of the action of the chief provincial medical health officer, Dr. McCullough, in refusing to sanction the bylaws, although for nearly half a century Cornwall has been draining into the St. Lawrence.

These regulations afford no protection against the sewage of neighboring provinces and states, but they destroy all existing sewers paid for out of the pockets of citizens of numerous municipalities for a score of more years.

To Head Bisley Contingent.

Ottawa, Feb. 28.—It is understood that, in the event of the difference between the D.R.A. and the N.R.A. being satisfactorily settled, and in the event of a Bisley team being sent to England this year, that the command of that team will be offered to Lieut.-Col. O'Grady, commander of the 90th Rifles, Winnipeg.

Brantford's New Y.M.C.A.

Brantford, Feb. 28.—At a meeting of Y.M.C.A. building subscribers here, it was decided to proceed with the erection of a building on the plans originally prepared. The building will cost about $120,000. The cost of furnishing it is estimated at $12,000.

Guiseppe Muccaicico, a Niagara Falls' Italian, was found guilty of assisting two fellow-countrymen to enter Canada after they had once been rejected. He was fined $50 and costs, and the men were deported.

It is evident that the Methodists will cast a large majority in favor of church union throughout the Dominion. Up to date the Methodist Board vote is 1,407 in favor and 205 against, the Presbyterian vote is 9,505 for union and 1,013 against.

A strange thing occurred at the inquest held in Kingston on the remains of the late Robert Barr, killed by a train at Collins Bay. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death and the foreman collected his fee from each one and handed it over to the mother of the deceased.

Victory for Labor Cause.

Melbourne, Feb. 28.—Justice Higgins, president of the Federal Arbitration Court, yesterday gave his award in the case of the Brisbane tramway strike. He has declared the anti-badge regulations of Melbourne, Brisbane and Odelaide authorities to be invalid, and has granted an injunction to prevent companies from prohibiting wearing trade union badges on men's uniforms during official working hours. Unionists regard this as a victory of world-wide importance and as establishing the right of the men to wear union badges throughout the Empire.

GIRL DANCES TO HER DEATH.

Heart Fails After Finishing a Night's Programme of Twenty Numbers.

PASSAIC, N.J., Feb. 26.—"Please play a few more dances," pleaded Catherine Jarchone, eighteen years old, to the leader of the orchestra at a dance on the east side early this morning. "The ball has passed too quickly. I hardly know I've been dancing."

Miss Jarchone had danced the twenty or more dances on the regular programme, but seemed as fresh as when she started. The musicians would not accede to her request. The young woman went to her home and asked her mother to allow her to sleep until noon. Mrs. Jarchone went to the girl's room at noon and called her, but there was no response. She was dead.

A physician said the young woman's heart had been affected by excessive dancing.

MEN RISK TOO MUCH

Life insurance companies now are very careful about issuing policies to active men over 35 years old for the chances are that they have impaired their health greatly by overwork.

Of course, if steps are taken in time this damage can be repaired. Mr. Everett Neely of San Antonio Tex., says in a recent leter.

"My health failed lately owing to overwork, and as I did not get better after a month, I began taking Vinol It has given me a better appetite, helped me to sleep and built me up in general so that I now feel like my former self. It is a great pleasure to recommend Vinol to everyone who needs a strength renewer."

Every man woman and child who is in poor health, weak, nervous and run down ought to know that Vinol is exactly the right thing to build them up and make them strong again. It is made from fresh cod livers and tonic iron without any oil and is delicious to take We guarantee Vinol to do just what we say and give back your money if it does not. Red Cross Drug Store, J. OVER CAPITALIZATION AND WATERING OF STOCKS

Lucid and Instructive Address Before the Canadian Club by Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, K. C.—A Glowing Picture of Canada and its Resources—Too Many Legislative Bodies, He Thinks—Overcapitalization of Companies Condemned—A Dollar of Stock Should be Worth a Dollar

"Over Capitalization and Watering of Stocks," was the subject of a masterly and convincing address given last night in the Y.M.C.A. building by Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., the eminent Toronto lawyer. Previous to the address, which was given under the auspices of the Canadian Club, the speaker of the evening was entertained at supper at Hotel Quinte by the Club. Many members were present and the spread provided by mine host Jenkins was all that could have been desired. After supper the party adjourned to the auditorium of the Y.M.C.A., where a large audience was present, including some ladies.

Mr. J. Elliott, President of the Club, occupied the chair and in a few well chosen remarks introduced the speaker of the evening. In rising to speak, Mr. Nesbitt was most cordially received. In his opening remarks he referred to the pleasure it gave him to address a Belleville audience, and especially the members of the Canadian Cub. He spoke of the fact that when starting out in his profession he was for some time connected with the late Mr. John Bell, whom he referred to as an able lawyer and a most worthy gentleman. Before touching upon the subject proper, Mr. Nesbitt spoke in glowing and eulogistic terms of Canada and the heritage we possessed. What have we in stock? We have an area of 4,000,000 square miles of a country rich in agriculture, forests and minerals. What a future this vast country has. Millions of acres of rich agricultural lands are yet untilled. Although at present in the great west we are raising annually millions of bushels of wheat, yet millions more could be raised if the land was taken up and help could be secured to work the same. The opportunities here were greater than those of the neighboring republic. The prospects are that the population will be materially increased by an ever increasing flood of immigrants. He predicted that with the rich farming lands being tilled and a greater production of farm products, living would become cheaper in this country. A great and important question was the class of immigrants desirable for this country. While from the motherland they were coming here, he (the speaker) would not object to having Japanese coming here. They were a thrifty and honest race of people. He had travelled through Japan and the life that one sees in that country is as sweet and wholesome as our own. The speaker then referred briefly to the Government of this country and the men in public life. The curse of public life in Canada was too much party. A public office is a public trust and should be used and so regarded by all who are in public life. In speaking of legislation Mr. Nesbitt intimated that we had too many legislative bodies. Each Province had a particular law in regard to companies, etc., whereas if we had one legislative body all would in unison and have one law applicable to any company which desired to operate.

The subject proper was next spoken to, and the views of the speaker are covered in the following extract of an exhaustive report of Messrs. Francis L. Stetson, Victor Morawetz and Louis Marshall, of New York, on "Stock Without the Dollar Mark":

"The harmfulnes of excessive issues of capital stock of corporations serving the public arises from the fact that stock of a given face value has not behind it property equal in actual value to the face value of the stock. The result is that the owners of the stock naturally assume the value of the corporate assets to be at least equal to the face value of the stock, demand an adequate return upon the same, and in the effort to secure such return both demand excessive prices for services rendered and unduly impair and cheapen the service.

"The fact is, a share of stock repre- business falls into the hands of bona fide purchasers, who buy the same upon the assumption that it is issued dollar for dollar of value. Any effort to reduce prices for services rendered after stocks have fallen into the hands of such holders is fought, as tending to impair the value of existing securities and unsettling the basis of all corporate transactions. This last trouble arises from regarding the share of stock as representing the value to an amount equal to its face value. Were all stock issued for full value, this might be true, for a brief interval, but in the practical course of business such equality rarely exists. In a successful business the value of the stock enhances, in an unsuccessful business it depreciates. It can not well happen that the value of property invested in a going enterprise will remain of the same value permanently, or even for any considerable period.

The fact is, a share of stock represents only a given fractional part of the assets of the corporation. If the entire capital stock is one hundred thousand dollars, divided into shares of one hundred dollars each, one share is in fact no more than the evidence of ownership of a one thousandth part of the corporate assets upon final dissolution and division, and of a right to a one-thousandth part of any dividend which may be declared. It has not any direct proper value beyond these two rights. If no dividend can properly be declared, the stock has no value as evidence of a dividend right. This dividend right is simply an ownership of a given part of the net earning power of the business. To say that stock is entitled to any given rate of dividend is a logical absurdity—a confusion in language—since it is only evidence of a right to another and vastly different thing namely, the right to a proportional part of the net earnings of the business. If once the public mind could be brought to regard shares of stock not as property in themselves, but as evidence of a right in property, we might hope to be rid of the deceptive notion that the par value of a share of stock is the slightest evidence of its real value, or is any evidence of the dividend returns to which the owner is entitled.

"It may well be considered a matter worthy of grave reflection whether in the case of at least all corporations hereafter organized a certificate of stock should have no par value, but should state only that the owner is entitled to a named proportional interest in the corporation. Every prospective purchaser would then be required to get a notion of the value of the property from a source other than the sums named on the certificate. The owner could not expect or demand returns upon a fictitious basis. The real would supersede the unreal in most investigations as to corporate values."

These men, he contended, were not a benefit to the community, but rather set a bad example to young men. How they acquired their vast wealth was a subject for serious consideration. Over-capitalization of companies and corporations had, he contended, been fostered by a sympathetic government. What we want is every dollar of stock in any company to be worth one dollar. Too many get stock as a bonus in companies. Wealth honestly earned is a lofty ambition for young men and even older men. His concluding remarks were advice to all to do all in their power to make Canada the country she is destined to be by honest and upright dealings. (Loud applause).

A vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, and seconded by Mr. C. N. Reid, was unanimously adopted by a standing vote, and tendered to the speaker.

The singing of the National Anthem brought the proceedings to a close.

A LIBERAL OFFER

We Guarantee to Relieve Dyspepsia. If We Fail the Medicine Costs Nothing.

To unquestionably prove to the people that indigestion and dyspepsia can be permanently relieved and that Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets will bring about this result, we will furnish the medicine absolutely free if it fails to give satisfaction to any one using it.

The remarkable success of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is due to the high degree of scientific skill used in devising their formula as well as to the care exercised in their manufacture, whereby the well-known properties of Bismuth Subnitrate and Pepsin have been combined with Carminatives and other agents.

Bismuth-Subnitrate and Pepsin are constantly employed and recognized by the entire medical profession as invaluable in the treatment of indigestion and dyspepsia.

The Pepsin used in Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets is carefully prepared so as to develop its greatest efficiency. Pepsin supplies to the digestive apparatus one of the most important elements of the digestive fluid. Without it the digestion and assimilation of food are impossible.

The Carminatives possess properties which aid in relieving the disturbances and pain caused by undigested food. This combination of these ingredients makes a remedy invaluable for the complete relief of indigestion and dyspepsia.

We are so certain of this that we urge you to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets on our own personal guarantee. Three sizes, 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store. J. S. McKeown, Belleville.

INTERESTING FUNCTION AT WOOLWICH

Presentation of Coronation Medals to Members of the National Reserve

The following is copied from the Woolwich, England Pioneer of recent date:

A very interesting presentation by the Mayor (Alderman S. H. Cuff, J. P.) took place at the Town Hall, Woolwich, on Tuesday last, in connection with the distribution of King George V. Coronation Medals to 11 members of the Woolwich Division of the National Reserve, at which the following members of the Local Committee were present, viz., His Worship the Mayor, Mr. S. J. Clothier, Councillor W. H. Dawson, Major C. B. Godfrey, Councillor A. Hall, Councillor Brevet Col. F. S. Leslie, Lieutenant-Col. H. B. Tasker, V.D., Lieut.-Col. P. O. Thomas, Alderman R. B. B. Wakelen, Lieut. R. C. Wild, and Mr. F. Hoar, organising officer.

Medals were only provided for a small percentage of the Reservists from each borough who attended the Coronation, and the following were chosen from the Woolwich Division by Headquarters on account of long service and decorations, viz.:—

Mr. F. Hoar, Major F. Draper, R. H.A., length of service 41 years; Major C. B. Godfrey, R.E., 42 years; Sergt. J. Coody, 1st Northumberland Fusiliers, 28 years (Long Service and Good Conduct, Meritorious Service, Regimental Order of Merit, Lord Roberts' National Service League, Indian Mutiny Medal); W. O. F. Riches, R.A. and O.A.C., 30 years (Long Service and Good Conduct, Zulu Campaign, Ulandi Clasp, Egypt-Suakin Clasp, Khedive's Bronze Star) Conductor J. E. Williams, York L.I., and Mil. Works Forces (India), 35 years (Afghan 1878-80, Good Conduct) Coy.-Sergt.-Major F. E. Clarke, A.S. C. and A.S.C. (T.F.), 36 years (Long Service—Volunteers); Col.-Sergt. D. C. Dollimore, Shropshire L.I., and 3rd R.W. Kent, 31 years, (Afghan 1878-80 Egyptian Medal, 1882); Sergt. Instr. of Musketry L. Pratley, Rifle Brigade and 3rd R. W. Kent, 33 years (Long Service—Volunteers); Col.-Sergt. I. P. White, 3rd R. W. Kent, 37 years (Long Service); Col.-Sergt. R. W. Smith, 2nd West Kent, 31 years (Long Service).

The Mayor, in presenting the medals, said that they represented a great national event, viz., the Coronation of King George V., and that they also represented the recipients as having during their lives done their duty for the good of the Empire. He wished that it had been possible to have presented more medals, but Woolwich had indeed been more fortunate than other boroughs by receiving even eleven. In Woolwich there are some grand old veterans, many of whom have served the country for 40 years and more in various parts of the world. He hoped that these medals would be a reminder of the past and be an incentive to the children and grandchildren of the recipients to follow their example of duty. He also hoped that the giver and the receivers of these medals may be long spared to enjoy health and happiness.

Mr. F. Hoar (organising officer) on behalf of the recipients thanked the Mayor for presenting the medals to them, and alluded to the services of the Committee, who had to frequently meet to discuss matters connected with the Reserve, and who devoted a good deal of time to the movement.

A letter has been received from the Post-Master General stating that it has been decided to allow Post Office servants to wear the National Reserve badges at all times.

PROPOSING TO AMEND CHILDREN'S PROTECTION ACT

It Is Proposed to Put It on a Broader and More Efficient Basis—Lieut.-Governor Approves.

The Children's Aid Society here issued a circular lately to the members of the Ontario Legislature and others, urging amendments to the Children's Protection Act to establish it upon a broader and more efficient basis by providing therein for Shelters and agents or inspectors, etc. The Lieutenant Governor, Sir John M. Gibson, who is the original author of this benevolent Act, in reply to a letter from Mr. Thomas Ritchie says, inter alia:

"I have read your letter of yesterday and the enclosed circular therein with much interest, ...

"It is not often I have seen as much good practical common sense compressed into the small space covered by the circular. I will see what can be done in having the amendments made which you urge.

"It has been with great satisfaction that I have visited different places during the last year or two and observed the active interest being taken in the Children's work.

"I have always felt that if anyone wants to do good in this world it can be done more certainly and tangibly (so to speak) in connection with neglected and dependent children than in any other field of usefulness or philanthropy."

EXCITING SCENE IN BRITISH HOUSE

LONDON, Feb. 26.—A sensation was caused among the members of the House of Commons this evening by an individual, dressed in clerical garb, who called himself the "Messiah," discharging several shots from a revolver toward the ceiling in the lobby. The stranger was sitting in the outer lobby when he suddenly opened fire, causing a stampede among the members. The man was arrested and removed, shouting: "Hands off the Messiah."

THE WORLD OF SPORT

HOCKEY.

A CLOSE GAME.

Although the City League game between Albert College and the Young Canadians which was played at the Arena last night attracted but few spectators, it was well worth a better appreciation, as it was strenuous from end to end, and was withal quite clean.

In the first half Albert had rather the most of the play, but very little the best of it at that, and had nearly, if not quite, as many shots on goal as had their opponents. The only score which was made during this period was a long lift which landed in the net.

Albert scored another in the second half early in the period, but thenceforward the Canadians had much the best of it. They scored a goal and had many shots afterwards, but could not locate the net and the game ended with a score of 2—1 in favor of Albert. The line-up was:—

Y. C.—		Albert—
Duesbery	Goal	Smith
W. Frost	Point	Embury
Bedboro	Cover	Brown
Bell	Rover	Minorcai
Whalen	Centre	Storms
Simmons	Right	Thompson
Wilson	Left	J. For'

Mr. Dawkins was the referee.

MIX-UP IN TRENT VALLEY.

MARMORA, Feb. 27.—A rather peculiar condition of affairs has arisen in the Trent Valley League over a postponed game. Marmora protested their game with Tweed, owing to the rink being improperly lighted, and their protest was allowed, and the game ordered to be replayed on Wednesday evening last. On that date Marmora arranged to run an excursion via C. P. R. to Tweed, and although the worst storm of the season was raging over fifty drove five miles to Central Ontario Junction to take the train. On arriving there it was found that owing to a wreck on the C. P. R. near Blanton the special train had been unable to get down. About 8.30 the railway company cancelled the special train and would not promise to get a special train through to Tweed that evening. Mr. W. H. Hubbell, president of the league, who was one of the excursion party, then called up the manager of the Tweed team and, after explaining the circumstances, informed him the game would have to be postponed until Friday evening.

On Thursday forenoon the manager of the Marmora team 'phoned the manager of the Tweed club re the game, and the latter flatly refused to replay the game, claiming it went to Tweed by default on the part of the Marmora team. The manager of the Marmora team then appealed to the president of the league, but the telephone wires were out of business through the storm, so he was unable to get in communication with Tweed until Friday morning, when he again informed the manager of the Tweed team that the game was to be played that evening as soon after the arrival of the local from Toronto as the teams could get on the ice.

On Friday evening the Marmora team accordingly went to Tweed accompanied by about thirty-five supporters. As soon as the train arrived in Tweed the lights were turned off the rink and the rink locked up. As soon as the team were ready the Marmora contingent started for the rink, but just before they reached it they were met with a fusilade of eggs which caused a hurried retreat. The referee, Mr. Anderson, of Peterborough, then went to the manager of the Tweed team, who absolutely refused to play that night. Later on, however, he made a proposition that if Marmora would stay over until next morning they would play them at 8 o'clock. Marmora refused to do this and the referee awarded the game to Marmora.

This ties Marmora and Stirling for the championship of No. 1 district, and home-and-home games are now being played.

CANOE CLUB JUNIOR CHAMPIONS

ORILLIA, Feb. 27.—Every available foot of space in the local rink was crowded with enthusiastic spectators this evening when Orillia and Toronto Canoe Club met in the final game of the O.H.A. junior championship series. Keen ice, an impartial referee and both teams in excellent condition combined to make the final one of the best exhibitions of hockey ever seen here. The score, 5 to 3 in favor of the home team, is a fair criterion of the strength of the respective teams. After the game the supporters of the Canoe Club were ready to admit that the better team won.

The game was good clean hockey all the way through with the exception perhaps of the last fifteen minutes when some roughness developed. After three quarter time the Toronto Canoe Club seemed to fade away, and their goal was stormed repeatedly. At half time the score was 3 to 1. Brilliant play was conspicuous everywhere and neither side appeared to have any advantage. Toronto's defence did magnificent work and the combination play of the Orillians was a surprise to everyone.

In the second half the Orillia combination weakened and lone rushes were more frequent. Both goalkeepers did great work, and on the home team Jupp and Mohan were the stars. The referee was strict, and in the first half Butterfield, Mackenzie, Cooke and Dopp were penalized. In the second half Sidley, Cooke, Thornton, Lomeril, Mohan, Butterfield and Mackenzie were sent to the box, Cooke offending three times. Over two thousand spectators witnessed the game and there were 1,262 paid admissions to the rink. The teams:—

Referee—Chancer Elliott, Kingston.

AGAINST FORGERY

How Rich Men Protect Themselves from the Forger by Complicated Systems in Watermarks and Numbers.

An elaborate, but at the same time very ingenious, method has been adopted by some of the world's richest men, in order to protect their cheque signatures against fraud. Not only is a different kind of signature used for each day in the week, but the signatures vary according to the amount of the cheque. Suppose, for instance, the millionaire's name is John Peter Smith. On Monday he will sign cheques for $50 or under "J. P. Smith"; from $50 to $250, "J. Peter Smith"; for over $500, "John Peter Smith"; for over $5,000, "John Smith," and so on. On Tuesday there is a re-shuffling of the signatures; $50 cheques will be signed "J. Peter Smith"; $50 to $250, "John Peter Smith"; over $500, "John P. Smith"; over $5,000, "P. Smith," and so on.

Thus the forger who would alter a cheque for $250 into one for $25,000 has many difficulties to face. He may succeed in adding the extra "0"; he may succeed in altering the word "hundred" to "thousand" — which is not so hard as it looks. But when he presents the cheque, the cashier, from the date and the amount, sees that it ought, say, to bear the signature "John P. Smith," when actually the name reads "John Smith." Thus the fraud is discovered. It is not every bank, of course, that would undertake the working of a complicated cipher like this, but a millionaire's account is usually worth taking a good deal of trouble over.

Certain firms in London devote the whole of their attention to the manufacture and printing of cheques, circular notes, letters of credit, and other securities for bankers. One of these firms, after considerable pressure from a certain millionaire, has devised a form of cheque which is watermarked like a Bank of England note, and which is declared to be absolutely safe.

Not only is the maximum amount water-marked in the body of the blank cheque — "under $250" or "under $500" — but the place where the drawee usually signs his name is prepared by a secret process, so that it can be written on only by a special kind of ink, the manufacture of which again, is a secret.

This species of cheque is used by a select body of City men dealing habitually with big sums of money, and up to the present has been found to afford almost absolute security.

Why Is It?

That girlish actions are suggestive of buoyant spirits.

That a pen may be driven, but a pencil does best when it's lead.

That while one swallow does not make a summer, one grasshopper can make more than a dozen springs.

That a tack points heavenwards when it means mischief.

That a man may be truthful in everything else, but he always played a better game of billiards several years ago than he does now.

German Promise Suits

Breach of promise suits are unknown to German law, but the courts at Gottingen have recently had to adjudicate on the nearest approach to such a case as the German code permits. A young professional man of Berlin had a visit from his fiancée who stayed over the week-end with his mother. On Monday he took her to the station and, as he thought, started her for home. But she got out at the next station, came back and the next thing the young man heard was that she had been seen walking unescorted in the Friedrich Strasse.

He wrote her an angry letter, demanding an explanation. She replied breaking off the engagement. He then requested the return of all his presents and of the money he had spent during their betrothal. As she took no notice of this letter, he brought suit.

But again the mere man had no chance. The courts decided that she was justified in breaking off her engagement by the angry tone of her fiancé's letter, and that her escapade in no way reflected on her character.

"NEVER DAE FOR A MEENISTER"

A carping old Scotch woman said to her pastor one day: "Dear me, meenisters mak' muckle adae aboot their hard work. But, what's twa bits o' sermons in the week tae mak' up. I cud dae it mysel'." "Well, Janet," said the minister, "let's hear ye." "Come awa' wi' a text, then," quoth she. He repeated with emphasis: "It is better to dwell in the corner of the housetop than with a brawling woman and in a wide house." Janet fired up instantly. "What's that ye say, sir? Dae ye intend onything personal?" "Stop, stop!" broke in the pastor. "You wud never dae for a meenister." "An' what for no'?" asked she sharply. "Because, Janet, yer came ower soon tae the application."

Artificial Snails.

It is astonishing how often it is that one hears of strange and secret processes through what is virtually the vagaries of that blind goddess, Chance. An instance of this occurred in France a week or so ago, when a workman brought an action against his employer to recover damages for a finger that had been mutilated in one of the machines. Then in the examination that followed the fact came out that the factory in question was engaged in the manufacture of artificial snails. It appears that the shells are bought by the firm in question from the dustmen and rag-pickers, and, after being cleaned, are filled with "lights" or cats' meat, the soft flesh being cut into corkscrew form to fit the shell by a skilfully-designed machine. The top is then sealed with liquid fat, and the escargot is ready for the consumer. The artificial snails have a ready sale in Paris and other French towns, and are presumably sold as the genuine article. One wonders what the opinion of many epicures of this delicacy is now that they have discovered the method by which their favourite dish is sometimes manufactured.

WED MOTHER'S SWEETHEART

Mrs. Morris Left Boarder in Daughter's Care and He Changed His Mind.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 26.—When Mrs. Ella Morris, a widow of 52 Grove Street, returned this afternoon from a week's visit to her son in New Jersey she learned that during her absence her twenty-year-old daughter, Olive, had married the man she herself expected to wed in the Spring. Mrs. Morris became hysterical and was removed to the hospital. She was suffering also from a gashed arm, having plunged it through a window pane in the excitement.

Mrs. Morris had gone away early in the week, leaving in her daughter's care Joseph Tremonte, a retired business man, who boarded with them, and who had promised to marry the mother. Mrs. Morris was made still more angry because the daughter could not understand her mother's pique. Tremont said he was sorry his mother-in-law had cut her arm but as he and his bride were happy he thought Mrs. Morris should not make such a fuss.

MASTERING A LION

What trainers have to do to gain Control.

In illustration of the lengths to which owners of wild beasts will go in order to retain control of them, Frank C. Bostock, the famous animal trainer, tells the following story:

"Some years ago, when we were at the Hippodrome in Paris, I decided, as a special attraction, to go into the arena with Wallace, a huge African lion that all our trainers had despaired of. The house was crowded. We placed the lion in a cage sixteen feet square, and this was put inside a twenty-foot ring. Two assistants were stationed in the outer ring in case of accident. I had scarcely got inside when the beast leaped at me. It bit right through my left hand, and with one blow ripped the flesh off my back.

"'Clear out!' I shouted to the two men in the outer ring. 'I'm going to open the doors and let him into the big arena.'

"I was as furious as the lion. My pride as a trainer was wounded deeper than my back. I flung open the doors and the lion sprang out. The blood was pouring from my wounds, but in the excitement of the moment I felt no pain — only a mad desire to be master. I picked up a 'property' chair, and when the beast came again I struck it full across the muzzle; then, seizing my whip, I actually became the aggressor and drove him back to the cage.

"The audience was in something like a panic, and loud cries of 'Enough! Enough!' were raised. But I hadn't finished. In ten minutes I had subjugated Wallace to such an extent that he cowered like a dog. I got out of the cage and just fainted away. From that day to this no one has attempted to teach Wallace."

A Great Climb

A wonderful feat of rock-climbing in the Grindenwald, Switzerland, has been accomplished by Mr. Percy H. Thorp. He succeeded in climbing up the face of the Eiger to the Eigerwadl station of the Jungfrau Railway (a tunnel railway), and clambered in through the aperature by which travellers admire the view.

This aperature is situated at a great height above the valley, and the rock wall reaching up to it is almost as steep and smooth as the side of a house. The feat has never been accomplished before.

JURY DISAGREES IN CROKER SUIT

Daughter of Former Tammany Leader Fails in Her Divorce Case

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The jury in the divorce suit brought by Ethel Cro- Toronto yesterday, R. Comp. W. N. J. Breen, erstwhile riding master, returned a sealed verdict in the Supreme Court to-day holding that they could not agree. Eight favored granting the divorce, and four held out for the defendant. The plaintiff is a daughter of Richard Croker.

John J. Breen took the witness stand in his own behalf yesterday. Mrs. Croker and a number of Tammany politicians were interested auditors.

Breen was questioned principally concerning his experience with Miss Maude Diehl, a telephone girl at the Grand Union Hotel, Toronto. He admitted that she had been in his room, that they had a few drinks and that he had kissed her, but maintained that there had been nothing improper in his actions.

Breen was coachman for Hon. J. R. Stratton, of Peterborough.

WOMEN'S FRANCHISE DISCUSSED BY THE "Y"

Pleasant and Profitable Gathering Held at the Home of Mrs. Alex. Ray on Tuesday Evening.

Woman's Franchise was the subject at the parlor meeting of the "Y." held at the home of Mrs. Alex. Ray, William Street, on Tuesday evening. Besides being hostess, Mrs. Ray occupied the chair in the absence of Mrs. Williams, the President. Miss Reeves gave the Bible reading and the Rev. A. M. Hubly led in the opening prayer.

Three short readings were given from the W.C.T.U. motto, "For God and Home and Native Land" by Misses Hambly, L. Steele and A. Lazier.

Those who contributed to the musical part of the programme were Mrs. P. C. McLaurin, Prof. Staples, Prof. Burrill and Miss H. Dyer, who presided at the piano.

Mrs. Dr. Goldsmith contributed a recitation entitled "Advice to Girls," which was much appreciated by all present.

The Rev. A. S. Kerr, M.A., in his opening remarks explained that there are two kinds of suffrage. Full suffrage and partial. At the present we enjoy only partial suffrage and his remarks were to deal with full woman's suffrage. This movement has as its object the extension of woman's rights. Women should hvae the same privileges as the men have. Christ in His teaching gives an equal position to women as He does to men, giving them equal rights and equal privileges. Better laws express a higher motive of opinion. The objections that are raised by those opposed to this movement: First—home is the proper sphere for women, but there are not enough homes to go round, so the women are not all needed there. Would women neglect their home duties if they had the franchise? Do men neglect their business because they have the vote? Women would not neglect their home duties if they had the franchise. If they had the franchise would it develop a masculine type of woman? This is one of the great dangers along this line. Are our women ready to enter the hurly-burly of Parliament or the military service? This movement is a desire for social betterment. Already the laws are too far in advance of moral conditions. What we need is good men and women before we get good laws. If we have the one we will have the other.

Miss Emily J. Guest, M.A., next took up the subject from a woman's standpoint, dealing with it in a very clever manner. She spoke of the men not liking the military suffragettes, and in contrast told how Massey Hall, Toronto, was so crowded with men that the women could hardly get in when the society brought Mrs. Pankhurst to that city. Our men are farther ahead than our women are. British men are fair. The franchise is an important question in Parliament now. We need the mother in the state just as much as we need the father.. Why do women want the franchise? To wipe out these three great evils—The liquor traffic, the white slave traffic and the cigarette habit. To stand behind the law and see that it is enforced. Women to-day are doing their own work under different conditions. Fifty years ago our grandmothers carded the wool, made the shirts, made the candles and were the family doctors, whereas to-day the shirts are made in the factories by the girls and it is not surprising that their grand-daughters inherit their love for the study of medicine. Girls were taught in the boarding schools which were ii charge of women. Miss Guest also spoke of the low salaries paid to girls. Girls of as good ability as men were paid much smaller salaries. This should not be with the increased cost of living.

Mrs. Ray asked that the ladies save the Surprise soap centres, as the W. C.T.U. support a Deaconess, paying her salary with them.

Refreshments were served by the "Y" girls at the close of the programme.

A HAPPY EVENING AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Their Canvass for Subscriptions Successfully Ended—Financial Basis of the Institution Solidly Completed—An Evening of Rejoicing Among All Concerned

The anticipation of those engaged in the campaign the past few days to raise $8,000 by subscriptions for the new Y. M. C. A. building, its equipment and maintenance, has been realized. There was a joyous time in the parlors of the building last evening when it was announced that the required sum had been obtained, and all that is required now is that some rooms in the dormitory be furnished. When the various teams reported at the noon lunch yesterday it was ascertained that about $1,000 was needed. The question was, could this sum be secured by evening, and the unanimous answer was that it could, and this confident assertion proved to be correct.

The members of the various teams went to work with a will and at 7.30 they reassembled in the parlor. As the captains of the various teams reported the amounts that had been secured since luncheon it was plainly evident that good work had been done and the sum required was forthcoming. When it was finally announced that the sum needed had been collected, which assured the handsome donations given conditionally by Lord Strathcona and Mr. H. Corby, ex-M. P., of this city, of $5,000 each, joy reigned supreme, and the doxology was sung with fervor by those present, including a number of ladies who are members of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. D. V. Sinclair, President of the Association, presided over the gathering for a time, when being compelled to leave, his place was taken by Mr. S. Burrows. A number present were called upon and spoke briefly, expresing the pleaure they felt at the success of the campaign. On motion a hearty vote of thanks was tendered to the ladies, whose encouragement and assistance had done much to help along the campaign. They also, at noon hour each day, provided the canvassers with a bountiful spread. To the resolution Mrs. J. C. Moynes replied, expressing the pleasure the ladies felt at the success of the campaign.

Votes of thanks were also extended to the various captains and members of the teams, also to the press for its assistance in the campaign. They were appropriately responded to by the representatives present. During the proceedings approprpiate hymns were sung.

IN AND ABOUT THE CITY

POTATOES FROM IRELAND.

Owing to the shortage of the potato crop in this district last year a very large quantity of potatoes have been imported from Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island. The latest importation of two carloads comes from Ireland, and the "murphies" are said to be of fine flavor.

A BIG EGG.

Mr. Wm. Jordan, of the 8th concession of Tyendinaga, exhibited at The Intelligencer office to-day a big egg laid by one of his Plymouth Rock hens, which egg measured 8 in. by 6 1-2 in. and weighs almost 5 oz. Pretty good for February—a hard month for fowl. "Who drives fat oxen should himself be fat." Very appropriately Mr. Jordan is one of the big men of the county. He is fully six feet high and weighs 250 pounds.

RAILWAY ACCIDENT.

An accident occurred on the line of the G. T. R. near Bowmanville about 9 o'clock on Tuesday night, resulting in iFreman Small, of this city, sustaining painful injuries. It appears that mogul engine No. 2352 was hauling a freight train westward when something went wrong with the engine, causing the steam to escape in such a manner that Small was badly scalded. He was taken to Toronto and conveyed to a hospital, where he will be compelled to remain a few days. Engineer P. Turner, also of this city, escaped injury.

MASONIC ELECTION.

At the meeting of the Royal Arch Chapter of the Masonic order, held at Toronto yesterday, R.E. Comp. W. N. Ponton was elected Grand Superintendent of Prince Edward District No. 11.

AGAINST UNION.

The majority of the officials and members of John Street Presbyterian Church of this city are evidently not in favor of church union. Last evening the vote was counted and the result showed 46 in favor of union and 67 against.

CONCERT AT ROBLIN'S MILLS.

The annual concert of the Ameliasburg Agricultural Society was held in the Town Hall at Roblin's Mills last night. The spacious hall was filled to the doors with an audience which thoroughly appreciated the programme presented. Mrs. A. P. Allen, of this city, rendered selections, and her sweet soprano voice was never heard to better advantage. Messrs. A. Wheeler and G. Dulmage, of this city, introduced monologues which were exceptionally amusing and took down the house. Duets and quartettes were given by a quartette composed of Messrs. G. Dulmage, T. Taylor, R. Minns and John Boyd, of this city, and were much appreciated. Mrs. A. E. Edwards, as an entertainer, is a hostess in herself and she captivated the audience. The entertainment was in every respect one of the best and most successful ever held under the auspices of the Society.

FUNERAL OF DUKE WAS PRIVATE

Remains Temporarily Buried in Royal Vaults at Windsor—King and Queen Attend.

WINDSOR, Eng., Feb. 28.—The body of the late Duke of Fife, who died at Assouan, Egypt, on January 29 from pleurisy and congestion resulting from exposure during the wreck of the liner "Delhi" off the Moroccan coast on December 13, when he and the Princess Royal and their daughters narrowly escaped with their lives, was temporarily buried to-dya in the Royal vaults here. It will remain here until the completion of the family vault at Mar Lodge, Braemar, Scotland.

The funeral service was of the simplest kind. King George, Queen Mary, and the Princess Royal and her daughters, some other members of the Royal family and a few personal friends composed the congregation.

Queen-mother Alexandra was unable to be present owing to an attack of influenza.

TO PAY TROOPS ON BOTH SIDES.

PEKIN, Feb. 28.—The four powers group, consisting of American, British, French and German bankers, will immediately advance the Nanking Government 2,000,000 taels ($1,200,000) and the Pekin Government 3,000,000 taels, to pay the troops on both sides. It is understood that this will be included in the loan of 20,000,000 taels, or $12,000,000, which President Yuan Shi Kai informed Sun Yat Sen yesterday that the balance will be forthcoming when the Cabinet of the new republic is formed.

838,000 Men are Out and a Million Will be on Strike by Tonight

(Intelligencer Special.)

LONDON, Feb. 29.—Seven hundred thousand miners were on strike at 4 p.m. to-day, according to reports received by the Premier, and it was certain that the number would be increased to a million by midnight.

No progress towards peace was made at the meeting between representatives of the miners and owners this morning and nothing is expected to result from their meeting this afternoon. By five o'clock 838,000 were out.

BODY CRAMMED IN BATHTUB.

Woman Murdered in New York—A Bell Boy Arrested.

NEW YORK, Feb. 28.—The body of Mrs. Johanna Heuveron, who lived alone in an apartment in Harlem, was found this morning crammed into a bathtub.

She had been murdered sometime during the night and her flat looted.

A bell boy in the apartment house was arrested.

"HOME SWEET HOME."

The Campaign's closed again dear wife,
  And I'm a wreck complete;
But what is sadder news to you
  I'm coming home to eat.
So dust around, spruce up a bit,
  And have things looking neat;
For meals at the Y.M.C.A.
  Are mighty hard to beat.

The education I've received
  In culinary art
Has made a connoisseur of me.
  So now you'll have to start
Constructing fancy dishes
  Of salads, sweets and tart.
For living on plain food again
  Would break your hubby's heart.

So don't delay a minute, wife,
  Call up the grocery store
And order up a load of stuff—
  A half a ton or more—
For I will need more pampering
  Than I have had before.
Since dining with the "canvassers"
  I've appetite galore.

SL[illegible]GHTLY MISTAKEN

Although an editor is expected to know every[illegible]ing, and although his store of misce[illegible]laneous information is usually large, yet there are some things of which he — if he is an average editor — has never heard. Such, evidently, was the case with James Payn, the well-known novelist, when he was editor of 'Cornhill.'

One day an unannounced caller who had managed to evade the porter downstairs opened Payn's door. His hair was long and his clothes were shabby and untidy. He had a roll of papers in his hand. Payn, surmising a poet and an epic several thousand lines long, looked up.

"Well, sir?"

"I've brought you something about sarcoma and carcinoma."

"We are overcrowded with poetry — couldn't accept another line, not if it were by Milton."

"Poetry!" the caller flashed. "Do you know anything about sarcoma and carcinoma?"

"Italian lovers, aren't they?" said Payn, imperturbably.

The caller retreated, with a withering glance at the editor. Under the same roof as the 'Cornhill' was the office of a medical and surgical journal, and it was there that the caller sought for the disposal of a treatise on those cancerous growths with the euphonious names which, with a layman's ignorance, Payn ascribed to poetry.

What the Hero Wished

The bugle sounded, into the barrack square marched the regiment; they formed a hollow square, and waited. For it was an important occasion. Patrick Dolan, a scarred and sunbrunt warrior, was to receive some little token of his country's gratitude. A notable act of bravery had brought Patrick, into the limelight.

"Men," said the officer commanding, "I am proud to pin this medal on the breast of Patrick Dolan — a Briton and a hero! And, under a special order, I shall place five pounds to his credit in the bank, as some little reward for his gallant conduct."

Patrick stepped forward and, as heroes do, looked uncomfortable. Still, there was one request he wanted to make.

"If—if it's all the same to you, sorr," he blurted out, "I'd rather ye'd pin the five-pound note on me chist, and place the medal to me criddit at the bank, sorr!"

"What started the riot at the performance of 'Hamlet' last night?"

"Why, Hamlet held the skull and said: 'Alas! poor Yorick. You are not the only deadhead in the house.'"

Challenge the Judge.

It was a case in an Irish court, and, the prisoner seeming hard to satisfy, juryman after juryman was asked to leave the box. However, all things come to an end, even in Ireland, and at last the swearing of the jury was completed. And then the prisoner leaned over the dock and sought the ear of his counsel.

"The jury's all right now, I think," he whispered; "but ye must challenge the judge. I've been convicted under him siviral times already, and maybe he's beginnin' to have a prejudice."

Sophistry of a Sophist.

A certain archbishop, when asked woman to misstate her age, replied: "A lie may be defined as a statement made by one rational being to another rational being, with the intent to deceive. Now, as no rational being would think of asking a woman her age with the expectation of being answered truthfully, one of the elements of the lie is lacking, and the woman's statement cannot, strictly speaking, be defined as such."

Australia has Tallest Tree.

Australia claims to have the tallest tree in the world. It has long been thought that to California belongs this distinction, but, while California trees are of gigantic dimensions, they do not come up to Australia's eucalyptus trees. The Californians are noted not so much for their height as for their girth and diameter. The tallest tree in California yet discovered was found by actual measurement to be 340ft. high. Australia's record gum tree can beat this by 140ft.

Some Errors Corrected

1. Error: "All Rolled Oats Taste Alike."

This needs correction. Tillson's Rolled Oats taste like no other oats. The delicious, distinctive taste of Tillson's is due to the exclusive pan drying process, during which none of the aroma or flavor of the oats is allowed to escape. Tillson's Oats are the only oats dried by this method.

2. Error: "All Rolled Oats Look Alike."

This needs correction. Examine Tillson's carefully. You will discover that the flakes are the thinnest and most uniform you ever saw. They are also unbroken and free from meal dust.

3. Error: "All Oats Cook Alike."

This needs correction. Tillson's Oats cook thoroughly in 15 minutes. This is due to the remarkable thinness of Tillson's flakes. As no other oats are rolled so thin, no other can be cooked so quickly.

Rolled oats are an important article of diet. You owe it to yourself to have the best the market affords. Try Tillson's.

Tillson's Oats

Cream of Corn Soup

Add one-half cupful of Tillson's Rolled Oats to one can of corn and three cupfuls of water. Simmer thirty minutes. Press through sieve. Add this to three cupfuls scalded milk. Mix well, season with salt, paprika and celery extract. Add one cupful of hot cream and serve.

Your grocer has Tillson's. Two sizes—10c and 25c. Each 25c package contains a handsome piece of English Porcelain Tableware.

CRUISER-LINE SERVICE PROPOSED FOR DOMINION

Further information has been obtained in regard to the plans which have been laid before the Government for an addition to the naval service of Canada in the form of six new steamers for the trans-Atlantic mail service, but available also for naval use in war time.

It now appears that the matter is of considerably more importance than was at first supposed. The plan, which is receiving the personal attention of members of the Cabinet, does not include the formation of a new line, but the building by the existing lines of six of the most modern and swiftest vessels which money can buy, under government assistance, very much as the Lusitania and Mauretania were financed by the British Government, though sailing under the house flag of the Cunard line.

These vessels would have a guaranteed speed of 24 knots, which would mean that mails could be landed from Great Britain in Montreal in five days, in Toronto in six days, in Winnipeg in eight days, and in Vancouver in ten and a half days. They would be built under the supervision of the British Admiralty and the Canadian Government, and could be operated either by the individual companies or by a federation of the companies trading from Canadian ports.

The hope of those behind the scheme is that the federation idea would be adopted, and that a special subsidy would be granted to this national operating company. Advance plans of the vessels show a length over all of 728 feet, a beam of 81 feet, and a draught of 30 feet, fully loaded. Motive power would be furnished by turbine engines, driving quadruple propellers.

In time of war these fast vessels would be of great service. They would be built with armored bows and sterns, and their coal bunkers so constructed as to take the place of armor over the engines. Provision would be made for the mounting of two six-inch batteries of two guns each, on bow and stern, and for two 4.6 batteries of two guns each to port and starboard. Besides these there would be 16 quick-firing guns at different points.

It is stated that the Canadian Pacific Railway Steamship Company is very much in favor of the scheme and is ready to go ahead with the construction of three of these vessels as soon as the Government decides to grant the subsidy.

It is understood that the basis on which the new steamers would be run would be a subsidy of one hundred thousand dollars apiece. While six hundred thousand dollars a year would be a big increase in the Dominion's ship subsidy bill, it is pointed out that these vessels would be absolutely under Government control in time of need and not under the control of a private line.

SETTLERS' EXCURSIONS TO CANADIAN NORTHWEST.

Commencing with the first Tuesday in March, and continuing on every Tuesday thereafter during March and April, the Canadian Pacific will run Settlers' Excursion trains to Winnipeg and West.

For the accommodation of settlers travelling with their live stock and effects; a colonist car will be attached to the settlers' effects train. This car will leave Toronto on regular train at 10.20 p. m.; arriving at West Toronto it will be cut off and attached to settlers' effects train as mentioned above.

For those not travelling with stock and effects, special Colonist Cars will be attached to regular train leaving Toronto at 10.20 p. m. and run through to Winnipeg without change. No charge is made for accommodation in Colonist Cars.

Tourist cars are also run on regular train leaving Toronto at 10.20 p. m. A small extra charge is made for accommodation in these cars. Apply to nearest C.P.R. agent for a "Settlers' Guide" and "Tourist Car" Pamphlet. S. Burrows, General Agent Belleville. d,F24—M3

THE ORIGIN OF MAN

Recent Research is Held to Support Theory that the Human Race had Tail-Less Ape Ancestors.

Since Darwin first suggested the theory of evolution, scientists galore have been studying along the same lines, and man's origin is being gradually pushed further and further into the remote ages. Reviewing the remarkable discoveries of the last ten years in Western Europe, Professor McCurdy shows that it is being gradually proved that the human race is as old as any of the tailless apes, and probably had the same ancestors. The oldest undisputed flint implements date from the Upper Miocene period of geology; the oldest human bone, the jaw of "Homo heidelbergensis, from near the beginning of the Quarternary. Primitive man, therefore, must have lived in Western Europe during the entire Glacial period, and developed into "Homo primigenius," low in stature and robust, with short, stout arms and legs — much like the Eskimo of today. A more intellectual race, probably from the East, appeared in the Upper Quarternary, or at least 30,000 years ago. This people, "Homo aurignacensis," sculptured and frescoed the walls of the caverns and their own implements, and their descendants, who must have flourished more than 10,000 years ago, introduced the rudiments of writing. The negroid people probably came into Western Europe soon after. Professor Klaatsch finds "Homo primigenius" to be closely related to the gorilla of Africa, and "Homo aurignacensis" to resemble more nearly the chimpanzee of Asia.

Concrete Fence Posts

The increasing cost of timber has resulted in more spirited search for efficient substitutes. One inventor, realising the growing popularity of ferro-concrete, has turned his endeavours into this channel with a view to effecting the desired result, and has achieved distinct success. The posts made from this material are stated to be extremely durable and far superior to those of wood. The cost averages about forty cents per yard; but in this connection it is as well to point out that the cost is governed by geographical situation, inasmuch as the transportation charges for posts of this description, or for manufacturing them on the spot after the materials have been brought in, are heavier than for those of wood under certain conditions. At the same time, if the materials are obtainable on the spot the fence can be built exceedingly cheaply; and when it is pointed out that the durability of a ferro-concrete post is from five to ten times that of timber, according as the wood is preserved with creosote or otherwise, it will be seen that the former has overwhelming advantages in those districts where wood is not readily obtainable. Three of the great British railway companies have erected fence-posts of this material, and are stated to be eminently satisfied with the same; while it has also been used for gradient-posts and gateposts to crossings.

It may be that a bad boy makes a good man but no one ever caught him in the process of transformation.

NATIVE POLO AT GURAIS.

The Ancient Game of Golf is a New Game in Comparison.

Polo is played at Gurais (three marches up the Gilgat Road) in Kashmir regularly once a week during the summer months, when the ground is free from snow.

Each villager rides his own pony (about 12 hands any distance up to 15 miles in the morning, plays from 12 to 3 or 4 p.m., and then rides back to his home. When there is a bet of a sheep they have sides, otherwise it is each for himself. Each chukker lasts two hours unless nine goals are scored first; if the ball goes between the posts it counts as a goal, and if it can be caught in the hand in mid-air the catcher scores a goal by riding with it in his hand between the posts—if he can. No one bothers about "offside," fouls, or other embellishments of Europeans.

In spite of plentiful hard knocks, and sometimes worse, no one will miss his weekly game if he can help it. The game generally starts with six or eight players, but by the time it finishes it is no uncommon sight to see twenty players taking part at the same time, and needless to say the game is fast and furious all the time.

The local telegraph master is the only European who plays, except for occasional visitors and sportsmen on their way through. To our ideas the game is primitive, but it finds great favour in the eyes of all the natives in this part of the world, and one has only to watch the game for a few minutes to realize how keen they all are, and absolutely devoid of nerves.

The greatest tragedy that can befall a keen player on polo day is to have no pony. Sometimes it happens, however, that the animal is hired out and not returned in time. Then the player calmly takes his place in goal — on foot.

System in Salesmanship.

"Young man," says the automobile manufacturer to the new salesman who has astonished the organization by the rapid-fire sales he has made in the two months of his employment, "I must congratulate you on your work."

"Thank you, sir," replies the new salesman modestly.

"I know we build the best auto in the market," says the manufacturer, "but even at that I cannot understand how you can sell ten times as many machines as the very best men we have had prior to you. How do you do it?"

"Well, sir," explains the new salesman, the light of honest pride in his eyes, "I always ask the customer to take a ride in one of our machines as the first move toward getting acquainted with its riding qualities. Of course he accepts the invitation. I then take him out on the boulevard and get arrested and fined for fast running. After that there is no argument."

Ten minutes later the new salesman leaves the private office with a block of preferred stock tucked away in his inside pocket.

Prestige and Irishman.

A well known Railroad president, in his study of all classes of men who are under him, entertains a great admiration for the Irish foreman of a gang of laborers who went to any lengths to show his men that he was the real boss. One morning this foreman found that his gang had put a hand car on the track without his orders.

"Who put that han' car-r-r on the thrack?" he asked.

"We did, sor," one of the men answered respectfully.

"Well," he said shortly, "take it off ag'in!"

The laborers did so with some difficulty.

"Now," said the foreman, "put it on ag'in!"

Rung himself to Death.

Extraordinary circumstances attended the suicide of a church sexton at the Hungarian village of Koros-Ialany recently. The inhabitants were alarmed by the violent ringing of their church bell, and thought a fire must have broken out. As, however, none could be seen, some of them went to the belfry to discover the reason, and there found the body of the sexton dangling from the bell-rope, with which he had hanged himself.

The Sixth Sense?

It is frequently the case that we meet people who antogonize us the moment a glance or a handshake is exchanged, while our inner consciousness offers no explanation for that reasonless antipathy. On the other hand Fate brings us in contact with personalities which at once appeal to a sixth sense which is indefinable, but which seems to comprehend more than the combined educated and trained sensibilities. What is that sixth sense?

Among the various discoveries made by men of science in their innumerable efforts to measure and map the earth with the least possible error are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that, in mapping the island, the northern and southern coast lines, as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.

The animal whined, ran forward, looked behind to see if they were following, and then came dejectedly back and looked up pathetically at Felix.

"We had best follow his lead," he said, drawing Paul's arm through his. "Right you are, old man," he said, addressing the dog, "get ahead if you insist on dragging us into your affairs."

With a glad bark, he rushed on in front, and they lost sight of him in the dim distance, but turning an angle, and looking down one of the narrow, devious paths, they spied him midway, patiently and expectantly awaiting them.

"What is he standing over?" Paul asked.

Felix paused, unclasped his friend's hand, uttered an unintelligible exclamation, ran forward, and bent over the prostrate form of a man. Paul reached him just as, after fumbling with the matches, he struck a light. It was a young man, tall and fair, in evening dress. He lay on his side, his gun near him, a crimson stain upon his shirt bosom between the gleam of his diamond studs. His blue eyes were half open, and his teeth clenched under the small blonde moustache. Felix turned the boyish face toards the light as it flickered out, but they had seen enough, there was no one anything like him in the neighborhood, there was no mistaking him. It was Anthony Pelham.

CHAPTER IX.

A Turning Point.

With a choking cry in his throat Paul staggered back against the friendly trunk of a tree, his face cold, his forehead damp, his mind full of horror at what he had seen. Stifled by the thick atmosphere of dread he was afraid to inquire, almost to imagine, how the fearful catastrophe had come to pass.

"I told him I hated him. I said he had been a plague and a nuisance to me all my life, and I wished he were dead!"

Judith's passionate careless words came seething and surging around in wild chaotic tumult until the awful truth had penetrated every corner and cranny of his brain. Pelham, despised, rejected, miserable, goaded past endurance, had chosen what seemed to him in his agony the only way of laying aside a burden too heavy for his young shoulders.

"You mustn't take this too much to heart," Felix said, with a kindly sympathetic pressure on his arm.

"Tell me," he gasped, "is it—?"

His voice failed him, only his quivering lips framed the word "suicide."

"Hush!" Felix whispered, looking around about through the glimmering indistinctness, and raising his hand to impress caution, "it was an accident, he is still alive, and please God he will live to be a hale old man. I want help, I want medical aid. I want you to warn Agnes. He must be taken to the Manor—the nearest place. I can carry him; have you a nerve to run on ahead and tell Agnes? Get a doctor from somewhere, and, remember, Farley, it's an accident, one of those unfortunate, deplorable, unforeseen, accidents which will happen at times in spite of all precautions."

City born and bred, custom and habit gripped him fast. He hesitated, looked through the gloom, and shivered. The thought, however, that life might be slowly ebbing from that long, slim figure on the ground acted like a potent cordial and sent him rushing along the zigzag, spongy footpath till he reached the clump of scrubby, dwarfed trees and the welcome yellow gorse. Once across the open field and the high road he was within the radius of light from the parlor window, and he was able to see Agnes pour out a cup of coffee and rearrange a little tasty dish Rose had placed on the table.

"Agnes," he said, going over to the decanter and mixing himself half a glass of brandy and water, "there has been an accident in the plantation, and—"

"To whom—not Felix?" she asked, growing white.

"No; to Anthony. It was an accident, Agnes, you understand, an accident. Felix is bringing him here. Who and where is the nearest medical man?"

His lips were tightly compressed, his great eyes glittered in the lamplight. He was holding himself superbly in check, and spoke with preternatural calmness.

"We have no doctor nearer than East Weyberne; you can't go that distance to-night. You are too upset; you are not fit. I shall send Rose down to Denham's cottage to tell him to go."

"No, Agnes," he said, decisively; "I'll go myself; Pelham's life may depend upon opportune surgical aid. An empty-headed, drinking dolt like Denham is as likely as not to visit the 'Goose and Gridiron,' and forget all about the doctor. Besides, I must bestir myself; I couldn't bear to be inert when so much hangs on the passing of each moment. Tell me the man's name and I'll bring him back with me if he's above ground."

"Hunter—Dr. Hunter," she shaid; "but should he be called out there's a Mr. Snell, who—"

He gulped down the spirit, and disappeared before she had finished speaking.

After twenty minutes of alternate running and walking, he heard the sound of wheels behind him, and, looking back, distinguished the outline of a man driving a thorough-bred, which even at that distance appeared to possess a great deal of action. It was a dogcart he perceived, a high, solid, useful vehicle, carrying a second man lolling with folded arms at the back of it, and in a few seconds they had overtaken and slowed down beside him.

"Hello, there!" the driver exclaimed. "Are you Anthony Pelham?"

"No," he answered, twisting around and peering intently into the man's face; "do you know him? Are you a friend of his?"

"Yes to both questions," the man said, laughing. "I've just been to Weyberne Lodge, and found him out. When I saw you in the distance I thought I had spotted my man."

"Will you tell me your name?" Paul asked.

"My name? Why, John Hunter."

"Are you Dr. Hunter, of East Weyberne?"

"Certainly; I thought everyone for miles around here knew Jack Hunter."

"Then, for Heaven's sake, turn back to the Manor House and drive like the devil," he said, springing onto the step and scrambling into the vehicle.

"I suppose you were on your way for me?" the doctor remarked, backing into the hedge to turn around, and hooking the leather apron over Paul's knees.

"I was on my way for anyone I could get," he said.

"What has happened? Something serious, by your manner."

"Yes; Anthony Pelham has met with a gun accident."

"How long back?"

"I don't know—an hour, a year, perhaps ten; I haven't been able to keep count of time."

"Pelham is a friend of yours?"

"Yes. For goodness' sake drive a little faster."

Dr. Hunter cracked his whip, curling the lash around the shoulders of his powerful, energetic steed, and they sped along the turnpike at a reckless rate.

"Anthony came around to me the other morning to ask for a pick-me-up, and said he had a fit of the blues," the doctor remarked, wishing he had given the matter more consideration at the time. "I didn't like the look of him—he's been losing flesh much too rapidly; neither did I like the expression in the boy's eyes, so I thought as I was passing the Lodge to-night I'd look in and see what I could make of him. How long have you known our mutual friend?"

"Some few weeks now," he returned, shortly.

"Oh, well, come, you can't be such tremendous allies! I've known Anthony all his life. Five and twenty years ago I was present on an interesting occasion, that is to say when he first opened his blue eyes on this comical old world. Twenty-five years ago! Good gracious! I lay abed this morning in a comfortable half drowse, making business plans for to-day, philosophizing and speculating on the probability of the next twenty-five years. 'Jack,' I said to myself, 'you came to East Weyberne as assistant to old Bayles at the age of twenty-five, and you've plodded steadily and soberly along through fair weather and foul for another good five and twenty years. Therefore, two-thirds of a quiet happy busy life have slipped past, the years bringing with them the meed for which we have toiled. Now Jack, my laddie, another twenty-five will carry you beyond the span allotted to man, and in spite of your robust health, your firm, fresh face and your agile limbs, there's not a portion of the last third you can stake a small bank note on—not on what you may fairly call your own. To me, you know, I can't account for the inane feeling, it may be sheer vanity, but to me there is infinite grimness and pathos in having lived half a century. Age begins then to steal like a sad twilight over one's figure, and writes unwelcome legible records of sorrow, worldly selfishness, and hypocrisy, as the case may be, nolens volens, across one's countenance. I expect you are inwardly cursing the hippish moralizings of a garrulous old fogey—eh, young man?"

"I beg your pardon, I didn't hear what you were saying."

"I'll be bound you didn't. I've seen folk in trouble before. Now, if you'll excuse me, I'll tell you something. I am afraid, with those eyes and that mouth of yours, you have the capacity for suffering abnormally developed. If I am not greatly mistaken, you are the kind of individual to deliberately cut and lash yourself, rub the wound with salt, grind your teeth with the smart of it, and continue to repeat the operation at intervals. You are stubborn of purpose, too, young man. You are the sort to take a whim, a quixotic idea, like a bit between your teeth and go through life in headlong fashion with it, suffering untold agonies, until your heart breaks at last beneath its own weight of penitence."

"I hope and trust you are wrong, doctor," he said with a little shiver. "I should be unhappy and ill at ease if I thought I was predestined to break my neck in riding a hobby too near the edge of a social precipice."

"Ah, no doubt, we hope to do well. We trust we intend to be virtuous. But then hell is paved with good intentions. Still, I'm not exactly a seer, and forewarned, you know, is forearmed. What's that on the road?" he added, as they neared the Manor; "your eyes are younger than mine."

"It's Mr. Fleming; I know by his extraordinary height."

"Ah, Felix Fleming!" Dr. Hunter repeated, "the prince of good fellows; if ever you and I meet again, my lad, I'll tell you a story worth hearing of this same Felix Fleming."

He threw the reins to Paul, looked over his shoulder and said "Dick," jumped down and walked quickly through the garden with Felix. The necessity for further exertion, the need to curb his strong emotional nature, having all at once subsided, Paul's mood changed.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable continues very quiet, owing to the limited demand for May-June shipment. There was a fair enquiry for oats, and bids were in line, but on account of the scarcity of ocean freight exporters could not accept the orders. The demand for feed wheat for local consumption was fair, and sales of car lots were made at 73c, ex-track. Oats were steady at the decline, with a fair volume of business doing. There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour, but, as the prices bid were 6d per sack below millers' views, no business was done. The local market is fairly active and steady. Demand for bran and shorts is good and prices are stronger. A good trade is passing in butter. Cheese is quiet. Eggs fairly active.

Corn—American, No. 2 yellow, 75½c.

Oats—Canadian western, No. 2, 53c to 53½c; do., No. 3, 51c to 51½c; extra No. 1 feed, 52c to 52½c; No. 2 local white, 50½c to 51c; No. 3 local white, 49½c to 50c; No. 4 local white, 48½c to 49c.

Barley—Malting, $1.05 to $1.10.

Buckwheat—No. 2, 72c to 73c.

Flour—Manitoba spring wheat patents, firsts, $5.60; seconds, $5.10; strong bakers', $4.90; winter patents, choice, $5.10 to $5.35; straight rollers, $4.65 to $4.75; do. bags, $2.15 to $2.25.

Rolled oats—Barrels, $5.05; bags, 90 lbs., $2.40.

Millfeed—Bran, $24 to $25; shorts, $26 to $27; middlings, $28; moullie, $30 to $34.

Hay—No. 2 per ton car lots, $15 to $15.50.

Cheese—Finest westerns, 15⅛c to 15⅝c; finest easterns, 14½c to 15c.

Butter—Choicest creamery, 33c to 34c; seconds, 32c to 33c.

Eggs—Fresh, 35c to 40c.

Potatoes—Per bag, car lots, $1.70 to $1.80.

Dressed hogs—Abattoir killed, $10.75 to $11; country, $9.50.

Pork—Heavy Canada short cut mess, barrels, 35 to 45 pieces, $22.50; Canada short cut backs, barrels, 45 to 55 pieces, $22.

Buffalo Grain Market.

BUFFALO, Feb. 28.—Spring wheat unsettled; No. 1 northern, carloads, store, $1.16; winter, firm; No. 2 red, $1.01; No. 3 red, 99c; No. 2 white, $1.

Corn—Higher; No. 3 yellow, 69c; No. 4 yellow, 67½c, all on track, thru billed.

Oats—Higher; No. 2 white, 56¾c; No. 3 white, 56¼c; No. 4 white, 55½c.

Barley—Malting, $1.20 to $1.22.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Feb. 28.—At the Canadian Pacific live stock market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Feb. 24 were 775 cattle, 150 sheep and lambs, 1750 hogs and 650 calves. The supply on the market to-day for sale consisted of 400 cattle, 50 sheep and lambs, 700 hogs and 50 calves.

The tone of the market for cattle was strong, owing to the very limited supply offered, which was due to the snow blockade on most of the railway lines and the fact that it has been impossible for drovers of late to get thru the country on account of the snowstorms; but all this is only temporary, and the market will be well supplied with stock again in the course of a few days. In the meantime the butchers and packers have got to pay for it by giving much higher prices for the stock that has come forward.

There were no good steers on the market, but buyers had to pay as high as $6.50 for the best there was, and the poorest sold at $4.50 per 100 pounds. The top price paid for cows of fair quality was $5.50, and bulls of the same quality brought $5 per 100 pounds. If there had been any choice steers on the market, $7.50 could have been made easily for them.

A feature of the trade was the temporary scarcity of hogs, for which the demand from packers was keen, and in consequence the market was somewhat excited and strong, which resulted in prices scoring a further advance since Monday of 40c to 50c per 100 pounds, making a net rise for the week so far of 55c to 75c, with sales of selected lots at $8 to $8.25 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars, but drovers and farmers must not think that these prices can be maintained, as the advance has been purely on the temporary scarcity of stock.

The trade in calves was active, and good prices were realized for the quality of the stock offered, owing to the increased demand, on account of the shortage in the cattle supply. Sheep and lambs were quiet and strong.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7 to $7.25; do., medium, $5.50 to $6.50; do., common, $4.50 to $5; do., choice cows, $5.50 to $5.75; do., medium, $3.25 to $5; do., bulls, $3.75 to $5; milkers, choice, each, $75 to $80; do., common and medium, each, $50 to $65; springers, $30 to $45.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and culls, $4 to $4.50. Lambs, $6.75 to $7.

Hogs, f.o.b., $8 to $8.25.

Calves, $3 to $10.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Feb. 28.—Cattle—Receipts, 100 head; active and strong.

Veals—Receipts, 200 head; active and 50c higher, $5.50 to $12; a few, $12.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 3400 head; active and steady to 5c higher; heavy and mixed, $7 to $7.05; yorkers, $6.75 to $7.05; pigs, $4.60 to $6.75; rough, $6.15 to $6.25; stags, $4.50 to $5.50; dairies, $6.75 to $7.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 3600 head; active; sheep steady; lambs 15c higher; lambs, $3.50 to $7.50; yearlings, $5.50 to $6.25; wethers, $5 to $5.25; ewes, $4.25 to $4.75; a few, $5; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.

Chicago Live Stock.

CHICAGO, Feb. 28.—Cattle—Receipts, 3,000; market, steady; beeves, $5.10 to $8.65; Texas steers, $4.75 to $6; western steers, $5.10 to $7.15; stockers and feeders, $4.10 to $6.30; cows and heifers, $2.25 to $6.80; calves, $5.75 to $8.25.

Hogs—Receipts 23,000; market, 5c to 10c up; light, $6.20 to $6.55; mixed, $6.35 to $6.55; heavy, $6.25 to $6.57½; rough, $6.25 to $6.37½; pigs, $4.60 to $6.20; bulk of sales, $6.40 to $6.55.

STRIKE NOW IMMINENT.

Asquith Fails In Efforts to Pacify the Miners.

London, Feb. 29.—After negotiations lasting a week, the Government last night in an official communication admits its failure to stave off a national coal strike. True, the negotiations will be resumed to-day, but little is expected from these.

The deadlock is graver than anticipated. It had been supposed that the greatest hostility would arise from the Welsh mine owners and public opinion was veering in favor of the miners, who, it was thought, would be satisfied with the concession of the principle of a minimum wage, leaving the adjustment of the detail to subsequent arbitration or negotiation. It is now seen that the miners themselves are placing the greatest obstacle in the way of a peaceful solution by insisting upon their own interpretation of the terms of the minimum wage.

A meeting of the Cabinet has been called for to-day to discuss the Government's policy, in view of the failure to avert a strike, and it is expected that an important statement concerning the situation will be made to Parliament. The general expectancy is that the Government will introduce a minimum wage bill, and there is also some talk of the intention of the crown to purchase some of the collieries in Wales, so that henceforth it will be impossible to jeopardize the navy's supply of Welsh coal.

By to-night nearly a million miners will have ceased work. The best authorities, however, are strongly of the opinion that the strike will be of short duration.

It is this aspect of the situation which renders the outlook almost hopeless. At the same time it is felt that the Government's efforts have not been wasted. The Government has secured the assent of 60 per cent. of the mine owners of the country to the principle of a minimum wage, thus greatly facilitating its task should it be deemed advisable to resort to legislative enforcement of the minimum scale. According to opinion in the lobbies of Parliament last night, this will be the next step, should the conferences which are to be resumed to-day show that the deadlock is insuperable.

Breaking the rule of secrecy and silence which has heretofore been rigidly observed during the course of the negotiations, an official statement was issued by the Government regarding the proposals submitted by the Prime Minister to the representatives of the owners and miners.

UNCERTAIN WHITE MEN.

"I will never lead an Opposition."—Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

"I will never be a candidate for a third term."—President Roosevelt.

And yet Sir Wilfrid Laurier is leading an Opposition and ex-President Roosevelt is seeking his party's nomination for a third term.

"White man is mighty uncertain" said the Indian of old, and there has been no change in that respect since the red man made the utterance which has passed into a proverb.

CANNOT SATISFY THEM

No matter how advantageous to Ontario any administrative act of the Borden Government may be the press of this province, led by the Toronto Globe, always carp at, depreciate and try to minimize it, at the same time, like Oliver Twist, asking for "more."

Take the settlement of the Ontario-Manitoba boundary question as an instance.

In 1908—but four short years ago—the Laurier Government proposed to give to Manitoba Port Nelson and Fort Churchill, without any consideration such as Ontario is now to receive by way of, as stated in the Legislature, "a strip of land five miles wide [illegible] boundary of the Province of [illegible] Nelson River, the [illegible] from the [illegible] we cannot [illegible] Manitoba to the [illegible] Bay only condition being that [illegible] go further away from Hudson [illegible] than fifty miles. We can take a five-mile strip along the edge of the shore if we please, or anywhere within the limit of fifty miles. Then we get a further strip on the eastern side of the Nelson River, the right hand side, five miles in length and half a mile wide, which will give us a total frontage at the river of ten miles, five miles of which will consist of the end of the strip five miles wide, which has been brought across the country."

Moreover, as explained by Mr. Borden in laying before the House of Commons the order-in-Council which gives this five-mile strip to Ontario through the territory which the Laurier Government proposed to give to Manitoba, the land becomes the property of Ontario, legislative jurisdiction being exercised by Manitoba. An important provision in the order-in-Council gives Ontario a half-mile strip ten miles along the east bank of the Nelson River and the shore of the Bay for the construction of terminal facilities. If Fort Churchill is to be the terminus of the Hudson Bay Railway, and Ontario prefers to build it a right of way is to be provided from Nelson to the Hudson Bay Railway with running rights over that road to the port. It is also provided that if the province decides to extend the T. and N. O. the necessary Federal legislation will be forthcoming. The five-mile strip must be located by Ontario within a period of five years.

And it seems hard to believe, Ontario Grits, and Sir Wilfrid Laurier as well, are opposed to this settlement, which, so far as the province is concerned, is infinitely more liberal than that which they supported in 1908.

One of the "faithful," namely Mr. Guthrie, of S. Wellington, tried to justify his inconsistency in opposing the present proposition by declaring that "it would be said that because he had not protested when the House passed its former resolution four years ago he must have assented. But he had been looking into the matter since, and, as an Ontario man, had seen further light." In 1908 his friends were in power and he had hopes of securing an office in the Cabinet. That hope was, however, put beyond probability of realization on the 21st of September last, hence the "new light" which Mr. Guthrie has received.

Sir Wilfrid voiced his disappointment and evidenced his hostility to Ontario, this portion of the debate, as reported by The Mail and Empire, being worthy of reproduction. It is as follows:

[illegible] said that under this extraordinary arrangement, the Province of [illegible] to encroach up[illegible] over a strip [illegible]

Sir Wilfrid [illegible] ordinary arrange[illegible] Ontario was to be [illegible] on the property of Manitoba [illegible] of territory.

Mr. Borden corrected the statement, said that as the Dominion retained control of Crown lands in Manitoba the Government simply agreed, as it would in the case of a company, to give the Government of Ontario a certain amount of land for the construction of a railway.

"To take land from Manitoba and give it to Ontario is something that I do not think the Province of Manitoba will be satisfied with," observed Sir Wilfrid.

"On the contrary," rejoined the Prime Minister, "I can assure my right honorable friend that Manitoba is quite satisfied." (Applause and laughter).

Sir Wilfrid replied that "the Manitoba Government might be satisfied, but perhaps, not the people. This was a settlement that would make the Province of Ontario, the banner province, as it was called by its citizens, subject to Manitoba, and Sir James Whitney subject to Premier Roblin."

Mr. Borden's answer was that the only trouble appeared to be that his right hon. friend was not satisfied with the settlement. He would assure Sir Wilfrid that Manitoba would be as glad to have a railway built through its territory by a Government as by a corporation. Nor could he see any force in the argument that trouble would ensue. The Intercolonial Railway, owned by the Dominion Government, passed through several provinces, he said, and certainly no harm had ever resulted.

Mr. Guthrie persisted in asking: "Has the Government of Ontario been consulted?"

"The Government of Ontario has been consulted, the Government of Manitoba has been consulted, and everybody is contented, except by hon. friends opposite."

And this opinion will be concurred in by every one who "will not," as The Globe expresses it in a dolorous article on the subject, "rest content under the sacrifice of public interests to the party exigencies which have developed through neglect," as was the case with the Grit party in 1908.

LOOK OUT FOR YOUR THROAT.

Necessity of Rigid Precaution Emphasized.

Necessity of rigid precaution and the skilled care of a specialist in all cases of serious illness and especially in the case of communicable diseases is emphasized in the following clipping from the publication of the Board of Health, the "Sanitary Bulletin," for May:

"Every member of a certain family had a sore throat four weeks ago, which was diagnosed as follicular tonsilitis or quinzy. Two of the girls served as maids in other families, in each of which one of the children took diphtheria and died. Cultures were then taken of members of the first family with sore throats and each showed diphtheria. As they were able to be around, and apparently getting better of their local trouble, constitutional treatment was neglected. They persisted in refusing to believe that they had diphtheria, until baby could no longer stand the strain—and died! Three deaths from 'quinzy sore throats,' and all this happened in Buffalo."

Pull together, said Abraham Lincoln, or Upset the Boat.

A recent biographer of Abraham Lincoln has some interesting [illegible] society on one another. He, therefore, determines to sell his flour as before to his neighbor. But meantime the farmer discovers that while he has been purchasing his iron implements from Europe, his neighbor, the ironmaker, has been compelled to stop his works and dismiss his employees, not having sufficient work for them. The farmer, therefore, now finds that he has more wheat than he knows what to do with, also, that he is no longer able to sell his fruit, vegetables, fodder, meat, horses, etc., to his neighbor, the ironmaker, as he has gone out of business.

ON A GRAIN OF WHEAT.

A Prayer Containing 386 Letters Inscribed and Four Figures.

Prayers have been written and engraved on many very small objects, but only one person ever has been patient and painstaking enough to inscribe a complete prayer on a grain of wheat. One day Sir Moses Montefiore, the great Jewish financier of England, received a small tin box in the mail. On the cover of the box was written, "A prayer for Moses Montefiore, by Bauch Mordecai, son of Zebl Ititsch Scheinemann, of Jerusalem." The box contained a single grain of wheat, on which was inscribd, in characters so small that they could only be read with the aid of a powerful microscope, the 386 Hebrew letters of the prayer, and the date of the year (Hebrew reckoning), 5645. Sir Moses kept the prayer in his desk until he died, and it is now preserved with religious care by one of his friends.

FROM EGYPT THIS COMES

Heralding the Redeemers Birth, the Rose of Jericho is said to have Blossomed First on Christmas Eve.

One of the most extraordinary plants in the world is undoubtedly that known to botanists as anastatica, commonly called the "Resurrection Plant," or occasionally the "Rose of Jericho." It is an annual inhabiting the Egyptian desert. It is so highly hygrometric that when fully developed it contracts its rigid branches so as to constitute a ball. Exposed then to the action of the wind, it is blown hither and thither toward the sea, when it is gathered and exported to Europe. If, then, when apparently dead and dried up, its root is plunged into water, the buds swell with new life, the leaves of its calyx open, the petals unfold, the flower-stalk grows, and the full-blown flowers appear as if by magic.

When removed from the water the plant returns to its original apparently dead condition until again placed in water,—hence its title of the "Resurrection Plant."

There are many superstitious tales concerning this so-called rose, [illegible] It is said to have first bloomed on Christmas Eve, and continued to flower till Easter, its birth heralding the advent of the Redeemer, and immediately before its departure honouring His resurrection.

NEW ZEALAND'S OLD CHEESE

When Winter's Icy Grip [illegible] the Canucks Tight, Brother of New Zealand is [illegible] the Cheese.

The astounding [illegible] that has taken place in the New Zealand cheese industry during the last few years is but as the early dawn of the wonderful day that is opening before the New Zealand dairy farmer.

During the latter half of the past decade the Dominion of Canada has been steadily reducing her cheese shipments to Britain, while the Dominion of New Zealand has been gradually and steadily increasing hers. Since 1905 the supplies from across the Atlantic have fallen off by 16,000 [illegible] from the Southern Pacific have [illegible] by 16,860 tons.

The quality of New Zealand cheese has continually improved, and those who have not [illegible] touch with it will be surprised at the advance made in the last few years. A considerable quantity of it [illegible] equals for make and flavour, the best of the Canadian production.

While Canada is bound in the grip of winter New Zealand pastures are full of browsing cows in the flush of summer, and so the two dominions can together fill up Britain's yearly supply without any interregnum.

Protected and Royal

The grey and gaunt form of the lonely heron is not unfamiliar by Scottish water-sides, but, although one of the tallest birds, standing about 30 inches in height, it is far from conspicuous or readily seen, so long as it remains motionless. In repose, the bird, with its delicate ash-grey and white plumage, harmonises so completely in tone with its environment that it becomes one with its natural surroundings. Even on a flat beach or shore, it may pass for a fragment of rock or wooden stake, or some other long-shore object, until it moves.

A patient fisher is the heron, but when its prey comes within reach the long neck curves and the rapier-like bill is shot out quickly and unerringly.

The Dawick Heronry is a good instance of the attachment of the species to one locality, as nests are to be found there at the present day; [illegible] back as 1497, "Quyk [illegible] be found [illegible] were being supplied, and, so [illegible] to the King, (living) [illegible] Accounts of the [illegible] piled from [illegible] as is stated in [illegible] the heron was Lord High Treasurer [illegible] being in [illegible] In these early days [illegible] hawking a protected and royal bird [illegible] demand for the noble sport of hawking, and also for the more utilitarian purpose of the table. An Act of Scots Parliament of the year 1493 ordains the King's thanks to be given to those who preserve herons for his pleasure, and in 1685 herons are forbidden to be shot under the pains contained in the Acts of Parliament.

Roumanian Grain-Growers

Despite its comparatively small area, Roumania can claim to be one of the principal grain-exporting countries of Europe. Three-fourths of the population are dependent on agriculture. The great plains of the Lower Danube, covered with black soil, are admirably adapted for the growth of cereal crops such as maize, wheat, and barley. It is subject to extremes of heat and cold and to drought, which cause heavy fluctuations in the total yield. The methods of the Roumanian peasant farmers were until comparatively recent times extremely primitive, the plough being shaped more like a lance, which simply scratched the soil. Latterly, however, more modern ideas have prevailed, and up-to-date machinery has been adopted both for cultivation and harvesting, and also for the numerous flour mills which have sprung up all over the country, and particularly near the great grain-shipping ports of Sulina and Galatz.

The New Boarder Again.

"For ten eyars," said the new boarder at a Montreal boarding-house, "my habits were as regular as clockwork. I rose on the stroke of six; half an hour later I sat down to breakfast; at seven I was at work, dined at twelve, ate supper at six, and was in bed at nine-thirty; ate only hearty food, and hadn't a sick day in all that time." "Dear me!" said th edeacon in sympathetic tones, "and what were you in for?" An awful silence ensued.

WON'T FOLLOW AUTO ENGINE.

Bessie the Dalmatian Fire Mascot, Resents Change from Horses.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26.—Bessie, the pet Dalmatian that always accompanied Engine 39 on its runs to fires while the horses were in use by the company, for the first time since she has been the mascot of the firemen at Head-quarters failed to follow the apparatus yesterday when it responded to three alarms during the day. Since the horses were taken away the company has had a period of inactivity, and the alarms of yesterday were the first that the company has been called upon to respond to since the new auto fire engine was placed in commission.

When the gong was sounded Bessie pranced about, and it looked as if she would accompany the men, but when the automobile motor began to chug Bessie tucked her tail between her legs and returned to the sleeping quarters of the company, up-stairs. The dog did this each time the apparatus was called out during the day. Bessie has missed the horses as much as have the men but her action yesterday was the first time she has shown any actual resentment over their departure.

TRIED TO END LIFE.

Port Hope Youth Despondent Over Spending All His Money.

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Feb. 28.—Coming to Rochester from Port Hope, Ont., a few days ago, Wesley Thompson, 23 years old, spent all but forty cents of the $57 he had earned on a railroad. Without money or friends the young man began to feel blue. This afternoon he went to the Rescue Mission in Front Street, where he stopped last night. It was about six o'clock when a man rushed into Patrolman Gabriel and informed him that a fellow was about to kill himself. Gabriel hurried to the mission and found Thompson in the act of raising a bottle of carbolic acid to his lips. Knocking the vial from his hands, Gabriel marched Thompson to police headquarters. There he told Lieut. Mehle he wanted to die. He said remorse at spending all his money had driven him to desperation. Thompson will be detained until the morning.

TRIUMPH OF SURGERY.

New Treatment Explained for the Deadly Goitre.

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Professor A. Kocher, the famous surgeon of Berne, Switzerland, will lecture to the Royal Society on the manner in which surgery has almost completely ousted medicine in the treatment of the deadly exophthalmic goitre.

"The treatment," he says, "consists in withdrawing from functional activity part of the thyroid gland in the neck. This is done by removing one of the lobes of the gland, or by tying all its blood vessels. We have now treated more than [illegible] cases in this manner, losing but 30 per cent."

FIRED REVOLVER TO ADVERTISE HIS BOOK.

Clergyman Says Government Had Suppressed His "Tolstoi" and the Messiah."

LONDON, Feb. 28.—Samuel Henry, the clergyman who was arrested for firing a revolver in the lobby of the House of Commons on Monday, appeared at the Bow Street Police Court yesterday. He said his object was to draw attention to the fact that he had written a book entitled "Tolstoi and the Messiah," which the Government had suppressed.

It was a quite trivial thing, he argued, to fire a revolver in the air. It was nothing dangerous, offensive, or alarming. It was simply a straightforward method of attracting attention.

The magistrate ordered a remand so that Henry could be medically examined.

So far, the country has never been hunted except by a few prospectors. Whether the horns attain the large size of the Cassier moose has yet to be determined but some very fine heads have been seen. In this district, caribou are very plentiful on the higher plateaux and in places both grizzly and black bear are numerous.

WINNIPEG NEGRO CHEATS THE GALLOWS.

Sentence of Wilbur Redd Commuted to Life Imprisonment.

OTTAWA, Feb. 28.—The Governor-in-Council has decide to commute to life imprisonment the sentence of Wilbur Redd, a Winnipeg negro, who was to have been hanged on Friday next for the shooting of another negro in a quarrel following a card game. Evidence was submitted to the Justice Department that the killing was done under extreme provocation and in self-defence.

Plants Breaking Up an Island.

The man in the street would scarcely associate great growth with so delicate and fragile a thing as maiden-hair fern, yet if its roots have not sufficient room they will break the pot in which the plant grows. Blades of grass will force the curbstones between which they spring up out of their place, and in a single night a crop of small mushrooms has been known to lift a large stone. Indeed plants are on record as having broken the hardest rocks. The island of Aldabra to the north-west of Madagascar, is now becoming smaller through the action of the mangroves that grow along the foot of the cliffs. They eat their way into the rock in all directions, and into the gaps they formed the waves force their way. In time they will probably break the island to pieces.

The Emperor Gorges Himself.

The "Hoel Pao" says that an American doctor recently visited the palace at Peking to examine the boy Emperor, who, it was found, had gorged himself with a meal of swallows' nests (a sort of glutinous material), and thus provoked a raging thirst. The indisposition yielded easily to the doctor's treatment. The Emperor sleeps in a gigantic bed, big enough for six people; he rises at six, at once has a meal of rice-gruel or rice, and then goes to pay his respects to the Dowager Lung-ya.

A sculptor recently produced the likeness of a celebrated personage in whose biography it was mentioned that he regarded architecture as a very secondary art. Sores from Elbow to Fingers

ZAM-BUK WORKED A MIRACLE OF HEALING.

REVEREND GENTLEMAN FULLY CORROBORATES.

Miss Kate L. Dolliver, of Caledonia Queens Co., N.S., says: "I must add my testimony to the value of Zam-Buk. Ucers and sores broke out on my arm, and although I tried to heal them by using various preparations, nothing seemed to do me any good. The sores spread until from fingers to elbow was one mass of ulceration.

"I had five different doctors, and faithfully carried out their instructions. I drank pint after pint of blood medicines, tried salve after salve, and lotion after lotion; but it was of no avail.

"My father then took me thirty miles to see a well known doctor. He photographed the arm and hand. This photograph was sent to a New York hospital to the specialist; but they sent word that they could do nothing further for me and I was in despair.

"One day a friend asked me if I had tried Zam-Buk, I said I had not, but I got a box right away. The first box did me more good that all the other medicines I had tried up to that time, so I continued the treatment. Every box healed the sores more and more until, to make a long story short, Zam-Buk healed all the sores completely. Everybody in this place knows of my case and that it is Zam-Buk alone which cured me."

MINISTER CORROBORATES.

The Rev. W. B. M. Parker, of Caledonia, Miss Dolliver's Minister, writes: "This is to certify that the testimonial of Miss Dolliver is correct as far as my knowledge goes. I have known her for a year and a half, and her cure affected by Zam-Buk is remarkable."

Wherever there is ulceration, blood-poison, sores, cold-cracks, abscesses, cuts, burns, bruises, or any skin injury or disease, there Zam-Buk should be applied. It is also a sure cure for piles. All druggists and stores sell at 50c. per box, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price Refuse cheap and harmful imitations and substitutes.

[illegible]T CURE CATARRH YOU CAN[illegible] SWALLOWING DRUGS [illegible]

COUGH SYRUP, TABLETS, SPRAYS SICKEN THE STOMACH BUT DON'T REACH THE GERMS OF CATARRH.—HENCE THEIR FAILURE TO HELP.

To cure an ailment in the throat or chest, to rout out Catarrh or Asthma, it is essential that the medicine be conveyed direct to the affected parts. This is why no other remedy has achieved such world-wide success as Catarrhozone, which alone can be breathed in one second to every air cell in the breathing organs. The healing vapors of Catarrhozone mix with the breath and descend through the throat, down the bronchial tubes, to the deepest air cells in the lungs—all parts are saturated with the rich piney essences that ease, heal and cure.

Catarrhozone has entirely displaced the old-fashioned remedies, such as cough syrups, sprays tablets, and sedative powders. It contains none of the opium, chloral and drowsy narcotics so commonly found in liquid cough and catarrhal ermedies.

COULDN'T BREATHE—CATARRHOZONE CURED.

"No one ever contracted a more obstinate attack of nasal catarrh than I suffered a month ago," writes Mr. G. E. Root, a well-known resident of Bridgetown, W.I. "My head ached terrifically, I sneezed about every three minutes, but still my nostrils were entirely closed and I couldn't breathe through them. Ten minutes inhaling Catarrhozone gave me a little relief, so I continued to use Catarrhozone every hour, and before the day was out I had improved. Catarrhozone quickly cured me. I am well ever since."

There is no remedy so certain and safe as Catarrhozone, but being a good remedy it is imitated. Beware of the substitutor. Large Catarrhozone lasts two months, price $1.00; smaller sizes 25c. and 50c. All reliable dealers or the Catarrhozone Co., Buffalo, N.Y., and Kingston, Canada.

BALDNESS AND MOST HAIR TROUBLES DUE TO THIS PARASITE WHICH DESTROYS HAIR ROOTS.

Nobody wants to be bald! But a neglected scalp means, first, falling hair, then—BALDNESS. If you are troubled with itching scalp or falling hair, be on guard against dandruff. Get rid of it without delay; check its advance, for dandruff is a germ which feeds upon itself and 'feeding grows,' destroying the hair roots, so that no new hair is possible.

Begin now, using HAY'S HAIR HEALTH, the surest, swiftest, Dandruff Cure. It destroys the dandruff germs, eradicates them (cleans out the pores of the scalp) and encourages a quick growth of youthful-looking hair. No unsightly dandruff scales on your coat collar. No bald spots on your scalp if you use HAY'S HAIR HEALTH. W. W. White, pastor, Vienna (Md.) M. E. Church, writes us: "I have used half a dozen different hair tonics, but I find HAY'S HAIR HEALTH the very best preparation I have ever used for dandruff." You can get it at any druggist's for 50c., or $1.000 per bottle, or from the Philo Hay Spec. Co., Newark, N. J.

TERRIBLE HEADACHES

Trenton Merchant Driven To Despair By The Pain.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HIM

TRENTON, Ont. Jan. 29th, 1909.

"I was a dreadful sufferer for many years from Stomach and Liver Trouble—but my greatest suffering was from violent headaches. They were so distressing that I almost had to give up my business. I went to Toronto, consulted specialists and wore glasses, but nothing did me any good and the headaches became intolerable.

I was then induced to try "Fruit-a-tives" and from the beginning, I was better, and in a short time I was quite well again—no more headaches—and I threw my glasses away.

"Fruit-a-tives" not only cured my headaches, but completely cured me of all indigestion, and restored me to perfect health again." W. J. McCOMB.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest cure for headaches in the world and is the only medicine made of fruit juices.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Headaches, Indigestion and all Stomach and Bowel Troubles. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Itching scalp, keeps you scratching and feeling miserable all the time. Wash your hair tonight with pure soap and water, rub on a goodly quantity of PARISIAN SAGE and the distressing itchiness will be gone in the morning.

PARISIAN SAGE is a pure, refreshing and invigorating hair dressing. Besides putting an end to scalp itch, dandruff and falling hair it nourishes the hair roots and puts a splendid radiance into faded and unattractive hair.

It should be used by every member of the family to keep the scalp free from dandruff germs and prevent baldness. Large bottle 50 cents at J. V. Doyle's and druggists everywhere.

WHY MALACHI NOLAN STEPPED DOWN.

As Alderman Malachi Nolan sat and smoked and sipped, he thought again of Limerick — the breath of spring blows the fragrance of the hawthorn, white upon the bough; he hears the song of the mavis; he is walking homeward along the black path through the bog, and up the green boreen, and there before him 's the little cottage, its thatch held down by sticks and stones, a long ash pole propping up its crumbling gable; there is the mud shed with the thills of the old cart sticking out of it; the donkey is standing by, sad as ever; and up the muddy lane little Annie in her bare feet is driving the cows to the byre; and then he sees his mother sitting in the low doorway, all at once he catches his first whiff of the peat smoke, and, with the strange spell that odors work upon the memory, it makes him a boy again; again he is sheltered on a rainy day in the mud shed, playing shoot-marbles with Andy Corrigan and Jerry O'Brien; again he is in the little chapel with the leaky roof; he sees all the boys and girls — Mary Cassidy among them — standing on the bare clay floor; he brings his bit of stone to kneel on during mass, he even runs out for a piece of slate to give to Mary, who lays it in the puddle at her feet and spreads her handkerchief over it before she kneels. And when the mass is over, he will take little Nora — little Nora?

He placed his hand to his forehead in confusion, and then in a gasp it all comes over him — Mary is old, Andy and Jerry are old, little Annie is old, and he is old — they are all gone away. He bowed his head.

And yet Nora yearned to go. Should he turn the ward over to Brennan and take her this spring? He could run for the legislature when he came back in the fall; a senator would be elected by the next General Assembly, and the graft would be very good then.

The compromise attracted Malachi, for at once it acquitted him of indecision, a quality of statesmanship he hated, and kept for him the life of power that had become as the very breath of his nostrils.

The long day was done, and Malachi, in shirt-sleeves and stockinged feet, sat in his big plush rocking-chair, his legs stretched out before him, taking his ease at his own hearth. When he had come home at midnight, Nora, who always sat up for him, had insisted upon brewing him a cup of tea, under the impression, common to a certain class of women, that it has great medicinal qualities. Malachi had sipped it obediently, though he had not cared for it after all the mineral waters he had drunk that day, and had enjoyed far more than the tea the freckled Irish face of his daughter, as he gravely goggled at her over the rim of the saucer into which he had poured the beverage to cool it.

"Nora, child, do ye sing now — p'hat was that? — it wint hummin' t'rough me head th' daay. Well, well, well, let me see, now — hum-m-m-m — it goes something like——"

And he hummed a quavering old tune:

"I saw the Shannon's purple flood
Flow by the Irish town."

"But it's forbidden in the lease after ten o'clock," the girl protested, leafing over her music. "What if the landlord——"

"It's time enough to saay good marnin' to th' divil, Nora, whin ye meet 'im."

Nora fixed herself on the stool fingered the keys, finding a soft minor chord. The old man closed his eyes, slid farther down in his plush chair, and, just as he was prepared to listen, she suddenly stopped in the provoking way amateur musicians cultivate, to say:

"But, father, that's such an old song; wouldn't you rather I'd sing the Intermezzo from 'Cavalleria'?"

Malachi opened his eyes with a start and sat bolt upright.

"Naw," he said, "none o' thim fur'n op'ras — p'hat's the use of yer goin' to th' convint all those years?" But his voice quickly softened. "Do ye go on now, Nora, darlin', there's a good gur-rl."

And so she sang, and the alderman sank in his chair, with his big arms in their shirt-sleeves thrown over his head, closed his eyes again, stretched out his stockinged feet. The smoke from his cigar ascended to the chandelier, and now and then, when he remembered the words of a line, he hummed them behind closed lips, in unison with his daughter. When the song was done Nora whirled around, clasped her hands in a schoolgirl's ecstasy, and said:

"Oh, father, that song makes me homesick — homesick for a place I never saw. You won't run again, will you, father, will you? And we'll go to Ireland in the spring, won't we? Tell me, in the spring?"

A pain struck through Malachi Nolan's heart, a pain that was made only more poignant when, with her American fear of the sentimental, Nora joked:

"I must see our ancestral cabin."

Malachi could not open his eyes. For once he was afraid. He did not move for a long time. But at last he sighed and set his jaw, and said:

"Well, Nora — if ye saay so — in the spring."

And that was why Malachi Nolan stepped down.

Dogs were formerly indigenous to the indigent, but, since the advent of dog licenses, whereby a dog, without a maid or a valet, is presumed to be guilty until it is proved innocent or shot, they have been grafted on family trees, with their own separate heraldry, substitutes for children, therefore furnishing considerable consolation for race suicide.

Dogs are divided into two great classes — pedigreed and verdigreed. Verdigreed are of two kinds — mad dogs and dogs. Pedigreed are of several kinds, chief among which are watch dogs and sheep dogs. Watch-dogs are so called because they are small enough, and [illegible] cranky enough, to be carried around in the place of watches by people who have plenty of time. Sheep-dogs are so called because they are led around by sheepish-looking people.

Those dogs are considered the handsomest by connoisseurs which look the ugliest to other people.

THE VENOM OF LOVE

By L. A. Ruffman

(Copyright by Publishers Press Ltd.)

"I can't meet you on Sunday. I'm not going to meet you any more."

Nettie leaned back among the fragrant Capebroom, jutting its golden spray through the fence, her eyes upon the ground, seeking refuge from the open avowal Sid's stupid obtuseness forced from her.

He stepped forward, his hand fell upon her shoulder, turning her roughly, compelling her to face the situation.

"I'm sick of you," she whimpered, "so there!"

"There's someone else?"

He was still dragging at her, forcing her eyes to his.

"Well, what if there is?" She faced him, a small fury. "Haven't I a right to please myself?"

"If there is——" He threw her off with such violence that she rebounded from the fence, and her bonnet was tossed over her eyes.

Nettie tore her hat off. "There is! There is!" she cried.

The girl caught herself up with a gasp. Sid was looking very ugly just then. In the eyes that stabbed her there was a vicious heat, his mouth was slightly open, the under jaw rigid.

"You little beast!" he said. He held her tightly. "It's Podio." The pressure increased, bruising her soft, slim body. "It's Bodio."

"Yes, it is," she answered, defiantly.

"A Dago. A dirty Dago!" He pushed her away, his face full of disgust.

"He's lovely. I don't care what you think. I don't care what you say, he's lovely."

For over three weeks Sidney Wood saw nothing of Nettie, but he heard of her often, and always in association with Gian Bodio, the dapper, black-eyed Italian who speared oysters with amazing dexterity on the right side of Silvio Panzacchi's shop front, while Nettie Mulholland boxed sweets and bagged bananas behind her natty little counter on the left.

Sid was a commonplace youth in a commonplace world, suddenly thrust into a vortex of the emotions that make for tragedy.

One moonlight night, after following them like a blackmailer for an hour, creeping meanly from bush to bush, he saw Gian kiss Nettie good-night by the Cape-broom hedge, where he and she had so often parted. The Italian held her close in his arms, and kissed her again and again, with uncouth, noisy kisses. Suddenly Sid arose. He understood now what it all meant. He realized in a moment what the fury and the fever had prompted. Nettie must die. He would kill her.

No argument followed, no self-questioning. In his mind there were no doubts. He no longer cherished enmity towards Gian Bodio; his soul was absorbed in the killing of Nettie Mulholland.

Then he heard she was to be at the trade picnic with Gian Bodio, and that decided him. At the picnic, somewhere in the bush, before the eyes of her Dago, he would kill her.

None detected the smallest evidence of Sid's intention as they drove to the picnic. Gian Bodio sat on Nettie's left. Next her on the right, pressed very close, was Martin Sickert, big, black-haired, violet-eyed, handsome, a suburban Mephistopheles. He certainly enjoyed more of Nettie's attention than poor Bodio; yet Martin was nothing but lorryman for Sin Me, the banana king, with two guineas a week and the beer habit. Throughout the morning at Grass Creek, too, Nettie Mulholland flirted openly and impudently with Sickert, and Bodio sat with his back to a gum butt, and watched them, small and silent, no emotion in his pale face.

Nettie was conscious of Bodio, but gave no thought to Sidney, and he too was watching. It was not till after dinner, when Martin was too drunk to be companionable, that Nettie returned to the Italian. There were no reproaches. They sat together for half an hour and then went off through the trees and along the creek. Sid followed. He felt his moment was at hand. Near the camp they passed from view beyond a clump of saplings. He waited, but they did not reappear.

He stole forward, crept quietly to the saplings, arose, and pushed his way through, without a sound, his hand on the weapon, his soul hot with resolution.

He stopped. They were there. Nettie lay upon the grass, Podio knelt upon her, his knee crushing her breast, his left hand gripped about her throat. In his right hand he held a knife, from the bright blade of which the sunlight flamed. His face was close to hers, his teeth bared, and he spat Roman oaths at her with something of the tiger, something of the snake. His face was contorted with abominable malice, hers wild with the horror of death.

For one tense moment Sidney Wood gazed down upon the lovers, and then a heart-burst filled him with blind rage. He hurled himself at Bodio.

A moment later the two men were on their feet fighting. Nettie, crouched down, backing under cover of the saplings, watched them, mad with fear.

Sid was sparring and punching with bare hands. The other slashed with his knife in a blind fury. Instinctively Wood's left shot for the face with every movement of the Italian. His arms were cut. He got the knife in his breast again, and then he saw Bodio's chin as through a mist, and swung his right with all the weight and power he could put into it. The Italian collapsed on himself, and went down, limp and lifeless. Sid staggered to his knees, and then fell, face foremost, across the body of his foe.

Nettie was running towards the picnic party, white and wild, shrieking "Murder! murder!"

The men found Gian Bodio on his knees, still dazed; but Sidney Wood lay prone, bleeding from a dozen wounds.

"Take care of Nettie," he whispered. "For God's sake, take care of Nettie. The Dago will kill her!"

As they lifted him a loaded revolver fell from the right-hand pocket of his coat.

The worst of country society or for the matter of that the society of any community, is that every woman is eligible, but only a man here and there.

How 3000 Cowboys Captured the Spanish Fleet.

Paez, who was the first President of the Republic of Venezuela, was perhaps the only man who ever fought a naval battle on horseback. It is a matter of history that he, to whom more than any other man, apart from Simon Bolivar, Venezuela owes her independence, actually attacked and captured with his cavalry a fleet of ships.

Bolivar was endeavouring to cross the Apure River in the struggle for independence, but was prevented from doing so by some eight Spanish gunboats, which moved up and down the stream as he did. Bolivar was in despair for a while. To Paez, who was second in command, he appealed for counsel, saying that he could never cross the river so long as the Spanish gunboats were there. "If only we could capture them," the revolutionary leader observed, "the rest would be easy."

Paez decided that he would have those ships or die, and he accordingly told his regiment of cowboys to follow him. Paez himself had been a cowboy on the plains of the Orinoco, and was the idol of his men. So when he spurred his horse into the stream, calling on his men to follow, of the 3,000 cowboys and their mounts, which are taught to swim as well as to gallop, there was not a single man to hold out in this unique assault upon the gunboats. It being night, the Spanish fleet were taken quite unawares. The cowboys wriggled from their saddles to the decks of the vessels, letting their mounts swim back to shore. Having thus cut off their own retreat, it was a question of win or die. They fought well, and every gunboat was captured.

THE EDIBLE CRAB

Something of the Curious Life of This Half Fish Half Animal.

The edible crab is obliged to moult or cast off its shell many times during its life. This moulting appears to be an unpleasant ordeal to pass, for the crabs often die during the act. When we see that they are not only obliged to escape from the carapace or shell, but also from the hard covering of their eyes, delicate mouth-parts, and even gullet — turning themselves inside out, as it were — it is not surprising that they perish during the ordeal. The crab crawls up into some secluded nook or cove in shallow water to moult, out of the way of its hard-shelled relatives, for the helpless, newly-moulted, or soft-shell crab, if found, is devoured by them, as well as by several species of fishes. Fortunately for the crab, the soft covering hardens rapidly, and in a few hours it has a new and strong armour, and it then goes fearlessly out into deep water.

Boosting.

Things may be coming your way but be careful that they do not come with such force as to carry you away with them. There are tides and tides. Some are natural, some are supernatural and some are dangerous, because they move with a force which is too strong for our character and will. "Beware of uncontrolable circumstances". This was an expression which first fell from the lips of Wellington. The editor of a periodical remarks: —

"Old salts, who are forever yarning about wrecks and their causes, have a theory that what is called a "boosting" sea accounts for more than one of the disasters that have occurred in the long history of shipping. A "boosting" sea is a sea that runs heavily after a steamer, and, if it does not actually "poop" the vessel, yet, by the roll of billow after billow, accelerates its speed to a degree, unguessed by the navigator, until finally the ship, having unconsciously overrun its course, brings up upon a rock or hidden reef, and is reported at Lloyds' as "lost."

Monuments in Queer Places.

There are Monuments in all sorts of out-of-the-way places but one that is really unique is that erected in a river. It stands in the Parramatta River, New South Wales, a stream known the world over for the rowing events that have taken place upon it. This monument, which is in memory of the world-famed rower, Searle, is also unique from the fact that it has been used as the winning-post of the races for the world's championship, and is still used as such for local events.

CIGARETTE PAPER.

So Light that 500 Sheets Go to Make an Ounce.

Of the great army of cigarette smokers there is probably not more than one in a hundred who know that rice paper, in which the tobacco is wrapped, has nothing to do with rice, but is made from the membranes of the breadfruit tree or more commonly of fine new trimmings of flax and hemp.

So light is this paper that 500 of the tiny sheets go to make an ounce. They are perfectly combustible and give off the minimum of smoke. Before being rolled with tobacco they are analyzed to prove that they are free from all deleterious ingredients and that they contain nothing but the purest paper fibre. Only new material—flax and hemp trimmings—is used, and these are thoroughly purified.

Chopped by machinery into minute particles, they are well mixed by a revolving fan and then reduced to a dust, which is placed in a solution of lime and soda. After remaining in solution for some time it undergoes a thorough washing process, the water being the purest kind.

Then the pulp is rolled out into paper. At first it is of a grayish tinge, the pure white of the finished product being obtained by an electric process.

Louis Regan, aged 45, was found badly frozen by a train crew near Cobalt He will lose his feet.

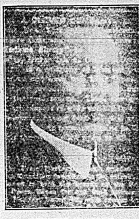
IN THE SCIENTIFIC WORLD

TALKING BY SUN RAYS

Heliograph, it is Claimed, Was Operated in a Rude Way by the Red Man Ages Ago.

A recent writer on the subject of talking by sun rays concludes that the civilised world is probably indebted to the North American Indian for the idea of making use of sun rays, reflected from a looking glass, as a means of transmitting messages or signals.

Science has taken the idea, modified and improved upon it, and the now almost perfect means used by all prominent nations to transmit messages by means of a mirror and sun rays are but the outgrowth of the idea of the "untutored savage," who many, many years ago conceived the idea of making the flashes of sun rays from a small piece of glass held in the hand the medium of conveying signals and messages from point to point. Some authorities maintain that the idea came from a period as far back as the time of Alexander, as some histories record the fact that he piloted his fleets by signals made by the rays of the sun reflected from some bright surface.



SENATOR CASGRAIN,
Surveyor and Engineer, Montreal

The Indian with his small piece of shining material could send signal flashes a distance of over twenty-five miles. Today the civilized world, with the idea improved upon, and with fine instruments made for the purpose, is able to transmit long messages over seven times as far. The instrument used is called a heliograph or sun writer.

The heliograph may be described as an instrument by which rays of light are reflected from a highly polished mirror, mounted on a tripod so as to throw the resulting flash on any desired point within the field of vision. The signals are produced by causing the reflected rays to appear and disappear or be obscured, the intervals of appearance and obscuration being varied in length so as to produce the combinations of long and short flashes.

WIRELESS TELEPHONY ON TRAINS.

A phase of human activity which has occupied the attention of many inventors is the devising of a simple system for maintaining wireless telegraphic and telephonic communication with moving trains. Numerous experiments have been made in the United States, Belgium, and Germany, as well as in Britain; but the success hitherto achieved has not been sufficiently convincing to warrant commercial exploitation. An inventor in the Midlands, however, appears to have solved the difficulty, judging from the eminently satisfactory results of tests made. In this invention the method is adopted of encircling a railway carriage with two frames of wires for sending and receiving messages. Along the side of the track is carried a continuous wire, similar to that used for telegraphing purposes, which may be buried or carried on low posts, and which links up with stations and signal-boxes, as well as with the trunk telephone and telegraph systems of the country. In the carriage an ordinary telephonic instrument is installed, and the electric oscillations are transmitted or received by either of the above-mentioned wire frames carried beneath the coach. The system is described as wireless inductive, so that the pulsations produced in the sending wire frame are reproduced by induction in the wire running parallel with the track, and vice versa for inward messages.

FILLING THE PORK BARREL

A hog can be starved to eat almost anything, but seldom does well on spoiled food.

One way to improve land rapidly is to pasture hogs upon it.

Too many farmers have failed to appreciate the possibilities of rye as hog pasture.

No farmer can have complete success raising hogs unless he has a good grain pasture, and young hogs can be fattened more profitably than those that are older.

The three hundred pound pig at eight months is the master work of a feeder.

Where it is possible, it is best to defer selection of sow pigs for the breeding herd until they have made considerable growth.

Give the sow a movable house in the pasture just before farrowing time, as the youngsters will thrive on the grass. If she farrows in the fall the quiet of the pasture is just what she needs.

The pig can eat more than he can digest; and digest more than he can use. So it is not a fact that a pig can take care of all he can eat.

There is no feed better for young pigs and calves than sweet skim milk right from the separator.

Pigs, sows, and fattening hogs should be kept in separate inclosures. They will be healthier and derive more benefit from their feeds by such handling.

The most profitable pork is produced by using as largely as possible other feeds than corn.

FACTORY GIRL GIVES UP

Too Sick to Work—Doctor Advised Operation. Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y.—"I run a sewing machine in a large factory and got all run down. I had to give up work for I could not stand the pains in my back. The doctor said I needed an operation for female trouble but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me more than the doctors did. I hope that every one who is suffering will get the Compound. My pains, nervousness and backache are gone and I have gained five pounds. I owe my thanks to your medicine for it is the working girls friend, and all women who suffer should write to you for special advice."—Miss TILLIE PLENZIG, 3 Jay St., Poughkeepsie, N. Y.

When a remedy has lived for over thirty years, steadily growing in popularity and influence, and thousands upon thousands of women declare they owe their very lives to it, is it not reasonable to believe that it is an article of great merit?

We challenge anyone to show any other one remedy for a special class of disease which has attained such an enormous demand and maintained it for so many years as has Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

PICKING OUT THE BEST SHEEP

The [illegible] has learned to sell off the culls from his crop of lambs, and also to get rid of inferior older individuals from his flock. Some prefer to keep at least some of these for the Christmas market, and perhaps some nice wethers until Easter, but generally speaking this season of the year, following the weaning of the lambs and preceding the breeding season, is considered a very opportune time to go through the flock and discard all those individuals which, because of age, sickness, faulty conformation, or other reasons, are not suitable to be used as breeders any longer. It is generally wise to turn over to the butcher all ewes which did not breed last season, if this has not already been done. All those ewes which have not brought forth a desirable class of lambs should also be culled out, as well as any whose teeth are so badly gone as to make keeping them over another season risky. Of course, with high-class, pure-bred breeding stock, a ewe that has proven herself an exceptional breeder is often profitable even after her teeth are very badly gone, but with sheep of indifferent breeding and uncertain value as breeders, it is very seldom advisable to take any chances on defective specimens.

If the lambs have been weaned early, which should always be practised, the ewes will pick up in flesh rapidly, and they are soon in good condition to be disposed of to the butcher. Besides their being in good condition, the fact that mutton is usually a fair price at this time, is [illegible] to be gained, by [illegible] of the undesirable breeders [illegible]. Not only should the old [illegible] be weeded out, but very often [illegible] in the flock which are scrubby individuals of defective conformation, which, if used as breeders, would be a detriment rather than an improvement to the flock, and all such individuals should be disposed of. One sometimes hesitates to part with a young ewe, but if she does not give promise of becoming a good breeder the sooner she is removed from the flock, the better. Many two-year-old ewes which have produced scrawny lambs should go with the other poor ones. Nothing but the best type of strong, healthy ewe should ever be kept for breeding purposes, and to bring the flock up to the highest possible condition, and keep it there, requires severe yearly culling. Few other seasons offer as good an opportunity for this as does the time just previous to the breeding season in the fall.

HE CATCHES A TARTAR

Oliver Tries to Blame Car Shortage on Government.

Ex-Minister of the Interior Lays Recent Blockade of Wheat at the Door of the New Ministry and Mr. Foster Handles Him Without Gloves—Late Administration Has Had 15 Years to Provide Equipment.

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—Hon. Frank Oliver did not get much satisfaction out of Hon. George E. Foster in the attempt he made yesterday to fasten on the present Government the responsibility for the losses of the western farmer on his grain, which, he admitted, were largely due to natural causes.

Mr. Oliver's resolution was defeated shortly after midnight by a vote of 84 to 54.

Hon. Mr. Oliver brought up the question of western car shortage on the motion to go into supply. He moved a resolution urging on the Government the desirability of securing for grain shipped to Minneapolis and Duluth for consumption in the United States, the same equality of rates with that shipped to Port Arthur and Fort William, as had already been secured for grain shipped to the former ports in bond for export.

The first effect of the car shortage was a cut of six to eight cents a bushel on the market price. After Dec. 10 panic prices had become the rule, and the loss then would be at least ten cents a bushel. Thirty millions of bushels remaining in the farmers' hands had been damaged by damp and could not go forward because of the blockade. Possibly 15,000,000 bushels of this would be a total loss.

He claimed that the "policy of restriction" adopted by the Government had broken down and had to be revoked, but the change had come too late to save the situation this season.

Hon. George E. Foster wanted to know what was the purpose of the discussion. The first hour of Mr. Oliver's speech had been taken up detailing the natural causes which had been largely responsible for the loss to the western farmer.

"But he can't move a vote of want of confidence in nature," remarked Mr. Foster. "He won't be able to turn nature and providence out of office."

The shortage in coal resulting from the western coal strike, he declared, played a large part in disorganizing the railway traffic. Nevertheless, 106,000 cars were moved in 1911-12, as against only 63,000 in the six weeks' longer season of 1910-11.

"What is the use, I ask," said Mr. Foster, "of my hon. friend drawing all these dark pictures of how providence has maltreated and abused the farmers of the northwest?"

"But he says the Government might have done something. What did he do himself? He had the northwest in his hand. He slept with it by night and walked with it by day. His Government made it their favorite child, and left it in this condition. (Applause.) Then he comes down like a wolf on the fold and asks why an inoffending Minister of Trade and Commerce has not remedied all this."

"If the present Government does not do more to alleviate conditions in the northwest in five years than you did in fifteen," declared Mr. Foster, "turn us out."

Good Roads Bill.

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—Hon. Frank Cochrane's good roads bill was put through the committee stage in the Commons yesterday afternoon. Clause 6, which gives the Minister power, with the approval of the governor-in-council and the consent of the Provincial Government, to construct and improve highways in any province, had a narrow squeeze, only passing on a vote of 52 to 48.

F. B. Carvell (Carleton, N.B.) claimed that if a Minister was placed in the position of an ordinary road builder, he would be given a power which might be used to gain votes at an election. Under the clause he might undertake the construction of a five-dollar culvert or like trivial work for political purposes.

E. A. Macdonald (Pictou) argued that the clause was contrary to the spirit of the British North America Act. He therefore moved that it be struck out.

THE DOCTOR HABIT.

AND HOW SHE OVERCAME IT.

When well selected food has helped the honest physician place his patient in sturdy health and free from the "doctor habit," it is a source of satisfaction to all parties. A Chicago woman says;

"We have not had a doctor in the house during all the 5 years that we have been using Grape-Nuts food. Before we began, however, we had the "doctor habit" and scarcely a week went by without a call on our physician.

"When our youngest boy arrived, 5 years ago, I was very much run-down and nervous, suffering from indigestion and almost continuous headaches. I was not able to attend to my ordinary domestic duties and was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself. Under advice I took to Grape-Nuts.

"I am now, and have been ever since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, able to do all my own work. The dyspepsia, headaches, nervousness and rheumatism which used to drive me fairly wild, have entirely disappeared.

"My husband finds that in the night work in which he is engaged, Grape-Nuts food supplies him the most wholesome, strengthening and satisfying lunch he ever took with him." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

LAURIER JUGGLED IT

Sir James Whitney Blames Him For Boundaries Dispute.

Lively Debate on Hinterland Question Occurs In the Legislature When Debate on Mr. Rowell's Resolution Is Resumed—Ontario Is Still Far Ahead In the Matter of Northern Territory—Mr. McKay Speaks.

Toronto, Feb. 29.—Batteries of argument for and against the terms of settlement of the Ontario-Manitoba boundary question made yesterday afternoon's session of the Legislature by far the most lively and interesting of any since the House opened.

Sir James Whitney, in resuming the debate, referred to Mr. Rowell's statement that the Government had presented the case to Ottawa in a dilatory manner and that it was lacking in force of presentation. "Why, the Ontario members of the Laurier Government turned down in 1908, our resolution, which was couched in the same words that my hon. friend, the leader of the Opposition now uses. He borrowed the language from us."

Sir James remarked that events at Ottawa during the past 48 hours had shown that Sir Wilfrid Laurier was "the chief juggler" in this boundary question all the way through.

Sir James referred to the difference of opinion among naval officers, surveyors and explorer about the relative advantages of Fort Churchill and Port Nelson. He also said that by the boundary settlement Manitoba was getting an additional 178,700 square miles of territory, making her total area 251,832 square miles; Ontario was getting an additional 146,400 square miles, making her total area 407,261 square miles; Quebec was getting the district known as Ungava, 354,900 miles in extent, making the total area of the province 706,000 square miles.

"I have nothing more to say," concluded Sir James. "The position which Ontario occupied has been put before the House fairly. I have shown the steps we took and the obstacles thrown in our way by Sir Wilfrid Laurier. The strip of land to Port Nelson has been secured from the Dominion Government and is free of taxation."

Hon. A. G. Mackay made an excellent address. While admitting that there were no legal rights for Ontario's claim in the boundary settlement Mr. MacKay maintained that justice, natural rights, moral rights, equitable rights and every other kind of rights entitled Ontario to press her claims just as forcibly as Manitoba had done.

"These are just as high as legal and technical rights," said he, "and I think that the Government has failed to appreciate the importance of obtaining what is only common justice. We on this side of the House are willing to sink our party differences to get Ontario's rights."

The ex-leader of the Opposition deplored the fact that Ontario would be prevented by the boundary settlement from extending northward for an indefinite distance, as Manitoba could now do. "If you let Manitoba, instead of extending her boundary northward, come in and take part of Ontario's hinterland, why not let Ontario take part of Quebec's hinterland?

"If that argument had been advanced," said Mr. MacKay, "Quebec would have been solid behind Ontario in presenting their respective claims. But, while Manitoba is busy asserting her rights and sending briefs to every member of the Dominion Government, the banner province of Ontario was standing with her finger in her mouth and tongue in her cheek, apologizing for her very position.

"I don't think Ontario is being properly treated," concluded Mr. MacKay. "I don't care what Sir Wilfrid Laurier says or Mr. Borden says."

R. R. Gamey also participated in the debate.

Naval Fight Over Salvage.

New York, Feb. 29.—A London cable says: The British navy is now engaged in a battle with the salvage forces which has been directing the operations to raise the submarine A3, which was recently lost off the Isle of Wight. The trouble is caused by the bitter criticism of the Admiralty's own lack of salvage apparatus, which caused the authorities to decide to take matters in their own hands. But the Sea Salvage Co.'s boat, under the command of Dr. Carlo Iberte, declined to quit operations, and a skirmish took place Tuesday, the navy being represented by two destroyers, two torpedo boats, one gunboat and several tugs and lighters.

As fast as the rope guiding the divers to the sunken submarine was dropped into position by the salvage boat it was cut by the Admiralty forces.

Seven times this occurred, then Dr. Iberte retired for the night.

Would Release Five Camorrists.

Viterbo, Feb. 29.—When the crown prosecutor resumed his address to the jury in the Camorra trial yesterday, he recommended the jurymen to absolve from guilt Gusseppe Chirico, Luigi Arena, Gennarro Ibelli (head of the Camorra in the Vesuvian villages), Marie Stendardo (wife of one of the alleged principals in the murder of Genarro Guocolo), and Luigo Fucci.

He also recommended the jury to declare Fucci the nominal head of the Camorra, the real head being "Erricone."

Bill to Buy Express Companies.

Washington, Feb. 29.—Senator Gardner of Maine has introduced a bill authorizing the Government to at once acquire the tangible assets of the four big express companies at their appraised value of $39,165,819 for the purpose of at once establishing and operating a complete parcels post system. The other assets of the companies, amounting to about $150,000,000, are in the shape of securities and of course will not be taken over by the Government, but distributed among their own stockholders.

NOT EXORBITANT.

Hon. Wm. Harty Denies Having Asked Too Much for Chats Falls.

Kingston, Feb. 29.—When interviewed, Hon. Wm. Harty denied the statement that he had demanded too much from the Ontario Government for his Chats Falls power holdings. He said no substantial price had ever been offered him for his power interests, and that any figures he may have submitted were with the impression that no results would be forthcoming and events had proved that he was right in his views.

He added: "My belief is that, until the last two or three years when the knowledge of the value of power has become so much greater, I do not believe that I would have been able to sell at five or ten thousand dollars if I had put such a price on my share of the holding."

He expressed pleasure at the prospect of the Ontario Government taking over his interests and favored the proposed expropriation proceedings.

Going Ahead With Expropriation.

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—The Hydro-Electric Commission has taken the necessary steps by filing plans, etc., under the Public Works Act of 1910 to vest in the Ontario Government the property known as Chats Rapids, and likely to be needed by the city of Ottawa. Proceedings to ascertain the value to be paid will be taken in due course.

R. A. Pringle, K.C., is acting for Hon. Mr. Harty, and D. O'Connor, to whom the Government sold the falls for a trifle.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

Folke Brandt, former valet of Mortimer Schiff, sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment for burglary, was formerly released from the Tombs yesterday on bail.

The Nanking and Pekin Governments have agreed to the international bankers advancing a loan of $3,300,000 for the purpose of providing for payments to the troops.

Jim Lee, the celestial who tried to escape by a rear window with $500 worth of opium while the police were raiding 187 East Queen street, Toronto, was fined $200 and deprived of goods worth $400.

Gas was struck in the centre of the city in large quantities in Brantford yesterday on the residential property of Col. A. J. Wilkes. Drilling operations have now been commenced in the rear of the Kerby House.

The Brantford Board of Trade and City Council have made arrangements for the appointment of a permanent industrial commissioner and an industrial bureau will be established, with an annual expenditure of $5,000.

The ratepayers of Thorold Township yesterday voted as an almost solid unit in favor of a bylaw granting a fixed assessment for ten years to a million-dollar pulp and paper mill industry which is to be erected just outside of Thorold town limits.

Chicago Enters Protest.

Washington, Feb. 29.—Delegations favoring and opposing a proposed increase of the flow of water through the Chicago drainage canal stormed the White House and the War Department yesterday.

Opposition to the proposed increase of 6,000 cubic feet of water per second over the amount now flowing through the canal was based mainly on the alleged damage it would work to shipping by a lowering of the lakes' level. Arguments to that end were made by representatives of shipping interests from American cities on the great lakes. Canadians will be heard by Secretary Stimson on March 27 and for five days the question will be taken under advisement.

The hearing was attended by several Senators, representatives in Congress, members of the Canadian Parliament, representatives of the shipping interests and other interests likely to be affected by the proposed increased diversion.

Baby Saved by Dog.

New York, Feb. 29.—A dog was the hero of the rescue of a year-old baby from drowning in the Hudson River yesterday.

Willie Blake, child of Captain John Blake, of the canal boat Mary Ann, was playing in a big clothes' basket on deck when the basket, baby and all, fell over the side of the craft to land right side up on an ice cake. A terrier, which had been playing with the baby, gave the alarm by barking furiously, and after succeeding in attracting the attention of the baby's mother, darted to the side of the boat and jumped overboard.

The dog swam faithfully on guard beside the ice cake, as it, with its human freight, floated down the river, and was still on duty ten minutes later when a steamboat crew, whose attention had been attracted by the dog's barking, put out a skiff and rescued the chilled but unharmed baby and the nearly exhausted dog.

Roblin Well Pleased.

Winnipeg, Feb. 29.—Premier Roblin expressed satisfaction at the announcement made regarding Manitoba's boundaries.

The additional revenue, Mr Roblin stated, would be devoted in part to complete and perfect the Agricultural College and to develop other educational interests, and also to inaugurate and establish a good roads policy, for which at least $100,000 will be set apart for building and maintaining good roads, while some of the money will be expended in developing and equipping the added territory for communities.

New Bridge Over Niagara.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 29.—Provincial Inspector of Public Works Thomas Hastings, Toronto, arrived here yesterday to superintend remodelling the interior of the main postoffice. The entire interior of the building will be altered.

It is learned on good authority that the work of building the new steel arch bridge to replace the Michigan Central cantilever bridge over the Niagara River, will be begun early in the spring. Approaches for the new bridge have been building for the past year.

TO REPEAL NAVAL BILL

Laurier Measure Is Discussed in the Senate.

Senator Choquette Moves the Second Reading of His Bill to Abolish the Young Fleet of Warships—Senator Casgrain Moves That Intercolonial Be Put Under Railway Commission Like Other Roads.

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—The Senate yesterday discussed two important proposals. One was to put the Intercolonial rates under the Railway Commission. The other was to repeal the Laurier Government's naval law.

Senator Casgrain moved that the Intercolonial Railway should, like those of other railways be subject to the control of the Railway Board. He read a resolution passed by the council of the Montreal Board of Trade, urging that the Railway Board be given control on the ground that there is now lack of uniformity in freight rates and the City of Montreal is discriminated against.

After considerable discussion, the motion was allowed to stand until next week.

Senator Choquette moved the second reading of his bill to repeal the Naval Act. Senator Lougheed asked that an explanation be made by Senator Choquette for desiring in so summary a manner to abolish the naval service of Canada, to which Senator Choquette replied that his bill was simple and required no explanation. It simply proposed to do away with the naval service and restore the conditions which existed before.

Senator Lavergne said that he had Premier Borden's promise that the naval bill would be repealed, and Senator David said that when the naval bill was before the Senate, three Liberals had declared against it, and they were held as heroes in the Drummond-Arthabaska election. The opponents of the bill had in the country declared that, if the Government were defeated, Mr. Bourassa had only to hold up his hand and the navy would fade away. The Government had been defeated, but the repeal of the navy had not been moved for. Senator David said that he and others would be consistent and vote against the repeal of the bill they had helped pass.

Senator Cloran protested against the shutting off of the discussion and was informed by the Speaker that discussions were not only shut off, but that there could now be no amendment of the resolution.

Senator Cloran said he desired to second Senator Choquette's motion. The naval bill was dead and was being sent to London for examination. The Conservatives had not carried out their pre-election pledges to repeal the naval law.

Good Roads Officers.

Toronto, Feb. 29.—"This has been the best convention of the Good Roads Association I have ever attended," said W. H. Pugsley at the closing session yesterday afternoon.

Election of officers was the concluding business. A. M. Rankin, M.P.P., Collins Bay, was unanimously elected honorary president. Major Kennedy, Dixie, had no opponent and was elected president. N. Vermylea, Belleville, and W. H. Pugsley were nominated for vice-presidents. Mr. Pugsley withdrew in favor of Mr. Vermylea. Col. J. E. Farewell, Whitby, was made hon. secretary, and G. S. Henry, York County, elected secretary-treasurer. The foregoing with the following five delegates will form the new executive: J. A. Sanderson, Leeds and Grenville; C. R. Wheelock, Dufferin; Dr. Fairbanks, Lambton; N. W. MacKay, St. Thomas, and S. L. Squires, Waterford.

James Armitage, Dunrobin, and W. C. Bush, Port Dalhousie, made brief addresses on county and township roads.

The assessment on counties was changed from $25, as fixed on Tuesday, to $15.

Asked Damages and Got 'Em.

Kingston, Feb. 29.—At the high court, before Justice Middleton, Walter A. Telfer v. R. G. Dun & Co., Toronto, an action to recover $50,000 damages for an alleged libel, was heard.

Telfer, proprietor of the British American and Frontenac Hotels, claimed damages for the publication of an item in Dun's Bulletin, on Feb. 2, 1911, to the effect that a bailiff was in possession of the business.

Claim is made by the plaintiff that as a result of the publication of the item his gross receipts have decreased $11,000, that he has been refused credit with dealers he had formerly carried on business with, and that the printed statement was false and unfounded.

The jury returned a verdict for $1,000 and costs for the plaintiff.

Fire In Listowel.

Listowel, Feb. 29.—About 3 o'clock yesterday morning fire broke out in the store on Main street, occupied by H. S. Alexander as a general dry goods store, which was badly damaged, together with the stock, which is about a total loss. About $15,000 insurance was carried.

Hanged Himself In Barn.

Petrolea, Feb. 29.—Frank Miscal, son of John Miscal, a farmer living on the eighth line east of here, took his life by hanging himself from a beam in the barn. Miscal was 27 years of age and has several times been confined in the London Asylum.

C.N.R. Sells Land for $3,000,000.

Montreal, Feb. 29.—The Canadian Northern Railway has just completed a real estate deal whereby it turns over 6,000,000 feet of its model city site at the back of the mountain to a western syndicate for $3,000,000.

May Be Senator Gillies?

Ottawa, Feb. 29.—T. A. Gillies, ex-M.P. for Richmond, N.S., who arrived here yesterday, is the probable successor in the seat of the late Senator Miller.

Against Woman Suffrage.

London, Feb. 29.—An anti-suffragette campaign was launched last night by a mass meeting in Albert Hall, which was packed to the doors. The presence of a great number of prominent persons in various walks of life attested to the existence of a weighty opposition to the enfranchisement of women.

Lord Cromer, ex-British agent and consul-general in Egypt, presided, while among those on the platform were the Duke of Norfolk and a large number of members of the House of Commons of both parties.

Lord, Cromer, Lord Curzon, Lord Loreburn, the Lord Chancellor and the Rt. Hon. Lewis Harcourt, Secretary for the Colonies, made speeches, and a resolution was adopted declaring that the enfranchisement of women would be detrimental to their interests and the welfare of the state, and ought not to take place, except it was demanded by a majority of the electorate.

A letter from Premier Asquith was read, in which he said that he believed, as always, that the granting of Parliamentary suffrage to women "would be a grave political mistake."

Fresh Eggs Are Cheap Now.

New York, Feb. 29.—Upstate farmers, who read Sunday of the high price of fresh eggs in New York, have demoralized the market, though not the ultimate consumer, by shipping thousands of cases to commission merchants in this city. Heretofore these shipments have been made by freight, but in this instance the farmers refused to sell at the top of market and sent millions of eggs by express. The price dropped from 35 to 29 1-2 cents, wholesale, within forty-eight hours, and even at the lower figure the present supply is far ahead of the demand.

The result is that for the first time during the winter fresh eggs are a glut on the market. The commission merchants, unwilling to send the eggs back for fear of offending the farmers, predict a still further decline in prices.

Scolded, Boy Shot Sister.

Winnipeg, Feb. 29.—Oscar Sigurdson, a 17-year-old boy, who shot his sister when she reprimanded him for laziness, appeared in the city police court yesterday and was remanded. The injured woman, Mrs. Pettigrew, is in a serious condition, one of the two shots fired at her penetrating the spine.

Another Grandson for Connaught.

Stockholm, Sweden, Feb. 29.—The Crown Princess of Sweden, who is a daughter of the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, gave birth to a son yesterday morning. Both mother and child are doing well.

The crown prince and princess now have three sons and one daughter.

Tramps Fired Barn.

Brockville, Feb. 29.—A fire, presumably started by tramps dropping a lighted match, destroyed the barns and their contents of Osborne Shaver, a farmer residing in the Township of Elizabethtown. Twenty-two head of cattle perished. The damage is placed at $1,000 with $1,500 insurance.

"Black Hand" Member Dead.

Kingston, Feb. 29.—The death occurred at the penitentiary of an Italian named Colombo, who three years ago was given a term of ten years at Hamilton for being a member of a "black hand" gang. Death was due to tuberculosis. The remains were shipped to Hamilton.

The Presbyterian and Methodist churches are in favor of church union.

STORY OF A CLOCK

By H. Thomas

It often falls to the lot of those "who go down to the sea in ships" to pick up some curiosity with an interesting, and sometimes tragic history surrounding it. To Captain James Norris (now deceased) there befell an adventure in which he became the possessor of a very quaint rosewood case clock, and the incidents attaching to its seizure, and its ultimate possession by Captain Norris, form an interesting retrospect of the Indian Mutiny. In the year 1857 Capt. Norris was in command of the Chasm trading ship Waterwitch, at which time our Indian Empire was in the throes of mutiny. The British Government, anxious to render aid with all possible haste, hurriedly commissioned Capt. Norris and others to convey British troops who were stationed at China to the seat of war, Delhi. Great excitement prevailed amongst the troops, and the British population in China, when the mutiny became known. Capt. Norris had sole control and power given to him by the owner of the Waterwitch, and the very words, as expressed to him in his introductions, were, "Go where you like and do what you like, so long as you make the job pay." Success attended his commission, as a result of which the clock mentioned came into his possession.

His account of the looting of the Palace of Nana Sahib at Delhi is a vivid impression of the state of affairs existing at that time. The flight of Nana Sahib was signalized by an exciting raid on his palace, which was known to contain rare and priceless treasures. One can conceive of the avaricious desire on the part of the looters and the avidity and determination displayed to seize anything of value. They set to work in a wild fury, trampling over one another in their efforts to seize the many treasures which met the eyes at every point. Gold and silver ornaments were heaped together in a promiscuous mass; gems of all kinds and sizes were littered about; chests containing treasures representative of the lavish wealth of the East were recklessly smashed.

No Mystery.

"Son, why don't you marry Emily? You have been attentive enough to her."

"Father, I will never marry Emily. There is an insuperable bar to our union."

"What mystery is this?"

"No mystery. Only I asked Emily and she won't have me."

Evidence for the Defence.

"Now, then," said the magistrate, in a loud voice, "Mr. Baumgartner, you were present at this fray. Did Murphy, the plaintiff, seem carried away with excitement?"

"Nein; he vos carried avay on two piece poardis mit his head cut."

"That will do. You may stand down."

WHEN SIR J. P. WAS JUST JIMMY HE WORKED ON THE ROADS

So the Premier Tells the Road Deputation at Parliament Building—"Statute Labor" Days Past—How the Great Work of Highway Improvement is to be Carried on—Hon. Dr. Reaume's Promise—Narrow Tires Must Go

TORONTO, Feb. 28.—Not till after three orators chosen by the Ontario Good Roads Association had presented their views, was Sir James Whitney able to put in an appearance. He was very busy. The representatives were greeted, however, by Hon. Messrs. Reaume and Hearst. Three hundred members of the association were on hand in the reception room of the legislative buildings this morning.

Several resolutions were endorsed by the association and presented to the representatives of the Crown. The most important urged a ban on narrow tired vehicles and framed a tax for motor carriages. The Premier, not having heard the speeches, could not make a detailed reply. However, he filled the association with high hope that when the promised subsidy from Ottawa comes along, the cause of good roads will receive great impetus in the Province of Ontario.

The first address was that of L. A. Hamilton of Lorne Park, who gladdened the heart of the Ministers by explaining that the delegation was not there primarily to ask for money. He sketched the progress that has been made towards highway betterment with especially a kind word for W. A. McLean, Government Engineer He also hoped that with the coming of the Federal aid "the last blot that remains upon the fair name would be removed and Canada would have a system of roads which will be the envy of the world."

The association, he said, has the utmost and most entire confidence in the Provincial Department of Public Works, and therefore was eager that it should be through Dr. Reaume's officials that the grant from Ottawa should be spent. As great as the man who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before is he who allows four tons to be moved as easily as two were before. This thought was couched in a florid effusion, which brought the blush of modesty to the brow of Dr. Reaume.

E. M. Young, of Picton, evened things up by declaring that the good roads delegation was the finest looking one that ever apperead before a Cabinet Minister.

"We won't have any difficulty in keeping the boy on the farm when good roads keep him in touch with the city," was Mr. Young's hope. He urged that the maintenance of roads be assisted by the Government so as to lighten the farmers' burden. One damaging influence to good roads is the narrow-tired vehicle. Prince Edward County tried a by-law, but strangers from other counties drove in and rendered the regulation nugatory. Wherefore Mr. Young asked the Government for legislation that would ultimately do away with narrow-tired vehicles throughout the Province.

It was because it most damaged the road that Mr. S. L. Squire of Waterford thought the heaviest automobile tax should fall upon the higher power car.

Fore the Government, Dr. Reaume said: "There is no doubt that three-fifths of the people are in favor of good roads."

The Minister of Public Works was generous with promises. Not only will the same appropriation be made for good roads as last year, but the association report this year will be printed by the Government so that information on the problem may be distributed throughout the province. This extra gift to the cause will total up some $300.

"Up to date we have done much to assist the municipalities in building roads. Experience shows us that we must do much now to help maintain roads," announced Dr. Reaume, amid applause.

"We don't know yet what appropriation will be made by the Federal Government, but when we do we will take steps to meet the situation. We don't know yet whether the appropriation will be ear-marked or whether a standard road will be required. In a short time we expect to know more on that subject," Dr. Reaume concluded.

Hon. Mr. Hearst pleasantly filled up a slight hiatus till Sir James Whitney arrived. The Premier took the floor.

"In the past our people have not paid as much attention as they should to the necessity for good roads," he admitted. "When a boy I worked on the roads myself, but I wouldn't like to say how much good was accomplished in the name of that wonderful mysterious phrase "statute labor." We made it rather a holiday. But those days have gone by. We have a new system at work. All the details of this great work—for it is going to be a great work—cannot be discussed within the compass of one afternoon. It requires a great deal of consideration by practical men how the Federal grant can best be applied. There are many different propositions put forward. Therefore I am glad to hear the views of a practical body of men like the Good oRads Association."

Hon. Mr. Duff rang down the curtain with a few remarks, showing how the question of drainage was linked up with good roads. President Kenned called for three cheers for Sir James and his colleagues, which the association lustily gave.

Before the association made known its views to Sir James Whitney, the report of the Committee on Resolution was heard.

On the question of prohibiting the manufacture after two years of waggons with narrow tires, there was some discussion, L. A. Hamilton moving a successful amendment that the Federal Government be likewise requested to prohibit the importation of such vehicles. Otherwise their home manufacture would be handicapped in favor of his foreign rival.

A resolution raising the appropriation from the County Councils to $25, another modestly asking the Dominion for fifty millions for highway improvement, and one approving of the $5,000,000 loan for North Ontario development, went all through quietly and quickly.

Four times the president had to put the amendment substituting the word, "motor carriages" for "motor cars" in the proposed tax before the members of the association could shake off enough diffidence to raise their right hands in assent. Some members thought it would be as well to exclude traction engines, trucks, etc., from the operation of the tax, while another view was that the association was merely sending a resolution for the consideration of the Legislature whose members could be depended on to frame the bill. The tax which the Good Roads Association suggests, falls most heavily upon the big touring car and is regulated according to horse-power. A forty-horse power car pays $1 per horse-power annually. Thirty horse-power calls for 75 cents per horse-power. Twenty horse-power calls for 50 cents per unit. Any car at less energy than that is taxed at 25 cents per horse-power. The working out of such a tax would cost a thirty-six horse-power car $27 per annum while a car with 40 horse-power would be mulcted $13 more.

The final resolution was that "this association places itself on record in heartily approving of the method in which the Provincial Legislature has aided in the construction of public highways and would recommend that when the Federal Government grants additional aid, that such sums as may be apportioned to Ontario be expended through the Department of Public Works." The matter of how the Federal grant shall be bestowed is at present under debate at Ottawa, where a number of members contend that the money should go direct to the municipalities and not to the Provincial Government at all.

The closing session of the Ontario Good Roads Association was held this afternoon. With the exception of the electing of the officers for the ensuing year very little except addresses to the delegates was done. Officers for 1912 are as follows:

Hon. pres., Mr. A. M. Rankin, M. P.PU., Collins Bay; pres., Major J. T. Kennedy, Peel; vice-pres, Mr. N. Vermilyea, West Hastings; hon. sec.-treas., Col. J. E. Farewell, Whitby; sec.-treas., Geo. S. Henry, Oriole.

Executive Committee: C. H. Wheelock, Dufferin; Dr. Fairbanks, Lambton; S. L. Squire, Waterford; K. W. McKay, St. Thomas, J. A. Sanderson, Leeds and Grenville.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

A CLEVER COMPANY.

The New York New Amsterdam Theatre Company, which will present "Madame Sherry" in this city on Friday, March 1st, at Griffin's Opera House, is a company of talented performers who have won their "spurs" in many prominent productions during the past season. They, one and all, are players of wide versatility and experience, having been selected with a view to their peculiar fitness to the parts they are called upon to fill.

WELL KNOWN PERFORMERS COMING.

The Ernie Marks company, headed by those Canadian favorites, is the attraction selected to hold the boards at the Griffin Opera House for one week commencing Monday, March 4th, with special bargain matinee Saturday for ladies and children. The company this season is a large one and includes the following well known performers who have appeared here with higher priced attractions: Louise De Louis, Miss Jessie Lyons, Miss Lida Arnold, Melba Brooks, Mr. Ernie Marks, Mr. Webb Chamberlin, Mr. Franklin Brooks, Mr. Webster Kohler, Mr. Wesley Barney, Newman Delaney, Frederick Murray, Ed. R. Moore, Edwin Scott and Arthur Hebert. During the action of the different plays and between the acts the following well-known vaudeville artists will be introduced: DeLuna and DeLuna, singers and dancers; Miss Lida Gardner, the Australian favorite; Mr. Franklin Brooks, the popular entertainer; Brooks and Murray, the somewhat quiet fellows. The opening play selected for Monday night will be a dramatization of the book of the same name entitled "Reaping the Whirlwind." Seats for the opening performance will go on sale Saturday, Mar. 2nd. at Doyles' Drug Store.

Two Prices

That's What Tea and Coffee Drinkers Pay

The first is the money paid—comes out of the pocket.

The second (by far the greater) is the "draft" on the nervous system by caffeine, the tea and coffee drug.

It is not merely the "price," but the drug, caffeine, that makes tea and coffee drinking expensive—a nerve-racking burden!

There's genuine economy of money, and better health in the regular use of

POSTUM

In place of tea or coffee.

Postum is made of clean, hard wheat—skilfully roasted and blended just like coffee but without the drug, caffeine, which makes tea and coffee harmful to so many persons.

Boil your Postum until it is dark and rich, serve with cream and sugar, and understand why

"There's a Reason"

MINISTER'S TRIAL

Tea and Coffee Hit Him Hard Indeed

A minister of the gospel writes about Postum: "I was for years a sufferer from headaches—sometimes so violent that, groaning in agony, I would pace the floor or garden holding my throbbing head for relief.

"I tried all sorts of remedies known to the allopathic and homeopathic schools. Sometimes I thought it was caused by the stomach or biliousness, and again I would suspect it was purely nervousness and treated myself accordingly, but nothing ever gave me permanent relief.

Having to appear before the public nearly every night, it was sometimes almost impossible for me to fulfill my engagements. Finally I came to suspect that the use of tea and coffee had something to do with my disorder and abruptly discontinued the use of both and took on Postum for a trial.

"From that happy hour I commenced to mend. Gradually I got better and better and now I do not have a headache once in 6 months and all my other troubles are gone too. I am now using Postum exclusively and want no better beverage.

"I know of others who have been benefited by the use of Postum in place of coffee. A friend of mine here in Key West, a hardware merchant, suffered for years with stomach and other troubles while he was using coffee. Finally he quit and began using Postum and got well. He is devoted to Postum and when worn and weary with business cares takes a cup of it piping hot and in a short time feels rested and nourished.

"Some I know have become prejudiced against Postum because careless or ignorant cooks try to make it as they would coffee, and will not allow it to boil full 15 minutes, but when they try it again, well boiled, it stays for it is as delicious and snappy as the mild, smooth, high-grade Java." A CLOSE GAME.

Those who attended the match between the Belleville and Trenton High Schools at the Arena last night missed one of the best games of the season. It was the first of a home-and-home series for the championship of the district, and it was fast, skilful and strongly contested from start to finish. The Trenton seven were very much bigger and heavier than were the Belleville septet—so big and heavy indeed as to cause many to wonder why they didn't wear whiskers or at least mustaches, and they made the most of their weight in body-checking. So heavily, indeed, was Sinclair bodied in the first few minutes of play that he was afterwards of virtually no use to his side. Although very heavy, the visitors were also fast and clever players, some of their rushes being spectacular, but not very prolific of scoring. The local boys, with the exception named, played a fine game, and their defeat does not discredit them.

Mr. "Hobe" Armstrong, of Trenton, was the referee and few of his decisions were questioned. Two of his acts only were criticised adversely, namely facing off in front of goal within a few inches of the line, and allowing the Trenton centre man to have one foot in advance when facing off.

In the first half Trenton tallied after about five minutes play, but Belleville evened three minutes later. Then came the goal above referred to, and still another fell to the boys in black. The first half ended: Trenton 3, Belleville 1.

The big fellows from the banks of the Trent added still another to their tally soon after play began in the second half, but, despite many rushes by McGorman, their scoring was ended. Speed did not diminish, but rather increased, as time went on, and the home team, after adding two more, were having the best of the play, when time was up, with the score 4 to 3 in favor of Trenton. The line-up was:—

Belleville—		Trenton—
Nurse	Goal	Mout
Tuite	Point	Smith
Downey	Cover	Simmons
Mills	Rover	McGorman
Cronk	Centre	Hoag
Sinclair	Right	Hawley

Referee—H. Armstrong, Trenton

MIDGETS WON CUP.

Previous to the above game, namely from 7 until 8 o'clock, the final in the Junior series—boys under 16—for the Y.M.C.A. cup, was played between the Midgets and the Y.M.C.A. It was an easy thing for the undefeated Midgets, as their opponents could muster only six players, and they won by 8 to 0. The line up was as follows:

Midgets—		Y.M.C.A.—
Nurse	Goal	McElrath
R. Arnott	Point	A. Weber
Goyer	Cover	Yeomans
G. Arnott	Rover	French
L. Arnott	Centre
Whalen	Right	Soales
Duesbery	Left	Hitchon

Referee—Dawkin.

DOCTORS USE THIS FOR ECZEMA

Dr. Evans, Ex-Commissioner of Health says: "There is almost no relation between skin diseases and the blood." The skin must be cured through the skin. The germ must be washed out, and so salves have long ago been found worthless. The most advanced physicians of this country are now agreed on this, and are prescribing a wash of wintergreen, thymol and other ingredients for eczema and all other skin diseases. This compound is known as D. D. D. Prescription for Eczema.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist writes: I am convinced that the D. D. D. Prescription is as much a specific for eczema as quinine for malaria. We have been prescribing the D. D. D. remedy for years.

We ourselves vouch for the D. D. D. Prescription for eczema and absolutely believe that it will take away the itch the instant you appply it.

Of course other druggists have D. D. D. Prescription. Go to them if you can not come to us, but don't accept some big profit substitute.

But if you are suffering from any form of skin trouble we would like to have you come to our store, for we have had the agency of this remedy for so many years that we can tell you all about D. D. D. Prescription and how it cures eczema. Or you can get a free trial bottle by writing the D. D. D. Laboratories, 49 Colborne St., Toronto. J. S. McKeown Druggists.

BRAINY WORKERS

Working Shoemakers, Chimney Sweepers, Tramcar Men, and Seamstresses Are Amongst the Most Learned.

Genius like murder, will out, and the history of modern literature provides us with some striking examples of men and women who, although humbly born and denied by circumstances any educational advantages, have given to the world some remarkable literary works. At the present time, for instance, the compilers of the great Oxford English Dictionary are deriving much help in their work from a Concordance of the words of Thomas Kyd, a learned literary man and dramatist of the sixteenth century, which has been compiled by Mr. Charles Crawford, a London railway clerk.

Mr. Crawford is a great authority on Elizabethan English, and published his Concordance five years ago. His knowledge of words has been acquired through close study, and is certainly extraordinary; for often when experts have stated, without investigation, that such and such a word or phrase occurs only in certain writers, or does not appear in certain authors, Mr. Crawford has produced abundant evidence showing the statement to be incorrect.

The Shoemaker Historian

An even more remarkable work than Mr. Crawford's Concordance, however, was that compiled by John Mackintosh, LL.D., who died at Aberdeen four years ago. Although Mackintosh was a shoemaker by trade, he was one of the most notable personalities that the North Country has of recent times produced, and his "History of Civilization in Scotland," in four big volumes, has been described as one of the most complete histories of Scotland ever written.

Chimney Sweep and Author.

It is only a few weeks ago that the University Extension Board appointed Mr. Walter Hunt lecturer on sociology. Mr. Hunt has had an amazing career. He started life as a sailor, spent some time in the fire brigade, and then set up as a chimney sweep at Streatham. He then decided to attend the Robert Browning Settlement in Walworth, and in time was led to write a thoughtful little book wherein he discusses the question, "Are we a declining race?" which attracted much attention among critics. Mr. Hunt's successful writings on race deterioration, involving as they did an immense amount of research work, are the more remarkable when one considers that his calling took him out at four o'clock in the morning. Most of his study was done at night time, and he confided in an interview a little while ago that he found no time to read anything but works on science and history. "Life is too short to waste time in reading fiction," he said.

It might be mentioned that London also possesses a linguistic tramwayman in the person of Mr. Richard Hobdell, of London, who is employed by the London County Council as a pointsman on the car system. Mr. Hobdell has a perfect knowledge of Arabic and Sanskrit, and has just finished translating a book from Sanskrit into English. Hobdell, who was with Lord Roberts on the famous march from Kabul to Kandahar, has devoted much of his leisure time since leaving the Army to the study of languages — a study of which he has always been very fond.

The literary sensation of last year was a book, "Marie Claire," written by a Parisian seamstress, Marguerite Audoux, who worked as a dressmaker in one small room on the sixth floor of a house in Paris. The story won a prize of $1000 and royalties — a prize given every year by what is know as the Goncourt Academy for the best novel of the year. It took the seamstress ten years to write her book. "I did not write it to be published," she said, during the course of an interview, as she sat in her little workroom: "it is just my life." And it is because Marguerite Audoux told the story of her life in plain, simple language that she scored such a literary success.

THE VANISHING FORESTS

Timber Resources of the United States Showing Signs of Exhaustion.

Commissioners and committees have been appointed in various parts of the United States to make reports on what should and could be done to stop the destruction and prepare for the restoration of timber supplies, but wherever actually a response to the recommendations was secured the means employed were too feeble to prevent the former and too inefficient to secure adequate results in the latter direction. For instance, the latest State to move in the matter of taking care of its important timber interest, Alabama (whose annual lumber output is valued at $[illegible]), appropriates $500 for carrying out the provisions of the act providing a commission with various duties. The great State of Minnesota whose forest products in one year approach in value $45,000,000, devotes less than $12,000 to its forest interests, and $20,000 on prairie planting. The State of Maine, which still cuts around one billion feet, and is indebted to the forest for a product of $18,000,000 in value, keeps within the modest sum of $25,000 to pay for the protection against fire and the support of a commissioner. Examples of such picayune and inadequate measures are found in many other States.

The only two States which have not hesitated to spend money for forestry purposes are New York and Pennsylvania. The former, in purchasing forest lands for a preserve, which now comprises about one and a half million acres only, has expended millions of dollars, and is annually appropriating money for further purchase, besides liberal provision for its Forest, Fish and Game Commission. But, alas! the policy of forest reservation which had begun on economic grounds, has degenerated into providing a pleasure ground—a park—for the wealthy, and there is little consideration to economic forest questions given by the State or the Commission.

Pennsylvania is the only State which can be said to have started on a true policy of recuperation, buying up waste lands, protecting them, and in a small way beginning to reforest them, an appropriation of about $500,000 being at the disposal of the Forest Commission.

Sir Charles Still In Bed.

London, Feb. 29.—C.A.P. Cable.—Sir Charles Tupper, who has been quite ill with bronchitis at his home, still keeps to his bed. He takes the keenest interest in current events. Sir Charles is very grateful for the host of Canadian enquiries concerning his condition.

Lord Strathcona is very weak, but is improving.

Niagara City of Light.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Feb. 29.—This will be without exception the best illuminated city in the world when the arrangement made with the electric companies here goes into effect. The companies will furnish free power for water concessions and the city will do the rest.

PARDONABLE QUACKERY

How a Physician Had to Fake to Cure

As a doctor, one of the English heroes who assisted in the defence of Kars, had special opportunities of studying the habits and character of the degraded races of Asia Minor. He found it necessary to be more of a quack than a physician among them. "As my patients became numerous, and pestered me at all hours, I fitted up," he tells us, "a spare tent to serve as my dispensary, and gave out that I received at the time of afternoon prayer flassr). I took my seat at the door of my tent, and soon had a crowd around me, many suffering from real diseases, many from imaginary ones, and many bringing for my inspection the effects of diseases such as palsied limbs and stiff points." One of his patients was an old woman, who came forward, and taking hold of the corner of his cloak, kissed it, and then, kneeling before him, began, in a very wheedling manner, to call his attention to her case. "She went on to describe the most anomalous symptoms, affecting her eyes, ears, limbs, and sometimes every part of her. On further inquiry, she confessed to be quite well at that moment; but a year ago, having had these strange complaints, she dreaded the same thing would invade her this year. I then promised to give her strong medicine, but ordered the crowd to stand at a short distance from us. A space is cleared, and all wait in silent admiration for my remedy. I slowly draw forth a bottle of strong liquor of ammonia, or smelling-salts, from my medicine-chest, and, holding it before my patient's eyes, tell her to draw in a strong breath when I put it to her nose. I accordingly first hold her nostrils, then, having removed the stopper, I apply the mouth of the bottle to the nose, the fingers are removed, a deep sniff is taken, followed by a sort of sneeze, and she falls to the ground. A hum of horror runs through the crowd; the patient, after a short interval, rises, her eyes streaming with tears, and then breaks from the crowd, 'La Ilaha illa 'llahu Mahommed rasulu 'llah!' — 'There is no God but the God, and Mahomed is the Apostle of God!'"

To Destroy Caterpillars.

Caterpillars are one of the greatest sources of annoyance to gardeners, both professional and amateur, and the following is a capital method of getting rid of them. The method is simplicity itself. If your garden is infested by caterpillars just catch a few of them and feed them on some lettuce that has been soaking in water for four days. After they have eaten their fill of the lettuce turn the caterpillars loose again, and they will soon do the rest. Entomologists have recently discovered that the consumption of watered lettuce leaves induces a violent and fatal attack of cholera amongst caterpillars. One caterpillar so infected quickly spreads the disease amongst its fellows, and so quickly rid the garden or orchard of the pest that has so long been the despair of farmers and the like. A caterpillar suffering from the caterpillar cholera soon stops eating. It becomes weak, and has no inclination to move; usually crawling up the trunk of a tree, fence, wall, or other vertical surface, where it remains without motion. In a few hours there drops from its mouth a blackish liquid; the caterpillar becomes more and more flaccid, one leg after another loses its support, and finally the creature, reduced to a black skin, hangs dead, still holding on with one or two of its false feet. There is no danger of caterpillar cholera spreading to human beings or animals. It is a variety of disease quite distinct in its way, and only infectious as regards caterpillars.

Benevolent old lady who has just given a penny to a small rustic: "Now, my dear, what do you say?" Small rustic, with native politeness: "Give us another!" Collapse of old lady.
